"A cure for the world's ills: more and better democracy. Fischer sees the great antagonist as Stalin—and Stalinism; the inspiration, the noble spirit exemplified by Gandhi. He believes that democratic countries must purge themselves of elements negating democratic principles—intolerance, reaction, economic and political nationalism. Thus Russia will be deprived of its anti-democratic ammunition, and the peoples of Europe and Asia heartened to resist the totalitarian drive. The individual must be re-enthroned, world government fostered, if necessary without Russia. A popular restatement of the author's thesis elaborated in 'The Great Challenge.'" (Library J) Index.

Booklist 44:103 N 15 '47

"There is much sound reasoning in Mr. Fischer's program. Its most obvious weakness is that the most urgent problem in the West is to restore economic stability, without which it can offer little effective resistance to Russian tactics. To do this, the West must rely considerably on the help of the United States, a strongly capitalistic nation—a matter which the author refrains from bringing into full discussion." H. J. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 N 15 '47 700w

"The book is provocative, at times irritatingly dogmatic, but it is worth reading. Perhaps a better title will be found to give it a better market."

+ Kirkus 15:417 Ag 1 '47 180w

"Digressive, not too well organized, but worthy of study." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 72:1188 S 1 '47 130w

"'Gandhi and Stalin' is a sober and honest, an informed and courageous book. The present reviewer continues to hope that the Politburo will change its course, but the current policies and practices of the Soviet dictatorship are not calculated to encourage this hope. On the contrary they serve only to strengthen Mr. Fischer's arguments and to reinforce the validity of his analysis and program." G. S. Counts

+ Nation 165:626 D 6 '47 1250w

Reviewed by V. M. Dean

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 O 26 '47 900w

"In summary, it would seem that in his two-front war against reaction and communism, Mr. Fischer would fight the former with Gandhian moral suasion, while threatening the latter with the ultimate violence of the atomic bomb. To the ordinary citizen, seeking peace and security, this strange admixture of Gandhism and atomic violence scarcely provides a happy solution." John Bicknell

N Y Times p6 O 19 '47 850w

New Yorker 23:127 O 11 '47 80w

San Francisco Chronicle p26 N 23 '47 270w

"An old hand at the Russian problem, Louis Fischer has written a compact, dogmatic book that states the facts, analyzes them soundly and sets down a program." Brooks Atkinson

+ Sat R of Lit 30:11 O 4 '47 1900w

Time 50:108 O 6 '47 750w

FISCHER, MRS MARJORIE, and HUMPHRIES, ROLFE, eds. Strange to tell; stories of the marvelous and mysterious. 532p $3.75 Messner

Short stories—Collections

47-296

An anthology of sixty-eight mystery stories, selected from European literature. Partial contents: The unicorn, by R.M. Rilke; The wardrobe, by Thomas Mann; The specter's wedding, by Guy de Pourtales; Nils Punctual and his clocks, by Gabriel Scott; The haunted house, by Luigi Pirandello; The Devil turned pleader, by the Brothers Grimm; A voyage to the moon, by Cyrano de Bergerac; Woman and cat, by Paul Verlaine; The waterman, by J. W. von Goethe; The hunter Gracchus, by Franz Kafka; The stranger, by Marcel Proust; Gambling Hansel, by the Brothers Grimm; The elk—captured when asleep, by Leonardo da Vinci; A trip to Paris, by Ignazio Silone; God's bread, by Sholem Asch; The apparition, by Arnold Zweig; Story for the little children of the poilus, by Colette. Index of authors.

"Not for the popular public to which these anthologies are usually directed, but rather for those who demand distinction with their devilment."

+ Kirkus 14:556 N 1 '46 100w

"It is evident that some of these pieces, especially among the political satires and the fairy tales, have lost much of their delicacy under the heavy hand of the translator.

'Strange to Tell' is an interesting and instructive collection. However, in their search for the new and unhackneyed, the editors have lowered the literary standards of their selections." Edwin Fadiman

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16
Ja 19 '47 600w

"Of its sort, it is a highly successful book. . . The anthologists have been particularly lucky, and in all probability skillful, in discovering the ideal length for anthology stories. Their entries seldom contain an excessive line (for which the author and translator also deserve credit), yet there is variety enough in subject and style to avoid monotony and to keep even the most finicky and pace-conscious reader fast in his seat. . . The stories chosen speak for themselves more eloquently than the editors' introduction, which is rather muddled in organization and slapdash in styling." B. V. Winebaum

+ N Y Times p4 Ja 12 '47 700w

"Many recent anthologies have been rendered unreadable by the abominable specimens of 'translator's English' which have filled them. Fischer and Humphries have chosen their translations with exquisite care; when nothing satisfactory was available, they have commissioned special translations or have made them themselves. The result is the highest level of English readability I have seen in a volume from foreign sources. To collectors of fantasy, to students of literary trends and by-paths, and above all, to any reader who wishes to recapture the tingling freshness of a 6-year-old's Christmas morning, 'Strange to Tell' may well prove the find of the year." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ja 3 '47 500w

FISHBEIN, MORRIS. History of the American medical association. 1226p il $10 Saunders

610.6273 American medical association. Medicine—U.S. Med47-46

History of the American medical association from 1847 to 1947, with biographical sketches of the 101 presidents of the association by Walter L. Bierring. Includes histories of the publications, councils, bureaus, and other official bodies of the medical association.

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Jl 27 '47 70w

"There are no spots on the escutcheon of organized medicine if Dr. Fishbein is to be taken literally. This does not mean that Dr. Fishbein and his collaborators have not presented the medical profession and the sociologists with a valuable document, which will always be a useful work of reference. Perhaps it is asking too much of the principal orator at a wedding feast to dwell on the defects of the bridegroom's character, and too much, therefore to expect Dr. Fishbein, even if he were so inclined, to comment impartially on the association's social morals, which are those of a feudal village. . . There is no doubt that most physicians will approve of Dr. Fishbein's history. To them it will be a fair and at times a lively presentation of the association's rise as a scientific and professional body. But fifty years from now the history may well be important because of its omissions and its social Bourbonism." Waldemar Kaempffert

+ N Y Times p24 Jl 13 '47 1000w

"This large volume is well printed and lavishly illustrated. Students of the turbulent history of the Association and its place in American life will find the work a valuable source and reference book."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:275 S '47 260w

Reviewed by B. C. Corner
Yale R n s 37:176 autumn '47 850w

FISHEL, RICHARD MARK, and HARE, CLAIR. Terry and Bunky play baseball; il. by L. D. Warren. 90p $1.50 Putnam

796.357 Baseball—Juvenile literature 47-31010

Companion volume to Terry and Bunky Play Football (Book Review Digest 1945). This book uses the same technique to teach boys the fundamentals of baseball. For grades three to five.

Booklist 44:116 N 15 '47

Kirkus 15:468 S 1 '47 80w

"Recommended for boys from eight to twelve." M. M. Smith

+ Library J 72:1380 O 1 '47 60w

FISHER, ALLAN GEORGE BARNARD. International implications of full employment in Great Britain. 202p $3.50 Royal inst. of int. affairs

338.942 Unemployment. Economic policy. Great Britain—Economic policy 47-270

Discussion of two of Great Britain's postwar economic objectives: full employment, and an "open" international economic system, and the difficulties each places in the other's way. The author is Price professor of international economics at the Royal Institute of international affairs. Index.

Reviewed by A. Morgner

Am Pol Sci R 41:599 Je '47 450w

Reviewed by M. E. Murphy

Ann Am Acad 251:193 My '47 480w

Foreign Affairs 25:529 Ap '47 90w

"With much that Professor Fisher says about Great Britain's actual and prospective difficulties no sensible person will disagree. . . But what Professor Fisher does not succeed in showing is that there is any real chance of our being able to balance our international accounts under the conditions of 'open' competitive world trading, even if all the conditions are favourable and world prosperity is maintained, and if there is no American slump. . . No one pretends that the problems presented by this situation can be easily solved by any method. No one advocates bilateralism as an easy way out. It may, however, be the only way out, whatever its disadvantages, and this is the aspect of it which Professor Fisher, with all his appearance of impartial examination of all the alternatives, simply refuses to face." G. D. H. Cole

New Statesman & Nation 33:119 F 8 '47 600w

"Like all his writings, Professor Fisher's latest book is so rigorously reasoned that he who runs may not read it with any particular profit. But reflective readers will find it immensely profitable." C. H. Grattan

+ N Y Times p41 Mr 23 '47 500w

Times [London] Lit Sup p559 N 16 '46 1650w

FISHER, MRS DOROTHEA FRANCES (CANFIELD). American portraits; pictures by Enit Kaufman. 318p $3.75 Holt

920 U.S.—Biography 47-1029

Some sixty drawings of well-known American men and women with a brief biographical sketch of each. The artist is a Viennese portraitist who came to the United States in 1939.

Booklist 43:221 Mr 15 '47

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p26
F 23 '47 600w

"A beautiful book of 68 sensitive drawings. . . For the book Mrs Fisher has done not only her introduction but text to accompany the pictures. The whole is a remarkable gallery of contemporary notables which can hardly fail to suggest to the reader the extraordinary variety of important men and women our country has produced in this period." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 21 '47 900w

FISHER, JANE (WATTS) (MRS CARL GRAHAM FISHER). Fabulous Hoosier; a story of American achievement. 263p il $3 McBride

B or 92 Fisher, Carl Graham 47-2232

A biography of Carl Fisher, creator of Miami Beach, told by his former wife. From automobile racing Fisher went to building highways and cities, making and losing fortunes, but always until his final illness, in action. The author describes his hectic career and her part in it.

FISHER, J. W.—Continued

"A top flight story, but marred towards the end by sentimentality." R. W. Henderson
+ — Library J 72:317 F 15 '47 140w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14
Mr 30 '47 140w

Springf'd Union p2 Je 23 '47 180w

FISHER, LOIS J. You and the United Nations; il. by [the author]. [42p] 60c Childrens press
341.1 United Nations (organization)—Juvenile literature 47-2782

Cartoons, drawings, and simple text explaining the structure and functions of the United Nations for ages ten or older.

Booklist 43:312 Je 1 '47

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ap 6 '47 130w

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold
Christian Science Monitor p12 Je 12 '47 180w

"Children from ten years up, and even adults, will be drawn to this book by the pictures and will hardly put it down without seeing what the aims of the United Nations are. They cannot fail, unless they are stupid, to realize how every individual has a responsibility to help in furthering the peace and security of the world through understanding people. This is an essential book." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 23:219 My '47 80w

"Lots of good ideas, in brief captions and engaging sketches in cartoon style, but there's a lack of integration, of follow-through, that seems to leave loose ends. The need for a book of this kind, however, is such that—inadequate as this is—it still fills a gap."
+ — Kirkus 15:218 Ap 15 '47 110w

Reviewed by E. W. Turpin
Library J 72:963 Je 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10
Ap 6 '47 360w

"A very simple, very direct presentation in text and cartoons of the organization's aims and reason for being. There are easily understood pictorial charts showing its basic structure, but the main importance of the book lies in its emphasis upon the necessity for the organization as an instrument for world peace and upon the individual's responsibility for its success." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p22 My 11 '47 180w

"Lois Fisher believes in the United Nations, but she isn't grim and earnest about it. With a cheerful originality, in cartoons and brief text, she tells why the world needs UN and how it is organized. UNESCO, FAO, PICAQ, ITO, IRO, and similar mysteries to the layman she clarifies in lively sketches, showing how they dovetail into UN as a whole." E. B.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 Je 22 '47 190w

Wis Lib Bul 43:84 My '47

FISHER, M. F. K., pseud. See Parrish, M. F. K.

FISHER, VARDIS. Adam and the serpent. 335p
$2.75 Vanguard

47-1792

Fourth book in the author's series of novels, The Testament of Man, dealing with the development of primitive beliefs, superstitions and social institutions. In this volume the man, Dove, rebels against the tyrannical rule of the old women who are the self-named interpreters of the Great Mother, the moon.

"[This book] is, in part, fascinating, in part tedious and, throughout, plethoric. . . No one can quarrel with [Fisher] for being a novelist and wanting to be an anthropologist. One can only wish that he would keep his ambivalences to himself and be one or the other, for what emerges from his efforts is certainly not a novel and even less a reliable source-book. It is, rather, a kind of cross-pollination of the two and the resulting hybrid, defying classification, tends unpleasantly to baffle the reader." R. J. Bender

— Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ag 10 '47 320w

Kirkus 15:44 Ja 15 '47 130w

"There emerges from this harrowing recreation of our benighted past a sense, according to materialist maxims, of how we have become what we are." George Snell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p19
Ap 20 '47 850w

"In this, the fourth in his series of books under the general title 'The Testament of Man,' Vardis Fisher has written one of the dullest erotic narratives in many a season. Its purpose is to dramatize the change from a matriarchal society to a patriarchal society, but the drama is all but lost in a maze of repetition and dogmatic statement. As an anthropological document or a social study it is thin and diffuse." Hal Borland

— N Y Times p22 Mr 30 '47 500w

"It is odd how interesting Mr. Fisher manages to make these people just down from the trees."

New Yorker 23:106 Mr 29 '47 100w

"[The] picture of the psychology of the savages who were our ancestors is extremely convincing, both as to work and action. . . But somewhere along this line one comes to an end of the good things than can be said about the book. There are characters who contribute nothing but to reveal that Mr. Fisher has read Malinowsky on the sexual life of primitive peoples; there are events that serve no purpose but to portray the background, which in any really carefully-worked-out novel should be inherent. Moreover, the significant events are not allowed to lie quiet but are repeated in slightly different form lest their impact should be missed. This combination not only slows up the story but gives the things that do happen to the people that do matter an effect of monotony and triviality. Worst of all, Mr. Fisher is in such a hurry to make his main point that he never really makes it at all, save in his own direct statement—the author coming out from behind the scenes to dwarf his puppets." Fletcher Pratt

— + Sat R of Lit 30:26 Ap 12 '47 430w

FITCH, FLORENCE MARY. Their search for God; ways of worship in the Orient. 160p il
$3 Lothrop

290 Religions—Juvenile literature 47-11705

A companion volume to One God (Book Review Digest 1944, 1945). It presents the leading religions of India, China, and Japan. By means of photographs and text the seventh and eighth grader can learn about some of the beliefs, ceremonies, and festivals of Hinduism, Confucianism, Taoism, Shinto, and Buddhism. Index and glossary.

Booklist 44:116 N 15 '47

"The author has made another significant contribution toward a better understanding of men and their religions. . . The authenticity of the material makes it an excellent source book, not only for the minister and layman, but for the sociologist and anthropologist as well." Mary Batey

+ Churchman 162:17 Ja 15 '48 200w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Horn Bk 24:68 Ja '48 30w

Kirkus 15:602 N 1 '47 170w

Reviewed by Mary Strang
Library J 72:1783 D 15 '47 40w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ja 18 '48 260w

"The book is not only an introductory study of comparative religions for teen-agers (and their elders) but is also a valuable contribution to our understanding of the Orient." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p13 D 21 '47 260w

"The excellent photographs would make this book attractive even to a reader not naturally drawn to the subject."

+ Sat R of Lit 31:29 Ja 10 '48 230w

FITCH, ROBERT ELLIOT. Preface to ethical living. 80p $1.25 Assn. press 171.1 Christian ethics

A short study of the current lack of religious faith contrasted with a positive ethical and moral philosophy. The author was a chaplain in the navy during the war, and is now dean of the faculty at Occidental college, Los Angeles.

"A little philosophical and religious gem, replete with historical parallels and interesting interpretations. It is easy—and instructive—reading, and can be rapidly skimmed, but less rapidly lived up to. . . The writer evidently is a Liberal, and all readers may not agree with all his conclusions. This reviewer, in fact, does not. But the dean's plea for ethical Christianity in the modern world rings true, and clarion-clear." Roger Shaw

+ Churchman 162:17 Ja 1 '48 210w

Reviewed by O. G. Aldrich
Springf'd Republican p11C D 7 '47
60w

FITE, WARNER. Jesus the man; a critical essay. 152p $2.50 Harvard univ. press

232.9 Jesus Christ—Character A46-5888

"Written from the point of view of humanistic moral philosophy, this series of essays considers the evidence for Jesus, the background and cast of his mind, Jesus as the God intoxicated man, Jesus as the moral ideal, and the Gospels as revelation. The total impression is of a man of genius, but not an historical miracle, a man not to be taken as the moral ideal, though he was not inferior in moral character." U S Quarterly Bkl

Reviewed by S. J. Case
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p25
My 4 '47 550w
U S Quarterly Bkl 3:30 Mr '47 200w

FITT, MARY, pseud. Death and the pleasant voices. 214p $2.50 Putnam

47-2349

Mystery story.

Booklist 44:33 S 15 '47

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun Book Week p4 My 11 '47
90w

"A leisurely but practised performance."

Kirkus 15:142 Mr 1 '47 90w

"The point of Miss Fitt's detective novels is to be found in her character-drawing. But on this occasion her characters get beyond her control. This remarkable pleasant-voiced family swells from the remarkable to the outrageous, and finally topples over into the absurd. On the other hand, the plot has a nice twist to it, and is only marred by the confession thrown in to provide a solution." Ralph Partridge

+ New Statesman & Nation 32:469 D
21 '46 120w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p28
My 4 '47 190w

N Y Times p27 My 11 '47 200w

"Multiple weaknesses of motivation and detection detract from quiet charm and skilled writing." Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p20 My 11 '47
60w

"Stuffy."

Sat R of Lit 30:30 Je 14 '47 50w

FITT, MARY, pseud. A fine and private place. 210p $2.50 Putnam

47-4733

Mystery story.

Kirkus 15:323 Je 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10
Ag 24 '47 150w

"A smoothly meshed story and a fine mystery." Jack Glick

+ N Y Times p23 Ag 24 '47 150w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher
San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ag 24 '47
90w

"Best British brand."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:32 Ag 16 '47 50w

Springf'd Republican p10B N 30 '47
120w

FITTS, DUDLEY, ed. Greek plays in modern translation. 596p $5 Dial press; for sale by Dryden

882.08 Greek drama—Translations into English 47-30423

Contents: Aeschylus: Agamemnon, tr. by Richmond Lattimore; Sophocles: Electra, tr. by Francis Fergusson; Aeschylus: Eumenides, tr. by George Thomson; Euripides: The Trojan women, tr. by Richmond Lattimore; Medea, tr. by Frederic Prokosch; Hippolytus, tr. by David Grene; Alceste, tr. by Dudley Fitts and Robert Fitzgerald; Sophocles: King Oedipus, tr. by W. B. Yeats; Oedipus at Colonus, tr. by Robert Fitzgerald; Antigone, tr. by Dudley Fitts and Robert Fitzgerald; Aeschylus: Prometheus bound, tr. by Edith Hamilton.

Booklist 44:48 O 1 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p17 S '47

"Highly recommended for drama and general literature collections." George Freedley
+ Library J 72:1110 Ag '47 70w

"For one little thing, to begin with, it is a pleasure to pick up a book in which quotations from the Greek have been proofread with some care, including the matter of accents. . . Fifty years from now most of the plays, not all, in this collection will have to be retranslated to satisfy the taste of an editor who feels that every age should have its own translations, and that these will no longer suit the public ear. The present collection should do very nicely pro tem; as Mr. Fitts says, the work is offered 'for the time being'." Rolfe Humphries

+ Nation 165:423 O 18 '47 650w

"There is more true poetry in English in Mr. Fitts's anthology than in any other selection of its kind. Several of the translations are thoroughly convincing: one is Francis Fergusson's 'Electra'; another is the Fitts and Fitzgerald 'Antigone,' another is David Grene's 'Hippolytus,' and Frederic Prokosch's muted version of 'Medea' has the quiet assurance of understatement. . . The classical themes and dramatic episodes as they are presented in this book provide an inspiration, a guide for those who hope to rediscover the plain fact that poetry (aside from the poetry of the Elizabethans) can be spoken on the stage; even in reading the book one almost sees some of the plays in action, and one need not be self-consciously 'literary' to enjoy them." Horace Gregory

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 S
28 '47 900w

Reviewed by Gilbert Highet
N Y Times p28 S 7 '47 1050w

FITZGAY, JOHN, pseud. See Hunt, F.

FITZGERALD, GEOFFREY. Rockets in the afternoon. 80p $2 Fine editions 811 46-7322

A first book of poems by a young American who served in the navy's amphibious force during the war.

"A slight, but promising, first book of poems. . . It shows imaginative capacity."

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 4 '47
60w

"A highly emotional and subjective analysis of many subjects, ranging in scope from the United Nations to love."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 S 21 '46 120w

FITZGIBBON, RUSSELL HUMKE, and WOOTON, FLAUD CONAROE. Latin America, past and present. 469p il maps $2.20 Heath
918 Latin America 46-8119

"The authors of this book present a survey of the political, economic, and cultural phases of present-day life in these countries, with a historical background sufficient to clarify the salient features of the civilization. This book was written to serve either as a textbook or as supplementary reading, and its style, vocabulary, and content were selected as suitable for pupils from thirteen to fifteen years of age. Extensive use has been made of pictures, maps, and diagrams. Questions to answer, 'Things To Do,' and a list of supplementary readings are to be found at the end of each chapter." (School R) Glossary of Spanish and Portuguese words and names. Index.

Reviewed by J. H. Mailey
School R 55:309 My '47 1100w

"The book's distinctive contribution lies in its description of the living habits and personal problems, the thoughts and aspirations of the Latin Americans. . . . Occasionally there is high success in making the reader feel an identification with the people who sweat and strain, but who nevertheless face mañana with faith and hope. . . . As for shortcomings, conservative teachers would probably want more political history." P. W. Coons

+ — Social Educ 11:281 O '47 800w

Reviewed by H. R. Drake
Social Studies 38:279 O '47 450w

FLAVIN, MARTIN. Enchanted; with drawings by Cyrus Leroy Baldridge. 289p $3 Harper 47-30295

The adventures of a group of seven children, European refugees, on the land, on the sea and on a tropical island where they land when their ship is wrecked. In its theme and fantasy the book is reminiscent of Richard Hughes' Innocent Voyage.

Booklist 43:309 Je 1 '47

"Martin Flavin's children are charming when little, stupid and dull when growing up. The tots live in a convincing phantasy world which has a hollow quality when carried over to their years of puberty. And a book which starts in a blaze of intensity rather trickles out to nothing much when the oldest boy and girl discover love." Leo Kennedy

+ — Chicago Sun Book Week p2 My 25 '47 450w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '47

Reviewed by C. H. Bishop
Commonweal 46:293 Jl 4 '47 420w

"Martin Flavin has written a fascinating book, with an elusive and eerie quality which stems from his convincing identification of his imagination with the fantasy world in which his little band of Spanish refugee children kept themselves from being swallowed up by the horrors that life handed out to them."

+ Kirkus 15:103 F 15 '47 430w

"An exciting, beautifully-written novel, also one of the finest studies of a group of children to appear for some time. Recommended for all libraries." E. S. Brown

+ Library J 72:808 My 15 '47 80w

"The Enchanted" has an easy-flowing style, a sustained inventiveness and many charming incidents (a friendly panther provides one), but since the reviewer has to 'discover' the novel not only for himself but for others, it is a duty to report that in my opinion the whole thing does not quite come off." James Hilton

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Je 1 '47 700w

"This is a delightful, off-the-beaten-path novel. . . . The story might briefly be summed up as a fairy-tale for adults. It is of the stuff for midnight meditations, a wayward bus of fancy carrying a rich freight of philosophy. . . . As with a garden in early spring, so there is more in 'The Enchanted' than meets the eye. Perhaps the acutely perceptive will even find the mysterious locale of Eden in its strange and suggestive pages." Charles Lee

N Y Times p3 My 25 '47 600w

New Yorker 23:102 My 24 '47 110w

"Below its surface of fantasy (remember 'Mr. Littlejohn'?), the author has put into his novel the experience of a full life, a mature mind. And getting any part of the book's riches out of it for one's self is a rewarding experience." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Je 15 '47 1250w

"It is, I suppose, an ill High Wind in Jamaica that blows nobody any good, but in this instance it would appear that a following breeze from Richard Hughes' marvelous, maverick book had blown Martin Flavin's new novel clean off its course." John Woodburn

— + Sat R of Lit 30:15 Je 14 '47 1050w

Wis Lib Bul 43:98 Je '47

FLEMING, SIR ALEXANDER, ed. Penicillin; its practical application. 380p 59il $7 Blakiston 615.3292411 Penicillin 46-7422

"This book is not a continuous textbook on penicillin but rather a compilation of independent articles by a group of distinguished English contributors. In this work the authors have discussed the use of penicillin in the various branches of medicine and surgery. Although there is a certain amount of repetition and some difference of opinion, there is uniformity of thought regarding the fundamental principles of penicillin therapy." Chem & Eng N

Reviewed by J. F. Mahoney

Am J Pub Health 37:189 S '47 230w

"This is a good book and should be useful for senior medical students, interns, and practicing physicians." H. F. Flippin

+ Chem & Eng N 25:1078 Ap 14 '47 110w

Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 30 '46 180w

"It is highly technical, but the subject is of such interest and the editorship in such good hands that it is likely to become regarded in the years to come as the first standard textbook on this remarkable drug, and as such demands notice as a historical document."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p406 Ag 24 '46 600w

FLEMING, BEATRICE (JACKSON), and PRYDE, MARION (JACKSON). Distinguished Negroes abroad. 272p il $2.65 Associated pubs.

325.26 Negroes

47-2301

"Intended for supplementary reading in high schools, this [is an] account of Negroes who have gained distinction in Europe, the Latin American countries and the Orient." Christian Century

Christian Century 64:559 Ap 30 '47 40w

"This is a good piece of work, which will help to dispel the most obnoxious of prejudices, and a most dangerous one to boot, if we want One World." J. A. Maynard

+ Churchman 161:19 My 1 '47 140w

"The volume is a school book, the stories are simply and interestingly told and cover the Orient, Spain, France, England, the West Indies and South America and range from the half legendary heroes of Arabia to the late Governor Felix Eboué in our own day." John La Farge

+ Commonweal 46:98 My 9 '47 300w

FLEMING, BERRY. Lightwood tree. 378p $3 Lippincott

47-4063

This novel tells a story of a Georgia community at four periods in time, 1742, 1783, 1863, and 1943. The modern story concerns a middle-aged school teacher who attempts to combat injustice and fascism at home while others are fighting for democracy abroad. The flashbacks into past history deal with the battles of other courageous Americans for the cause of liberty and justice.

"Choosing his strands from three centuries, Mr. Fleming has woven his story together with fine historical color and deft transitions, and has informed it with the affection of a native. Lazy readers used to the straight ahead incline of romance may find this book a little baffling to follow. But it is unquestionably Mr. Fleming's best novel and one of which Georgia should be proud." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 180:124 O '47 550w

Booklist 44:32 S 15 '47

Reviewed by Robert Halsband

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Ag 31 '47 340w

"This is a book worth re-reading if only because its periodic excursions into the past are likely to be skipped by the reader, who is already interested in the modern story. But they are integral parts of a structure which constantly seeks a third dimension—i.e., the history that is causative in the behavior and conditions of present-day characters. Even the reader who is not sure that the attempt has completely succeeded will admit and admire its integrity." James Hilton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Ag 17 '47 750w

"It is unlikely that 'The Lightwood Tree' will be a popular novel, in the lending-library sense; the collaboration that Mr. Fleming asks of his reader is too intense for that. But those who are willing to undertake that partnership of mind and mind—those who will read the novel through to its acerb, wisely wrought ending—will discover an elixir rarely encountered in the dog-days." C. V. Terry

+ N Y Times p3 Ag 24 '47 850w

"In spite of over-easy writing and a dozen structural faults, this manages to be a readable, as well as a warmly humane book."

+ New Yorker 23:86 Ag 16 '47 90w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 D 21 '47 200w

"Berry Fleming has undertaken, I think, a very difficult literary assignment in this new novel which tells a modern story against recurrent illuminating dramatic passages from the past. It is sometimes not easy to follow the several stories on various levels of time which he has to tell. All of them are vividly told. . . . It seemed to me, however, that Mr. Fleming's admiration for individuals and the generally unpleasant portrait he draws of 'the people' as emotional and inert, selfish, stupid, and superstitious make confusing his story of sacrificial ardor for the people's liberties." Jonathan Daniels

Sat R of Lit 30:10 Ag 16 '47 950w

Time 50:99 Ag 25 '47 450w

Wis Lib Bul 43:153 N '47

FLEMING, CLINT. When the fish are rising. 205p $3.50 Duell

799.1 Fishing. Rideau lakes, Ontario

Agr47-319

Tales of fishing and hunting experiences around the Rideau lakes chain in eastern Ontario.

Booklist 44:47 O 1 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 S '47

"It is an outdoors book, a 'natural' for the fishing fraternity."

+ Kirkus 15:270 My 15 '47 100w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 73:420 Ja 1 '48 30w

"The book is particularly entertaining because of its emphasis on the idiosyncrasies of fishermen rather than on descriptions of their catches. The author is a veteran guide, who somewhere has picked up a pleasing knack for narrative."

+ New Yorker 23:80 Ag 23 '47 70w

FLETCHER, H. L. V. Miss Agatha doubles for death. 216p $2 Messner

47-17969

Mystery story.

Booklist 43:348 Jl 1 '47

"The trick, in a very much modified form, is one that Wilkie Collins' hero in 'The Woman in White' considers and wisely rejects. Miss Fletcher might have done as much. Otherwise her coyly deceptive title begins an intermittent thriller as much concerned with romantic machinations as with murderous ones, tightly bound up with a Welsh family history and its superstitions, and concluding with the rather wanton destruction of the great family home. It seems an irresponsible undertaking on nearly every score." James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p9 Mr 23 '47 150w

"Surprise ending and trick tantalizing."

+ Kirkus 14:628 D 15 '46 60w

"The Welsh background makes a wonderful setting for this suspenseful story of plotting and counter-plotting." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p38 Mr 23 '47 140w

"Thoroughly enjoyable."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:34 Mr 29 '47 40w

FLETCHER, HELEN JILL, and DECKTER, JACK. Puppet book; everything you need to know for putting on a puppet show. 48p il $2 Greenberg

791.5 Marionettes

47-31020

Puppet book for amateurs. Gives a brief history of the art of puppetry, and describes the making of the theatre and the puppets. Includes several plays.

Booklist 44:94 N 1 '47

Reviewed by M. B. King

Chicago Sun Book Week D 27 '47 50w

Sat R of Lit 30:56 N 15 '47 50w

FLETCHER, JOHN GOULD. Arkansas. 421p $5 Univ. of N.C. press

976.7 Arkansas—History

47-30331

A one-volume reference book on the state of Arkansas, written by a native son. The book presents its history, customs, politics, peculiarities and people. Index.

Booklist 43:328 Je 15 '47

"Most Arkansawyers themselves, and certainly the rest of us, can find in this book a wealth of fresh information, as well as good entertainment." J. T. Frederick

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Je 8 '47 200w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 28 '47 800w

Current Hist 13:34 Jl '47 60w

"The author combines the value of factual material with the fascination of folk tale, comic interludes, and highlighted personalities. Specific geographical appeal, plus general appeal of vitality and style."

+ Kirkus 15:256 My 1 '47 80w

"Has some good material on festivals and holidays. Recommended." G. D. McDonald

+ Library J 72:805 My 15 '47 100w

"For those who would know Arkansas both as a state and as a state of mind, this volume cannot be surpassed." Avery Craven

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 Je 15 '47 1200w

"To the world of the mountaineers, the Ozarkers, a lithe people who age prematurely and who suffer from tuberculosis, to the world of the sharecroppers, white and black, in the plantation region, Mr. Fletcher devotes most beautiful chapters—to these and to the wild ducks. Such catholicity of interest cannot but make fascinating reading, both to those in Arkansas and those out of it. Certainly, it will appeal to all those interested in American civilization, both in America and in other countries where, too often, a stereotyped view of American life has been presented." Marguerite Young

FLETCHER, J. G.—Continued
+ N Y Times p7 Je 15 '47 550w

"A solid, richly informative history."
+ New Yorker 23:93 Je 14 '47 120w

"Mr. Fletcher's book, as one might expect, turns from the tradition of regional satire. It is a reserved, almost somber, portrait of his native region. . . Mr. Fletcher excites our imagination when he writes of someone digging up an old Spanish halberd out of Arkansas earth. . . He has written a clear portrait of a confused and ebullient region.
He has done everything but explain why Arkansas fascinates us." Horace Reynolds
+ Sat R of Lit 30:22 Je 7 '47 700w

Reviewed by Frank Thistlethwaite
Spec 179:504 O 17 '47 550w
U S Quarterly Bkl 3:276 S '47 280w

FLEXNER, JAMES THOMAS. American painting: first flowers of our wilderness. 368p il col pl $10 Houghton

759.1 Painting, American 47-12171

History of early American painting from earliest colonial times to 1774. It is not only a history of painting, but also an account of the society and culture of the pre-Revolutionary era. There are 162 illustrations covering the works of painters known and unknown up thru the work of Copley and West. Bibliography. Catalog of illustrations. Index.

Booklist 44:181 Ja 15 '48

"The author has critical comments on both style and execution, and the volume is typog-raphically excellent."

+ Current Hist 14:37 Ja '48 50w

Kirkus 15:614 N 1 '47 420w

"Fascinating illustrations, many in color; a good companion for Flexner's earlier America's Old Masters. Highly recommended." A. S.
Plaut

+ Library J 73:40 Ja 1 '48 100w

"First Flowers of Our Wilderness" is beautifully illustrated and fully documented, with elaborate historical and critical notes, extensive revisions of old and uncertain authentications, and a scholarly examination of most of the extant examples of early painting."
Thomas Craven

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 N
23 '47 1250w

"Generations before America produced a professional writer, professional painters were expressing our colonial civilization with an awkward, stark beauty and a slowly growing maturity. This fact, usually ignored even by the best of our historians, is the basis for this excellent volume. . . The hackneyed question,
'Was early American art American?' has meaning, he thinks, outside chauvinistic prejudice, only if it is rephrased to read, 'Was early American art a valid expression of early American life?' He thinks it was, and on the basis of this richly illustrated, broadly perceptive study, we are inclined to agree with him." W. G. Dooley

+ N Y Times p3 D 21 '47 1050w

"Despite its ornate title, this is certainly the most thorough-going study of American Colonial painting generally available. . . The book makes stimulating reading, too, for the author's conclusions upset many of our fondest traditional beliefs about the life and habits of our pre-Revolutionary forebears."

+ New Yorker 23:146 D 13 '47 100w

Reviewed by Alfred Frankenstein
San Francisco Chronicle p23 D 7 '47
400w

"American Painting: First Flowers of Our Wilderness" happens to be one of the few justifications of the publishing madness which runs to lakes, rivers, cities, states, trends, and other compendia. It is a superb book; its color reproductions, in mat rather than gloss finish, are of notable quality, and the half-tones in black and white are also exceptional." J. C.

Long

+ Sat R of Lit 31:25 Ja 24 '48 800w
Wis Lib Bul 43:171 D '47

FLINT, RICHARD FOSTER. Glacial geology and the pleistocene epoch. 589p il maps $6 Wiley

551.79 Geology. Glacial epoch 47-3125

"Comprehensive picture of the Pleistocene epoch discussed from the point of view of glaciation, the outstanding characteristic of that epoch. Much of the material has never been published before." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 43:342 Jl 1 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:891 Je 1 '47 50w

"This well-organized treatise meets a need long felt among geologists. It will be useful as a reference book in the working library of professional students of geomorphology, historical geology, and prehistoric archaeology; it will also serve as an excellent textbook for courses in glaciology."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:312 S '47 120w

FLORY, JANE, and FLORY, ARTHUR. Cow in the kitchen; a folktale retold [and illustrated]. [21p] $1 Lothrop

A retelling of the old folktale about the farmer's wife who wanted more room in the house, and what a wise elder advised the husband to do about it. The setting this time is the Pennsylvania Dutch country.

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p8 Ja 28 '47
120w

Kirkus 14:542 N 1 '46 90w

"Would have to be preboud for library use.
I prefer Rose Dobbs' telling of the same tale with Fritz Eichenberg's illustrations under the title No Room. However, children will enjoy the Flory version also." J. D. Lindquist
Library J 71:1808 D 15 '46 70w

"Story and pictures are full of lively fun."
L. P.

+ N Y Times p44 N 10 '46 110w

FLOYD, ARVA COLBERT. White man, yellow man. 207p $1.75 Abingdon-Cokesbury

950 Eastern question (Far East) 47-30041

"The author's aim is ' . . . to sketch the picture of the yellow man in history, mainly the Chinese and the Japanese, to recount some of the more important features of the impact which the West has made upon him, and to see how he has reacted to the stimulus.' The book's 200 pages are packed with facts. Dr. Floyd (Ph.D., Yale) spent four years teaching in Japan and is now professor of Oriental history at Emory University." (Christian Century) Index.

"One wonders why this book was printed since it contains merely an elucidation of the obvious. Nine-tenths of it is taken up with a sketchy recital of the political relationships between the Occident and the Orient, confessedly written 'with some haste.' Consequently, the story told is of no importance whatsoever to the scholar and of little value to the uninitiated because of its incompleteness and omissions." A. E. Kane

— Ann Am Acad 252:163 Jl '47 380w

Booklist 43:163 F 1 '47

"His historical resume of action and reaction between white men and yellow men is broadly drawn and will serve as a sound introduction to Asia for the casual reader who has read only the newspaper headlines." F. S. Marquardt

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Ja 5 '47
180w

Christian Century 64:18 Ja 1 '47 70w
Foreign Affairs 26:232 O '47 20w

"This is a highly significant book, coming as it does at this crucial time in the relationship between 'the two largest blocks of humanity'. It should be read and re-read by everyone who plays a part in that relationship. But I must say what I have said above with some reservations. The author's interpretation of the 'yellow man's' view, I think, is too generous and sounds too much like the now familiar war cries of Japan. The author is as impartial in condemning Japanese imperialism as he is in condemning all imperialism." Toru Matsumoto

+ — J Religion 27:306 O '47 250w

"Professor Arva Floyd of Emory University has attempted the virtually impossible task of presenting in one brief book the interrelations of the United States, China, Japan, England, Russia, Germany, Holland, and France in the Far East. The result is a readable, popularly written book distinguished by its essential accuracy in the recording of historical relationships. Except for certain flaws in the handling of anthropological and social psychological aspects, the book serves its modest purpose of 'fostering the spirit of neighborliness among the people who live around the Pacific basin.'" R. W. O'Brien

+ — Social Forces 25:458 My '47 650w

FLYNN, EDWARD JOSEPH. You're the boss. 244p $3 Viking

B or 92 Politics, Practical 47-30772

Autobiography, dealing chiefly with political matters, of the Democratic "boss" of Bronx County, New York.

"This is probably the frankest and most candid exposition of the rules and gimmicks of practical politics to come from the pen of an urban political leader. Indeed, this apologia for bosses and machines from a self-styled 'good' boss is so complete that one wonders if the author realizes the extent of his own self-revelation." H. A. Bone

Am Pol Sci R 41:1226 D '47 600w

Booklist 44:66 O 15 '47

Reviewed by Joseph McSorley

Cath World 166:375 Ja '48 250w

Reviewed by M. P. Akers

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 S 28 '47 600w

"A useful, revealing, altogether readable book. It is useful because it parts the curtain on government in action and vividly details the actual operation of a big-city political machine—a machine which is sometimes honest, sometimes useful, and always requiring the most alert public scrutiny." Roscoe Drummond

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 S 30 '47 1050w

"Students of politics grant that most political bosses are above all other things intensely human. In that characteristic Ed Flynn excels. It stands out in every page of his book—a work that is as interesting and persuasive a case for the political boss as you will find." J. G. Kerwin

+ Commonweal 46:627 O 10 '47 800w

Kirkus 15:302 Je 1 '47 180w

"Important source material. A must for all interested in good government." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 72:1102 Ag '47 120w

"Mr. Flynn's 'You're the Boss' is clearly destined to become a small political classic. I do not know of any book which combines so effectively a candid analysis of the machine system, an able defense of it, and a realistic account of machine activity in concrete political situations. Few politicians are sufficiently reflective or articulate to describe the techniques which have become for them a matter of instinct or conditioned reflex. No one perhaps since Martin Van Buren has equaled Ed Flynn in uniting professional virtuosity with insight and intellectual detachment." A. M. Schlesinger, Jr.

+ Nation 165:417 O 18 '47 800w

"Edward J. Flynn's memoirs are neither sensational nor dramatic, but, in a becomingly modest way, they succeed in being at once a manual of practical politics, a defense of the practical politician and an interesting report on the career of a great President as seen from such a vantage point." Richard Watts

+ New Repub 117:26 S 8 '47 1800w

"It is in his last chapter, 'Personal Recollections on Bosses and Machines' that Edward J. Flynn is most vulnerable and most cynical. He tells brazenly how he does it with jobs and political machinery, and he reflects piously that only more active work on the part of the citizens—against the kind of things Flynn does—and more education will make for good machines and good bosses. He sees no good in reform movements because they don't last, and in that, too, he resembles his forebear, George Washington Plunkitt, who invented the term 'honest graft.'" M. R. Werner

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 S 7 '47 2000w

Reviewed by Warren Moscow

N Y Times p6 S 14 '47 800w

"No matter what you think of Mr. Flynn's views on the precinct captain's place in American history, he has written an extremely useful lecture on the working side of our national politics."

New Yorker 23:87 S 6 '47 140w

Reviewed by W. A. P. White

San Francisco Chronicle p14 S 21 '47 420w

"An honest book; an intelligent book, but a book that, in part, is only half-revealing, half-concealing. He didn't tell all. 'You're the Boss' makes a definite contribution to American politics, but that contribution would have been greater had the writer not been a Disciple of Sweetness and Light." H. B. Swope

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:14 S 20 '47 1300w

Reviewed by Donald Derby

Springf'd Republican p9B N 9 '47 350w

Time 50:105 S 8 '47 1100w

FLYNN, JOHN THOMAS. Epic of freedom. 127p $2 Fireside press

323.4 Liberty

47-1806

"The story of the growth of freedom of the people told briefly for high school people. Useful in schools and for students writing themes on related subjects. Suggestions for further reading." Booklist

Booklist 43:363 Jl 15 '47

"Intentionally oversimplified, as an antidote to cynicism and a hint for further reading and thought."

Christian Century 64:769 Je 18 '47 60w

Current Hist 13:165 S '47 40w

Social Studies 38:288 O '47 20w

Springf'd Union p22 Jl 19 '47 130w

FOELL, CHARLES FRANCIS, and THOMPSON, MAURICE EUGENE. Diesel-electric locomotive. 688p il $7 Diesel publications

621.436 Diesel locomotives

46-5512

"The material presented in this survey of Diesel locomotives manufactured in the U. S. A., will be useful to two groups of readers; owners and managers, and operating and maintenance men. The history of the development of the Diesel locomotive in this country is sketched, the economic and operating advantages are discussed, and the principal types of Diesel locomotives are described. A good share of the book is devoted to descriptions of various components and systems of Diesel locomotives such as the engine-generator assembly, traction motors, fuel systems and brakes. At the end of the book, there are five chapters on maintenance. Although the title indicates that the scope of the book is limited to Diesel-electric locomotives, some material is included on Diesel-powered locomotives with mechanical and hydraulic drives. The book is liberally illustrated, chiefly with photographs of actual equipment. There is no bibliography. Advertisements of equipment are included." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1128 S 1 '46 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:25 Ap '46

FLETCHER, J. G.—Continued

in other countries where, too often, a typed view of American life is presented." Marguerite Young

+ N Y Times p7 Je 15 '47 55w

"A solid, richly informative history
+ New Yorker 23:93 Je 14 '47 55w

"Mr. Fletcher's book, as one turns from the tradition of regional is a reserved, almost somber, portrait native region. . . Mr. Fletcher imaginings when he wrote it, digging up an old Spanish Arkansas earth.
He has done everything but Kansas fascinates us." F.

+ Sat R of Lit 30:17

Reviewed by Frank T

Spec 179:504 O

U S Quarterly

FLEXNER, JAMES

ing: first flowers
col pl $10 Hough

759.1 Painting

History of early earliest colonial

a history of painting

the society and ary era. The

the works of thru the work

raphy. Cahn

100w

"The

style

graph

on.

26 chronicle p18 O 8 '47 his style and the clipped, dialogue are of the Hemingat the author has not reduced to the ultimate leanness of the s famous style. But he has Hem-ndulent detachment, his tacit, pityerve." H. M. Jones

Sat R of Lit 31:18 Ja 24 '48 360w

FOLDES, LILI (RENDY) (MRS ANDOR

FOLDES) Two on a continent. 254p $3 Dutton

B or 92 Folds, Andor. U.S.—Social life and customs 47-30076

A young Hungarian writer, sent to this country to report on the World's Fair, stayed to marry a countryman, who was a concert pianist and composer. This is Mrs Folds' account of their impressions of the United States.

Booklist 43:183 F 15 '47

Bookmark 8:12 My '47

"A callow account of no account. [Mrs Foldes's] adopted language—English plus journalese—is graceless and unidiomatic and it bristles with clichés. . . In spite of these faults, a few interesting episodes do come through, like the accounts of the Mormon university near Salt Lake City and of the birth of musical culture in the town of Beloit, Kan. But these hardly compensate for the wretchedness of the book as a whole." R. H.

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ag 10 '47
200w

Christian Science Monitor p18 Je 7 '47
480w

Kirkus 15:20 Ja 1 '47 250w

"A great deal of the charm of this book lies in the warmth of the relationship between the author and her husband, implicit rather than explicit in the writing. Mrs. Foldes's writing has personality and gayety and surprising fluency. If the Foldeses like America, in this engaging volume, America is the Foldeses after reading it."

Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14
300w

ht to her analysis of America broad and a judgment that nbaum

u24 F 23 '47 550w should and will do far understand the Euro-nd to realize why so ry require a mighty

the visitor. As for on which the au-

she really wants entertainment."

p16 Ja 31 '47

Where is the fire?

[chor]. 35p $2 Houghton

47-30695

y waked up one night and g and smelled something burn-they called the fire department, member of the family rushed around save something. Then the fire de-arrived. But where was the fire?

and grade readers.

Reviewed by M. B. King

Chicago Sun Book Week N 1 '47 130w

Kirkus 15:426 Ag 15 '47 80w

"Humorous story to read to young children and one that third-graders can read themselves. Recommended." M. J. Meade

+ Library J 72:1277 S 15 '47 80w

Sat R of Lit 30:38 N 15 '47 70w

Springf'd Republican p8B D 21 '47 80w

FOLEY, MARTHA, ed. Best American short stories, 1947, and the Yearbook of the American short story. 528p $3.50 Houghton

Short stories—Collections (16-11387)

Contents: Return by faith, by F. L. Broderick; Sex education, by Dorothy Canfield; Headless hawk, by Truman Capote; Day of gold and darkness, by Robert Fontaine; Man in the mirror, by Adelaide Gerstley; The cocoon, by J. B. L. Goodwin; Bird song, by J. M. Goss;
The horse like September, by Paul Griffith; Turista, by A. J. Guérard; Golden stallion, by Elizabeth Hardwick; Up the road a piece, by R. M. Harris; Night watch, by Thomas Hegg-en; Under the ginkgo trees, by E. H. Heth; Michael Finney and the little men, by J. R.
Humphreys; Down in the reeds by the river, by Victoria Lincoln; Little baseball world, by Robert Lowry; Father Delacroix, by M. D. Marten-net; The darkness, by Jane Mayhall; Prince of darkness, by J. F. Powers; The greatest idea in the world, by Samson Raphaelson; What we don't know hurts us, by Mark Schorer; Game chickens, by Allan Seager; Act of faith, by Irwin Shaw; The red dress, by Sylvia Shirley;
The interior castle, by Jean Stafford; Shock treatment, by Irwin Stark; The women on the wall, by Wallace Stegner; The siege, by Niccolò Tucci; Bread and games, by J. D. Weaver; The hidden room, by Lawrence Williams.

Booklist 44:172 Ja 1 '48

Reviewed by Van Allen Bradley

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 N 30 '47
70w

Reviewed by John Cournos

Commonweal 47:257 D 19 '47 500w

Kirkus 15:442 Ag 15 '47 160w

"These thirty short stories . . . show a nice balance of subject matter, treatment, mood, and a mixture of both known and new authors sufficiently rounded to give the volume an added interest on that score alone. . . There are none without genuine reading interest, and probably at least a half a dozen that will be around for years, deservedly reprinted and enthusiastically re-read." Kenneth Fearing

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p30

N 23 '47 600w

"In one way, at least, Martha Foley's [book] of is a successful book: it is a good reflection of a bad time. Most of the stories represent frustration, broken dreams, and quiet desperation against a background of violence or harsh monotony. . . . Most of the stories in this collection, are skillfully written, but only a few of them are memorable. J. F. Powers' 'Prince of Darkness' is remarkable partly because the Catholic priesthood has seldom been described by American writers, but chiefly because Mr. Powers is a shrewd observer and a brilliant writer." D. S. Norton

N Y Times p18 N 2 '47 1100w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p22 N 21 '47 450w

FONER, PHILIP SHELDON. History of the labor movement in the United States [v 1] From colonial times to the founding of the American federation of labor, 576p $4.50 Int. pub.

331.88 Trade unions—U.S. Labor and laboring classes—U.S. (47-19381)

"A comprehensive study of the evolution of the trade union movement, of the militant struggles of the American workers to secure better living standards, of their role in the development of American democracy, and of their activities in the political life of the nation." (Publisher's note) Brief biographical sketches. Index.

Reviewed by Wallace Brewster

Am Pol Sci R 41:806 Ag '47 550w

"This is a competent work, although the reader schooled in labor history will not find many new facts. . . . Dr. Foner's attempt at Marxian interpretation is more ambitious than successful. The facts of American labor history are not so easily fitted into a Procrustean bed of Marxist dogma." Philip Taft

Nation 165:290 S 20 '47 700w

"On the narrative level, much of the volume is not open to significant question, but it invites criticism on the more crucial level of meaning and generalization. Dr. Foner, who has elsewhere displayed his ability as a scholar, is anxious to document his interpretive scheme and to support by historical precedent the present position of the Communist party. This leads him to take at face value much of the evidence which he has so painstakingly gathered and to make some quite unwarranted inferences. . . . The desire to produce evidences of Marxist class consciousness is responsible for loose handling of the whole concept of class and for the assumption that class-conscious utterances of some organizations represent the interests and feelings of all workers. It also leads Dr. Foner to fail to illuminate the competitive nature of American working-class behavior and the middle-class aspirations of so many nineteenth-century labor organizations." Henry David

N Y Times p28 My 11 '47 800w

"The book is commendable for its open advocacy of the Marxist theory of history. It is no sneaking effort to feed Communist propaganda to unsuspecting listeners. . . . In at least one spot the hasty reader gets the impression that if it hadn't been for the commendable vigor of the early German-American Communists in boosting Abe Lincoln, he might not have beaten Seward for the Republican nomination. But careful rereading shows that Foner stays within bounds of carefully documented statement, and doesn't actually claim that the Communists made the Civil War President's nomination possible." Louis B. Gess

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ap 22 '47 450w

FOOTE, HENRY WILDER. Thomas Jefferson, champion of religious freedom, advocate of Christian morals, 70p $1.25 Beacon press

B or 92 Jefferson, Thomas 47-4376

In ten essays the author presents an account of Jefferson's religious views from the time of his youth, and pictures his part in the development of religious liberty in Virginia and in the nation. Index.

Christian Century 64:951 Ag 6 '47 140w

"Apart from their interest as documents in the controversy about Jefferson's private faith, many passages can stand on their own as fresh and inspirational affirmations."

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 N 15 '47 180w

"Every page is interesting, not to say at times fascinating." C. H. Moehlan

+ Crozer Q 24:362 O '47 550w

"Ten exceedingly brief, charmingly-written essays. . . . He does not consider that in those days any deviation from Trinitarian belief was regarded as atheism. The sketchiness of Mr. Foote's essays was most regrettable in his discussion of the Act for Establishing Religious Freedom in Virginia. . . . Mr. Foote has, however, brought together some interesting materials in highly readable form." J. L. B.

+ — J Philos 44:362 Je 19 '47 150w

Kirkus 15:532 S 15 '47 250w

New Eng Q 20:430 S '47 10w

Wis Lib Bul 43:139 O '47

FOOTMAN, DAVID. Ferdinand Lassalle, romantic revolutionary [Eng title: Primrose path], 251p $3.50 Yale univ. press

B or 92 Lassalle, Ferdinand Johann Gottlieb 47-30863

"First English work about ambitious, brilliant founder of early German labor movement since Meredith's Tragic Comedians and W. H. Dawson's German Socialism and Lassalle; excepting translations, the only biography of Lassalle in English. Author, British novelist, presents from contemporary sources a well-written account of colorful career: Lassalle's affairs with Countess Hatzfeldt (which brought him European fame), with Helene von Döniges (which brought his tragic end), his political writings and speeches (which won him his place in history), his relations with Marx, Bucher, Bismarck. Intended as 'a picture of the man and his work' and contains no exhaustive examination of political and economic theories." (Library J) Bibliographical note. Index.

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 64:1365 N 12 '47 1450w

"Mr. Footman has done an excellent job of digesting, organizing and highlighting Lassalle's life. . . . His book is sober, good history and yet, in its sobriety, in its clever choice of concise quotations, in its objective and revealing method of judging his hero out of his own mouth, it is such a fascinating, implicit analysis of the Don Juan-Machiavelli of the German labor movement that its reading is pleasantly engaging, while amusing and earnestly instructive. I hope he will write a Karl Marx for us." H. A. Reinhold

+ Commonweal 47:53 O 24 '47 390w

Current Hist 13:228 O '47 70w

"Recommended for college and larger public libraries." Kurt Schwerin

+ Library J 72:1266 S 15 '47 140w

"An English life of Lassalle was needed, and Mr. Footman has done it very well. His book is a pleasure to read, makes full and skilful use of all the sources, and—most important—it comes off as biography; it presents a convincing picture of a man." A. J. P. T.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 O 15 '46 310w

"Pending the development of a new social science equivalent to preventive medicine, here is more material for the already well-stocked in-tray of the social pathologist. It is a useful book to have. . . . Mr. Footman has very wisely allowed Lassalle to speak for himself, which he was only too ready to do. As the book is very short, it is in one way a pity that Mr. Footman chose to make his presentation so episodic. The effect is a little breathless and bewildering. On the other hand, that is no doubt the effect Lassalle produced." Wilfrid Harrison

+ — Spec 178:18 Ja 3 '47 550w

FLETCHER, J. G.—Continued

in other countries where, too often, a politician and an interesting report typed view of American life here of a great point: Richard W. Butler presented." Marguerite Young, age 117:26 S 8 '47 1800w

+ N Y Times p7 Je 15 '47 5w
+ New Yorker 23:98 Je 14

"Mr. Fletcher's book, as one of his last chapter, 'Personal Recol-turns from the tradition of regional history, active and he does not with cynical is a reserved, almost somber, my venerable and he is not cynical native region. . . . Mr. Fletcher's kind work on the parts of the imaginings when he writes the kind of things Flynn does digging up an old Spanish case will make for good in re-Arkansas earth. He has cases life sees no good in re-portrait of a confused and mingles life with the George
He has done everything by his forefear and the term Kansas fascinates us." Verner WKly Bk R p2 S

+ Sat R of Lit 30:144

Reviewed by Frank

Spec 179:504

U S Quarterly

FLEXNER, JAMES

ing: first flowers

col pl $10 Hough

759.1 Paintings

History of

earliest colonial

a history of the society and

ary era. Th

the works of thru the raphy.

17 360w

style

graph

om.

6

g

17 360w

style

graph

om.

6

g

17 360w

style

graph

om.

6

g

17 360w

style

graph

om.

6

g

17 360w

style

graph

om.

6

g

17 360w

style

graph

om.

6

g

17 360w

style

graph

om.

6

g

17 360w

style

graph

om.

6

g

17 360w

style

graph

om.

6

g

17 360w

style

graph

om.

6

g

17 360w

style

graph

om.

6

g

17 360w

style

graph

om.

6

g

17 360w

style

graph

om.

6

g

17 360w

style

graph

om.

6

g

17 360w

style

graph

om.

6

g

17 360w

style

graph

om.

6

g

17 360w

style

graph

om.

6

g

17 360w

style

graph

om.

6

g

17 360w

style

graph

om.

6

g

17 360w

style

graph

om.

6

g

17 360w

style

graph

om.

6

g

17 360w

style

graph

om.

6

g

17 360w

style

graph

om.

6

g

17 360w

style

graph

om.

6

g

17 360w

style

graph

om.

6

g

17 360w

style

graph

om.

6

g

17 360w

style

graph

om.

6

g

17 360w

style

graph

om.

6

g

17 360w

style

graph

om.

6

g

17 360w

style

graph

om.

6

g

17 360w

style

graph

om.

6

g

17 360w

style

graph

om.

6

g

17 360w

style

graph

om.

6

g

17 360w

style

graph

om.

6

g

17 360w

style

graph

om.

6

g

17 360w

style

graph

om.

6

g

17 360w

style

graph

om.

6

g

17 360w

style

graph

om.

6

g

17 360w

style

graph

om.

6

g

17 360w

style

graph

om.

6

g

17 360w

style

graph

om.

6

g

17 360w

style

graph

om.

6

g

17 360w

style

graph

om.

6

g

17 360w

style

graph

om.

6

g

17 360w

style

graph

om.

6

g

17 360w

style

graph

om.

6

g

17 360w

style

graph

om.

6

g

17 360w

style

graph

om.

6

g

17 360w

question of war guilt, by T. G. Masaryk; Lenin and Mussolini, by H. J. Laski; Freedom of the seas, by Viscount Grey of Fallodon; The "New Spirit" and its critics, by N. D. Baker; The problem child of Europe, by Dorothy Thompson; Of liberty, by Benedetto Croce.

Booklist 44:169 Ja 1 '48

Reviewed by DeWitt John

Christian Science Monitor p16 N 21 '47 450w

Current Hist 14:38 Ja '48 20w

"This book provides an unparalleled opportunity for any American to try to measure the relevance and durability of the ideas which have been given us on international relations by the most competent and responsible leadership this country has developed in the foreign field outside the Department of State itself. A good many thoughtful men would not make even that one exception." Joseph Barnes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 N 23 '47 1500w

Reviewed by G. A. Craig

N Y Times p6 D 14 '47 1000w

FORREST, FELIX C. Ria. 242p $2.75 Duell 47-3832

An American woman, widowed during World war II, develops a painful crippling of her right hand. Her doctor insists that she see a psychiatrist, but she goes back over her past life herself seeking to run down the clue to her present predicament. She finally traces it to a painful experience, when as a girl of fifteen she stayed at a German spa, and there met a half-mad German neurotic.

Reviewed by George Dillon

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Je 1 '47 270w

"A strange story, not without symbolical allusion and heightened by the indirect device of narration, this is quite limited in appeal."

Kirkus 15:176 Mr 15 '47 130w

"Style and theme are unusual, tantalizing, unsatisfactory. Recommended." Anne Whitmore

Library J 72:808 My 15 '47 70w

"During the course of 'Ria' the reader finds himself fascinated by the multiplicity of colorful detail, but in the end the piling up of incidents comes close to defeating the major theme of the novel. Ria herself seems to be curiously indifferent to her own affliction, and what she recalls is out of all proportion to its effect upon her. Finally her own indifference communicates itself to the reader, and he feels strangely cheated by the unresolved conclusion after so much sound and fury, no matter how absorbing the story has been in many of its particulars, and there are times when it is very absorbing indeed." J. J. Espey

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 Je 22 '47 600w

"This is an odd story with the makings of a parable. . . The suggestion of an underneath pattern—it's no more than a suggestion—adds substance and flavor to the story but does not get in the way of it." Catherine Brody

N Y Times p14 Je 1 '47 550w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p12 My 30 '47 700w

"Short as [the] novel is, there is much too much philosophical talk in it, and too many of its people are made to explain themselves and others to others again. . . But the writing itself is so well, so carefully, and sometimes so beautifully done, that one ought to remain thankful to Mr. Forrest, whatever one's impatient objections to his methods may be." Robert Pick

+ Sat R of Lit 30:26 JI 19 '47 410w

FORSTER, EDWARD MORGAN. Collected tales. 308p $2.75 Knopf

47-4482

Includes the short stories from The Celestial Omnibus, and The Eternal Moment (Book Review Digest 1923, 1928). All but two are fantasies. Contents: The story of a panic; The other side of the hedge; The celestial omnibus; Other kingdom; The curate's friend; The road from Colonus; The machine stops; The point of it; Mr. Andrews; Co-ordination; The story of the siren; The eternal moment.

Booklist 44:35 S 15 '47

"Charmed by his sparkling, clear, quietly puckish style and his penetrating wit, the reader can savor Mr. Forster's sympathy with children of nature, those who cannot be fenced in. . . Ours is not a time when fantasy is fashionable, and some readers are positively repelled by the slightest touch of it. As Mr. Forster suggests, fantasy now tends to retreat or dig in, or, at the most, to take the form of prophecy. He hints that it may still have its place as a means of enlivening observations on changing and puzzling times." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 4 '47 500w

Kirkus 15:288 Je 1 '47 170w

"Critical opinion is agreed that Forster's short stories are less successful than his novels, but as important expressions by a major literary figure they are indispensable in most libraries." H. W. Hart

Library J 72:1033 JI '47 90w

Nation 165:166 Ag 16 '47 500w

"These twelve fantasies are exquisitely wrought, with grace, deceptive ease and great felicity. They have imagination without extravagance, charm without preciousness and delicacy without bloodlessness. They are neither coy nor whimsical, and there is always a hard core of unsentimental intelligence beneath their romantic paganism." Richard Watts

+ New Repub 117:27 JI 14 '47 1400w

"There are a dozen tales in the volume. . . They are fairly well known to a considerable number of sensitive readers, and deserve to be better known, for they are delicately conceived and intelligently executed. Some of them, such as 'The Other Side of the Hedge,' are hardly more than thinnish allegories. But at their best they are as substantial as fantasies can well be, as in the story 'The Celestial Omnibus,' which gives one of the original collections its title."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 JI 27 '47 230w

Reviewed by Carlos Baker

N Y Times p5 JI 13 '47 1350w

New Yorker 23:67 JI 12 '47 40w

"A collection like this may easily be spoiled for the reader by being written about too much. I suggest that if you like thoughtful short stories presented as fantasies, written with the sureness that has always characterized Forster's work and flavored with the delicate irony that is also a Forster mark, you lose no time getting hold of this collection. The stories are eminently worth reissuing, for they are, and I believe will remain, classics of their kind." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 JI 25 '47 750w

"The author calls these stories fantasies, and all but one deserve the name. They are fantastic, imaginative responses to the business of living, and, taken in the lump, they will give the thoughtful reader a pretty clear idea of what Mr. Forster's attitude towards that business is; or what it was when he wrote these tales at various dates previous to the First World War." B. R. Redman

+ Sat R of Lit 30:32 JI 12 '47 550w

Time 50:101 Ag 11 '47 600w

"Subtle, refined, soft-spoken, these fantasies are 'literary' in a pleasant fashion of a more fortunate generation." Orville Prescott

+ Yale R n s 37:190 autumn '47 330w

FORTHALL, SONYA. Cogwheels of democracy; a study of the precinct captain. 106p $2 Pamphlet distributing

352 Politics, Practical 47-36

"An attempt has been made to analyze the activities and characteristics of the precinct captain from interviews with six hundred of his kind taken from every ward of Chicago. His activities are contrasted with those of other community agents, such as the social worker or the policeman. Attention is given to his part in the election machinery, to his effectiveness as an interpreter and manipulator of local government functions, and to his role as a party agent. Although the interviews upon which this study is based were made several years ago, the duties and responsibilities of the precinct captain have not changed." Pref

FORTHAL, SONYA—Continued

"Lack of references to related literature may represent a concession to readability and a bid for popular circulation. The absence of an index is not a serious defect. In general, Miss Forthal is to be commended for a thoughtful and readable monographic addition to the literature on American political parties." Joseph Rosenstein

+ — Am J Soc 53:308 Ja '48 390w

Reviewed by R. V. Peel

Am Pol Sci R 41:788 Ag '47 1000w

"The book contains valuable information for anyone desiring to know about the local workings of a political organization." W. J.

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Mr 23 '47 120w

FOSDICK, HARRY EMERSON. On being fit to live with; sermons on post-war Christianity. 219p $2 Harper

252 Sermons 46-11853

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

Bookmark 8:3 Ja '47

"These sermons maintain the high standard which we expect from this great preacher, and seem to the reviewer even better than some of his other volumes of sermons. . . And as usual there are the many illustrations and quotations, always apt, simple and forceful." W. L. Caswell

+ Churchman 161:16 Ap 15 '47 180w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '47

"A real book on a real subject." E. C. Herrick

+ Crozer Q 24:187 Ap '47 210w

Reviewed by R. L. Dicks

J Religion 27:306 O '47 150w

"Dr. Fosdick's sermons have a superb quality which is due not only to his mastery of form but to the fact that his preaching effects personal encounter with his hearers. This little book of 'sermons on postwar Christianity,' the first of which gives it its title, represents Dr. Fosdick at his best." F. E. Johnson

+ Survey G 36:304 My '47 550w

Wis Lib Bul 43:33 F '47

FOSS, MARTIN. Idea of perfection in the western world. 102p $1.50 Princeton univ. press

124 Perfection A46-5012

"The author challenges . . . the idea of perfection in its commanding position in Western thought. His scope includes art and music as well as doctrine. He observes that 'the course of European philosophy is marked by a permanent struggle between a rational philosophy and a desire to understand the position of man in the universe. It is the religious thinker who in the Christian era revolts against a systematizing reason and tries over and over again to break its power by violent paradoxes.'" Christian Century

"One of the most brilliant little monographs in recent years, this book will be little read by the clergy. Characterized by a marvelous intellectual precision, its thought channels are those of the professional philosopher rather than the active minister. Nevertheless, the writing is powerfully Christian and has a true significance for the message of the pulpit as well as for the classroom." F. H. Littell

+ Christian Century 63:1280 O 23 '46 420w

Reviewed by Vergilius Fern

Ethics 57:309 JI '47 160w

J Philos 45:26 Ja 1 '48 300w

"It is not often that a hundred pages of text are more richly packed with profound searching and suggestion. The result in this instance is an intriguing little book, classical in its conception and lucidity, designed indeed to challenge a dominant classical idea." E. T. Ramsdell

+ J Religion 27:130 Ap '47 400w

"Foss is a born philosopher, with a passion for substantiating his thoughts down to their last ramifications. There is no dead material left; under his pressure, disparate concepts become part of a coherent pattern and suddenly glow with a life which is perhaps not their own but is life nevertheless. . . Foss's philosophy may be questionable, but in his book philosophy is caught in the act." Siegfried Kracauer

Pol Sci Q 62:634 D '47 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p242 My 17 '47 700w

FOSTER, MRS GENEVIEVE (STUMP). Augustus Caesar's world; a story of ideas and events from B.C. 44 to 14 A.D.; il. by the author. 330p $3.50 Scribner

937 Rome—History—Juvenile literature. Augustus, emperor of Rome—Juvenile literature. Civilization, Greco-Roman—Juvenile literature 47-12075

"After Julius Caesar was murdered, in March, 44 B.C., the 19-year-old Octavian, Julius Caesar's favorite nephew, forced the Roman Senate to make him Consul. Thirteen years later Octavian, now to be known as Augustus Caesar, was sole master of the Roman world. Miss Foster has told the story of the exciting half century that followed Augustus' rise to power." (N Y Times) Indexes.

Booklist 44:174 Ja 1 '48

Reviewed by M. B. King

Chicago Sun Book Week N 29 '47 150w

Commonweal 47:156 N 21 '47 30w

"Fascinating reading for any age." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 24:46 Ja '48 120w

Kirkus 15:507 S 15 '47 170w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 N 23 '47 300w

"This book is more than a history of the Roman world. It contains accounts of life among the wild Germanic tribes, of life in Persia, India and China, in Britain and in the Western Hemisphere. These, in addition to maps and charts, give the book an unusual inclusiveness." R. A. Brown

+ N Y Times p4 N 16 '47 170w

FOSTER, WILLIAM ZEBULON. New Europe. 128p $1.25 Int. pubs.

940.55 Europe—Politics 47-5321

A report on the recent three months' tour of eight European states and Trieste by the head of the American Communist party. The countries visited were England, France, Italy, Albania, Yugoslavia, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, and Poland. No index.

"A categorical and polemical analysis of the postwar social, economic, and political conditions in all of those countries. For good measure, he also contributes a 'broad grasp' of the problems of Germany, Spain, and Austria—areas he did not visit. The familiar ring of his analysis suggests, at least, how this Herculean task was accomplished." T. P. Jenkin

Am Pol Sci R 41:1042 O '47 300w

New Yorker 23:64 Ag 2 '47 140w

FOWLER, BERTRAM BAYNES. Co-operative challenge. 265p $2.75 Little

334.5 Cooperation—U.S. 47-30609

"A discussion of the principles and practices of consumer co-operative groups, with particular reference to their history, present functioning, and future in the U.S." (Booklist) No index.

Booklist 44:4 S 1 '47

"Fowler gives some valuable and interesting pictures of progress in Indiana and Ohio and Missouri. But when he gets to Western Canada (if he ever got there) his passion for the consumer idea and his phobia of government action lead him astray on the prairie. . . If Mr. Fowler cannot present a more accurate picture of co-ops in Western Canada and if he cannot balance his obsession for consumer co-operatives with a little economic and political realism he should confine his flights of imagination to detective stories, which he produces prolifically." Leonard Harman

— + Canadian Forum 27:238 Ja '48 280w

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ag 31 '47 70w

"Mr. Fowler and other writers have had much to say already about the consumer co-operative movement; but seldom, if ever, has there been a clearer statement of its fundamental philosophy or a better balanced account of its growth along different lines under varying circumstances, than is now available in this book." D. M.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 S 16 '47 700w

Kirkus 15:329 Je 15 '47 210w

"An up-to-date report on the movement, stressing its extraordinary growth in the past decade. . . As a useful compendium of facts on all such matters, this book can be thoroughly recommended except for the strange omission of an index. On questions of theory, however, I find myself rather disturbed by Mr. Fowler's doctrinaire approach." Keith Hutchinson

+ — Nation 165:205 Ag 30 '47 800w

Reviewed by James Nelson

N Y Times p38 N 9 '47 750w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 N 16 '47 200w

"The Cooperative Challenge' cannot be hailed as a great book, nor even as a book that will give business or advertising men any pleasure or satisfaction. Its importance lies solely in the fact that it is the first comprehensive record of the present status of the co-operative movement in these highly capitalistic United States." Fred Smith

Sat R of Lit 30:9 Ag 23 '47 2900w

Wis Lib Bul 43:137 O '47

FOWLIE, WALLACE. Jacob's night; the religious renaissance in France [four essays on Péguy, Rouault, Maritain and Myths of modern poetry]. 116p $1.50 Sheed

920.044 France—Civilization. Peguy, Charles Pierre. Rouault, Georges. Maritain, Jacques 47-4849

"The theme of 'Jacob's Night' is the renewal of civilization through the wrestling with the angel, a wrestling which involves both injury and redemption. The first essay studies Péguy and the spiritual renaissance in France. The three following essays comprehend a spiritual rebirth leading outward from France to a crucial transformation implicit in the whole of Western civilization." (Sat R of Lit) Index.

Reviewed by R. L. Carol

Cath World 166:186 N '47 450w

"Mr. Fowlie's prose is a fit medium for his thought. It is simple and clear—one looks down into those clear, clear shallows, and there is not a speck of logic to obscure their clarity. The English gives the impression of being very literally translated from French, as no doubt it was. There are some kinds of nonsense which sound well in English, but are revealed as just nonsense when translated into French. Mr. Fowlie's particular brand may sound better in French." Vivian Mercier

— Commonweal 46:245 Je 20 '47 550w

Reviewed by Jeremy Ingalls

Sat R of Lit 30:34 S 20 '47 500w

FOX, EMMET. Make your life worth while. 239p $2 Harper

131.324 New thought 47-541

"A series of short essays on a wide number of subjects which by the use of incident and parable have an inspirational appeal for the reader." Chicago Sun Book Week

"The volume is not one of the major expositions in the field in which Fox is recognized, but readers who know and have liked his other books will find his latest reflecting his basic philosophy."

Chicago Sun Book Week p17 F 9 '47 160w

Christian Century 64:240 F 19 '47 80w

Wis Lib Bul 43:50 Mr '47

FOX, JAMES M., pseud. See Knipscheer, J. M. W.

FOX, RUTH. Great men of medicine; il. by Dwight Logan. 240p $2.50 Random house

926.1 Medicine—Biography. Physicians Med47-36

Sketches of the lives and contributions to medical science of nine physicians. Contents: Versalius; Paré; Harvey; Jenner; Laennec; Semmelweis; Morton; Koch; The twentieth century.

Booklist 43:311 Je 1 '47

"The biographies are too brief for their subjects to come to life as human beings, but the drama of their conflict with tradition and the struggle towards truth does get through. This should be good for school libraries particularly."

+ — Kirkus 15:192 Ap 1 '47 70w

"A well-written and interesting book." Dorothy Dawson

+ Library J 72:895 Je 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Je 29 '47 290w

"In her interpretation of the lives of these great men of medicine, the author's vignettes frequently suffer from lack of clarity, but this is a book which will prove stimulating to any boy or girl who is interested in the great medical discoveries and the men behind them." H. B. Lent

+ — N Y Times p22 My 11 '47 200w

"This book will help to fill three gaps in our literature for young people. We have never had enough books that give a series of biographical sketches. We have never had enough biographies of Europeans, and we have not paid enough attention to men of science. Without sacrificing enthusiasm and color, Miss Fox writes carefully and well. Her book should be as useful in public libraries as in school classrooms."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:38 O 18 '47 190w

FOX, RUTH, and FAHRENKOPF, ANNE (ALEXANDER IRVING, pseud). Deadline. 229p $2.50 Dodd 47-19085

Detective story.

"A fairly neat item." E. H.

+ New Repub 116:35 Ap 14 '47 90w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 Mr 30 '47 200w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p34 Ap 20 '47 160w

"First-rate."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:68 Ap 12 '47 40w

FOXCROFT, HELEN CHARLOTTE. Character of the trimmer; being a short life of the first marquis of Halifax. 354p $4 Macmillan

B or 92 Halifax, George Savile, 1st marquis of 47-3475

"In 1897, Miss Foxcroft published the Life and Works of the First Marquis of Halifax."

FOXCROFT, H. C.—Continued

which was recognized as the most authoritative work on the subject. It has retained that reputation; and she has now produced a condensed version, revised in accord with such fresh evidence as has come to light, and without the formidable accretion of footnotes and references." Christian Science Monitor

"This is not an intimate portrait; but an exact record, and a conscientiously reasoned estimate of a public career. As such, the book has an importance that should recommend it to all who are prepared to read history as something other than a purely romantic or picturesque story." Eric Forbes-Boyd
+ Christian Science Monitor p20 My 3 '47 550w

"A fascinating study in political biography which has been too little known."
+ Manchester Guardian p3 F 25 '47 90w

"Miss Foxcroft has been content to present Halifax as objectively as possible, relying mainly on the letters to his attractive brother, Henry, on Burnet's indispensable writings, and, for the later part on the communications with Sir John Resbury. The loss of Halifax's personal papers is, of course, irreparable; their lack is most often felt when the author tries to justify several of the more disputed actions taken by Halifax. There are also times when Miss Foxcroft's antipathy to the France of that time leads her to ill-advised remarks, such as her observation that Louis XIV's 'totalitarian hatred of the Protestant rivals Hitler's hatred for the Jew.' However, Miss Foxcroft is not a blind devotee. Her book should please students of this statesman-writer who was the balance-wheel of one of England's critical periods. As a work of fine scholarship and tempered love, written with a calm insight, it would probably have merited a not too skeptical approval from the subject himself." J. W. Chase
+ — N Y Times p3 J1 27 '47 650w

"Miss Foxcroft knows her late-seventeenth-century period and politics all too well when it comes to explaining things for the American lay reader, but she presents a well-rounded picture of a remarkably interesting figure, who was a statesman ahead of his time, a brilliant polemicist, and a political and philosophical humanist."

+ New Yorker 23:107 My 24 '47 110w

Reviewed by Kenneth Bell
Spec 178:180 F 7 '47 750w

Times [London] Lit Sup p217 My 10 '47 4850w

FRAME, —. Philosophy of insanity; by a late inmate of the Glasgow Royal asylum for lunatics at Gartnavel; with an introd. by Frieda Fromm-Reichmann, 116p $2.50 Greenberg

616.8 Insanity Med47-692

This book was first published anonymously in Glasgow in 1860, some time after the author's second confinement in the Royal Asylum for Lunatics. The only known copy of the book in this country was discovered two years ago by Dr Frieda Fromm-Reichmann, director of psychotherapy at Chestnut Lodge Sanitarium in Washington, D.C. The present edition was made from that copy. It is a gentle, philosophical study of one man's terrible struggle with mental disease, and a tribute to the people who tried to help him.

"This book is . . . to be recommended, not simply as a literary curiosity, but as a book that will probably be enlightening and helpful to those who need to know, sometimes desperately, what to do till the psychiatrist comes." Wendell Johnson

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Ag 10 '47 500w

"It is impossible to close 'The Philosophy of Insanity' without a feeling of regret. For a little while the reader has been in touch with a rare and beautiful character, has profited by his kindness, his humor, and his understanding. We should like to know how he made out, all the way." Lorine Pruette

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22 Mr 9 '47 1500w

Springf'd Union p4 Je 9 '47 120w

FRANCOISE, pseud. See Seignobosc, F.

FRANK, PHILIPP. Einstein, his life and times; tr. from a German ms. by George Rosen; ed. and rev. by Shuichi Kusaka, 298p il $4.50 Knopf

B or 92 Einstein, Albert 47-1248

"Biography by an old friend and colleague of Einstein's, in which the man and his work are explained about as well as they could be for the lay public. Dr. Frank relates Einstein's work in physics to the world-wide development of the physical sciences and points out how it has embarrassed various kinds of political thought, such as National Socialism and Communism." (New Yorker) Index.

"The author of this biography, a distinguished physicist and philosopher—like Einstein a refugee in this country—has ably presented both the personal and the public aspects of Einstein's career, though some of the scientific and philosophical discussion may be hard going for the general reader." J. C. Slater

+ Atlantic 179:160 Ap '47 290w

Booklist 43:222 Mr 15 '47

Reviewed by G. Gamow

Chem & Eng N 25:3600 D 1 '47 300w

"An excellent and accurate picture of the role Einstein played in the world of culture, with lesser, yet adequate, emphasis on personal aspects." Rufus Oldenburger

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Mr 16 '47 360w

Current Hist 12:498 My '47 120w

"An excellent and at the same time a solid biography of a great man. The author has done a fine job of re-creating the political, scientific and philosophical background in which Einstein developed, and which he in turn influenced so profoundly. This is no simple job of hero-worship, but a detailed and documented account that will prove rewarding to the reader with an average science background."

+ Kirkus 15:23 Ja 1 '47 120w

"Well-illustrated volume, though not a 'definitive' biography, highly recommended for general purchase." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 72:317 F 15 '47 170w

Reviewed by Hans Reichenbach

Nation 164:306 Mr 15 '47 1450w

"A wise, definitive story of Einstein and of his relation to his time." Gerald Wendt

+ New Repub 116:39 Mr 10 '47 1000w

"Dr. Frank is a philosopher as well as a physicist, and philosophy is the bridge that links physics with politics. He writes with a peculiar mixture of almost childlike naivete and deep philosophic subtlety that is arrestingly charming and especially well suited in describing a man like Einstein." A. K. Solomon

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 Mr 2 '47 1000w

"Albert Einstein is undoubtedly the only living man who has been recognized for more than a quarter-century as a genius of the first rank. It is correspondingly difficult to do justice to the man and his work in a biography. Dr. Frank, Einstein's successor as Professor of Theoretical Physics at the University of Prague, has succeeded admirably. . . . 'Einstein' is so competent and so entertaining that very few shortcomings can be pointed out. It seemed to me that a diagram or two would have helped greatly to elucidate some of the scientific explanations. . . . Also, there is a certain incompleteness in the scientific philosophy of the book. This is not due to any omission on the part of the author, but rather to the limitations of our present knowledge." L. N. Ridenour

+ — N Y Times p3 F 23 '47 1150w

"An absorbing and inspiring biography. . . There is revealed here a very great man, religious, in a personal sense ('I cannot believe that God plays dice with the world'), and of caustic but unmalicious humor—a rich and human personality."

+ New Yorker 23:97 Mr 1 '47 120w

"Doctor Frank, himself an eminent scientist, Einstein's long-time friend, disciple and colleague, tells in this scholarly book the story of the man, of the development of his theories, the stormy road to recognition and their influence upon our thinking. It is a timely and fascinating story made enjoyable as well as informative by the rich biographical and social background." G. G.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p26 My 25 '47 160w

"This book is about a great physicist, about physics, and about our present world. Also about ancient and modern trends in philosophy. It is written with the knowledge of an expert insider, with a sense of humor, with cautious objectivity, but last not least it is written with pride and devotion." H. A. Kramers

+ Sat R of Lit 30:12 Mr 8 '47 1100w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen

Survey G 36:209 Mr '47 1500w

Wis Lib Bul 43:67 Ap '47

Reviewed by P. W. Bridgman

Yale R n s 36:734 summer '47 1050w

FRANKFORT, HENRI, and others. Intellectual adventure of ancient man; an essay on speculative thought in the ancient Near East. 401p $4 Univ. of Chicago press

290 Civilization, Ancient. Mythology. Thought and thinking 47-1318

"Based on a series of lectures given in the Division of Humanities of the University of Chicago, this volume is issued as an Oriental Institute Essay. The theme is traced from the Egyptian period through Mesopotamia to the Hebrews. It contains much speculative appraisal of spiritual values in those three cultures." (Current Hist) Suggested readings at end of each section. Index.

Reviewed by J. W. Swain

Am Hist R 53:146 O '47 450w

"The book is an important, possibly a very important, contribution to the history of political speculation in ancient Egypt and Mesopotamia and among the ancient Hebrews. This reviewer has been led to read the book from cover to cover by nothing more nor less than an amateur's keen interest. He feels quite incompetent to pass critical judgment on the work. Only Orientalists may be the ones to try this." William Anderson

+ Am Pol Sci R 41:774 Ag '47 700w

Reviewed by R. J. Williams

Canadian Forum 27:72 Je '47 230w

"The book is worth sitting down with for a slow and careful reading. It will expand the mental horizon of most readers who will expose themselves fully to it." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 64:685 My 28 '47 1200w

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 S '47

"For all those who, like myself, have been looking for a relatively brief but respectably educated epitome of recent studies in a vast and important field this book will prove a memorable and satisfying aid." G. N. Shuster

+ Commonweal 45:595 Mr 28 '47 270w

"The sympathetic and discerning appraisal of the intellect of the ancient Near Easterner found in these essays should serve to create a new respect for those who happened to live in a time of mythopoetic thought and a new humility for those of us who have done comparatively little with our greatly enlarged possibilities. This bold venture at a new perspective of the ancient Near East will, without doubt, long remain a stimulating and valuable contribution to our attempt to understand and to use the past." J. B. Pritchard

+ Crozer Q 24:246 Jl '47 1700w

Current Hist 12:375 Ap '47 50w

Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 26 '47 360w

"This series of essays is one of the most searching and scholarly digests yet published on the thought of the Near East, background of our own culture. It is meant for the layman, but it is the work of scholars." H. J. Forman

+ N Y Times p23 Je 22 '47 650w

Reviewed by E. A. Speiser

Sat R of Lit 30:15 Ag 16 '47 900w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:141 Je '47 320w

FRANKLAND, THOMAS W. Simplified solution of piping offsets. 121p il $1.50 Drake, F.J.

621.8672 Pipe fitting

47-5054

"The problems discussed in this book are such as a pipe fitter or plumber would encounter in practical work. They include such operations as calculation of the angles and cut-backs for welded piping, calculation of offsets in tunnels, the design of turns and equal-spread offsets, and the calculation of expansion bends. In each type of problem, there are usually a drawing, a statement of the problem, a worked-out solution, and a group of exercises to be worked by the student." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1274 S 15 '47 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:55 Jl '47

FRANKLIN, BENJAMIN, and JACKSON, RICHARD. Letters and papers of Benjamin Franklin and Richard Jackson, 1753-1785; ed. and annot. with an introd. by Carl Van Doren. 222p $3.50 Am. philosophical soc.

B or 92

47-1851

"In 1755 Benjamin Franklin described England's Richard Jackson as a 'Friend to America to whom nothing that regards the Colonies is indifferent.' Subsequent events more than justified Franklin's statement. Few individuals more faithfully served the Colonies during the years immediately prior to the Revolution than this son of a wealthy merchant who labored to improve their relations with the Mother Country, opposed the Stamp Act and worked for its repeal, and was English Agent for Connecticut, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts. . . The bulk of the fifty-three Franklin-Jackson papers in this volume consists of letters written between 1762 and 1764, when Franklin, as a member of the Pennsylvania Assembly, kept Jackson well informed on colonial affairs, particularly those in his 'Darling, Pensilvania.'" N Y Times

Reviewed by L. H. Gipson

+ Am Hist R 52:747 Jl '47 480w

Reviewed by Dumas Malone

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Jl

13 '47 1000w

"The present volume of letters and documents between Franklin and Jackson, admirably edited by Carl Van Doren, not only rescues Jackson from this virtual oblivion but is a valuable, if minor, addition to our knowledge of Franklin and the two decades preceding the Revolution." William Peden

+ N Y Times p6 Jl 6 '47 750w

"For the unravelling of the extremely tortuous skein of colonial and home politics in the critical period 1750-81 these letters are indispensable."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p194 Ap 26 '47 290w

"Franklin's letters, however official in character, bear the unmistakable stamp of his universal mind and crystalline style, but Jackson's, while necessary—in the quite limited degree in which they have survived—to complete the historical record, are no contribution to literature. Unfortunately, the editing of this volume is by no means completely satisfactory on the technical side."

+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 3:257 S '47 320w

FRANKLIN, GEORGE CORY. Wild animals of the Five Rivers country; il. by Mary Ogden Abbott. 271p $2.50 Houghton 591.5 Animals, Legends and stories of 47-3690

Authentic stories of eighteen wild animals of the Five Rivers country of Colorado and New Mexico. The author has lived in this region since childhood. For ages nine to twelve.

Booklist 43:364 J1 15 '47

"A wilderness childhood in a cabin home far up along the Continental Divide, where five rivers are born to become the Colorado River, gave George Cory Franklin an intimate acquaintance with wild animal life. He has relied upon his extensive knowledge for writing a collection of short but absorbing stories about individual creatures dwelling in untamed country. . . The traits and habits of bear and beaver, woodchucks, big-horns and many other animals give vivid reality to these engrossing stories." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:217 My '47 120w

"A good sense of story makes this collection exciting reading for young people."

+ Kirkus 15:190 Ap 1 '47 150w

"Stories are exciting and will appeal strongly to boys between nine and twelve. Drawings by Mary Ogden Abbott give the background of mountains and forests as well as the animals in action. Large, clear type. Recommended." Clara Adams

+ Library J 72:963 Je 15 '47 70w

"Such little-known animals as the porcupine, the wolverine and the pack rat share honors with more familiar denizens of the forest, each contributing his share of the drama and excitement with which the book is packed. Introduced at a moment of crisis, each animal becomes absorbingly real as he matches wits with his enemies and draws upon the special cunning of his kind to win his battle for survival. Less convincing are a few stories in which the author attributes human emotions to his animal actors. Mary Abbott's spirited illustrations capture the lithe grace of these wild creatures in many of their tensest moments." Elizabeth Hodges

+ N Y Times p17 J1 6 '47 180w

Sat R of Lit 30:35 S 6 '47 50w

FRANKLIN, JAY, pseud. See Carter, J. F.

FRANKLIN, JOHN HOPE. From slavery to freedom. 622p il $5 Knopf

325.26 Negroes—History. Slavery in the U.S. 47-31171

A history of the Negro in America from his beginnings in Africa, to his present situation. Important economic, political, social and cultural trends are traced. Illustrated with photographs. Index.

Booklist 44:100 N 15 '47

"This has the mark of an important book. It is certainly an interesting one. The scholar may wish Dr. Franklin had annotated his sources and authorities throughout the text. The average reader will be glad he didn't. Instead he has provided a copious bibliography with running commentaries, chapter by chapter, in the back of the book. And the index is an index—not a delusion and a snare." E. B. Orr

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 S 22 '47 550w

"'From Slavery to Freedom' is what the name implies, providing that we grant the author that the freedom sought has not yet arrived. There is little that is new in this volume, not even the lengthy accounts of the young men who worked for the Federal Government during the early years of the New Deal, and whose exploits seem to take up a disproportionate amount of the space of this book. . . Dr. Franklin has recorded mainly those folk whose names appear most often in the weekly press, who have press agents, and whose names appear down the side of letter-heads sent out by various welfare organizations." George Streater

— Commonweal 47:76 O 31 '47 1000w

"This is the latest and most up-to-date history of the Negro in America. It is one of the best. . . The coverage is wide; information great; temper moderate; style easy and flexible. Recommended for all general collections." L. D. Reddick

+ Library J 72:1266 S 15 '47 70w

"Dr. Franklin's book is a mature, balanced, scholarly account of the American Negro from his African beginnings to his participation in the late war. . . A rich, absorbing book, with a clarity of design which all readers will appreciate." Youra Qualls

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 D 14 '47 800w

"The book is forthright and honest, and contains material about the Negro, which will surprise those having only a casual acquaintance with his history. For example, the discussion of the Negro in Canada is fresh and informative, if somewhat sketchy. . . Beyond these few pages, 'From Slavery to Freedom,' is a bulky, unwieldy, conventional history, with the studied scholarship of a doctoral thesis. There is too much hard going before reading an occasional nugget. When the author turns reporter to survey the contemporary period, his lack of equipment is obvious." Roi Ottley

+ N Y Times p40 O 12 '47 800w

"Throughout, the documentation and the bibliography add to the usefulness of the book to students. . . 'From Slavery to Freedom' has before it a path of constructive public service-ability; it will be a long while until another book in this field supersedes it." Alain Locke

Sat R of Lit 30:16 N 8 '47 800w

School & Society 67:15 Ja 3 '48 20w

FRANKS, VINCENT CHESLEY. Top of the Mount; sermons for the Christian year. 182p $2 Morehouse

252 Sermons 47-51

Sermons for special seasons and days of the Christian year, from Advent, thru Christmas, Palm Sunday, Easter, Thanksgiving, to several for "any Sunday." The author is a former rector of St Paul's Episcopal church in Richmond, Virginia.

Christian Century 64:18 Ja 1 '47 30w

"Several of the discourses reach a good level of insight and of spiritual content." T. F. Opie

Churchman 161:16 Ja 15 '47 80w

FRAZER, ELIZABETH. Securities business comes of age. 58p il $1 Lib. associates, Leonia, N.J.

332.6 Securities 47-20982

"Contrasting conditions in the securities business during the speculative craze of the late '20s with those which prevail today, the author traces the development and operations of the National Association of Securities Dealers, a non-profit membership organization whose objective is to surround the securities business with safeguards against unethical practices and to lift the standards of the business through restraint and discipline applied from within by members themselves." Management R

"The book is interesting, but valuable largely to those investors dealing with over-the-counter investment dealers in the United States where the regulations only apply." L. E. W.

+ Canadian Forum 27:72 Je '47 200w

Management R 36:502 S '47 130w

FRAZIER, GEORGE. One with the mustache is Costello. 275p $3 Random house

920 47-31153

Profiles of personalities in motion pictures, sports, or popular music, many of which were written for Life, Colliers, etc. Partial contents: Humphrey Bogart; James Caesar Petrillo; Errol Flynn; Irving Berlin; Eddie Condon.

"These portraits are chatty, entertaining, informative to a degree and since they concern figures of national celebrity and curiosity, they may attract a market."

+ Kirkus 15:414 J1 1 '47 80w

"His sketches, based on interviews and on the anecdotes and commentary of the Broadway saloon wits, are uninhibited, lively and informative. Especially for admirers of the New Yorker profile, and of the Earl Wilson-H. Allen Smith school of humor." H. W. Hart

+ Library J 72:1189 S 1 '47 110w

"Mr. Frazier has got together a curiously in-offensive book. . . Mr. Frazier has chosen his subjects well, for his purposes, with a single exception. The exception is Hildegard. Mr. Frazier's piece about her is a dismal bit of bad judgment. A writer openly out to 'get' the person he is writing about, by fair means or foul, immediately creates in the reader an embarrassed sympathy for the subject." Russell Maloney

+ N Y Times p20 S 21 '47 500w

Reviewed by Paul Speegle

San Francisco Chronicle p19 O 12 '47 250w

"If the reader can come to accent Mr. Frazier's degrading premises—degrading to the breed in general—he is likely to find this a thoroughly readable volume. . . He can sketch a subject in a few swift phrases, or sum a man up with an apt quotation seized as it leaves his own lips. He can annihilate without effort and, in those pages at the back of the book when he moons over some of the greats of jazz, he can applaud with such a disarming rush of sentimentality to the head that the reader moons right along with him." H. R. Isaacs

+ Theatre Arts 32:66 Ja '48 360w

FREE, MONTAGUE. All about house plants; their selection, culture and propagation, and how best to use them for decorative effect. 329p il $3.50 Doubleday

635.9652 House plants

Agr47-74

"Mr. Free's book goes beyond the primer stage. He is interested in the many possibilities of house plants and devotes chapters to miniature landscapes and to dish and bottle gardening. How to care for the many different types of house plants, annuals and perennials, cacti, shrubs, bulbs, tubers and corms comprises the major part of the book. The book includes illustrations in color, half-tones and many line cuts." (San Francisco Chronicle) Index.

Booklist 43:200 Mr 1 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p2 Ja '47

"A must book for the indoor gardener."

+ Kirkus 14:512 O 1 '46 150w

"'All About House Plants' is far and away the best book in its field that has crossed this reviewer's path. . . The number and quality of the illustrations, both black-and-white and full color, and the sincerity and charm of the text make this a gardening book subtly pleasant to read." R. S. Lemmon

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20 Mr 2 '47 200w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 F 2 '47 70w

Wis Lib Bul 43:34 F '47

FREEDMAN, BENEDICT, and FREEDMAN, MRS NANCY MARS. Mrs Mike; the story of Katherine Mary Flannigan; drawings by Ruth D. McCrea. 312p $3 Coward-McCann Flannigan, Mrs Katherine Mary (O'Fallon) —Fiction 47-30137

"This is an account of the hardships of life in cold northern Canada, as it is led there by Kathy, an Irish girl from Boston, and her Mountie husband, Mike. In this strange white world, Kathy comes to know and love the natives of that territory, and to fight nature as it appears in the form of bears, wolves, forest fires, and disease." Sat R of Lit

Booklist 43:205 Mr 1 '47

Cath World 165:380 J1 '47 250w

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Mr 2 '47 450w

"The portraiture is to the life. Sergeant Mike's masculine way of talk, his ability to get on with human nature, his unending but never dramatic helpfulness, his matching the big moments with bigness, but always simply, are a commonplace of men in the Force, but rare in books. The Indians are equally well portrayed. 'Mrs. Mike's' maid, Oh-Be-Joyful, and her laconic suitor are masterly characterizations and deeply touching. . . One more hazard awaits 'Mrs. Mike' and the friends of her memory: the transference of 'Mrs. Mike' to the screen. May it be done with the simplicity and skill of the Freedmans' story!" T. M. Longstreth

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 F 28 '47 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '47

"Actually there is little excuse for this poorly-written, re-heated adventure pulp. Jack London did the frozen spaces much better without being cute about it. Possibly a good story could be written on Kathy's adventures, one to hold its own with White Fang, but the Freedmans aren't the ones to do it." Elizabeth Johnson

Commonweal 45:596 Mr 28 '47 300w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Horn Bk 24:69 Ja '48 50w

"A refreshing book, in contrast to the routine machinemade novels of the bulk of publishers' lists, this book—listed as fiction—should attract the market for We Took to the Woods and Wilderness Wife."

+ Kirkus 15:5 Ja 1 '47 280w

"There is enough adventure woven into a beautiful story of understanding love between a married couple in this novelized biography of Kathy and her husband, Sergeant Mike, to appeal equally to adults and adolescents. . . This is a book the reader will be unable to put down until the last page is read." H. R. Forbes

+ Library J 72:319 F 15 '47 80w

"Mrs. Mike's experiences in the Northwest come through admirably in this swiftly paced narrative, but one wonders if something valuable hasn't been sacrificed in making Kathy a character in a novel. Mrs. Mike is now a woman of fifty-seven. In presenting her as a young heroine, the quality and the maturity of her present years, the personal and vital appeal of a living woman looking backward, are lost. The excellence of this book makes one curious about the present-day appearance, the present-day life and philosophy of Mrs. Mike." Rose Feld

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Mr 2 '47 1050w

"The background of 'Mrs. Mike' will seem familiar to readers of 'Wilderness Wife' and 'Driftwood Valley.' It is the personality of Sgt. Mike blowing through this account like a clear breeze that gives it a refreshing quality. Everyone's dream of a cop, he was also a romantic and understanding husband, the fondest of fathers; a man of honor and humor. Added to all this, he stood well over six feet tall and was as handsome as the morning." Mary McGrory

+ N Y Times p5 Mr 2 '47 550w

"With 'Mrs. Mike' we take you to the Canadian Northwest. The old place doesn't seem to have changed a bit. Mr. and Mrs. Freedman have found all the stock scenes and situations in good order, right where they were cached by James Oliver Curwood, and the same faithful cast of characters ready to go to work at once and looking not a day older than when they were last put into the deep freeze." Hamilton Basso

New Yorker 23:92 Mr 1 '47 350w

"Considerably thinner than the paper on which it is printed is this awkwardly contrived story." E. J.

San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ap 20 '47 80w

"The charm of this book lies in the simple and refreshing way in which it deals with its

FREEDMAN, BENEDICT—Continued
love story, scattering bits of Irish and Indian lore as it goes. But this charm is frequently mutilated by the author's grim affinity to hyper-realism. Mr. and Mrs. Freedman have flooded their novel with mauled men, burned bodies, blood-curdling spectacles which lack artistic subtlety in any form and stand out like so many sore thumbs in a book which should have been essentially charming. While the grimmer aspects are indispensable to the conclusions, they would have been much more effective and natural had they been less frequent, possibly less graphic." N. G. Chaikin
+ — Sat R of Lit 30:31 Mr 8 '47 250w

Springf'd Union p4 Ag 23 '47 100w

"[The] story is pleasantly told, with humour and pathos and without any pretentiousness, and it is only occasionally marred by a slip into a slightly embarrassing sentimentality."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p389 Ag 2 '47 150w

Wis Lib Bul 43:68 Ap '47

FREEMAN, JOSEPH. Long pursuit. 310p $3
Rinehart

47-2726

Hard-boiled novel about a U.S.O. unit on tour in Germany after V-E day.

Reviewed by Edith Fowke
Canadian Forum 27:190 N '47 140w

"The caricaturing of personalities is so exaggerated that the whole emerges with nightmare qualities that destroy the validity of the plot, a plot which revolves around the neuroticism of the egocentric producer, jealous of his 'stars', violent in his hates, and with but one purpose—to catch up with the girl who is trying to escape him. . . The book, to put it frankly, bored me even more than it disgusted me."

— Kirkus 15:199 Ap 1 '47 170w

"Not recommended." J. L. Ross

— Library J 72:887 Je 1 '47 70w

"The author of 'The Long Pursuit' has imagination, an acute observer's eye and powers of analysis. But his present narrative manner is one of the casualties of the revolution wrought by the Informal Style." Herman Wouk

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p25
N 30 '47 400w

"The Long Pursuit' is a lively and mildly amusing novel of what happens to nice people when they work for the wages of cinema. . . But largely because [it] tries too hard to entertain—because it relies on technics rather than a basic statement of the conflict—it does little to solve the problem." David Dempsey

+ — N Y Times p12 Je 8 '47 500w

"Mr. Freeman's book must be judged as a novel; he seems to be saying something about modern society, about the conditions which produce men like Flush. Just what he is saying is never clear, and the way in which he says it is confusing. At times he seems to be writing a satire, and surely that is the form with which a group of people so preposterously unbelievable to most of us should be treated, but, more often, Mr. Freeman is very, very serious. And, I'm afraid, he has written a very, very dull book." Merle Miller

— Sat R of Lit 30:28 Je 21 '47 550w

FREEMAN, MRS MAE (BLACKER). Fun with cooking. 58p il $1.25 Random house

641.5 Cookery—Juvenile literature 47-3543

Simply written cookbook for ages nine to eleven. Directions and photographs are given on facing pages. No index.

Booklist 44:20 S 1 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 S '47

"Any young beginner in cooking will find in these plain and detailed rules a practical introduction to rewarding cookery. The recipes are specially tempting because they include dishes that children usually enjoy eating. The accompanying photographs demonstrate each step of the processes." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:365 S '47 40w

"This just misses being a very good beginning cookbook for third and fourth graders. But it misses—on a very important factor. The author assumes too much knowledge of fundamentals in understanding terms. . . But if the book is used with an adult at first, and these discrepancies taken care of, the recipes in the main are good, the directions clear and simple, the selection and balance sound, the photographs informative."

+ — Kirkus 15:339 Jl 1 '47 170w

Reviewed by E. W. Turpin

Library J 72:1114 Ag '47 30w

"Girls from 9 to 12 will be grateful for this easy-to-follow cook book. . . While some adult guidance will be helpful on the first try, the young cook soon will be working independently. . . The fact that sixteen packaged foods are blatantly advertised may pass unnoticed by the group for which the book is intended. This is not, however, the practice in cook-books offered at regular retail prices and no explanation is offered for the procedure." Lois Palmer

+ — N Y Times p31 S 21 '47 230w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét

New Yorker 23:152 D 6 '47 50w

Sat R of Lit 30:58 N 15 '47 30w

FREER, MRS MARJORIE (MUELLER). Roberta, interior decorator. 209p $2.25 Messner 47-11054

Career story describing the efforts of a young girl to become an interior decorator. Because of lack of funds it was three years before Roberta could afford a year of daytime classes, but eventually she made a successful career. A love story is included.

Booklist 44:136 D 1 '47

Kirkus 15:342 Jl 1 '47 120w

"She has given a great deal of information on the profession and at the same time presented a flesh and blood heroine, with a very real family background, in a story that holds one's interest. Should be popular with teenage girls." E. E. Frank

+ Library J 72:1693 D 1 '47 70w

FREITAG, GEORGE H. Lost land. 314p $2.75
Coward-McCann

47-1228

"In retrospect, the son of a steel worker tells of his German-American family during World War I. Story is concerned with the father's desire for land and subsequent failure as a farmer, the mother's unhappiness because of the treatment she receives from her in-laws, and the boy's difficulties because the children consider him a Hun. Author apparently believes that only a few can escape their environment." Library J

"Though the author is perhaps no Steinbeck, it is not mainly in his writing style that he falls short of his objective. His error is in his assumption that the stuff of fiction is in this man who clung to a drab dream and refused even to notice reality." C. T.

— Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Jl 13 '47 140w

"Mr. Freitag's patterned simplicity is not equal to the job he sets out to do, to the forces he sets in motion and must then ignore. Perhaps a play would have been the thing." Riley Hughes

Commonweal 45:621 Ap 4 '47 320w

Kirkus 14:603 D 1 '46 210w

"Characters well portrayed; good story telling. Recommended." M. P. McKay

+ Library J 72:161 Ja 15 '47 80w

"In spite of the disappointments and limitations that hemmed in the life of August Kreitzer, 'The Lost Land' is a story of affirmation. It has substance and dignity and beauty. In it Mr. Freitag has given, as a rounded whole, the vindication of a way of life he has known and found good. If Mr. Freitag can write with as much depth and simplicity of experience he has not shared so directly, he is a novelist who will make his mark." Mary Ross

 + N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10
 F 16 '47 1000w
 N Y Times p20 F 9 '47 500w
 Springf'd Republican p10B S 28 '47 90w

FRENCH, JOHN CALVIN. History of the university founded by Johns Hopkins. 492p il $4.75 Johns Hopkins press

378 Johns Hopkins university A47-259

A history of Johns Hopkins university from its founding in 1876 to the present. The author was at one time a teacher of English at Johns Hopkins who later became librarian, and is now librarian emeritus.

Reviewed by St. G. L. Sioussat
 Am Hist R 52:744 Jl '47 750w

"A clear, balanced, and eminently readable review of the life of one of the greatest of American universities." J. T. Frederick
 + Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Ja 12 '47 200w

School & Society 65:16 Ja 4 '47 20w
 U S Quarterly Bkl 3:165 Je '47 150w

FRENCH, THOMAS EWING. Manual of engineering drawing for students and draftsmen; rev. by Charles J. Vierck, with the assistance of Charles D. Cooper [and others]. 7th ed 694p il $3.75 McGraw

744.4 Mechanical drawing 47-31042

"Although this is the first revision of this well-known text that has not been prepared by the original author, the scope, purpose and general treatment of the previous editions has been retained. Again it is intended to meet the needs of students in all branches of engineering and includes chapters on piping, welding, aircraft, architectural, and map drawing. Latest engineering practices have been taken into account, and a chapter on illustration, which incorporates the earlier sections on drawing for reproduction and shade line drawing, has been added. Other changes consist of an expansion of the chapter on dimensions and notes, a revised bibliography, and the provision of an index for the appended tables. These revisions and changes account for seventy-two additional pages." N Y New Tech Bks

Booklist 44:153 D 15 '47

"Pictorial drawing has been developed with new standards and practices in dimensioning, based on advances during the war years. This material makes the new edition a valuable addition to the engineers technical library." + Eng N 139:151 N 13 '47 110w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
 Library J 72:1377 O 1 '47 70w
 N Y New Tech Bks 32:47 Jl '47

FREUD, SIGMUND. Leonardo da Vinci; a study in psychosexuality; authorized tr. by A. A. Brill. 121p il $2.50 Random house

B or 92 Leonardo da Vinci 47-4313

"A new and illustrated edition of Freud's famous, controversial 'pathography' of da Vinci, which has been long out of print. Using a sort of inductive psychoanalysis, the author explains, without a trace of didacticism, the Florentine master's lifelong homosexual predilection (Freud believes that it was never more than that) and the reasons for his evident inability to finish his works of art, his dissipation of energy, his eventual neglect of painting for scientific investigation, and his frivolous liking for gadget making, which so angered his contemporaries." New Yorker

"Freud's 'study in psychosexuality' is his most famous single analysis. It is a model not only of historical research and sympathetic sleuthing, but of superb writing and of the true humility which is the surest proof of scientific genius. Nowhere else in all his writings does he so abdicate before the mystery of individual identity." Anne Fremantle

+ Commonweal 46:218 Je 13 '47 500w

"For the psychiatric and professional field predominantly."

Kirkus 15:147 Mr 1 '47 110w

Library J 72:735 My 1 '47 100w

Reviewed by Frederic Wertham
 New Repub 116:34 Ap 7 '47 1050w

"Dr. A. A. Brill, Sigmund Freud's first American translator . . . has provided the new edition of Freud's Leonardo essay with an interpretive preface. This long introduction, amounting to more than one-fifth of the whole book, is in itself highly valuable and topical for more than one reason. It gives, without taking too much for granted, a comprehensive and generally comprehensible survey of Freud's basic principles. . . The study of Leonardo da Vinci exemplifies the well-balanced combination of intuition and factual research so characteristic of Freud." Franz Schoenberger
 + N Y Times p7 My 4 '47 550w

"Without slurring his subject, and in the face of an almost universal and blind admiration for the man, Freud points up the more puzzling aspects of his nature and the inconsistencies of his artistic performance. An interesting and perfect clinical demonstration of the Freudian method."

+ New Yorker 23:118 Ap 12 '47 140w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 My 18 '47 150w

"You may not believe every word of this celebrated essay, but art interpretation has been profoundly affected by it, as has all human thought by Freud's general research."
 J. T. Soby

+ Sat R of Lit 30:27 Je 28 '47 70w

FREUND, PHILIP. Easter island. 221p $2.50 Beechhurst press

47-3708

"Short tale about a conscientious young Cambridge anthropologist and a half-mad Peruvian, who, for very different reasons, join an English rancher for an indefinite stay on Easter Island. The two Englishmen fight what they feel to be the spiritual contamination of the island. The Peruvian does not fight it, and finds release in a lunatic sadism, around which the narrative's action is built." New Yorker

"Mr. Freund has an interesting idea and an interesting locale to nourish it in, and his brief book, if it were flawless, might come off as a minor tour-de-force. As it is, the story has considerable fascination, but little validity. The actors, on whose reality the force of the story depends, are curiously non-dimensional. They think, talk and even act—but without the particularization, the concreteness of detail that might establish them as urgent, credible, living. Throughout, Mr. Freund is concerned with language and simplicity. But inexpertly so, somewhat as if his ingenuity were working to all hours while his ear (and occasionally his grammar) slept. In his determination to establish the right tone, to find the unhackneyed word, he tends to tumble from the other side of the fence with a word or phrase so forced, so insistently interesting, that it juts into the sense, distorting instead of contributing to it."
 A. S. Morris

N Y Times p10 Je 8 '47 470w

New Yorker 23:124 Je 7 '47 160w

Springf'd Republican p10B S 28 '47 130w

FREUND, PHILIP. How to become a literary critic. 200p $3 Beechhurst press

801 Literary criticism 47-2989

In this study the author attempts to discover the basis of great writing, as exemplified in the works of such authors as: Fielding, Melville, Hardy, Conrad, and D. H. Lawrence. Includes a forecast of the future of the novel. Index.

Reviewed by John Broderick
 Commonweal 46:102 My 9 '47 420w

FREUND, PHILIP—Continued

"My reading of 'How to Become a Critic,' leaves me at a loss. For whom is the book intended? Who has stepped so heavily on Mr. Freund's toes that he must sulk and bully his way through this book like an injured school-boy? I do not understand why a work which shows indisputable signs of wit and authority should be so perversely presented." Dudley Fitts

— + N Y Times p4 Je 1 '47 700w
Springf'd Union p13 Jl 3 '47 130w

FREUND, PHILIP. Stephanie's son. 373p $3 Beechhurst press

47-11159

The Zoltans and the Lauers were rich New Yorkers who had come up from the Yorkville section to the proud eminence of Park avenue. When one of their number, young Michael, a Columbia undergraduate, fell into the clutches of the prophetess of a strange religion called Tao Ananda, their reactions were varied. The novel charts the course of Michael's career, ending in the rout of Madame Ramachak.

"Readers of Mr. Freund's previous works are well aware that his narrative techniques are as unorthodox and his interests as eclectic as those of the pseudo-priestess Ramachak. . . . Whenever the author sticks to his task, resisting the dual temptation of lecturing the reader or of following the patrician Edward Zoltan in his dilettante's stroll after the meaning of life, he is capable of writing pleasantly and with economy. But Mr. Freund can not, or will not, temper his wind to the stripped-down lamb of a well-defined central story. The result has therefore about it an indecisive, ill-articulated, invertebrate quality which may disappoint those who have praised him in the past." Carlos Baker

— + N Y Times p28 N 16 '47 550w

"With caustic wit, the author delves into the mystic causes of cult worship so prevalent in men and women spiritually and emotionally lonely, and while sharply satirizing their charlatanry, at the same time reveals the inner workings of the minds drawn to occult mysticism." L. S. Munn

Springf'd Republican p14B N 2 '47 180w

FREY, ALEXANDER MORIZ. Stout-hearted cat; a fable for cat lovers; tr. from the German by Richard and Clara Winston; with drawings by Hans Fischer. 140p $2.50 Holt

47-31145

Translation from the German of a fable about devotion and courage, in which the central character is a white cat. The cat even allows itself to be dressed up in feathers to help out its master. In return the master refuses to sell the cat to a wealthy man who wanted to breed a race of feathered cats.

Kirkus 15:403 Ag 1 '47 80w

"This frail whimsey has nothing to do with cats, and its subtitle will annoy most cat lovers because the narrative carries splashes of raw blood which earnest cat fanciers dislike having associated with their favorite beasts no matter how distantly. That out of the way: what this fable is, is a determinedly warm, amusing and sentimental allegory. . . . The fable is an occasionally ironic confection, German style—as Teutonic as the folktales that the Brothers Grimm collected, and just about as adult. Its Englishing is clumsied up now and then with what must be violently literal translation of shockingly ponderous words."

— + N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p52
D 7 '47 220w

"The tale was written originally in German and translated here by Richard and Clara Winston. The original illustrations by Hans Fischer are included and they give to the book character and humor that one suspects has been partly lost in the translating." R. T. San Francisco Chronicle p23 O 12 '47

150w

Wis Lib Bul 43:175 D '47

FREYRE, GILBERTO. The masters and the slaves; tr. from the Portuguese . . . by Samuel Putnam. 537p $7.50 Knopf 918.1 Brazil—Civilization. Slavery in Brazil.

Negroes in Brazil. Indians of South America 46-6716

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

"It is a story told many times but never like this. What gives this book distinction is not its theme, but Gilberto Freyre. . . . To tell his story, he tossed overboard an ancient Brazilian custom that requires all writers, native or foreign, to reproduce, with or without credits and quotes, observations and deductions of Southey, Lery, and a dozen other early historians and writers. He steeped himself in freshly tapped material from yellowed family and church archives, letters, diaries, notebooks, inventories, his own family experience, and personal perspective. From such material, and while still young enough himself to have intact the discerning, mystical insight that years hedge with foresight and hindsight, Gilberto Freyre has caught the clear image of big house and slave quarter. At white heat, almost without discipline or order, he poured out what he saw and felt. The result is a vivid, living document, basic to any understanding of Brazil and Brazilians, and unique as a book. . . . Samuel Putnam's painstaking translation is excellent, if accuracy is the test. The florid baroque style, however, though paced and rhythmic in Brazilian Portuguese, cannot be translated literally into good modern English." Vera Kelsey

+ — Am Hist R 52:533 Ap '47 800w

Reviewed by Donald Pierson

Am Soc R 12:607 O '47 1600w

"This remarkable book is already well known in the original Portuguese to every serious student of Brazilian social life. . . . The subject is one on which Gilberto Freyre, himself a member of an old plantation-owning family, is not afraid openly to take the side of the Negro in the sense of being a convinced advocate of miscegenation." Philip Carr

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 12 '47 500w

"At last Freyre's now classic work on Brazilian history, Casa Grande e Senzala, has been rendered into English and made available to those who do not read Portuguese. This is a noteworthy event for all students of the social and cultural sciences, as well as for those primarily interested in Latin America and its cultures." John Gillin

+ Social Forces 25:356 Mr '47 900w

Springf'd Republican p10B S 28 '47
450w

FRIEDMAN, BERTHA BERYL. Foundations of the measurement of values; the methodology of location and quantification. 227p $2.75 Teachers college

159.4 Worth A47-407

"Deals with the methodology of location and quantification and should prove useful to those working in the field of interest, attitude, and personality testing." (School & Society) Bibliography. No index.

"The title of the volume is not lived up to. The review of the literature, which constitutes the bulk of the work, is meandering and not well digested, and the original experiments, after such an extensive preliminary discussion, are fragmentary." Louis Guttman

— Am J Soc 53:233 N '47 240w

"In general the reviewer finds the study more of the type of 'Excavations for Foundations' rather than 'Foundations,' but nevertheless distinctly valuable in an important field for both psychology and education." E. J. Chave

+ — Am Soc R 12:238 Ap '47 450w

School & Society 64:303 O 26 '46 30w

FRIEDMAN, FRIEDA. Dot for short; il. by Carolyn Haywood. 207p $2 Morrow

47-30150

Group of stories about the Flemings, a New York family living in the shadow of the Third Avenue El. The center of interest is Dorothea Ann. Dot for short, who was not the prettiest of the Fleming girls but found that there were compensations in being friendly, and clever, too.

Reviewed by Jane Cobb

+ Atlantic 179:128 Je '47 100w

Booklist 43:228 Mr 15 '47

"From beginning to end it's a human and satisfactory story." Martha King

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 My 25 '47 120w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '47

Kirkus 15:1 Ja 1 '47 130w

"Cheerful courage and practical democracy are presented without preaching." Gertrude Andrus

+ Library J 72:467 Mr 15 '47 70w

"[The Flemings] have from babyhood loved that flat as much as the Five Little Peppers loved their cottage—and middle-aged people will be glad to know that Miss Friedman's little book has the same sort of homely trick of making poor people's lives alluring that made the Peppers universal favorites of an earlier day." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 Mr 16 '47 270w

"There is some agreeable, down-to-earth feeling about family life in New York in this book, but the writing is flat, and there is little understanding of family life." Marjorie Fischer

+ N Y Times p30 Mr 9 '47 120w

"This is a good story about real people."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:36 Ap 19 '47 80w

Wis Lib Bul 43:70 Ap '47

FRIEDMAN, JOHN. Redemption of Israel. 139p $2 Sheed

296 Jews—Religion. Christianity and other religions—Judaism

"Dr. Friedman, a South African convert from Judaism to the Catholic Faith, is intensely preoccupied with the destiny of his people. Searching the Scriptures he finds a recurrent pattern for the so often glorious, so often stormy relations of the Jews with God. He begins by establishing the pattern. Then he shows it as still operative in the present, and enabling us to see what the future must be." Publisher's note

"No doubt, Mr. Friedman has great zeal for the apostolate to Israel, but this is not enough. He gives himself fervently to a subject he has studied but superficially, and he writes with little care." J. M. Oesterreicher

+ Cath World 165:278 Je '47 470w

"The Jewish question is a most profound one, about which many people have much to say. To say something really helpful, however, one must have faith, and scholarship, and humility, and a great deal of love. Unfortunately, Dr. Friedman seems to have only faith. . . . Had Dr. Friedman (who is a convert from Judaism to Catholicism) been more moderate in his statements, more understanding and charitable, and less superficial in his analysis of the 'Jewish problem,' he might have written a book that would have helped his people along their road, for his sincerity cannot be questioned and his faith is manifest. But this book, I fear, will have an effect quite contrary to that which its author wished to achieve." Unity Evans

+ Commonweal 46:315 Jl 11 '47 380w

FRIEDMANN, HERBERT. Symbolic goldfinch; its history and significance in European decorative art. 254p pl $7.50 Pantheon bks.

704.9432 Goldfinch in art. Christian art and symbolism 46-8436

"The author, who is Curator of Birds at the Smithsonian Institution, started out some years ago on a curious research—to discover why a goldfinch appears so frequently in pre-Renaissance and Renaissance pictures of the Madonna and Child. The story of his findings and the book's more than a hundred plates mix ornithology, anthropology, and art in a novel and agreeable fashion." New Yorker

"The book is detailed, exhaustive and scholarly, intended for the specialist. But it is nonetheless engrossing and it is very handsomely produced." J. W. Lane

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p25 Mr 9 '47 1000w

New Yorker 22:130 N 23 '46 80w

"A valuable and interesting addition to the literature of Christian symbolism is made in The Symbolic Goldfinch, which traces exhaustively the history and the allegorical and artistic significance of this small bird in European art."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:4 Mr '47 220w

FRIEDRICH, FRAU RUTH ANDREAS. Berlin underground, 1938-1945; tr. by Barrows Mussey; with an introductory note by Joel Sayre. 312p $3 Holt

943.086 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, German. World War, 1939-1945—Germany 47-30269

In diary form records the activities of a group of German professional workers—writers, actors, and musicians—who carried on a sporadic counter-Nazi movement within the Reich. The diary covers the years 1938-1945. The author is a sister-in-law of Carl Friedrich, professor of government at Harvard university. Before the war she worked for the Berlin publishing house, Ullstein.

Booklist 43:287 My 15 '47

Reviewed by G. M. A. Grube

Canadian Forum 27:92 Jl '47 280w

"Mrs. Andreas-Friedrich is an experienced newspaperwoman who knows how to report fluently and convincingly. While she vouches for the unadorned truth of her story, she does not claim any particular political or historical significance for it. She does not reveal any hitherto hidden secrets of state, but draws a good picture of the general state of mind and opinion at various stages. Most striking is her emphasis on the prevalence of a negative attitude among large sections of the people toward the regime, an attitude that grew from apathy to disgust and active opposition." Fritz Caspari

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Je 8 '47 550w

Foreign Affairs 26:227 O '47 40w

"This supplies the human side of the cold, factual report made by Dulles in his book—Germany's Underground. Where Mr. Dulles gives the broad outlines of organization, personnel, achievements and failures of the German underground, Miss Andreas-Friedrich tells her readers what it was like to be an anti-Nazi in Berlin between 1938 and 1945."

+ Kirkus 15:185 Mr 15 '47 210w

"As an antidote to the literary products of Morgenthau, Vansittart, etc., the book renders a useful service, even though it is not a lasting historical document. Recommended for larger libraries." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 72:304 My 15 '47 150w

Reviewed by Joseph Bornstein

Nation 164:721 Je 14 '47 270w

Reviewed by A. M. Schlesinger, Jr.
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 My 25 '47 650w

"Mrs. Friedrich's utterly honest diary resembles an orchestral piece written in an ever-increasing crescendo. . . . Her account of how the Gestapo finally got hold of von Moltke, and how the other protagonist, Goerdeler was betrayed for the tidy sum of a million Third-Reichsmark, forms one of the most absorbing parts of her book. The facts tally completely with the recently published books by Allen Welsh Dulles and Gero von Schulze-Gaevernitz, but to this story Mrs. Friedrich contributes something quite uniquely her own: a sense of how life was when the walls of the 'Fortress Europe,' the 'Fortress Germany,' and, finally, the 'Fortress Berlin,' were bombed to pieces." Richard Plant

+ N Y Times p6 Je 1 '47 490w

FRIEDRICH, R. A.—Continued
 New Yorker 23:67 J1 12 '47 230w
 San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ag 10 '47 300w

"This is an extremely interesting, excitingly written account of the activities of one of the many small groups of anti-Nazis that operated in Berlin during the years 1938 to 1945." Rudolf Heberle

+ Social Forces 26:109 O '47 330w

Reviewed by Paul Hagen
 Survey G 36:552 O '47 130w

Reviewed by Sigmund Neumann
 Yale R n s 36:752 summer '47 250w

FRISCH, OTTO ROBERT. Meet the atoms; a popular guide to modern physics. 226p il $3 Wyn

541.2 Atoms 47-3010

A discussion of the background and theories of atomic power. One chapter tells the reader how he can set up an experiment in his own kitchen which will enable him to count the number of atoms in a gram of polonium. A knowledge of higher mathematics is not needed for the understanding of the book. Index.

"Here is a book that should be on the reading list of every person who wants a better understanding of the scientific fundamentals behind the atom bomb than can be obtained by reading the average scientific and pseudo-scientific books that appeared like a rash after Hiroshima... Although the book can be read profitably by any good high school senior it also contains much of interest and value to scientists whose recent work has not been concerned with nucleonics." E. H. Cortelyou

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Ap 13 '47 240w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '47

"A fine job of popularization for the reader who prefers the straightforward approach, rather than the goggle-eyed Sunday supplement variety."

+ Kirkus 15:26 Ja 1 '47 90w

Reviewed by Gerald Wendt

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 My 18 '47 280w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:27 Ap '47

"Meet the Atoms" has charms that Dr. Hecht never approaches, but it also has faults that mar the book both in detail and in conception. The book approaches the atom bomb experimentally and for several chapters Dr. Frisch carries it off beautifully... But with succeeding chapters Dr. Frisch becomes less effective. There is, after all, no way to set up a cyclotron even in the best-equipped kitchen. The book becomes progressively more difficult, and Dr. Frisch works harder and harder to make it simple. His methods, ultimately, degenerate to cuteness in style, and rather pointless jokes." Stephen Wheeler

+ — N Y Times p4 Ap 27 '47 320w

"Perhaps, as a practising physicist, I am not competent to predict the ease with which a layman can understand what Frisch has to say though I think that there should be very little difficulty in understanding it. Frisch does no violence to the facts or the spirit of physics, since he avoids the pitfalls of loose analogy or careless statement, and his book summarizes well a most intensely interesting field of scientific discovery." L. N. Ridenour

+ Sat R of Lit 30:14 Je 28 '47 550w

FRISKEY, MRS MARGARET (RICHARDS). Chipmunk moves; pictures by Lucia Patton. [32p] $1 McKay

46-8551

Story of a chipmunk who established himself in an orchard against the advice and prejudice of some of the other small creatures. When he saves another of the small animals from the enemy weasel he is finally welcomed.

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

Christian Science Monitor p12 O 28 '47 100w

"Slight story for children beginning to read, with a tolerance lesson which is not too obvious." N. L. Rathbun

+ Library J 72:231 F 1 '47 110w

"Undistinguished story and pictures. Paper covered boards. Not recommended for libraries." M. A. Herr

— Library J 72:231 F 1 '47 100w

"Told with spirit in both text and pictures." Amanda MacBride

+ N Y Times p30 Mr 9 '47 140w

FRITCHMAN, STEPHEN HOLE, ed. Together we advance. 209p il $2 Beacon press

288 Unitarianism. Liberalism (religion) 47-933

"A book about the faith, practice and organization of Unitarianism. More than a dozen competent writers contribute to the symposium. One central purpose is to show that 'liberalism' is not a negative thing, that it does not imply an attitude of detachment, that Unitarianism is religious and has a church. A little history is given, but only enough to indicate something of the contribution that liberal religion has made and is making, and to give background for the evangelistic appeal that is implied in the whole presentation." Christian Century

Christian Century 63:1568 D 25 '46 140w

"For anyone of any faith who is looking for a vigorous, vital treatment of man's relation to God and to God's world, this book is real meat and real drink." T. F. Opie

+ Churchman 161:17 Mr 15 '47 150w

FROLOV, WANDA L. Katish, our Russian cook; il. by Henry J. Stahlhut. 208p $3 Farrar, Straus

641.5 Cookery, Russian 47-31430

Reminiscences of the author's youth in Los Angeles in the '20s, and of Katish, the young Russian widow who became cook in the family. Many of Katish's recipes are included in the book. Index.

Booklist 44:65 O 15 '47

"I'd like to retire to my own country kitchen and try out every recipe in the book... But the thing that impressed me continually was that the processes were simple ones that the average good cook could follow easily."

+ Kirkus 15:297 Je 1 '47 230w

"Recommended." Mary Clark

+ Library J 72:1102 Ag '47 40w

Reviewed by Ernestine Evans

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 N 2 '47 430w

"This is well and good for a brief article in a magazine, but the practice of having recipes continually holding up the story is extremely annoying. I solved the problem by skipping the recipes, and concentrating on the novel. The Russian recipes are good; many of the best recipes, however, are not even mentioned in the index, thus making the book that much less useful." H. L. Mason

N Y Times p56 N 9 '47 100w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 12 '48 260w

FROOM, LE ROY EDWIN. Prophetic faith of our fathers; the historical development of prophetic interpretation. v3 802p il $4.50 Review and H.

220.1 Bible. Whole—Prophecies. Eschatology (47-1131)

"A history of the interpretation of the Jewish-Christian apocalyptic literature. The publishers plan to issue the work in four volumes but, because of 'current interest in the field covered,' it was decided that Volume III should receive initial publication. An examination of this volume reveals that the work is not history in the strict sense of the term, and an alert librarian will classify it under apologetics. The purpose of the author, an instructor in the history of prophetic interpretation in the Seventh-day Adventist Theological Seminary, is to validate the Seventh-day Adventist eschatology, or, as he states it, 'the orderly sequence of the major outline and time prophecies of the books of Daniel and Revelation.' To this end, he, first of all, finds in history a remarkable 'unity of witness upon essentials,' which became progressively clearer as the meaning of the prophecies was unfolded by historical events; and, second, he seeks to give added weight to his thesis by showing that the men of 'the Historical School of genuine prophetic interpretation' were 'neither ignorant nor gullible . . . but were sound, sensible, and stable. . . the intellectual peers of any in their day.'" Crozer Q

"The author marshals abundant evidence that, for Christian leaders of all persuasions during this period, the prophecies were an integral and basic part of their thinking. This, as he indicates (I think correctly), most modern historians have largely neglected because of the tendency to see as significant in the past only what is considered significant in the contemporary world. Those, then, who cannot accept the 'grand outline' as the Seventh-Day Adventist sees it, will find in the serious study of this volume a corrective for their partial view of the minds of their Christian predecessors. Herein, I think, lies its great value for them." S. E. Mead

+ Christian Century 64:1048 S 3 '47 420w
"The usefulness of a book is not destroyed simply because, from the point of view of exact history, its conclusions leave much to be desired. . . LeRoy Edwin Froom, therefore, has performed a valuable service by reminding us how thoroughly millennialist expectations permeated the thinking of 'our father.' . . Another important contribution of the volume is its detailed description of the millennialist excitement which agitated England during the 1820's and 1830's. . . The defects of Mr. Froom's work are, by and large, those involved in any work of apologetics posing as history. Opposing points of view are ignored, disparaged, and occasionally misinterpreted." W. S. Hudson
+ — Crozer Q 24:85 Ja '47 1050w

FROST, BARBARA. Unwelcome corpse. 215p $2.50 Coward-McCann 47-30247
Detective story.

Booklist 43:273 My 1 '47
Kirkus 15:142 Mr 1 '47 80w

"Miss Frost keeps up a running fire of Village life and love right on to a final knockout that will surprise you, to put it mildly. She's a straight-shooting newcomer to the goose-flesh marts and pretty sure to do even better when she stops daydreaming about highly unusual murder methods. Just kill 'em off any old way, Miss Frost, and start from there." Will Cuppy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p25 Ap 13 '47 300w

"This is Barbara Frost's first mystery story. She has what it takes to construct an ingenious plot and to place her story in an appropriate setting." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p32 Ap 13 '47 230w

"Lively."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:31 My 17 '47 40w

FROST, FRANCES MARY. Windy Foot at the county fair; il. by Lee Townsend. (Whittlesey house publication) 153p $2 McGraw

47-2847

Toby, aged twelve, spends four days at the county fair, camping in a tent right on the grounds, with other members of his family. Toby makes a lot of friends, and has a good time, especially when his pony, Windy Foot, wins the annual pony race. For grades four to six.

"The plot is skillfully handled with a mounting, almost unbearable suspense, and there is not one detail in it which could fail to delight a child. The book is for boys or girls—and happy reading to them." Jane Cobb
+ Atlantic 179:128 Je '47 180w

Booklist 43:312 Je 1 '47

"A little forced, especially in the recording of juvenile conversation, but the story clicks, what with the county fair setting and Lee Townsend's spirited drawings." B. J. Thompson

+ — Cath World 166:236 D '47 50w

Chicago Sun Book Week p10 My 25 '47 60w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 S '47

"Windy Foot is a fresh contribution to American children's books which is sure to be read by many of the fathers who buy it for their boys." A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk 23:258 Jl '47 200w

"A pleasant story of American family life among real people whom one would like to know. Lee Townsend's pictures carry out the happy spirit of the story." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:263 Jl '47 80w

"Excellent family story, well-written, solid characterizations, good plot, sturdy values."

+ Kirkus 15:100 F 15 '47 120w

"Sentimental strains in delineation of character will moderate enthusiasm of fifth- and sixth-graders for whom book is meant." Gertrude Andrus

Library J 72:643 Ap 15 '47 50w

"Considering the part taken in our national life by the county fair, it has been somewhat surprising to find comparatively little about it in children's literature. This has now been attended to: here is the county fair complete and to the life, with what it means to boys and girls under twelve." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 My 11 '47 470w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p27 Je 15 '47 230w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét

New Yorker 23:155 D 6 '47 60w

"All of the people in the book, from wise old Billy Blue who knows all about horses to Toby's little brother Johnny who talks in free verse, are well worth knowing. There is humor and understanding in every character."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:34 S 6 '47 90w

"Much is told about horses and racing, and good sportsmanship that will interest boys and girls from nine to twelve years old. There are good illustrations to this healthy, pleasant tale."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:245 S '47 70w

Wis Lib Bul 43:84 My '47

FROST, ROBERT. Masque of mercy. 39p $2.50 Holt

812

47-11023

A play or masque in poetry in which four characters, with Biblical backgrounds but in a modern setting, discuss justice, mercy, and the relation of God to man.

Booklist 44:86 N 1 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p21 N '47

"All that can be said for this sorry sight, of a good poet finding out too late that he has had no philosophy—something many of his readers had suspected—is that occasional lines of this dreary discussion show that he has a poet's gift of phrase. Otherwise the little drama is quite sophomoric. Only those interested in the total Frost output will want to read this work."

+ Kirkus 15:461 Ag 15 '47 180w

Reviewed by Randall Jarrell

Nation 165:591 N 29 '47 500w

"The humor of the masque is proportional to its seriousness. Reading it is difficult delight. It is worth many readings. And it would be exciting to watch great actors perform it on a stage." Sidney Cox

+ N Y Times p6 N 9 '47 320w

New Yorker 23:115 N 1 '47 90w

FROST, ROBERT—Continued

"If poets ever roll up their sleeves, Mr. Frost must have done so; for he has produced a work that shows a mixture of midnight oil, a poetical ear and a philosopher's mind." Alfred Kay

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 O 26 '47
140w

"The Masque of Mercy' is rich in passages which, however baffling, may be the intention as a whole. We would conclude, in general, that Frost, with characteristic unexpectedness, has taken the stiff form of the masque to use it with the looseness of an epistle as the repository for his ideas. We look forward to a third masque in this manner." Robert Hillyer

+ Sat R of Lit 30:54 D 6 '47 1300w
Wis Lib Bul 43:15 N '47

FROST, ROBERT. Steeple bush [poems]. 62p
$2.50 Holt

811 47-30324

Forty-three poems make up this volume of Frost's work. The title refers to a shrub well-known in the poet's state of New Hampshire—a kind of spirea known variously as hardhack or steeple bush.

"The underpainting for Steeple Bush is an unforgetting cosmos. But in poetry, subject matter—or even emotional situation—is trivial in comparison with what the poet does with his material. Beauty may be born out of its own despair. This little volume of forty-three poems is inspiring. Frost is one of the very small company of living poets whom it is an immediate pleasure to read. No harm can come from revealing his open secret, for although it may be described, it cannot easily be imitated. His mastery depends upon absolute control of technique and of thought." D. A. Stauffer

+ Atlantic 180:115 O '47 1850w
Booklist 43:328 Je 15 '47

"The volume is technically uneven, often lapsing into amateurish doggerel. We are sadly aware that this is Frost's old age and that it is no Homer who nods here." Malcolm Ross

Canadian Forum 27:191 N '47 130w

Reviewed by Katherine Bregy
Cath World 166:279 D '47 150w

"The verse in this volume is uncompromising and enduring, but rich and unforgettable. As happens with older poets, the music and a certain loveliness go, but the wisdom increases. So it is here. This is poetry such as Hardy might have written, had Hardy possessed Frost's hope and courage. This is no book for a dreamer. It is for thinkers who are humbly proud." E. W. Bates

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Je 16 '47
500w

Reviewed by George McDonald
Library J 72:889 Je 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by Randall Jarrell
Nation 165:589 N 29 '47 90w

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 J1
6 '47 800w

"'Steeple Bush' is no book to convert intellectuals to Frost. Yet the ordinary 'highbrow' reader is making a far greater mistake when he neglects Frost as commonplace, than the academic reader makes when he apotheosizes him, often on the basis of his most complacent or sentimental poems. Frost is one of the subtlest and saddest of poets; and no other living poet has written so well about the actions of ordinary men." Randall Jarrell

+ N Y Times p4 Je 1 '47 800w

"The old ability to catch at the reader's heart is a little less apparent and the 'homespun' philosophy is as conservative as ever, but there is plenty here to please."

+ New Yorker 23:128 Je 7 '47 60w

"A few of the poems may seem to go too far toward exposition in their direct literal statements, but the book should be read as a whole. A fundamental sequence in a richly varied pattern begins in the beautiful thing, the ornament of the land, and moves through the good heart, ignorance and fears, natural purification, exaltation of the spirit, to hope in humility and learning if the two are kept together. It has its by-paths that seem insignificant, its plateaus that stretch too far, but the mountains rise, and the total landscape is worthy of its author." Gladys Campbell

+ Poetry 71:145 D '47 1200w

"The peculiarly Frostian flavor is in these poems, with the New England bite and the American tang. The lyric ease and the flow of thought and its complete communication, are continued delights. Such beautifully fashioned poems as 'To an Ancient' or 'Were I in Trouble' seem enough to cause one to say, here is America's best living poet." George Snell

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 J1 13 '47
110w

"There are forty-three poems in this little volume . . . all of them interesting for one reason or another. There is no falling off. There has been no resting on oars or on laurels. And we can still thank God for the 'barbed image,' the penetrating wisdom, the inconspicuous grace that half conceals its own elegance, and the lancinating wit. And we can thank God for something else. It was said of some Frenchman that while his rivals thought about writing, he wrote about thinking. This hits off Mr. Frost quite well. He is the most careful of workmen, but he always has something worth his while to work on." Leonard Bacon

+ Sat R of Lit 30:15 My 31 '47 410w
Time 49:102 Je 16 '47 330w

"Robert Frost demonstrates that seventy years is no obstacle to poetry. He has escaped fatigue, bitterness, or pride, in his advanced years; he has, moreover, gained in control of his verse and in the idiom which is unmistakably his own. The subtlety of rhythm, within the rather narrow prosody that has always satisfied the New England poet, is the work of a master."

+ U S Quarterly Bk1 3:242 S '47 260w

"This may not be Robert Frost's heaviest or happiest book, but it is one of his shrewdest. It is salted with wit and peppered with satire. Although it is a small book—only sixty-two deeply margined pages—the range is wide: songs, soliloquies, whimsical lyrics, somber speculations, bitter conclusions. . . I have implied that this is neither Frost's most commanding nor his most co-ordinated volume. But it is highly characteristic of the man at seventy-three and the poet at any age. It cannot be by-passed. It must be read as part of the still-growing work of America's most considerable contemporary poet." Louis Untermeyer

+ Yale R n s 37:138 autumn '47 700w

FRYE, NORTHROP. Fearful symmetry; a study of William Blake. 462p il $5 Princeton univ. press

821 Blake, William 47-30296

"A long, critical study based primarily on examination of the less familiar and more difficult of Blake's poetry. . . For Blake students." Booklist

Booklist 43:306 Je 1 '47

Reviewed by John Garrett

Canadian Forum 27:90 J1 '47 1150w

"Reproductions of prints and engravings, explanations of the symbolism of lettering and images, and the considerable discussion of Blake's activity in the arts, and of his place in his time, are of value to larger libraries or special departments." A. S. Plaut

Library J 72:1035 J1 '47 90w

"An intelligent and beautifully written critical interpretation of the poetry and symbolic thought of William Blake. . . Mr. Frye, in dealing with the more abstruse aspects of Blake's writings, does not become elegiac or obscure, as so many Blake scholars do, nor does he lean on the word 'mysticism,' which Blake himself never used in speaking of his work."

+ New Yorker 23:97 Ap 26 '47 120w

"Frye conducts his ambitious study with unflagging energy, great enthusiasm, and immense erudition. Random dipping into the volume would be frightening, and passages quoted out of context might well appear cabalistic. Read straight through in sequence, however, Fearful Symmetry is a lucid if exacting book." A. C. Ames

Poetry 71:101 N '47 600w

Reviewed by J. T. Soby

Sat R of Lit 30:27 Je 28 '47 60w

"Mr. Frye is rarely capable of critical detachment. He identifies himself so completely with Blake's world vision, or view of the universe, that his sentences twist and turn in serpentine fury, lashing out at any qualification he suspects might lurk in the reader's mind. . . Unhappily Mr. Frye does not have a gift for exposition. Too often, in his effort to interpret Blake 'in terms of his own theory of poetry,' he compounds confusion by explaining Blake's symbolism in terms of the symbols. . . This is not to suggest that what Mr. Frye does do is without value. He succeeds, more than once, in getting inside the poems, living in them, and from them looking out at the world. This is perhaps the height of discipleship. I only wish he might have organized his material with more of a view to leading the reader into these labyrinths, the better to share Mr. Frye's insights, or outlook." Lloyd Frankenberg

Sat R of Lit 30:19 JI 19 '47 1200w

"Mr. Northrop Frye's book is of such importance that it is impossible even to begin to do it justice in the space at my disposal. To say it is a magnificent, extraordinary book is to praise it as it should be praised, but in doing so one gives little idea of the huge scope of the book and of its fiery understanding. Several great poets have written of Blake, but this book, I believe, is the first to show the full magnitude of Blake's mind, its vast creative thought." Edith Sitwell

+ Spec 179:466 O 10 '47 750w

FRYE, PEARL (MRS L. S. RAU). Narrow bridge. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 217p $2.50 Little

47-5945

This story of the attack on Pearl Harbor is told from the point of view of Helen Marin, the partially crippled wife of a Honolulu doctor. As the ship which is evacuating civilians from Hawaii to the mainland pursues its six days' journey Helen relives not only the hours of that terrible Sunday and Monday but also events in the preceding days which give the background and setting.

Booklist 44:151 D 15 '47

Kirkus 15:481 S 1 '47 180w

"Recommended for its careful style and original approach." R. P. Tubby

+ Library J 72:1469 O 15 '47 100w

"The Narrow Bridge" is an excellent first novel, both in intent and accomplishment. The writing is skillful and perceptive, the scheme competently realized. Its chief limitation as a piece of fiction is the absence of any significant action during the immediate six days of the book's span—the crossing of Helen Marin and her stepdaughter from Honolulu to the Golden Gate." F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22 O 26 '47 600w

"This is a first novel that is well above the average because of its authentic background, the polish of its concentrated, highly allusive style and the painter's eye which Miss Frye brings to her pictures of the lush natural background of the islands. The characters—still the mainstays of a good novel—are less successful; we understand them, they are sharply sketched and they are, no doubt, sound psychologically, but they lack warmth and stature." Mary Hurst

+ N Y Times p30 O 26 '47 500w

"Miss Frye has written an extremely perceptive first novel. Her characters are complex, at times very unpleasant, but very, very real. Miss Frye's background as an artist is reflected in her sharply etched descriptions."

W. R. W.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p29 N 23 '47 170w

FRYE, ROYAL MERRILL. Essentials of applied physics; a foundation course for technical, industrial and engineering students. 322p il $4.35; to schools $3.15 Prentice-Hall

530 Physics

47-4925

"This book is one of a series of applied science textbooks designed to meet the needs of schools where a more concise course is given than is found in the average college physics textbook, and where numerous topics not found in a preparatory course in physics are essential. The orthodox arrangement of, first, mechanics, then sound, heat, electricity, and light is followed. Numerous illustrative problems are completely worked out. A summary of the irreducible minimum of algebra, geometry, and trigonometry necessary for a clear understanding of physics is included in the appendices." (Pref) Author is Professor of physics, Boston University. Index.

Chem Eng 54:278 S '47 60w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1274 S 15 '47 50w

FRYE, WILLIAM FENNER. Marshall, citizen soldier. 397p il $3.75 Bobbs

B or 92 Marshall, George Catlett 47-2635

Full length biography of George Catlett Marshall, which includes a chapter on his background, and follows him thru each phase of his life as private citizen, soldier, and ambassador, to his appointment as Secretary of state. Index.

"While the book could have been more critical, it is well balanced (less than one third deals with Marshall as Chief of Staff) and it is most engagingly written." H. D. Catter

+ Am Hist R 53:189 O '47 280w

"A most interesting, well-written, apparently factual, wholly competent, and well-balanced account of Marshall and the Army which was Marshall's life through forty-five years and two world wars." H. M. Rice

+ Ann Am Acad 254:206 N '47 460w

Reviewed by Serrell Hillman

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Ap 27 '47 320w

"Mr. Frye has told his story with a directness, frankness, and saneness that makes his contribution to the already growing Marshall legend valuable as well as engrossing. The book is useful, too, in providing background for the layman on those issues, scandals, and personalities that have rocked the Army and War Department—the fight over creation of the General Staff, revitalization of the army school system, debate over a professional versus a citizen army, universal military service, unity of command." Neal Stanford

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Ap 17 '47 650w

Current Hist 12:583 Je '47 60w

"Inclined to be precious on personal details of Marshall's life, boyhood anecdotes and his superhuman genius for military administration, the book shines brightest in its frank discussion of Army philosophy, tactics, personalities. THE biography is still to come—this one is too spotty for full enjoyment—too unbalanced in its Pollyanna-ish portrait of a man without fault."

Kirkus 15:115 F 15 '47 180w

"Mr. Frye's book is good reading, and it discloses facets of Army life and of war history which are not widely known. In putting Marshall in his setting, however, there sometimes seems to be more setting than Marshall. The deeds of the officer are set forth; the man remains elusive." Marcus Duffield

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 Ap 20 '47 800w

Reviewed by F. S. Adams

N Y Times p6 Ap 13 '47 750w

FRYE, W. F.—Continued

Reviewed by C. J. Doughty

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Je 15 '47
1450w

FRYER, LELAND N. The American farmer, his problems and his prospects; foreword by James G. Patton; il. by Lloyd Hoff. 172p $3 Harper

338.1 Agriculture—Economic aspects. Farmers Agr47-302

"A call to American farmers to organize to block the inroads of big business interests into the farming industry, which the author says threaten the farmers' security and promise to bring about a crisis in American farm production and hence in the entire American economy." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 44:5 S 1 '47

Kirkus 15:268 My 15 '47 170w

"Forthright and really challenging book. Mr. Fryer knows at first hand that farming is moving in the direction of machine culture and industrial techniques, and he does not see this development as necessarily evil because it must replace the older, traditional ways of agriculture. He knows that we must have a more efficient system of food production, and he is very much concerned with the nature of this new efficiency. . . Obviously we need to lift our sights in handling the rural situation. And 'The American Farmer' does much to point the way." P. A. Waring

+ Nation 165:206 Ag 30 '47 950w

Reviewed by W. M. Teller

N Y Times p14 Jl 20 '47 550w

Wis Lib Bul 43:148 N '47

FUESS, CLAUDE MOORE, and BASFORD, EMORY SHELVEY, eds. Unseen harvest; a treasury of teaching. 678p $5 Macmillan

371.308 Education, English literature—Collections. American literature—Collections 47-11775

"This is a collection of miscellaneous writing clustered around the focal magnet of education." (Foreword) The authors range from Confucius to William James and from chapters from Jane Eyre and Nicholas Nickleby to Stephen Leacock, and Thurber. Index.

"Altogether this is a miscellany genuinely delightful. The editors have chosen, with rare and all but unerring discernment, things that are really good to read." J. T. Frederick

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p10A D 3 '47 180w

"The book is a rich collection in which, while some of the greatest experts on education have their say, the rest of the world has ample opportunity to talk back."

+ Christian Century 64:1456 N 26 '47 210w
Kirkus 15:495 S 1 '47 170w

"This volume will be extremely bulky and heavy. Its contents, however, will furnish pure entertainment and food for serious thought during many a long winter evening." G. O. Kelley

+ Library J 72:1465 O 15 '47 130w

School & Society 66:366 N 8 '47 30w
Social Studies 39:48 Ja '48 20w

Springf'd Republican p10B Ja 11 '48 190w

FULLER, EDMUND (AMICUS CURIAE, pseud), ed. Law in action, an anthology of the law in literature; ed. by Amicus Curiae; with an introd. by Roscoe Pound. 498p $3 Crown

808.8 Short stories—Collections 47-11846

An anthology made up of selections from fiction or history, representing the different varieties of incidents which can happen in the execution of the law. The four main divisions are called: Liberty; Morals; Justice; Crime.

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p32
N 30 '47 290w

"The anthology as a whole, rather surprisingly, is a most interesting volume, due to excellent judgment on the part of the Curious Friend." R. F. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p11C D 7 '47 240w

FULOP-MILLER, RENE. Sing, brat, sing; tr. from the German by Richard Winston. 191p $2.75 Holt

47-3088

Four-year-old Kiki, daughter of a poverty-stricken seamstress living in a tenement in Vienna, is discovered to have phenomenal powers of vocal imitation. With the help of a fading opera singer, a musical impresario and a professor from the conservatory, Kiki is put to earning a fortune for the family. Eventually the opera singer dies and with her goes Kiki's money-making ability.

"The treatment throughout is clumsy and pretentious, in turn cute or grotesque. To be sure, the central idea of the story has some literary potential, for it might have made an amusing farce or, in serious vein, a psychological study; but in these pages it merely sputters and dies a dud." R. H.

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p6 My 11 '47 170w

"A tenuous and often boring tale."

— Kirkus 15:79 F 1 '47 100w

"A strange, cruel novel. . . If it is symbolic the symbolism is obscure, but one cannot see any other explanation for this story of a child prodigy, her brief success and its effect on her family and acquaintances. The translator may be at fault for the ponderous, unidiomatic style, but the characters are unreal and the whole atmosphere decadent and evil. Not recommended." Margaret Owens

— Library J 72:638 Ap 15 '47 70w

"The story is so well told that reading it is rather like being at a beautifully produced, authentic atrocity film, unable to close one's eyes." M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Je 15 '47 550w

"The author pursues his story with unrelenting logic; the end is tragedy for some of the adults and sorrow and disappointment for others. The satire is occasionally amusing, more often biting and at times downright painful. His treatment of the infant prodigy has a bitterness wholly warranted by the facts he presents, and his comment on how a brat can tyrannize the world of adults has its moral for those parents who would indulge their darlings." Howard Taubman

N Y Times p22 My 4 '47 450w

"'Sing, Brat, Sing' is an unusual combination of fun and horror, well worth a few hours of anyone's time." Edith James

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 My 4 '47 150w

"Mr. Fülöp-Miller could certainly do with a more incisive, less awkward title. His habit of repeating dialogue in the mind of a character tends to divert attention and interest. But the fundamental fallacy of the book is its infinite exaggeration. We can despise Kiki in the abstract, but find not only her personality but the fruits of her triumph too excessive for fact." C. M. Brown

— Sat R of Lit 30:32 Ag 2 '47 330w

FULTON, JOHN FARQUHAR, and THOMSON, ELIZABETH H. Benjamin Silliman, 1779-1864, pathfinder in American science. (Life of science lib) 294p il $4 Schuman

B or 92 Silliman, Benjamin 47-11526

The first biography of this American scientist (1779-1864) to be published since 1865. The Dictionary of American Biography describes him as "the most prominent and influential scientific man in America during the first half of the nineteenth century." Benjamin Silliman was Yale's first professor of chemistry, where he was instrumental in the establishing of the Sheffield scientific school. Bibliography. Index.

"Worthwhile biography. . . [It] is a faithful reconstruction from methodical records, and carries authenticity if very little animation."

+ Kirkus 15:520 S 15 '47 150w

"The book holds the reader's attention well, and at the same time, conveys a convincing impression of Silliman's personality, achievements and influence." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 72:1765 D 15 '47 100w

"Conscious of the needs in the field of the history of American science, the authors of 'Benjamin Silliman' have set out to give us the biography of a scientist in which every stage of his career is set, in so far as possible, against the development of science itself and also against the general cultural and social aspects of the American national life. This approach is all the more valuable in the case of Silliman, because . . . he made few truly significant contributions to science." I. B. Cohen

+ N Y Times p7 Ja 11 '48 850w

School & Society 66:400 N 22 '47 10w

FULTON, JOHN FARQUHAR. Harvey Cushing. 754p il $5 Thomas, C.C.

B or 92, Cushing, Harvey Williams Med46-151

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

Reviewed by R. M. Atwater

Am J Pub Health 37:775 Je '47 180w

"Anyone who wishes to understand the last fifty years of life in America should read this fine biography." H. R. Viets

+ Atlantic 179:138 F '47 250w

"In Harvey Cushing Dr. John F. Fulton has given a full account of this vivid and many sided personality, and if at times the reader is slowed up by a wealth of detail there emerges from the book a striking portrait of a master surgeon and a likeable man." G. F.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Je 24 '47 210w

"Dr. Fulton's literary style shares no kinship with that of Lytton Strachey and other biographical colorists. His is a straightforward account of a man's life, from its roots in Colonial New England to its brilliant flowering and autumnal ending in modern New England. It is told for the most part in words of the original documents, for this biography is a tapestry of quotations, a skillful weaving of Cushing's own words and the words of his contemporaries into a pattern that reveals the complex panorama of the medical career." G. W. Gray

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p26 My 4 '47 1600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p306 Je 21 '47 750w

"In this biography, telling use has been made of the letters, diaries, notebooks, and papers which Cushing systematically collected and preserved throughout his life. With commendable restraint, the biographer often becomes the skillful accompanist, providing a sustaining, understanding background while his subject comes to the fore and tells the story in his own words. . . Cushing modestly hoped that the story of his life 'might be of interest and help to medical students.' To such readers the book may well prove stimulating."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:37 Mr '47 340w

"Without excess this book is praise of a famous man. While it shows Dr. Cushing's friendliness, compassion, charm, and artistic nature, it does not omit his hardness. Successes are acclaimed; failures, disappointments, and sometimes harsh dealings are not glossed over. The essential ruthlessness of an investigative genius is disclosed." S. Bayne-Jones

+ Yale R n s 36:528 spring '47 1200w

FUNK & Wagnalls new College Standard dictionary of the English language; Charles Earle Funk, editor. em'-pha-type ed 1940p $5.50; thumb indexed $6 Funk

423 English language—Dictionaries 47-2869

"This dictionary, the preface states, 'is intended for the use of the general public rather than to serve a specialized group.' . . The New College Standard Dictionary is based on Funk & Wagnalls New Standard Dictionary, reviewed in Subscription Books Bulletin in October 1934 and April 1937 [Book Review Digest 1934, 1937]. It contains more than 145,000 entries. . . All entries, including geographical and biographical as well as definitions, are in one alphabet and each is in bold-faced type. The dictionary entry gives etymology, comparatives, plurals, parts of speech, principal parts of verbs, derived phrases, unit phrases, alternate pronunciations, prefixes and suffixes, synonyms and antonyms. . . Biographical entries give birth and death dates and occupation. . . A distinctive feature of this dictionary is the use of underscoring to indicate emphasis in pronunciation, e.g., sex, ton. Words are divided into syllables by the insertion of the centered dot('). Subscription Bks Bul

"The illustrations are in black and white and are very clear. The printing on the two-column page is small but easy to read. The volume is well bound with sufficient margins. The definitions are clear and concise and seem to be more comprehensive than those in Words. For example the latter gives only the definition of the adjective dulcet while the New College Standard Dictionary gives both the adjective and the noun. . . Because of its simplicity and usefulness Funk & Wagnalls New College Standard Dictionary is recommended for all libraries."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 18:36 Jl '47 700w

FURMAN, ABRAHAM LOUIS, ed. Fourth mystery companion. 396p $2.75 Lantern press (NY)

Short stories—Collections

Contents: White carnations, by Q. Patrick; The painted nail, by G. H. Cox; Traitors trail, by Hugh Pentecost; The unbelievable baroness, by E. S. Holding; A triumph in theory, by Louis Paul; The tenth clue, by Dashiell Hammett; The Saint sits in, by Leslie Charteris; The white cat, by Richard Kent; The level crossing, by F. W. Crofts; The case of the calico dog, by Mignon Eberhart; Prelude to murder, by W. C. Brown; Fog over Hong Kong, by Vincent Starrett; The adventure of the bearded lady, by Ellery Queen; Twicetrot path, by William Irish; Tomorrow we die, by Frank Owen; The important point, by William MacHarg; The secret of the ruins, by Sax Rohmer; Halloween assassin, by Frederick Skerry; Library book, by Cornell Woolrich.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p9 O 27 '46 70w

"This series is good—and this addition is on a par with the others."

+ Kirkus 14:467 S 15 '46 50w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p18 O 20 '46 70w

FURNAS, MARTHE DITH (MRS S. E. STAUFFER). Far country. 304p $2.75 Harper

47-31466

A story of the overland trip to California in the 1840's. The tale is told in the form of the diary kept by young Unwin Shaw, Kentucky storekeeper, who made the trip accompanied by his sister and her husband.

Booklist 44:109 N 15 '47

"There's a vigor and directness in the telling that resembles old journals, and the style of the period colors the tale expressively. An historical novel with no glamorous, exciting central figure, but one that reflects the events in a true, believable mirroring."

+ Kirkus 15:441 Ag 15 '47 180w

"Journal form and innumerable details slow the pace to that of weary oxen, greatly limiting story's appeal for the average reader." C. W. Roth

Library J 72:1193 S 1 '47 90w

"The 'Far Country' is a highly readable story of the Great Migration. Some readers may take exception—as did this reviewer—to

FURNAS, MARTHE DITH—Continued
Shaw's speech, which at times appears forcedly ungrammatical. Particularly enjoyable are the character sketches." Hoffman Birney
+ — N Y Times p28 O 26 '47 500w
Wis Lib Bul 43:175 D '47

FURTH, DORI. Back in time for supper; pictures by Lisl Weil. [33p] $2.50 McKay 47-11446

A fanciful tale about two small children who lived in New York city and wanted to visit their grandparents in San Francisco. Their mother said it was all right if they were back in time for supper. The story tells how they did it.

"Delightfully silly reading, with humorous, really, goofy drawings in poster colors by Lisl Weil."

+ Kirkus 15:392 Ag 1 '47 90w

"This is fantasy to which no child objects: it doesn't explain, it just takes place. As it takes place as much in merry pictures as in text, and as their colors are striking and their designs a fantastic treatment of fact, the adventure makes one of those stories children tell themselves and appreciate when some one tells them." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 D 28 '47 200w

"A make-believe story in which anything can happen is a rare find. Dori Furth's new book is just that, for she has woven a story of matter-of-fact happenings with imaginary ones which will enthrall the 5 to 10 audience." Lois Palmer

+ N Y Times p54 N 23 '47 140w

"Children between the ages of 5 and 8 years old are sure to enjoy this charming little story with its gay and colorful illustrations." Dorothy Martinovich

+ San Francisco Chronicle p8 N 16 '47 150w

G

GAEVERNITZ, GERO VON S., ed. See Schlambrendorff, F. von. They almost killed Hitler

GAG, WANDA, tr. See Grimm, J. L. K. and W. K. More tales from Grimm

GAGEY, RAYMOND MCADOO. Revolution in American drama. 315p $3.75 Columbia univ. press

812.09 American drama—History and criticism. Theater—U.S. 47-11297

"History of the American theater from 1912 to the current hits. Describes briefly the sentimental and unreal drama of the years from 1912 to 1917, when love and tears and escapism, were the rule, and discusses in detail the plays and playwrights emerging after the first world war. By the 1930's a new artistic level had been reached and almost any subject could be presented." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 44:86 N 1 '47

"It is refreshing to find a book about drama which is written by someone who knows that plays are for theaters; and such a book is this, wherein the author freely recognizes that a dramatic production is a collaboration of playwright, producer, actor, designer and audience. As a result of this awareness on Mr. Gagey's part, the progress of twentieth century American drama as he discusses it becomes the story of a vital factor in our civilization, not an academic dissection of printed plays." F. H. O'Hara

+ Christian Century 65:17 Ja 7 '48 650w
Cleveland Open Shelf p21 N '47
Kirkus 15:562 O 1 '47 170w

"Remarkably fine treatment of the modern American drama and the theatre in which it is performed. Should be widely read. Highly recommended." George Freedley
+ Library J 72:1472 O 15 '47 30w

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p15 D 14 '47 470w

"When Mr. Gagey goes into his 'abundance of detail' Revolution in American Drama becomes the inevitable potpourri. Nevertheless, there are a large number of facts within these 283 readable pages and they will be useful to everyone interested in the broad outlines and developments of between-wars American drama in its relation to national and international events." Dorothy Davies

+ — Theatre Arts 32:63 Ja '48 320w

GAINFORT, JOHN (JOHN WESTON, pseud).
We lived with Peter; il. by Gladys Emerson Cook. 169p $2.50 McBride

636.78 Dogs—Legends and stories 46-11983

Story of the author's dog, a small red cocker. Peter McGillicuddy, the spaniel, held to the belief that a dog should be a member of the family and there shouldn't be silly rules about not coming into the dining room or sleeping on beds. After he had convinced his people of this wisdom, all lived happily together.

Booklist 43:97 D 1 '46

"Charming, but not important." Ruth McEvoy
Library J 71:1810 D 15 '46 70w

GALLAGHER, GALE. I found him dead. 214p $2.50 Coward-McCann 47-11487

Detective story.

Booklist 44:185 Ja 15 '48

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun Book Week O 24 '47 60w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p36 N 2 '47 230w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p19 N 9 '47 110w

"Above average."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:44 N 8 '47 50w

GALT, THOMAS. How the United nations works; il. by Norman Tate. 218p $2 Crowell

341.1 United nations (organization)—Juvenile literature 47-2525

A history of the development of the United nations organization and an analysis of its functioning, written for grades five to eight. Includes the texts of The Atlantic charter; Declaration of the United nations; Charter of the United nations; Statute of the International court of justice. Index.

Reviewed by Garland Downum
Am Pol Sci R 41:1254 D '47 180w

Booklist 43:297 My 15 '47

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold
Christian Science Monitor p14 O 30 '47 180w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '47

"In general a sound, hopeful outlook, as well as an exceedingly valuable book of factual data. An extensive index adds to its reference value, and illustrations by Norman Tate give it a lively flavor."

+ Kirkus 15:32 Ja 15 '47 120w

Reviewed by E. W. Turpin
Library J 72:738 My 1 '47 80w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Je 29 '47 360w

"A good deal of all this will, by its very nature, be heavy going for the youngster who has not been introduced to civics or the principles of government, but Mr. Galt writes with such clarity, arranges his information so logically that junior and senior high school students will find this book very rewarding. A section on facts and documents, which includes the United Nations Charter, adds to the reference value of this excellent over-all picture." E. L. Buehl

+ N Y Times p22 My 11 '47 230w

Reviewed by Eleanor Breed

San Francisco Chronicle p6 N 16 '47 140w

"He tells the story directly, as though he were talking to us, and he uses parallels in everyday life to illustrate his points... The manner of presenting it and the lively and amusing cartoons that illustrate it make it a book that will probably appeal to young people. It is an excellent reference book for schools."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:35 My 17 '47 110w

GAMMELL, ROBERT HALE IVES. Twilight of painting; an analysis of recent trends to serve in a period of reconstruction. 133p 72pl $5 Putnam

750.9 Painting 47-1172

"All references to Modern Art are capitalized but the author pays scant homage to present-day achievement. A painter, (his work adorns the Newark Public Library) he attacks art critics who cannot paint, art schools commercially sound but weak in inspiration, 'uninhibited curators,' and today's 'nursery technique.' Mr. Gammell seeks a return to individual teaching, an apprentice system, and basic instruction in drawing, composition and color. Copious quotations and the bibliography indicate the author's predilection for the nineteenth century." Library J

"A serious and sincere attempt to analyze what [the author] considers the deplorable state in which the art of painting finds itself at the present day and to suggest certain remedies. The book contains perhaps too much in the way of sweeping generalities, but the vigor with which these are stated adds to its interest." Arthur Pope

+ Atlantic 180:122 J1 '47 1100w

"Gammell, a painter in the academic tradition... has tried to reason through the terrific changes that have come about in the visual arts of our century, loosely defined as 'Modern Art.' He has presented a very sincere and thoughtful case for what he believes, based on a rich background as a human being and as a painter. As he himself admits, however, what he has 'reasoned' is based, first of all, on what he 'believes.'" Richard Florsheim

Chicago Sun Book Week p9 F 23 '47 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p5 Mr '47

"Mr. Gammell is especially upset by the poor training offered by present-day art schools. He has a valid complaint there; unquestionably the mass-production art schools of today, where the director of a class coaches his too-many pupils for a maximum of two hours a week, communicate less of the necessary technique of painting than the older system of apprenticeship of a few likely pupils in a master's studio; and undoubtedly too many incompetents are encouraged to become painters by the success of untutored primitives. But Mr. Gammell's championship of the academic standards of 'workmanship' falls sadly flat in face of the rogue's gallery of 19th century academic painting which he selects for reproduction." David Burnham

Commonweal 45:598 Mr 28 '47 420w

"The book, well written, should prove popular with the reactionary and with those who are afraid to admit their distaste for Modern Art." A. S. Plaut

Library J 71:1623 N 15 '46 140w

"A sincere attempt to prove that little good painting has been done since 1860, this book would achieve its purpose except for the fact that it is dull, wordy, repetitious and based on false premises and unwarranted conclusions." W. G. Dooley

N Y Times p16 Ap 20 '47 700w

"To Mr. Gammell, the term 'modern art' includes almost everything from Delacroix and Courbet down to the present, and with very few exceptions he hates it. He thinks Cézanne is dreadful, he dislikes everyone but Manet and Degas among the Impressionists, and of course he considers all, or almost all, present-day painters beneath contempt. In short, his point of view is the old-line conservative one, but it is at least consistent. Seventy-two halftone plates, the majority by academicians you have probably scarcely heard of."

— New Yorker 22:94 Ja 18 '47 100w

"There is no denying that Mr. Gammell is extremely sincere, even as sanity-in-art societies are sincere. There is also no denying that he shows a good knowledge of art history and of the craft of painting. Some of his criticisms of the methods of present-day art education are also valid. However, his complaint that the amateur fringes of art exercise control of painting is not supported by the facts. His arguments lose force in direct proportion to his disregard of the values which have been reaffirmed and emphasized by modern art. They are also weakened when they sound like third-rate jeremiads—very prosy and dogmatic." W. E. Parker

San Francisco Chronicle p12 Mr 2 '47 450w

Spring'd Republican p5B S 14 '47 130w

"Although Mr. Gammell is prejudiced against 'modern' art, he does not deny that we may be witnessing the birth of a great new tradition. His concern is to eliminate what he considers sloppiness of thought, whether in paint or in words, which now prevails. This book, like Reynolds' Discourses, is directed to the painter and to the public, and has importance for the art historian."

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:4 Mr '47 220w

GAMOW, GEORGE. One two three . . . infinity: facts and speculations of science; il. by the author. 340p $4.75 Viking

500 Science 47-31115

Survey of the field of basic scientific knowledge, written for the layman. The study includes natural and artificial numbers, space and time, the fourth dimension, the atomic theory, genes, and new ideas in astronomy. Index.

Booklist 44:101 N 15 '47

"This skillful presentation is for the non-professional and professional scientist. It will broaden the knowledge of each and give the imagination wide play. . . It should be read by everyone interested in the implications and directions of modern science." F. J. Norton

+ Chem & Eng N 25:3676 D 8 '47 300w

"This is a fine follow-up book for the reader whose interest in atomic energy has whetted his appetite for science in general. . . Professional scientists will object to the air of certainty which pervades the book. . . Nevertheless it's a stimulating and provocative book for the science-minded layman."

+ Kirkus 15:299 Je 1 '47 150w

"The same engaging style that distinguished Professor Gamow's The Birth and Death of the Sun, and Biography of the Earth is found here. This book is for the lay-reader, but no one who desires only light reading about the wonders of science should pick it up, for the author leads his readers down many paths where thinking is necessary if any good is to come of the journey." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 72:1103 Ag '47 100w

Reviewed by Benjamin Harrow

Nation 165:479 N 1 '47 70w

"Comparing this book with Jean's Mysterious Universe or Eddington's Nature of the Physical World, it must be said, Gamow is out-classed. He has not their gift for analogy; the exposition, on occasion, turns in upon itself and ensnarls both author and reader; Gamow's style, only flecked with whimsy in his earlier books, has finally taken on that foible to such a precious degree as almost to fox the pages. . . Still, it is a good book; I enjoyed it and I recommend it. It is full of wonderful things, often well described."

J. R. Newman

+ New Repub 117:29 O 27 '47 2100w

GAMOW, GEORGE—Continued

Reviewed by Gerald Wendt

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24
D 7 '47 700w

"This is a layman's book, as readable as an historical novel, but every chapter bears the solid imprint of authoritative research." L. W.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 N 16 '47
230w

"In 'One, Two, Three . . . Infinity,' as in his other books, George Gamow succeeds where others fail because of his remarkable ability to combine technical accuracy, choice of material, dignity of expression, and readability. He does not talk down to his audience, nor does he talk up to it. He discusses a variety of topics, all of them falling within the realm of unadulterated science, as distinct from the world of pseudo-science painted for Americans by most of our science writers." Harrison Brown

+ Sat R of Lit 30:26 S 20 '47 900w

School & Society 66:207 S 13 '47 10w

"Just what the average layman is going to think about life and the world after he reads this book is open to question—some are going to find clarification of personal ideas and others are going to be more confused than ever—but all are going to realize they have had an exhilarating experience. It is decidedly adult fare, even though Mr. Gamow says the book was originally intended for children. Come now, professor, it would take some adults 58 thousand billion years to assimilate all your information." R. F. H.

Springf'd Republican p10B S 28 '47
390wGANNON, ROBERT IGNATIUS. After black coffee. 184p $2.25 McMullen

041

47-2270

"The after dinner speeches of the president of Fordham University brought together in permanent form." School & Society

Reviewed by Katherine Brégy

Cath World 165:284 Je '47 350w

"I would suggest that since these scintillating talks were given after a delightful repast, that the book be read under similar conditions. Father Gannon's style is most pleasant, and his book provocative of thought." E. V. Cardinal

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ag 3 '47
340w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '47

Management R 36:235 Ap '47 20w

"If all Rotary, Commencement, and Lincoln's Day speakers were provided . . . with a copy of 'After Black Coffee,' then, perhaps, we wan diners-out, surfeited with after-dinner bombast as we now are, might return to those golden ambrosial banquet-hours of gods and heroes about which Praed and Calverley used to write." C. A. Brady

+ N Y Times p3 Mr 16 '47 650w

School & Society 65:183 Mr 8 '47 20w

GANTILLON, SIMON. Vessel of wrath; tr. from the French by Haakon M. Chevalier. 187p $2 Putnam

47-30673

The hero is a Breton sea captain in love with his schooner. A half-breed Central American girl falls in love with the captain, and stows away on his ship but when the captain scorns the girl she throws herself overboard. Later the schooner with all hands disappears and never is heard of again.

"Of general special interest; not for the general maritime book market which might not like the poetic emotionalism of this strange story."

Kirkus 15:322 Je 15 '47 130w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p37
N 23 '47 220w

"Though it deals with violent emotions, the book still has the qualities of salt-water poetry, the romance of limitless time and space, that appeal to all lovers of seagoing lore. In sum, it is a tale told by a sailor, full of strife and woe and the infinite detail of a Carrier and Ives clipper ship print." Florence Crowther

+ N Y Times p26 S 21 '47 700w

"Nothing to tax the brain or, except for one description of a storm at sea, to arouse much interest, either. This harmless trifle, however, will make you realize how much time has passed since M. Gantillon's 'Maya' seemed so provocative to Parisian intellectuals of the twenties."

New Yorker 23:78 Ag 23 '47 150w

"Mr. Gantillon's book is a much better and more closely-knit piece of work than it appears to be in the beginning." Fletcher Pratt

+ Sat R of Lit 30:16 S 6 '47 420w

Springf'd Republican p7B D 28 '47
150wGARBEDIAN, HAIG GORDON. Thomas Alva Edison, builder of civilization; il. by Robert Burns. 231p $2.50 Messner

B or 92 Edison, Thomas Alva 47-1699

Biography of Thomas Edison written for high school age. Contains many anecdotes about the inventor's early life and the development of some of his many inventions. Index.

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold

Christian Science Monitor p14 O 30 '47
240w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 23:267 Jl '47 40w

"A competent but routine biography, with the inventor emerging as somewhat a stuffed shirt. . . . Let's be a little more objectively critical about the biographies we recommend for younger readers and perhaps we'll stem the flood of mediocre work."

+ Kirkus 15:2 Ja 1 '47 170w

"Timely, full-length biography, extravagant in praise, long and not very lively or interesting in style. . . . Best biography of Edison for readers fourteen and older, but length and endless details may preclude its popularity with young people." Dorothea Dawson

+ Library J 72:645 Ap 15 '47 120w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4
Jl 27 '47 160w

"Despite its worshipful approach to its subject this new biography of Edison, aimed at a high school audience, is filled with entertaining anecdotes. . . . It is too bad that the writing is so florid and packed with so many clichés, and surprising that so much attention is given to a rose-tinted account of the inventor's family life, hardly of much concern to young boys more interested in his scientific work." Creighton Peet

+ N Y Times p33 Ap 20 '47 230w

"Good biography of the great inventor."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:37 Ap 19 '47 50w

Wis Lib Bul 43:71 Ap '47

GARBELL, MAURICE ADOLPH. Tropical and equatorial meteorology. 237p il $12 Pitman

551.5 Meteorology. Tropics—Climate

47-3165

"First book to cover the weather analysis in the low latitudes. Covers subject along functional lines of dynamic and synoptic meteorology. Presents new theories. References and bibliography. Illustrated." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:891 Je 1 '47 30w

"There are many excellent diagrams and photographs. The material has been gathered from the experiences of many observers over a period of years."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 32:33 Ap '47

GARCIA LORCA, FEDERICO. III tragedies; in the authorized tr. of Richard L. O'Connell and James Graham-Luján; with an introd. by the poet's brother Francisco. 378p $3.75
New directions

862

47-11626

The three tragedies were intended as a dramatic trilogy, and are now available for the first time to the English reader in translation. The tragedies are titled: Blood Wedding; Yerma; and Bernarda Alba.

"Highly recommended for drama and Spanish literature collections." George Freedley
+ Library J 72:1780 D 15 '47 40w

"To the present volume the poet's surviving brother has contributed an introduction emphasizing the effect of the poet's passion for the theater on his life and art. Don Francisco is loving, persuasive, and eloquent, also a little diffuse; one sees, reflected in his memoir, a good deal of the enthusiastic, exuberant, hard-working, and altogether charming intelligence that must have been Federico's; and one feels, if not altogether ungracious, at least a bit uneasy at being unwilling to accept, completely, the doctrine that Lorca stands or falls by these three plays rather than by the 'Romancero Gitano.'" Rolfe Humphries
Nation 165:705 D 27 '47 330w

"These are poetic dramas in the true sense—not dramas that are written poetically, or in the broken lines of verse—because they are conceived poetically and have an intensity from line to line that is nearly continuously sustained. Lorca was engrossed in the traditions of Spain at the same time that he was absorbed by the modern idiom. 'Blood Wedding' is a beautiful and successful example of this double devotion." Harvey Breit
+ N Y Times p61 N 23 '47 130w

GARDNER, ERLE STANLEY. Case of the fan-dancer's horse. 250p $2.50 Morrow

47-3657

Detective story.

Booklist 43:360 J1 15 '47

Kirkus 15:202 Ap 1 '47 60w

"A slightly goofy air hovers around the story, on account of the horse, maybe, but Gardner fans should find everything just right." Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 Je 15 '47 180w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p22 Je 15 '47 140w

"Even better than usual."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:34 J1 5 '47 50w

GARDNER, ERLE STANLEY. Case of the lazy lover. 250p $2.50 Morrow

47-11142

Detective story.

Kirkus 15:483 S 1 '47 80w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 O 19 '47 140w

"The only dull pages in this book are the blank ones just inside the covers." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p40 O 19 '47 110w

New Yorker 23:116 N 1 '47 100w

"It's Perry Mason, of course. As clean and as smart as he's always been. The puzzle is as intricate as usual, the solution as satisfying." E. D. Doyle

+ San Francisco Chronicle p27 O 19 '47 60w

"High-grade."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:32 O 18 '47 40w

Springf'd Republican p10B N 16 '47 90w

GARDNER, ERLE STANLEY. Fools die on Friday, by A. A. Fair [pseud]. 247p $2.50 Morrow

47-31433

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p43 O 10 '47 20w

Kirkus 15:446 Ag 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p34 N 16 '47 90w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p40 O 5 '47 180w

New Yorker 23:112 O 4 '47 90w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 O 12 '47 130w

Sat R of Lit 30:46 O 11 '47 50w

GARDNER, ERLE STANLEY. Two clues: The clue of the runaway blonde [and] The clue of the hungry horse. 238p $2.50 Morrow

47-2600

Two brief detective novels: The Clue of the Runaway Blonde; and The Clue of the Hungry Horse.

Booklist 43:348 J1 1 '47

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p9 Mr 2 '47 160w

"A new—if pre-fab—Gardner character of sure-fire draw."

Kirkus 14:628 D 15 '46 70w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22 F 23 '47 230w

"Bill Eldon has none of the legal tricks that so delight the admirers of Perry Mason, but he is a shrewd observer and he knows how to put this and that together and get the right answer. We hope to hear more of him." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p38 Mr 2 '47 110w

"Fine, as a short vacation from Perry Mason."

+ New Yorker 23:100 Mr 1 '47 100w

"Second-string Gardner, but enjoyable."

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Mr 9 '47 40w

"Eldon likable, logical, and believable; plots handled with customary Gardner skill and suspense; second 'clue' not so good as opener."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:44 Mr 8 '47 40w

GARNELL, HELENE. Oh dear! what shall I wear. 120p il $2.50; pa $1.25 Liveright

646 Clothing and dress 46-25285

"A complete guide to dress for every occasion."—Subtitle. Good common sense for females of any age. Line drawings enliven the text." Booklist

Booklist 43:49 O 15 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p1 Ja '47

GARNER, CLAUD. Wetback. 216p $2.75 Coward-McCann

47-30955

A wetback is a Mexican who enters the United States illegally, by swimming the Rio Grande. This novel is the story of one Dionisio Molina, the illegitimate son of an American father and a Mexican mother, whose dream was to become a citizen of his father's country. His road was a rocky one, but he was eventually successful.

"The story seems contrived though the topic is a live one. Not too wide an audience for this."

Kirkus 15:319 Je 15 '47 180w

"Mr. Garner brings to his novel a great deal of sympathy for and understanding of men like Dionisio plus a highly commendable sense of indignation against their treatment. But in terms of literary accomplishment, there is little to be said for his effort." Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 S 28 '47 320w

GARNER, CLAUD—Continued

"This lyric folk tale is a refreshing contrast to many of the current novels, and though designed for adults should interest teen-agers."

P. H. B.

+ Springfield Republican p10B N 23 '47
110w

GARNER, WIGHTMAN WELLS. Production of tobacco. 516p il $4.50 Blakiston

633.71 Tobacco Agr46-330

"Essential features of tobacco production and its problems, technical phases of processing and manufacture of leaf tobacco. Arrangement is: botanical relations and growth characteristics of tobacco, history of the industry, growing, curing, grading and marketing of the crop, physiology, chemistry and genetics of tobacco, and tobacco manufacturers. Bibliography. Illustrated." Library J

"First complete authoritative textbook and reference covering tobacco production." L. A. Eales

+ Library J 72:79 Ja 1 '47 70w

"An extensive bibliography, author and subject indexes, and illustrations complete a book that is written by a recognized authority on the subject, in a style that is easily read by college student, member of the industry, or interested layman."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:90 Mr '47 160w

GARRETT, HELEN. Rufous Redtail; il. by Francis Lee Jaques. 158p $2.50 Viking 47-31429

Story of a redtailed hawk from the time when he emerges from the egg until he has grown up and has acquired his red tail.

Booklist 44:94 N 1 '47

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton

Christian Science Monitor p6 D 11 '47
250w

"Another book wherein birds talk, and very well done. . . The pictures are superbly done with exactness and beauty, adding a great deal of atmosphere and distinction to the book." L. S. Bechtel

+ Commonweal 47:152 N 21 '47 90w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 24:45 Ja '48 80w

Kirkus 15:395 Ag 1 '47 130w

"An unusually fine nature story of a young redtail hawk. . . Recommended for upper elementary and junior high grades." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 72:1544 N 1 '47 70w

"The engaging personality of Rufous stays with one long after the book is closed. An enchanting book for both boys and girls of 9 to 12, and beautifully illustrated to boot." Eleanor Brent

+ N Y Times p41 N 16 '47 160w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét

New Yorker 23:153 D 6 '47 80w

"This is indeed a book which teen-agers as well as younger nature-lovers will want for their collection." Ann Lundquist

+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 N 16 '47
200w

"He is a lively, independent creature and the record of his adventures has humor and vitality. The drawings are accurate and detailed, and very lovely in design."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:55 N 15 '47 60w

Wis Lib Bul 43:178 D '47

GARRIGUE, JEAN. Ego and the centaur; poems. 127p $2.50 New directions

811

47-30700

"Using such symbols as the forest, the zoo, the statue and the centaur, Jean Garrigue explores the loves, loneliness and anxieties of modern man crystallizing them in poems that have the sensuous immediacy of actual experience." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 S 21 '47
50w

"Jean Garrigue is a very resourceful young American poet, and 'The Ego and the Centaur' is a rich and full record—if rather too much so—of her self-exploration. It leaves little doubt of her ability to range in any one of several directions and to learn from a number of people without losing her own identity. But the general effect of this book is one's feeling that Miss Garrigue finds it easier to try out the same idea in a number of different poems, all of them more or less unfinished, than to stake all her possibilities in one definitive poem and let it stand." Henry Rago

+ Commonweal 47:353 Ja 16 '48 850w

"The effect is achieved in an idiom that is always fresh and meaningful, capable of analysis and with a music that has just the right amount of dissonance to identify it as contemporary. Miss Garrigue has passion and intellect and fine technical equipment with which to give them embodiment." Stephen Stepanchev

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 S
28 '47 250w

"Miss Garrigue writes with disarming smoothness and ease, but is skilled at the unexpected and short-circuiting phrase—the phrase that suddenly plunges the poem into obscurity. She is good at detail, but the reader is constantly being thwarted by her labored nouns, verbs, and adjectives, her thumping resolutions, and her lack of transition. She is evidently a pupil of Wallace Stevens, but her emotional key is fixed at a medium position, and she states emotion rather than projects it." Louise Bogan

+ New Yorker 23:118 S 13 '47 120w

GARRISON, JOHN L. Sun, snow and skis; a modern guide to eastern skiing. (Whittlesey house publication) 318p il $3 McGraw

796.93 Skis and ski running 47-685

"It was only six years ago that [the author] moved away from the South and found himself beguiled by that Yankee commodity—snow. In return he has written an affectionate and anecdotal series of digressions on the history and folklore of skiing in the Eastern United States. He discusses technical subjects like the formation of mountains and the makeup of snow; he dips into the case histories of the Dartmouth Winter Carnival and snow trains; he passes along sound advice on the various schools of skiing. The final section of the book, 'What Every Skier Should Know,' is a conscientious and inclusive guide to skiing on the Eastern slopes from Lake Placid to the Laurentians in Canada." (N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R) Index.

Booklist 43:238 Ap 1 '47

Kirkus 14:513 O 1 '46 90w

"The pictures are enchanting, pen portraits of famous skiers quite entertaining and the many anecdotes amusing and skillfully told. Perhaps, book is meant as an aperitif for active skiers and compensation for those who do their skiing at home in an armchair." M. D. Read

+ Library J 72:231 F 1 '47 80w

"Garrison has done an amusing and informative job." Digory Venn

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5
F 23 '47 180w

"'Sun, Snow and Skis' is entertaining and informative in a breezy style."

+ N Y Times p20 Ja 5 '47 100w

GARST, DORIS SHANNON. Amelia Earhart, heroine of the skies; il. by E. Joseph Dreany. 191p $2.50 Messner

B or 92 Earhart, Amelia—Juvenile literature 47-2340

Biography of Amelia Earhart, covering her life from childhood to the time of her disappearance over the Pacific. Stresses her importance as a pioneer in aviation. For junior and senior high schools. Bibliography. Index.

Kirkus 15:102 F 15 '47 100w

"The writing is uninspired, there is no feeling of the author's being at one with her subject. Does not supersede nor add much to the material already available. Recommended only where need justifies." E. A. Groves

Library J 72:819 My 15 '47 60w

"I should like to see this book in every school library; the public libraries will have it anyway and can use it in the adult or the children's department. A straightforward, simply told story without literary distinction, it brings to a young person at the age when heroes are necessary as bread, a sense of having known, seen and shared the career of Amelia Earhart." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 My 25 '47 260w

GARTH, DAVID. Gray Canaan. 280p $2.75 Putnam

47-1676

Historical novel dealing with the battle of Manassas and the fortunes of the Confederacy during the summer of 1862. The two chief characters are a confederate captain and a girl named Holly Charles.

Booklist 43:274 My 1 '47

"Although the story never strays from Richmond and the northern Virginia arena of 1862, it has a strange Western flavor. . . The brisk and stereotyped action is skillfully plotted which is fortunate, inasmuch as that's all there is to the book." H. Z.

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ap 27 '47 190w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Horn BK 24:69 Ja '48 40w

"Good writing, in the polite romantic tradition, with only a rare lapse into artificiality. Recommended, especially for readers who have had an overdose of those modern novels which exploit crude expressions and vulgar scenes under the label of realism." H. F. McGaw

+ Library J 72:462 Mr 15 '47 80w

"Southern military figures appear in the narrative, and Mr. Garth's description of life in Richmond and Washington is richly detailed." Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p26 Mr 30 '47 180w

Reviewed by Hoffman Birney
N Y Times p14 My 25 '47 400w

GASKILL, ARTHUR L., and ENGLANDER, DAVID A. Pictorial continuity; how to shoot a movie story; phot. and drawings by Irving Levine. 149p $3 Essential bks.

778.5 Moving picture photography 47-30567

Concise explanation of the techniques of shooting a moving picture story in sequence. The authors base their work on techniques developed during the war for training army combat photographers. For the amateur cameraman.

Booklist 44:147 D 15 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Ag 17 '47 80w

GASSNER, JOHN, ed. Best plays of the modern American theatre; second series. 776p $3.50 Crown

812.08 American drama—Collections

47-30270

Contents: The Glass menagerie; The Time of your life; I remember mama; Life with father; Born yesterday; The voice of the turtle; The Male animal; The Man who came to dinner; Dream girl; The Philadelphia story; Arsenic and old lace; The Hasty heart; Home of the brave; Tomorrow the world; Watch on the Rhine; The Patriots; Abe Lincoln in Illinois. Bibliography. First series published 1939 (Book Review Digest 1940) has title: Twenty Best Plays of the Modern American Theatre.

Booklist 43:287 My 15 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 S '47

"A brilliant introduction (30 pages) covers amply the years (1939-1947) since the editor's first volume. . . A superb collection. Highly recommended for all drama collections, particularly small ones." George Freedley

+ Library J 72:811 My 15 '47 110w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 My 11 '47 150w

"A readable selection, with an intelligent and lively introduction by Mr. Gassner."

+ Theatre Arts 31:75 Je '47 50w

GASSNER, JOHN, and NICHOLS, DUDLEY, eds. Best film plays, 1945. 648p $3 Crown

812.03 Moving picture plays (45-4730)

Anthology of ten film scripts, judged by the editors as the best of the 1945 film plays. Contents: The lost weekend, by Charles Brackett; Spellbound, by Ben Hecht; Double indemnity, by Raymond Chandler; A tree grows in Brooklyn, by Tess Slesinger; None but the lonely heart, by Clifford Odets; The Southerner, by Hugo Butler; Ernie Pyle's story of G.I. Joe, by Guy Endore; Thirty seconds over Tokyo, by Dalton Trumbo; Over twenty-one, by Sidney Buchman; A medal for Benny, by Frank Butler.

Booklist 43:219 Mr 15 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 O 6 '46 80w

"Excellent anthology. . . Unfortunately this is a very bad job of book-making technically. Nevertheless it is recommended as indispensable to cinema collections in all libraries." George Freedley

+ Library J 72:163 Ja 15 '47 80w

Reviewed by Iris Barry

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p28 F 9 '47 600w

"Literature or not, these selections—the conventional ten in number—are fascinating to read, either for sheer stimulation or as studies in technique. And although nine of the number have been originally published otherwise as novels, plays or journalism, they have a clean and rhythmic tempo in this form. Further, they guarantee the reader a helpful visualization of the films, aided by generous illustrations, which should gratify the nostalgic fan." Bosley Crowther

+ N Y Times p24 O 20 '46 600w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 O 20 '46 120w

Theatre Arts 31:70 F '47 50w

GATES, REGINALD RUGGLES. Human genetics. 2v il $15 Macmillan

575.1 Heredity 46-6862

"This is a complete revision and enlargement of an earlier work, Heredity in Man [Book Review Digest 1930]. . . The sixteen chapters of the 1929 work here become thirty-two, and 385 pages become 1518. Included in the latter are over 225 pages of bibliographies appended at the ends of chapters and 90 pages of 'Index.'" Ann Am Acad

"Professor Gates abandons the role of the scientific abstractor occasionally to take up the battle for eugenics. This leads to an emotional attack on Boas, vitiates a good deal of the treatment of intelligence, and compels him to include numerous constitutional studies, although they include no genetic information. This is an extremely useful compendium of human heredity, but the reader should keep in mind that it is also a biased one." S. L. Washburn

+ Am Anthropol 49:488 Jl '47 600w

"Here is a truly monumental work, a reference compendium that will for some years be indispensable to human geneticists, physiologists, anthropologists, and sociologists." F. H. Hankins

+ Ann Am Acad 252:167 Jl '47 803w

"These two substantial volumes are a compendium of what has been learned about the heredity of the human species since Abbot Mendel so fruitfully crossed giant and dwarf

GATES, R. R.—Continued

peas to forge a key to unlock an age-old mystery. This amazing survey of the widespread literature of genetics will be a landmark and a boon to specialists." Robert Cook
+ N Y Times p21 Je 1 '47 1100w

GAUGUIN, PAUL. Noa Noa; my voyage to Tahiti [tr. by O. F. Theis] with 36 woodcuts, 14 in color. 118p $3.75 Lear pubs, inc, 24 E 11th st, N.Y. 3; for sale by Crown
B or 92 Tahiti 47-5724

A new translation of Gauguin's journal about his first trip to Tahiti, and his love idyll with the girl Tehura. Illustrated with many woodcuts from his Tahitian notebooks.

"Not essential if the original edition is in the library's collection."

Library J 72:735 My 1 '47 90w

New Yorker 23:119 Ap 12 '47 80w

"An exquisite edition sufficiently filled with Gauguin's own illustrations to recall the exotic flavor of his work in which the painter confided his love for Tahiti and its people." W. H.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p26 My 25 '47 120w

GAUS, JOHN MERRIMAN. Reflections on public administration. 153p $2 Univ. of Ala. press 350 Public administration 47-2735

"Considerations affecting the efficient organization of public administration are analyzed in this volume, developed from lectures delivered in the Southern Regional Training Program at the University of Alabama. . . The central thesis is that the impact of technological developments on rural as well as urban life has created problems which cannot be solved by the action of isolated citizens or by the uncoordinated action of multiple administrative agencies, but which must be the subject, first, of integrated analysis, and then of action." U S Quarterly Bkl

"The ideas are not new, for the most part, but they are timely, and they are set forth with that combination of sympathetic insight, reasonableness, and leisurely learning that only John Gaus seems to bring to the discussion of public administration." G. A. Graham
+ Am Pol Sci R 41:999 O '47 700w

"Delightful little volume. . . The book would have been worth writing and listing as required reading by all public administration students if only for the idea contained in this one sentence: 'This analysis (of important problems and developments in public administration) leads to the conclusion that administration is intermingled with the entire process of government, and with the environment in which the people affected by the government exist.'" R. F. Harvey
+ Ann Am Acad 253:208 S '47 240w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:173 Je '47 200w

GAVIAN, MRS RUTH (WOOD), and others. Our changing social order. 3d ed 616p il $2.60 Heath

301 Sociology 47-5158

"A new edition of a very useful text and reference book. It incorporates the suggestions of teachers in every section of the U.S. Some chapters have been completely rewritten; others have been reorganized and simplified; all have been brought up-to-date. The half-tone illustrations are an important feature." (Preface) For earlier edition see Book Review Digest 1939. Index.

Booklist 44:136 D 1 '47

Social Studies 38:335 N '47 20w

GAY, MARGARET COOPER. How to live with a cat; with forewords by Norman H. Johnson and Sydney H. Coleman; il. by Roberta Macdonald. 267p $2.75 Simon & Schuster
636.8 Cats Agr46-341

A manual covering the care and feeding of cats, with added information on their history, on how to acquire them, on choice of breeds, etc., all enlivened with anecdotes of The Missus, Picklepuss, and Charlie.

Booklist 43:151 Ja 15 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p12 D 1 '46 50w

Cleveland Open Shelf p3 Ja '47

"Here's a permanent bit of property, which should become a standard."

+ Kirkus 14:451 S 1 '46 110w

GAY, ROMNEY, pseud. See Britcher, P.

GAYN, MARK J., and CALDWELL, JOHN COPE. American agent. 220p $3 Holt

940.542 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American. World war, 1939-1945—China 47-4325

John Caldwell, the son of American missionaries to China, was appointed as OWI agent in the southern coastal province of Fukien, to do propaganda work during World war II. Since he had been born in China and knew the dialect he was able to do a big job single-handed. His story is here reported as told to Mark Gayn.

Reviewed by Serrell Hillman

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Je 8 '47 280w

Kirkus 15:154 Mr 1 '47 160w

"Rather than a war story, this is a tale of human ingenuity, of amazing courage, smugglers, corruption in high places, intrigue, including pretty girls of assorted kinds. Sympathetic understanding of Chinese people. A story well worth telling, admirably told." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 72:885 Je 1 '47 120w

"A modest and unpretentious account of a hard-working and serious-minded young man who, despite painful illness, brought the message of America's war effort to a people longing for news of their great ally, it is a well told and entertaining narrative. But its chief interest lies in the glimpse it provides of the Chinese common man who so longed for post-war peace and freedom, and was not to find it." Richard Watts

+ New Repub 116:27 Je 23 '47 140w

Reviewed by Adie Suehsdorf

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 O 5 '47 550w

"Gayn's italicized pages of stage setting are uniformly knowledgeable and well written, and so is the bulk of Caldwell's own story in the first person, as Gayn put it together. Perhaps the only objection is an overdose of sentiment over Shirley-Gray, Caldwell's very missed Tennessee wife. Almost everyone overseas had it just as bad!" Robert Shaplen

+ N Y Times p21 Ag 3 '47 850w

"A doubly valuable story now when our legislators mock the value of fighting with words and ideas. It's a pity that he was not allowed to tell it without the intervention of Mark Gayn, who has adopted an artificial, stilted and self-consciously 'literary' technique which all but destroys the interest of Caldwell's invaluable report." A. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 Je 1 '47 120w

"The most impressive aspects of this book are its warm sympathy for the Chinese people, its utter rejection of a cynical attitude toward China, and its implicit assumption that the soundest course in working for Chinese-American friendship is to hold fast to a truly democratic policy. 'American Agent' should be read for these features as well as for its engrossing narrative, in which local color, humor, suspense, and the grimness of war have been mixed with an expert hand." L. K. Rosinger
+ Sat R of Lit 30:12 Je 14 '47 600w

GAYNOR, FRANK. International business dictionary in five languages; English, German, French, Spanish, Italian. 452p $6 Philosophical lib.

650.3 Commerce—Dictionaries, Economics—Dictionaries. Dictionaries, Polyglot 46-6171

"The preface states 'this Dictionary does not pretend to be "complete"—as no polyglot dictionary of this size and scope can ever be complete—yet the author and publisher feel that it will fulfill its purpose of furnishing . . . a practical handbook of the most currently used commercial words and phrases in the languages covered. The words and phrases included are those which several statistical frequency counts have shown to occur most frequently in actual commercial correspondence.' The main section, of 208 pages, is an alphabetically-arranged English vocabulary followed by the equivalent word in German, French, Spanish, and Italian. . . . The dictionary section is followed by sixteen pages of lists and tables. Names of the months, forms of writing dates, geographic names, monetary units, systems of measurement are given in the five languages. The remainder of the book consists of German, French, Spanish, and Italian indexes." Subscription Bks Bul

"The arrangement of the book is inconvenient for persons translating from a foreign language into English since complete information is given only in the English section. It is useful mainly for a translation from English into the foreign language. . . . The limited scope of the International Business Dictionary makes it of little real value to the large library where more comprehensive dictionaries are available. It is recommended only for libraries or individuals who will be satisfied with a very brief one-volume dictionary for the purpose of translating commercial phrases into German, French, Italian, or Spanish."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 18:6 Ja '47 550w

GEARHART, ROBERT HARRIS. Toward certainty. 92p $1.50 Assn. press

239 Christianity 47-3763

Brief study of the foundations of a satisfying Christian creed. The author has been a campus preacher and advisor for many years, and was a chaplain in the first world war.

Christian Century 64:495 Ap 16 '47 30w

"This intelligently presented way to certainty will fit a good many." A. L. Murray + Churchman 161:18 Jl '47 50w

"Here is a straight-forward, well developed argument in very readable English for a positive Christian faith." H. H. Wagner
+ Springfield Union p17 Je 27 '47 120w

GEIGER, GEORGE RAYMOND. Philosophy and the social order; an introductory approach. 407p $3.25 Houghton

100 Philosophy

"An introductory approach to philosophy by way of criticism and method instead of an objective one." (School & Society) Index.

"Students will certainly be led by this book to see some connection between philosophy and the social order, although it will be generalized scientific method rather than traditional philosophy with which they will become most acquainted. Teachers of elementary courses who like to argue with a textbook as well as to expound it will find plenty of opportunities in Philosophy and the Social Order. Its author is unusually generous and good-natured in his treatment of controversial matters, and his zeal for scientific humanism is likely to prove infectious." H. A. L.

J Philos 44:413 Jl 17 '47 1300w

School & Society 66:48 Jl 19 '47 20w

GEIRINGER, KARL. Haydn; a creative life in music. 342p il $5 Norton

B or 92 Haydn, Franz Joseph

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '47

"Dr. Karl Geiringer's new biography of Haydn is frequently a good and useful book, but it somehow evades being the really valuable book it deserved to be. The biographical section is well done—as a short, summary life; but short, summary biographies, even though more summary than the present one, are all we have ever had in English; it is time, and Dr. Geiringer is the necessary scholar, for a less terse account." C. B. Farrell

+ Nation 164:310 Mr 15 '47 1250w

"Mozart, Wagner and Schumann have had a goodly amount of biographical attention recently; but, oddly enough, Karl Geiringer's new book is the first full-length life and critical study of Joseph Haydn to appear in English in some forty years. It is a sound, lucid and thoroughly admirable achievement." M. C. Hastings

+ N Y Times p6 Mr 9 '47 700w

Times [London] Lit Sup p646 D 13 '47 1000w

"A thorough critical and historical treatment of Haydn must await the appearance of a 'definitive' biography, which this book makes no pretense of being."

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:37 Mr '47 250w

GEISEL, THEODOR SEUSS (DR SEUSS, pseud). McElligot's pool, written and il. by Dr Seuss. [56]p $2.50 Random house

47-4895

Pictures and rhyme tell the story of an imaginative boy who dreamed of all the strange and wonderful fish he might catch while he sat placidly dipping his rod into McElligot's pool.

"A natural for picture-book hours and for reading aloud."

+ Booklist 44:53 O 1 '47

"This time, prepare to chuckle under water for you'll be meeting the weirdest, wildest, funniest citizens of the deep which imagination can conjure." M. B. King

+ Chicago Sun Book Week O 18 '47 140w

"Three stars for this because it is funny and not just author's fancifulness but turns on a child's own fancy. . . . A pick-me-up for parents just to read it."

+ Commonweal 47:151 N 21 '47 100w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore

Horn Bk 23:436 N '47 80w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 24:34 Ja '48 70w

"Utterly enchanting nonsense tale, which children and grown-ups will equally claim."

+ Kirkus 15:502 S 15 '47 80w

"A picture book in rhyme, a book as divinely idiotic as the author-artist's And to Think That I Saw It on Mulberry Street. Grown-ups will have as much fun over the fish that the small fisherman MIGHT catch in McElligot's Pool as the children will. For all picture-book collections. (Not much use to mention substantial-looking binding)." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 72:1381 O 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 N 16 '47 250w

N Y Times p45 N 16 '47 130w

"Dr. Seuss's bizarre combination of nonsense and humor appeals to a special taste. Here he goes in for strange underwater life in lurid hues . . . with results that are probably not suited to the too literal child or the nervous swimmer." R. C. Benét

New Yorker 23:144 D 6 '47 70w

"Children will have nothing but admiration for this boy who heard that there were no fish in McElligot's Pool and then saw them swimming in from the sea."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:38 N 15 '47 160w

GEISMAR, MAXWELL DAVID. Last of the provincials: the American novel, 1915-1925: H. L. Mencken, Sinclair Lewis, Willa Cather, Sherwood Anderson, F. Scott Fitzgerald. 404p $3.50 Houghton

813.09 American fiction—History and criticism 47-11777

"In his searching examination of the 'literary mind' of America 'in its years of tension' (1920 to 1940, approximately), Maxwell Geismar has paused to study some curious and puzzling reflections of that mentality. The 'provincials' represented in this second volume of his critical series are H. L. Mencken, Sinclair Lewis, Willa Cather, Sherwood Anderson, and Scott Fitzgerald. It is not at all difficult to understand why Mr. Geismar classifies the four novelists as provincials. Each of them grew up in a small Midwestern or Western community and seemed almost to have been born with an official commission to chronicle its story. . . . Mencken was own brother to these imaginative artists." Sat R of Lit

Booklist 44:148 D 15 '47

Reviewed by Robert Berkleman
Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 10 '48 600w

"Of literary interest and argument."
Kirkus 15:456 Ag 15 '47 170w

"Excellent surveys. . . . Valuable aid in the study of the literature of the period." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 72:1371 O 1 '47 140w

"His style, sometimes easy, is generally uneven and unsure of itself, so that it is capable of being pulled in different directions by the styles of other critics. . . . As for Mr. Geismar's critical method, its weakness is that he depends entirely on an author's published work to explain his social attitudes. . . . It seems unfair to discuss Mr. Geismar's faults at length when other books not half so good as his are praised beyond measure. . . . His extremely sensitive judgments would be still better if they were based on the knowledge that can't be found in books." Malcolm Cowley

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 N 16 '47 1500w

"Personally I feel grateful to Mr. Geismar for rehashing native land, and I believe that his findings draw capably upon a consensus of opinion that has accumulated with the years. . . . He is a conscientious student, has excellent ideals, and he knows how writers should behave themselves. That he has become such a Yeasayer is most commendable; it does not bespeak much involvement or much imagination. Perhaps these will come as he continues his meritorious project and discovers that an understanding of Nay is also needed for an understanding of artists." Gerald Sykes

+ N Y Times p5 N 30 '47 700w

"We sometimes get the impression, for example, that he imagines the criticism of industrial society which figured so prominently in the literature of the thirties to have been something quite new in the American world instead of a revival of a point of view that had been equally articulate in the eighties, the nineties, and the early nineteen-hundreds. One need not worry about this, however, because the essays stand up by themselves. 'The Last of the Provincials' is a good deal better written than 'Writers in Crisis' was—though Mr. Geismar still slips sometimes in grammar and has not lost his addiction to jargon words." Edmond Wilson

+ New Yorker 23:57 D 27 '47 1600w

Reviewed by W. R. White
San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ja 4 '48 400w

"Mr. Geismar perceives virtues without being dazzled by their glitter; he discerns faults without seeming to gloat with veiled hostility. He writes casually and with epigrammatic vigor. It is not glitter that he himself is after in setting down a witty line but forceful compression. He discharges, in this book, some highly explosive judgments, but each seems to me to be admirably directed with sober and not at all vengeful control toward its mark." James Gray

+ Sat R of Lit 30:11 N 15 '47 1000w

GEORGE, ALBERT JOSEPH. The cap'n's wife. 130p il $2.50 Syracuse univ. press, 920 Irving av, Syracuse 10, N.Y.

910.4 Voyages and travels. Doane, Didama (Kelley) 47-1513

"Albert George's affectionate little book about Di Doane is based on the diary she kept during a two-year voyage made with her husband, Uriel, aboard the Rival from 1866 to 1868, and also on the log of the ship Granger, bound from Liverpool to Manila in 1877." N Y Times

Booklist 43:345 J1 1 '47

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Chicago Sun Book Week p4 F 2 '47 170w

"It is a book Mrs. Doane would have liked, I think—if, that is, Cape Codders could ever admit liking something written about themselves." M. C. Hastings

+ N Y Times p6 F 2 '47 1000w

GEORGE WESTINGHOUSE CENTENNIAL FORUM, PITTSBURGH, PENNSYLVANIA.
See Westinghouse educational foundation

GERAHTY, DIGBY GEORGE (ROBERT STANDISH, pseud.). Mr On Loong. 326p $3 Macmillan

47-1728

The story of John On Loong, the only Chinese on a West Indian island, after the death of his father. John had been trained in honesty by his honest father, so in time he became a more successful business man than the whites, who disliked him because of his color.

Booklist 43:256 Ap 15 '47

"A good deal of the engrossing interest of this story is due to the author's skillful handling of the tangled threads of human relationships that On Loong is caught in. . . . A thoroughly readable novel. And one which has an undercurrent of 'significance' that gives it social substance." Ricker Van Metre

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Mr 30 '47 380w

Christian Century 64:594 My 7 '47 120w

Reviewed by W. P. Sears
Churchman 161:17 Ap 15 '47 160w
Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '47

"Deceptively simple in the telling, Standish uses natural progression, emotion, sentiment, and characters, that in a fresh setting reflect a refreshing understanding of the passing scene."

+ Kirkus 15:42 Ja 15 '47 210w

"Interesting sidelight on socio-economic conditions with racial background." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 72:464 Mr 15 '47 80w

Reviewed by J. J. Espey
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 Ap 13 '47 850w

"What Mr. Standish has to say is probably accurate enough; it is a pity, though, that his theories have been submerged and cheapened in the routinely professional steps of the proof." B. V. Winebaum

N Y Times p20 Mr 30 '47 500w

"Mr. On Loong" was written primarily—and successfully—for entertainment. Yet for all the frangipani, the palms and the trade winds, the reader must face class and racial conflict in the West Indies, peasant starvation in China, decadence and corruption in Europe's high places. The author's quiet satire overlooks neither the immemorial ways of American cruise tourists nor the tragi-comic Colonel Blimps." A. F. Wolfe

+ Sat R of Lit 30:27 My 24 '47 400w

"It says much for Mr. Standish that whether his scene with its people is Government House in a British colony, the deck of a French schooner in the Caribbean, the home of a Chinese laundryman, the surroundings of a fashionable wanton in Paris or China of to-day, its peasants perishing through graft as well as famine, he is at ease. His simple narrative convinces a reader of a hidden reality."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p589 N 30 '46 430w

GERBER, WILL. Gooseberry Jones; il. by Dudley Morris. 96p $2 Putnam

47-30791

Gooseberry Jones is a little Negro boy whose main ambition is to own a dog. When he brings home a puppy against his mother's wishes the result is a near tragedy.

"It's a lovely book, tenderly and sympathetically written, and most unusual in plot and background. It will be a relief to colored parents to be able to put into their children's hands a book in which their race is not represented as idiotically childlike or unbearably oppressed, but lives normally and matter-of-factly." Jane Cobb
+ Atlantic 180:144 D '47 90w

"The characters in this story of Negro family life are so human and the region so well drawn that one more story of a boy's love for his dog will find many appreciative readers. The pictures add materially to the pleasure of reading the book." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:440 N '47 100w

Kirkus 15:339 J1 1 '47 130w

"Next time someone asks for the ten best dog stories I have read within ten years, this will be one of them. It is, of course, the story of a boy. That he and every one else in the book is colored is neither here nor there, save that as their lives are simpler they live more intensely." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 N 16 '47 430w

"In spite of well-drawn characters and lively incidents, this account of Negro life in the South does not altogether succeed in enlisting the sympathies of the reader—perhaps because of several rather implausible situations and because of illustrations resembling caricatures rather than flesh-and-blood people." Elizabeth Hodges

+ N Y Times p61 N 9 '47 140w

GERBER, WILLIAM. Domain of reality. 81p pa $1.50 King's crown press

111 Reality

A46-24

"This doctoral dissertation sets out to provide a definition of reality and of cognate terms, to demarcate the realm of reality, and hence to facilitate the solution of philosophical problems. In framing his definitions the author proposes to abide by three definitional postulates: A definition must 'provide an objective test of whether any given entity is or is not a representative of the concept being defined,' it must accord with usage 'as far as it can without vagueness and ambiguity,' and it must be neutral when the concept defined is a controversial one." J Philos

"Dr. Gerber's refusal to discuss many of the important problems suggested by, and usually associated with, his study will exasperate many readers who have had training in philosophy, but his chosen subject is itself important, and strict attention to a specific problem is a technique which has proved its value. It is sufficient compliment to say that anyone who gives this book a serious reading will be armed against the usual confusions attendant upon unreflective dicta concerning reality, and will have a wealth of suggestive material to aid his own further reflections." H. R. Holcomb
+ Crozer Q 24:78 Ja '47 900w

Reviewed by G. K. Plochmann
Ethics 57:306 J1 '47 270w

"Whether Dr. Gerber's definitions will prove helpful to philosophers will depend upon their subject, method, and purpose. Although the prevailing emphasis in the book is upon the necessity of contextual definitions, the definitions themselves are presented with the bare minimum of context. Scores of definitions are cited with no acknowledgment of the diverse systematic and purpose from which they arose. . . Yet it must be admitted that the author has done a creditable job, has written a book of enlightenment. The historical contexts of the definitions would have yielded more clarification, but would have called for a much more extensive study." V. J. McG.

+ J Philos 44:220 Ap 10 '47 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p326 Je 28 '47 350w

GERICAULT, JEAN LOUIS ANDRE THEODORE. Géricault; drawings and watercolors; by Klaus Berger. 34p 52pl $12 Bittner, H.

759.4 Paintings, French 47-192

"Théodore Géricault, who lived his short life (1791-1824) in the stormy post-revolutionary period in France and whose florid and grandiose style of painting was a perfect reflection of his times, has been too little known in the United States. This book, though limited to his drawings and water colors, should help correct the oversight." New Yorker

"Demonstrating something of the same compression as Géricault, Klaus Berger holds a steady searchlight to the drawings and watercolors—but not the paintings—of the French master. And he provides some fresh illumination upon his career. . . There was something leonine about this artist, and Mr. Berger has chosen his drawings (among which he also classes the watercolors) with sufficient aptitude to indicate it. He is also to be commended for the fact that no less than twenty-four of these pictures have not been published before. Sometimes, too, he shows a fine terse stroke in describing the essence of a drawing. . . One might have wished for further analysis as to why Géricault seemed to sink into some profounder dungeon after his Italian trip. . . Nevertheless, Mr. Berger has furnished us a thoughtful and cultivated book, and has been fortunate enough to secure excellent binding, format and reproductions. Géricault has been well-remembered in this volume and it should prompt in the English-reading public a much greater understanding of this tormented innovator." Jerome Melquist

+ N Y Times p7 My 4 '47 900w

"There are fifty-two excellent full-page illustrations in black-and-white, and Mr. Berger's brief text is precise and well documented."

+ New Yorker 22:86 Ja 11 '47 80w

"This volume . . . makes no attempt at a complete collection of drawings . . . but as there are important and hitherto unpublished drawings in America the selection was very well worth producing. Mr. Berger's introduction is helpful, and there is a good catalogue of the drawings reproduced."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p564 N 1 '47 750w

"Besides synthesizing in a terse fashion the results of previous studies, this unpretentious but thoroughly informed essay shows originality by concentrating on Géricault the designer, an aspect of the artist which is currently passed over in silence. . . The drawings of Géricault's English and post-English periods, the majority of which are to be found in American collections, are here brought together. The book will enlarge the view of those who think of Géricault as the author of a single great canvas—The Raft of the Medusa—and primarily as the painter of handsome horses, although some of his most extraordinary drawings of horses are also presented."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:2 Mr '47 290w

GHEON, HENRI. St Martin of Tours; tr. by F. J. Sheed [Eng title: Secret of St Martin] 180p $2 Sheed

B or 92 Martin, Saint, bp. of Tours 46-8454

A life of the fourth century saint who was the founder of a school of hermits, who was Bishop of Tours, healer of bodies and souls, and missionary to the pagans far outside the boundaries of his diocese.

Cath World 165:92 Ap '47 200w
Cleveland Open Shelf p19 S '47

GHEON, HENRI—Continued

"M. Ghéon has utilized this material to the full to present a well-rounded and impressive short biography, filled with love and anxiety for France, with her 3,500 churches dedicated to Saint Martin. . . M. Ghéon tells the story well and with patent feeling. Yet for all his well-labeled imaginary conversations and the wealth of biographical data at his hand, his life of Saint Martin, because of the passage of the centuries, has a formal almost archeological quality reminiscent of the much briefer saints' lives found in Matins throughout the Christian year." Edward Skillin

+ — Commonweal 45:261 D 20 '46 200w

"Mr. Ghéon correctly depicts Martin as a man of exceptional holiness and exceptional practical sense. But he may well be charged with excessive zeal for proving the saint's excellence a result of his long stay in Gaul. The French are indeed eminent in reason, but they have no monopoly of it." J. S. Kennedy

+ — N Y Times p45 Mr 16 '47 450w

GIBB, HAMILTON ALEXANDER ROSSKEEN.
Modern trends in Islam. 141p $2.50 Univ. of Chicago

297 Mohammedanism 47-1684

The Haskell lectures in comparative religion delivered at the University of Chicago in 1945. The author presents an analysis of the modernist trends and doctrines of Islam, and shows not only the historical justification, but also the inner weaknesses. Index.

"Sound organization and clear style give this scholarly study real value for the general reader." J. T. Frederick

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Mr 16 '47 50w

"Professor Gibb's interest as a learned Arabist rests more immediately upon Islam itself. In this brief but masterly discussion he points at 'trends.' His book must delight the specialist and is bound to satisfy the general student of religion. It is an excellent and competent survey." J. C. Archer

+ Christian Century 64:592 My 7 '47 700w

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell
Churchman 161:19 Je 15 '47 300w
Cleveland Open Shelf p19 S '47

Reviewed by P. K. Hitti
Crozer Q 24:278 Jl '47 600w
Current Hist 12:499 My '47 70w
Foreign Affairs 26:228 O '47 20w

"Sympathetic as he is to the effort of a selected minority of Moslem thinkers to draw Islam out of its present lag and rescue the most advanced among its followers from their inferiority complex in regard to the Christian world, [the author] emphasizes, nevertheless, the confusion of their thought, the inadequacy of their theological background and, more than anything else, their lack of historical insight." G. L. Della Vida

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20 Ap 20 '47 650w

"This scholarly book is warmly recommended as an introduction for the general reader, even though it assumes some acquaintance with elementary but unfamiliar special terms." T. V. Motter

+ N Y Times p23 Je 22 '47 400w
School & Society 65:253 Ap 5 '47 20w
U S Quarterly Bk 3:142 Je '47 220w

GIBBS, ARTHUR HAMILTON. Way of life. 346p $2.75 Little

47-5148

"The love story of a young American paratrooper and an English girl, the daughter of a crippled veteran of the preceding war. Their struggle to realize themselves and to achieve individual happiness in a crazy world in which they are but minute human beings, but atoms of good will, is unfolded against the background of the disillusion and disappointments of the generation of a quarter-century before. The action takes place in a small English village."

"Mr. Gibbs has written a tribute to the soundness of this newest war generation, less bitter and at the same time more knowing than their fathers'. As counterpoint to a simple love story, there are italicized passages preceding the chapters, odd flashes and snapshots of the more sordid corners of the recent conflict, of any conflict. Mr. Gibbs's hatred of war, his admiration and hope for the young, and his belief in life itself make his novel more than the pleasant reading of its surface—it is all on the side of the angels." Dorothy Hillyer

+ Atlantic 180:144 O '47 420w

Booklist 44:68 O 15 '47

Cath World 166:285 D '47 210w

Reviewed by Leslie Waller

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 S 14 '47 450w

"The story develops simply and humanly. The conversations between the characters convey the author's great hatred of war, his consciousness of its futility and folly. There is vigor in his denunciations, in his restraint and in his simplifications. At times he seems to be lecturing or sermonizing. This may detract from his art, but his sentiments can bear repetition. His irony is often bitter in its dramatic contrasts and shocking juxtapositions." L. E. Cannon

+ — Christian Century 64:1177 O 1 '47 550w

Christian Science Monitor p18 S 10 '47 500w

"'Way of Life' purports to be a novel. In the sense that it ostensibly follows that form, it is a faint, not very perceptive love story meant for magazine appearance among the refrigerator ads, and for no further permanence. The romantic history of Bill Thatcher, GI stationed in England, and the pleasant young English girl who becomes his wife cannot honestly be said to be worth two hours of anybody's reading time. Actually, the book is one long angry editorial." Riley Hughes

— Commonweal 46:629 O 10 '47 190w

Kirkus 15:373 Jl 15 '47 150w

"Beautifully-written book about and against war. . . Perhaps there is too much preaching, but if all people felt as eloquently and strongly about peace as do the sensitive characters in this worthwhile book, there would not be another war. Highly recommended." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 72:1194 S 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p17 S 14 '47 50w

"While Mr. Gibbs is no realist (despite explicit chapter interludes of grim headlines, excerpts and commentaries) his tremendous sincerity does sift down between the platitudes. It is this sincerity which gives the book some worth." Judith Paige

+ — N Y Times p26 O 12 '47 290w

New Yorker 23:120 S 13 '47 70w

"The plot is simple and logical enough, but the reader has to plow through a mass of sentimental twaddle to find it." Edith James

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p24 S 14 '47 400w

"Unfortunately, none of Major Gibbs's four principal characters ever quite come alive; the dialogue is stilted, old-fashioned, and always a little painful, and somehow, the American G.I.'s in these pages, while they might have been perfectly at home in 1918, seem hopelessly out of place to anyone who knew the G.I.'s who were in Europe in the 1940's. They are, all of them, more puppets than people, more caricatures than characters. . . I do know that, for all his good intentions, Major Gibbs has failed in 'Way of Life' to say anything significant about a man like Bill Thatcher." Merle Miller

— Sat R of Lit 30:11 S 20 '47 500w

GIBSON, KATHARINE. More Pictures to grow up with [ed. by Bryan Holme]. 144p $3.50 Studio

759 Paintings—Juvenile literature 47-30077

A second volume of Pictures to Grow Up With (Book Review Digest 1942). There are eight reproductions in full color, and many black and white reproductions on every page, with descriptive data. The book is in six sections: Animals and birds; The artist tells a story; Outdoors; Indoors; Boys and girls; and The artist dreams a dream.

Booklist 43:192 F 15 '47

"This excellent selection of some 120 pictures includes many which children will later see in the original and recognize with real excitement. . . The fascination does not end with one looking and over the years this will become a well-thumbed volume." Martha King
+ Chicago Sun Book Week p16 F 9 '47 180w

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 J1 '47

Reviewed by E. W. Turpin
+ Library J 72:323 F 15 '47 60w

"A thoughtful child will certainly look long at these pictures one by one, and think as he looks." M. L. Becker
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 Ja 12 '47 180w

"Following much the same pattern as 'Pictures to Grow Up With,' this companion volume also repeats its predecessor's excellence. . . Nobody is going to like all of them—a fact which Miss Gibson candidly admits, saying in her preface, 'Now what you like or don't like is strictly your own affair. No one has the right to tell you what to like,' which is as sensible and disarming an introduction as we have seen to a field too often hedged about with misguided precepts." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p27 D 15 '46 230w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét
New Yorker 23:153 D 6 '47 80w

"This second volume of 'Pictures to Grow Up With' is even better than the first. . . The book is well designed and is printed on smooth, heavy paper. It is a very good investment, not only in art but in knowledge of a world that artists have interpreted." M. G. D.
+ Sat R Lit 30:30 Ja 18 '47 100w

GIBSON, WALTER BROWN. Professional magic for amateurs. 225p il $3.50 Prentice-Hall

793.8 Conjuring 47-4834

"Presents fifty ways to mystify, each treated as a separate unit with a description of the effect desired and method used, notes on presentation and explanatory drawings. Begins with simple close-up magic and ends with six famous stage illusions requiring elaborate paraphernalia and beyond the skill of most amateurs. Includes tricks with cards, string, matches, coins, etc., and mental magic." (Library J) No index.

Booklist 44:147 D 15 '47

Kirkus 15:380 J1 15 '47 90w

"Recommended." R. O. Bostwick
+ Library J 72:1116 Ag '47 70w

GIDE, ANDRE PAUL GUILLAUME. Journals, v 1: 1889-1913; tr. from the French, with an introd. and notes by Justin O'Brien. 380p $5 Knopf

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (47-30956)

The first of three proposed volumes, translated from the journals of André Gide. Volume one covers the years 1889-1913. The entries begin when Gide was twenty years old, and record his daily activities, notes for his novels, his travels, friendships, and his life in Paris.

Reviewed by Theodore Spencer
Atlantic 180:166 N '47 1000w

Booklist 44:67 O 15 '47

"This first English translation of the celebrated Gide's diary should be of interest not only in literary circles, but also in those of art and philosophy. In fact, even the student of human nature will find much to pore over and digest." Roy Hillbrook
+ Current Hist 13:292 N '47 900w

Kirkus 15:449 Ag 15 '47 170w

Reviewed by R. E. Kingery
Library J 72:1266 S 15 '47 130w

Reviewed by Louise Bogan
Nation 165:412 O 18 '47 1500w

Reviewed by John Farrelly
New Repub 117:30 S 15 '47 1350w

"Publication of these journals, splendidly translated and copiously annotated by Mr. O'Brien, is an important event. . . That the journals are indispensable to our understanding of Gide's books is clear; it should also be said that an acquaintance with his books enormously enriches a reading of the journals. Books and journals form separate parts of a total work, but they are finally interdependent. The present volume of the journals reveals how early in his career Gide became aware of a messianic vocation." Lloyd Morris

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 S 14 '47 2000w

"The current volume has been translated with great distinction by Justin O'Brien. . . It is all that a Journal should be: often thoughtful and intimate, just as often bored and gossipy, or sombre, or amused, or detached, or vivacious; instinctively well-paced (in the modulations of short and long passages and shifts of key); a mirror reflecting impeccably the artistic milieu of a stimulating period. And underneath it all, like a ground bass supporting the variations above, is a superior intelligence." Harvey Breit

+ N Y Times p1 S 14 '47 1500w
New Yorker 23:101 S 20 '47 180w

"Far beyond the witty epigram and the delightful anecdote, which are also here, Gide's observations upon his colleagues pierce deep into those organic creative fibres which for decades have made France the leading world influence upon Western art and letters." Kenneth Scholes

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 O 5 '47 1600w

"This authoritative and intelligent edition of André Gide's early journals is a happy literary event." Maxwell Geismar

+ Sat R of Lit 30:12 S 20 '47 1050w

Reviewed by Goronwy Rees
Spec 179:654 N 21 '47 1250w
Time 50:108 S 22 '47 750w

GIESE, WILLIAM FREDERIC, tr. French lyrics in English verse; with a foreword by Frederick Manchester. 394p $4 Univ. of Wis. press

841.08 French poetry—Translations into English 46-11921

Anthology of French poems, old and new, translated into idiomatic English. Biographical notes and index of French titles.

Booklist 43:251 Ap 15 '47

"One of the most enjoyable and satisfying poetry collections of the past 12 months is a volume of translations. . . Beyond doubt, this collection of 'French Lyrics in English Verse' is the work of a poet." Pearl Strachan

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 1 '47 1000w

Wis Lib Bul 43:52 Mr '47

GIESECKE, FREDERICK ERNEST. Hot-water heating and radiant heating and radiant cooling. [282p] il $4 Tech. bk. co, box 62, Austin, Tex.

697 Heating. Hot water heating 47-2283

"Practical information on the design and mechanics of hot water heating systems developed from author's research on water as used in heating buildings; an excellent section on radiant heating and cooling. Illustrated with drawings, diagrams, facts and figures." Library J

Booklist 44:6 S 1 '47

Eng N 139:135 J1 10 '47 80w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:1038 J1 '47 40w
N Y New Tech Bks 32:51 J1 '47

GILBERT, ANTHONY, pseud. See Malleson, L. E.

GILBERT, EDWIN. Squirrel cage. 256p $2.75
Doubleday

47-31284

A New York playwright who had had some success in New York undertook a Hollywood job. His disillusionment became complete when he learned how thoroughly he had been double crossed by a beautiful young co-worker. He took a bitter revenge and headed back for New York.

"A familiar arena of amusement and amazement again providing both, with the added virtue of credibility of characterization."

+ Kirkus 15:403 Ag 1 '47 120w

Reviewed by Richard Mealand

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 O 5 '47 470w

Reviewed by Bosley Crowther

N Y Times p24 O 12 '47 800w

"As a compendium of information on Hollywood jargon and mores, the book has a certain clinical interest, but the author's major purpose—to give the film people a sound literary thrashing—has been carried out with greater sting and dexterity in many other novels."

+ New Yorker 23:105 O 4 '47 120w

Reviewed by James Edin

San Francisco Chronicle p10 N 30 '47 160w

GILBERT, G. M. Nuremberg diary. 471p $5
Farrar, Straus

341.4 War crimes—Trials 47-4157

The author was prison psychologist at the Nuremberg trial of the Nazi war criminals. As such it was his "principal duty to maintain close daily contact with the prisoners in order to keep the prison commandant, Colonel B. C. Andrus, aware of the state of their morale, and to help in any way possible to assure their standing trial with orderly discipline. [He] also collaborated with the psychiatric commissions and the prison psychiatrist in any mental examinations that were required." (Intro p3)

Reviewed by L. L. Snyder

Am Hist R 53:166 O '47 340w

Current Hist 13:227 O '47 60w

Kirkus 15:115 F 15 '47 170w

"Excellent insight given into mentality of Nazi leadership by this objective work. Valuable to historian, psychologist, politician, and genuine contribution to understanding of Nazism so necessary for prevention of future Fascist outbursts. Should be translated into German and other languages. Highly recommended for public and special libraries." H. H. A. Bernt

+ Library J 72:458 Mr 15 '47 140w

Reviewed by Albert Guérard

Nation 165:231 S 6 '47 1350w

"Although much has been written about the Nuremberg trials, this book is original in form and content. . . Such material as this book presents, unsensational and without glib generalizations, fills a definite gap." Frederic Wertham

+ N Y Times p10 JI 13 '47 650w

"The author lets the defendants talk for themselves and intrudes himself into the picture very little. The result is a mass of quotations that have the phantasmagoric quality of a sinister 'Through the Looking-Glass,' in which reasoning and logic run backward."

New Yorker 23:98 Je 14 '47 120w

Reviewed by Paul Speegle

San Francisco Chronicle p19 JI 13 '47 500w

"This valuable contribution results from the intimate experiences of Captain Gilbert, psychologist, with the top war criminals of Germany during their trial. Possessed of a thorough knowledge of German, Captain Gilbert was able to deal with these people freely in their own idiom and to listen to their conversations among themselves during the lunch hour recess and after the day's session was over." R. M. Brickner

+ Sat R of Lit 30:13 Je 28 '47 1000w

GILBERT, KENNETH. Bird dog bargain; drawings by Ernest Norling. 200p $2.50 Holt
Dogs—Legends and stories 47-30422

Story of a boy who was given a gun-shy bird dog. With the help of an old trapper who was also a dog trainer, the boy works patiently with Wingover until the dog wins honors in the field trials. Contains detailed descriptions of training bird dogs. Grades five to eight.

Booklist 44:20 S 1 '47

Churchman 161:17 D 1 '47 50w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '47

"The story has action and suspense and contains valuable hints as to the best ways of teaching bird dogs. These are admirably discussed by a writer who has had firsthand experience in dog training. The pictures are no less thoroughly informed." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:362 S '47 100w

"The plot is really just some machinery for detailed dog training, of a specialized, very interesting kind. And this detailed retriever information is helped by the boy and dog friendship story. A final chapter of specific instructions on dog training gives this book special value."

+ Kirkus 15:165 Mr 15 '47 120w

Library J 72:1619 N 15 '47 70w

"Steadily sustained suspense carries on a story of a great dog's progress. It is that of a real dog of the same name, the author's pride and joy." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 O 12 '47 400w

Reviewed by Frances Smith

N Y Times p43 O 26 '47 180w

"This is an excellent story of the North woods with a final chapter that tells exactly how to train a bird dog."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:35 S 6 '47 80w

Wis Lib Bul 43:135 O '47

GILBRETH, MRS LILLIAN EVELYN (MOLLER), and COOK, ALICE RICE. Foreman in manpower management. 199p $2.50 McGraw

658.3124 Foreman, Employment management 47-3147

"This book stresses the importance of the human factor in today's dealings between employees and representatives of management. It supplies the foreman with instructions and advice for setting up and maintaining conditions which both enable and inspire his workers to function at top efficiency." (Publisher's note) Index.

Booklist 43:342 JI 1 '47

"Good book on foreman training." L. A. Eales

+ Library J 72:389 Mr 1 '47 60w

"The volume will bring about no rapid reformation; nor can it be read profitably in one sitting; nor does it have the answers for psychopathically unfit management leaders; nor will it provide the solution to all labor problems. It will, however, greatly increase leadership acumen; and it can be well used as a pattern for improving organization and leadership techniques." C. F. Mugridge

+ — Management R 36:496 S '47 480w

GILES, BARBARA. Gentle bush. 552p $3.50
Harcourt

47-30271

"A chronicle of an enormous aristocratic family of Louisiana planters in whom, in spite of the fact that the time is the early nineteenth century, the old slave-beating strain is still dominant. Against a picturesque background of grandmothers, uncles, aunts, and cousins, all frozen in family pride and privilege, two liberal members of the clan—a girl and a young man—come to realize, at least to a degree, their responsibilities in a modern world." New Yorker

Booklist 43:290 My 15 '47

"A full-flavored period regional novel—an exciting first novel."

+ Kirkus 15:222 Ap 15 '47 180w

"Vivid descriptions, sympathetic character drawing and a love of the land are not wholly successful in producing an outstanding novel."

R. P. Tubby

+ — Library J 72:732 My 1 '47 70w

"A brilliant portrait of an era." Coleman Rosenberger

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 My 11 '47 1100w

"The externals, at least, of plantation and village life are described skillfully. Yet as a definitive picture of a time and place 'The Gentle Bush' is incomplete, tailored to a pattern of Miss Giles' devising. Not only are the Durels as a family lacking in humanity and feeling, but the Cajuns and Negroes whom the Durels scorn and oppress are, conversely, almost entirely innocent of human failings and weaknesses." N. K. Burger

— + N Y Times p20 My 4 '47 650w

"Miss Giles gives us some warm and pretty pictures of Louisiana plantation life (as well as some nasty ones), but she takes a long, long time to say merely that human rights are in the end stronger than the rights of seigniority."

+ — New Yorker 23:117 My 3 '47 130w

"The book has some unwieldy technical faults. But Barbara Giles brings to her writing the fresh faith of youth and a fineness of perception. In spite of the book's length, its final impression is one of 'a swift reaching upward.'" Jane Voiles

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p16 My 7 '47 750w

Wis Lib Bul 43:118 Jl '47

GILKYSON, THOMAS WALTER. Toward what bright land. 522p $3 Scribner 47-30644

Character study of the adolescence and young manhood of a wealthy Philadelphian in the years following the Civil war.

"As a novel, it is long spun and slow paced; as a period piece, within memory range of those beyond middle age, it has a quiet sort of charm. But I can't see it reaching a very extensive market, outside the locale, where it will sell."

Kirkus 15:348 Jl 1 '47 260w

"Ordinary picture of young man's slight development to the age of twenty-one. Locale descriptions most interesting part." H. G. Kelley

Library J 72:1107 Ag '47 80w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 S 7 '47 280w

Reviewed by Leo Gurko

N Y Times p16 D 14 '47 500w

"Mr. Gilkyson has not much that is original, or even important, to say, but he gives an interesting picture of upper-class American life in the last century, and there is something rather affecting in his naïve portrait of a high-minded youth who finds he is made of less heroic stuff than he had thought. Although the novel is leisurely beyond belief, the story is not dull."

+ — New Yorker 23:66 Ag 30 '47 130w

"Toward What Bright Land" is easy, enjoyable reading. Mr. Gilkyson has been skillful with his Pennsylvania background and altogether brilliant with several of the lesser figures of his story. And, indubitably, there are stuffy people in this world. There is no reason why one of them should not be the protagonist of a new novel." E. D. Doyle

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p22 S 14 '47 400w

"After reasonable consideration, I have decided that our author confuses circumlocution with subtlety, and that, after all, the occasional bright figures and sharp penetrations which spot his rather spotty book, may be accounted for by saying that if you stab often enough and hard enough, in the course of five-hundred and twenty-two pages, you are bound to hit something. . . While Mr. Gilkyson's novel is not essentially dull, there are certainly moments at which his straining prose and philosophic turns become rather tedious." N. G. Chaikin

— + Sat R of Lit 30:11 S 13 '47 700w

GILLET, LUCY HOLCOMB. Nutrition in public health. 303p il $2.75 Saunders

613.2 Nutrition. Diet Med47-434

"Interprets the essentials of nutrition from the public health point of view. The discussion of food customs of people of the Near East, Czechoslovakians, Italians, Jews, Poles, Puerto Ricans, and southern Negroes is particularly good. It outlines commendable customs as well as those which are likely to need attention." J Home Econ

"In addition to the public health nurse, the book will be useful for any person teaching nutrition to families. Many laymen would also find it a helpful guide for better nutrition." L. T. Dudgeon

+ Am J Pub Health 37:466 Ap '47 150w

"Public health nurses and other public health workers will find this well-written and authoritative book most helpful. . . Miss Gillett's long experience with the New York City Community Service Society has given her an unexcelled background for the last three chapters, devoted to the food budget." C. S. Hurley

+ J Home Econ 39:302 My '47 100w

GILLHAM, CHARLES EDWARD. Raw North; il. by Bob Hines. 275p $3.75 Barnes, A.S.

917.12 Arctic regions. Eskimos 47-4281

As a biologist for the United States department of the Interior the author spent seven years in Alaska and Northern Canada. This account of his experiences is full of anecdotes, conversations, and even some tall tales. No index.

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Je 1 '47 70w

"Strong masculine appeal, but probably wouldn't be missed in most collections." R. E. Kingery

Library J 72:805 My 15 '47 90w

Wis Lib Bul 43:172 D '47

GILMAN, BARBARA. Puritan image. 271p $2.50 Doubleday

47-3264

Novel showing the effects of the old school New England attitude on the lives of several people. Ellen Ridgely still lived in the past where family and breeding were gods. Her son, Ridgely, was so tied to his mother that it was making a failure of his marriage, until his quiet, understanding wife took the reins in her own hands. Prue, Ellen's daughter, failed to hold her husband, another scion of an aristocratic family. After her divorce a more normal marriage claimed her.

Kirkus 15:107 F 15 '47 150w

"An entertaining story. . . Conservative librarians should read before purchase." M. P. McKay

Library J 72:638 Ap 15 '47 70w

"'Puritan Image' is a subtle and incisive study of a strong-willed woman who rules her family as long as she lives. Even when illness robs her of her faculties, there is no escape from the discipline of habit. Barbara Gilman's first novel is perceptive and mature, finding new values in the venerable Back Bay family formula." Lisle Bell

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p21 Ap 27 '47 180w

GILMAN, COBURN, ed. Week-end book of travel. See Travel (periodical)

GILMORE, HORACE HERMAN. Model planes for beginners; il. with drawings and diagrams by the author. rev ed 95p $1.50 Harper

629.1334 Airplane models 47-5842

"Revised edition. Clear instructions with step-by-step patterns for building solid models of ten well-known American war planes. There are also chapters on identification of planes and insignia, and hints on maintaining a good 'workshop.' If additional material is needed for beginners, this will serve very well." (Library J) Index. For first edition see Book Review Digest 1942.

Booklist 44:39 S 15 '47

Reviewed by Elizabeth Johnson
Library J 72:1278 S 15 '47 60w
Sat R of Lit 30:58 N 15 '47 20w
Wis Lib Bul 43:158 N '47

GIORDANI, IGINO. Mary of Nazareth; a true portrait; tr. from the Italian by Mother Clella Maranzana and Mother Mary Paula Williamson, 185p $2.75 Macmillan

232.931 Mary, Virgin 47-6427

A study of the life of the Virgin Mary, and an interpretation of her significance in the Christian religion.

Christian Century 64:1398 N 19 '47 120w
Kirkus 15:536 S 15 '47 120w

Reviewed by E. M. Tainton
San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 16 '47 50w

GISEVIUS, HANS BERND. To the bitter end; tr. from the German by Richard and Clara Winston. 632p $4 Houghton

943.086 Germany—Politics and government. Germany—Nazi movement. World war, 1939-1945—Germany 47-5861

An account of the anti-Hitler movement within Germany from 1933 to 1945. The author was one of a small group of German conservatives who secretly plotted against the Nazis from the beginning, and is one of the few survivors of the assassination plot of 1944. Index.

Reviewed by J. H. Powers
Atlantic 180:134 O '47 600w

Reviewed by Alfred Werner
Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Ag 10 '47 1050w

"His is a tempered document. Here, indeed, is one of the great personal mystery stories of the war. Yet Mr. Gisevius is almost matter-of-fact in his account of such dynamite as the co-operation with the plotters of Admiral Wilhelm Canaris, chief of German Counter Intelligence. . . This is more than an historical judgment; it is a warning for the future." Charles Gratke

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Ag 28 '47 700w

Reviewed by M. A. Fitzsimons
Commonweal 46:580 S 26 '47 800w
Current Hist 13:293 N '47 70w
Kirkus 15:300 Je 1 '47 170w

"The name Gisevius, hitherto unknown to fame, is destined to be remembered as long as men esteem human freedom. . . Julius Streicher on the witness stand at Nuremberg snarlingly denounced Gisevius as a 'traitor.' It is characteristic of Gisevius and the movement for which he speaks that he neither attempts to contest this hollow libel nor to exploit it for the tribute implicit in its source. He simply tells the honest story of the fight waged by men of conscience against an evil despotism. Save for a mild leaning toward verbosity he tells it with a vividness and felicity of style which place his work among the distinguished memoirs of history." W. E. Jackson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Ag 10 '47 1250w

"This is one of the most revealing inside stories to come out of Nazi Germany." Konrad Heiden

+ N Y Times p3 Ag 17 '47 900w

"An intimate, unadorned history of the Third Reich and, entirely incidentally, a very exciting spy-and-counterspy story."

+ New Yorker 23:87 Ag 16 '47 60w

Reviewed by F. L. Ford

Sat R of Lit 30:17 Ag 9 '47 850w

School & Society 66:254 S 27 '47 30w

"Readers may balk at the rightist, sometimes self-righteous tone of his book, but they will find it by far the fullest account to date of anti-Hitler plotting."

Time 50:98 Ag 18 '47 460w

GLADWIN, HAROLD STERLING. Men out of Asia; with a foreword by Earnest A. Hooton; il. by Campbell Grant. (Whittlesey house publication; Science-for-the-layman ser.) 390p $4 McGraw

970.1 Indians—Origins. Man, Prehistoric 47-11680

A wittily written account of the probable origins of the early American civilization. The author is an anthropologist who is known for his technical writings on the Southwest. The illustrations are in the same tradition as the text. Index.

Booklist 44:170 Ja 1 '48

"Easy reading but a wrong medium, a wrong approach, to command due attention." — + Kirkus 15:494 S 1 '47 120w

"This is not the place for rigorous criticism. However, the reviewer cannot refrain from commenting upon the implicit racism in much of Gladwin's thought. He comes back and back to the theme that American Indians could not have produced great cultural inventions. This is essentially naive. . . Gladwin writes well. The illustrations by Campbell Grant are altogether charming." Clyde Kluckhohn

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 D 14 '47 500w

"The dawdling excursions into speculations on American pre-history necessarily detract from the documentary value of this book. The illustrations (rather bumptious and ribald caricatures) do not detract from Mr. Gladwin's otherwise witty and provocative style." Gitel Poznanski

+ — N Y Times p14 N 30 '47 800w

"It is surprising fun to meet anthropology away from its $64 words, unbending in chuckles and undignified laughter." Eleanor Breed

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 D 28 '47 450w

Reviewed by H. L. Shapiro

Sat R of Lit 31:12 Ja 24 '48 1150w

GLASSSTONE, SAMUEL. Thermodynamics for chemists. 522p $5 Van Nostrand

536.7 Thermodynamics 47-1607

"This new textbook has the characteristics of thoroughness and clarity which have come to be expected in the books of this author. It offers an extended treatment of thermodynamics from the viewpoint of chemistry and particularly chemical engineering. A considerable number of problems are worked out in the text, and a larger number of exercises are included for solution by the student. The discussions of the applications of statistical methods to problems in chemical thermodynamics are a special feature." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"The reviewer and his colleagues feel that, on the whole, the author has done a good job in providing a well-written textbook and in presenting the material in a clear and understandable fashion. . . The reviewer is glad to recommend this book for study by all chemists and chemical engineers who use chemical thermodynamics in teaching or in actual experimental practice. While this book cannot be expected to satisfy all readers, any more than any other book can, every reader of it will benefit in some way." F. D. Rossini

+ — Chem & Eng N 25:2590 S 6 '47 600w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:389 Mr 1 '47 20w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:19 Ja '47

GLICK, CARL, and HUNG, SHENG-HUA. Swords of silence; Chinese secret societies, past and present. (Whittlesey house publication) 292p $2.75 McGraw

366 Secret societies. China—History 47-31350

"A popular history of the Hung League from its foundation to the present, with special emphasis placed on its role in the overthrow of the Manchu dynasty and Sun Yat-sen's attempts to use the society in promoting revolution." (N Y Times) Bibliography. Index.

Kirkus 15:387 Jl 15 '47 170w

"The story of the Manchus' overthrow is told here directly and with considerable liveliness. . . . Some passages come close to giving the impression that almost everyone in China is a member of the society and an active revolutionary. Perhaps the book is most unconvincing when it tries to make a case for the unity of the many local offshoots of the central society during certain periods. But these are minor faults, and most readers will find themselves absorbed in the story of the violent events that led to the downfall of the Manchus and in the details of the relations between Sun Yat-sen and Chiang Kai-shek." J. J. Espey

+ — N Y Times p20 N 2 '47 550w

"The book kept having a slightly hollow ring, so I phoned a Chinese friend for his opinion. 'I'd rate it 75 per cent fiction dressed up as historical fact,' he said promptly. . . . 'Nobody who knows anything about China would take this book seriously. The danger is that a lot who don't may.'" Eleanor Breed

— San Francisco Chronicle p21 O 12 '47 700w

Spring'd Republican p9B N 9 '47 130w

GLIDDEN, FREDERICK DILLEY (LUKE SHORT, pseud). Station west. 220p $2.50 Houghton

Western story.

Booklist 44:135 D 1 '47

Kirkus 15:349 Jl 1 '47 50w

"'Station West' is recommended to all who enjoy a good Western." Hoffman Birney

+ N Y Times p27 Ag 10 '47 230w

Wis Lib Bul 43:120 Jl '47

GLOAG, JOHN EDWARDS. Industrial art explained. rev & enl ed 248p il $3.75 Macmillan

745 Art industries and trade. Design, Industrial [47-16476]

"When this book was first published in 1934 it consisted of eight chapters, an introduction, which examined the case for an Academy of Design, forty-one line drawings in the text and sixteen plates of half-tone illustrations. It was written before I had visited the United States and had acquired first hand experience of the operation of industrial design in America. When I was invited to prepare a revised edition, I soon realised that the book demanded re-writing. It has been re-written, and little of the original text remains. Four fresh chapters have been added, the introduction omitted. . . . new black and white illustrations collected from contemporary sources or specially drawn for the text, and the number of plates increased to forty-eight, including some in colour. Not only the size, but the scope of the book has thus been enlarged, though its basic intention remains unaltered, which is to explain the character of industrial art so that its manifestations may be recognised and appraised and its possibilities understood and explored." (Foreword) Bibliography. Index.

"Mr. Gloag has a great many sensible things to say, and all manufacturers should read him. He suffers from the fashionable delusions that the eighteenth century could do no wrong and that the adjective 'romantic' is the most damning in the English language. But reformers draw their strength from such minor delusions, and the moral of Mr. Gloag's book is not invalidated by these two."

+ — Manchester Guardian p3 S 18 '46 190w

Reviewed by J. Betjeman

New Statesman & Nation 32:286 O 19 '46 1350w

"This book made a welcome and timely reappearance just as the star of British industrial design ascends spectacularly at the Victoria and Albert Museum in the Britain Can Make It exhibition. It was first published twelve years ago when industry was struggling out of the great depression and when the wilderness of bad design echoed with fewer reforming voices than it does today. Mr. Gloag deserves a considerable share of the credit for such improvement as has taken place over this period, for although his writings have lacked the depth, cogency and consistency of the Reads and Pevsners he has proved a shrewd and fluent advocate-general. . . . As a concise and factual guide to the development of commercial art and industrial architecture, and as a practical primer of the ways and means of design, it is reliable and most valuable. The author's first-hand experience of commerce and industry helps him to avoid the major follies of the pure theorists." Bernard Hollowood

+ Spec 177:318 S 27 '46 750w

GLOAG, JOHN EDWARDS, and WORNUM, GEORGE GREY. House out of factory. 144p il $3 Macmillan

728 Buildings, Prefabricated [47-1083]

"The author of this small volume is a strong advocate of the prefabricated or factory-built house. He describes the materials used and outlines the constructional principles which have been followed in various countries, particularly in England and the United States. Other chapters discuss the merits of the prefabricated house from the point of view of lasting qualities, comfort, appearance, cost and suitability for mass production." N Y New Tech Bks

Eng N 139:135 Jl 10 '47 50w

"Although the author's chief purpose is to advance the prefabricated house as one way out of the British housing shortage, the book is worth adding to any collection on modern housing because of the light it throws on the current state of the prefabricated house in England."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 32:51 Jl '47

Times [London] Lit Sup p646 D 28 '46 260w

GOBLE, GEORGE WASHINGTON. Design of democracy. 248p $2.75 Univ. of Okla. press

342.733 U.S.—Politics and government—20th century. Industry and state 46-7675

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

"Embedded in this generally accepted material are both philosophical assumptions and working conclusions that will be challenged from various quarters. . . . The book will be a useful introduction to democratic thinking along lines very slightly left of center, for the use of young persons and of others needing a simplified presentation. It has very little to offer that is new; but this lack is not serious in a book described as a 'primer.' The chief fault of the volume is its monotonous style; the chief virtue, its genuine concern for the democratic way of life." M. E. Oatman

Am Pol Sci R 41:603 Je '47 380w

Reviewed by O. P. Field

Ann Am Acad 252:115 Jl '47 550w

Reviewed by C. J. Friedrich

Columbia Law R 47:872 Jl '47 550w

Current Hist 12:151 F '47 80w

GOBLE, G. W.—Continued

"Far from being petty plodding in a 'wilderness of single instances,' this is democratic philosophy on a high plane. It has been said that modern legalists, unlike public-minded lawyers of the eighteenth century, have, in a money-mad society, missed their opportunity to become great intellectual leaders. Not so Professor Goble, for in this book he takes his place with legal thinkers who see the law as an instrument of justice and democracy as a thing of the people." J. O. Monroe

+ Ethics 57:142 Ja '47 1050w

Foreign Affairs 26:220 O '47 30w

"The Design of Democracy' is a book of uneven quality. Some of it is dull reading. Many readers will feel that the theoretical sections smack of classroom pedantry. Illustrations from history are often presented without much feeling; others are handled with a jaunty but uncritical simplicity. . . The most useful section in the first three parts of the book is the analysis of politics as the art of compromise. On the other hand, the chapter on the responsibility of industry offers genuinely new material." G. L. Joughin

+ — N Y Times p22 Ap 6 '47 700w

"Thoughtful volume."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:70 Mr '47 240w

GODDEN, JON. The bird escaped. 179p $2.50

Rinehart

47-17968

Brief novel about the shipwreck of a British freighter in the South Seas in 1941. The sole survivor recovers consciousness on a deserted island. He tries to remember what happened when the ship exploded, and pieces together in his mind the stories of two of his odd shipmates: Prince, the steward, and the giant cook, Jacko; both of whom had been involved in a murder.

Booklist 43:255 Ap 15 '47

"A first novel by the sister of Rumer Godden, this combines a superb, imagist style with a story of intense interrelationship among the crew of a ship which set sail out of Liverpool in 1941. . . Intense, and with a certain fascination."

+ Kirkus 15:76 F 1 '47 160w

"Delicate, fragile, reminiscent of the style of Rumer Godden this is for those who love the intangible in writing and will not appeal to the average borrower. Definitely limited purchase." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 72:528 Ap 1 '47 70w

"The extended dream fantasy, laid in a varied English setting, is disappointing. Neither the characters nor the milieu seem to come alive. But Miss Godden, sister to the distinguished Rumer Godden, shares the latter's skill in writing well. On a more substantial story, and especially when working with characters more likely to enlist the reader's sympathy and interest, she should write a beautiful and lasting novel." James Mitchener

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 Ap 6 '47 550w

GODEY, JOHN. Gun and Mr Smith. 279p $2

Doubleday

47-3371

Mystery story.

"An accomplished first."

+ Kirkus 15:142 Mr 1 '47 90w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p25 Ap 27 '47 200w

"The plot seems utterly fantastic, and yet something like it might easily be happening at this moment." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p32 Ap 27 '47 180w

"Very tense, if you aren't in a skeptical frame of mind."

New Yorker 23:100 Ap 26 '47 90w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p20 My 11 '47 120w

"Out-of-ordinary 'atmospherical' piece, with accent on thrills and action rather than mystery—which isn't bad, at that. Good writing. Effective."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:31 My 17 '47 40w

GOERTZ, ARTHEMISE. Give us our dream. (Whittlesey house publication) 298p $2.75 McGraw

47-30336

Out in Sunnyside, Long Island, in a box-like apartment house, Mrs Marsan, fifty-five, stout and inclined to breathlessness, lived happily and joyously, watching and meddling in the affairs of her neighbors. And because Mrs Marsan's meddling had its roots in her great and real affection for her fellow beings, many people are happier at the end of the story than they might have been without her interference.

Booklist 43:330 Je 15 '47

Cath World 166:189 N '47 160w

Reviewed by J. W. Rogers

Chicago Sun Book Week p1 Je 22 '47 1150w

"There is friendliness in this book and a warmth of well-meaning. There is humanity, with all its pitiful desires and strivings. There is occasionally fun among these people who can make a little go such a long way. And there is wit, for some of the conversations are cleverly contrived. But one cannot help wondering what would have happened in that modest, not to say slum, neighborhood if Mrs. Marsan's interest had been more truly constructive." Margaret Williamson

+ — Christian Science Monitor p12 Jl 29 '47 360w

"Arthemise Goertz understands people well enough; she shows that again and again in her characterizations; but as an author she doesn't know what to do with people after she gets them started. She manages to be amusing in describing the situations, but she settles things too patly." P. T. Hartung

+ — Commonweal 46:409 Ag 8 '47 550w

"An endearing sort of book, leisurely, cumulative in its effects, a sort of American Dulcimer Street."

+ Kirkus 15:241 My 1 '47 190w

"While book has some humor and a gossip appeal, it is actually a mediocre job succumbing to the influence of the 'soap-opera.' However, it may have some value to the reader's adviser who wishes to wean the woman borrower away from the radio-serial. Here is familiar material on a slightly higher plane." C. W. Roth

+ — Library J 72:960 Je 15 '47 110w

"Mrs Goertz tells the story of Lily Marsan with warmth and with humor. She has a gift for characterization—most of her people have life and charm and vitality—but she errs on the side of sentimentality and happy coincidence in fashioning her tale. Too much happens too patly." Rose Feld

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 Je 22 '47 600w

"It is interesting to note that this first novel is the end-product of a year's stay in Flushing, L. I., where Miss Goertz was recovering from harrowing wartime experiences in Japan—and that the novelist herself was born and raised in the deep South. Perhaps this proves that the world of Sunnyside must be approached from without to be analyzed adequately. 'Give Us Our Dream' is a first-rate achievement, regardless of its genesis. Ideal for vacation reading, it will repay a second visit later on." James MacBride

+ N Y Times p6 Je 22 '47 750w

"The people over whose destiny Mrs. Marsan watches are engagingly drawn by Miss Goertz, but, for the most part, they are types rather than accurate delineations of character. You have met them in books before and will meet them again. . . On the whole, you won't find her book too cloying for, say a Sunday morning treat. Sometimes we need a little sugar in our literary diet to counter-act the caviar and spice we've been getting." Jane Voiles

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p13 Je 22 '47 1000w

"The story passes swiftly from one vivid episode to another—most of them very funny indeed; the grand coffee-party, with Adrian's arty talk, Mrs. Marsan's malapropisms, and Jessamine's mad, irrelevant comments; the innocently wicked scene in which Mrs. Marsan informs the preacher concerning real Christianity; the hilarious reading aloud of 'Tess of the D'Urbervilles' with the sound literary criticism of the cleaning woman, who is listening . . . one could summarize the whole book at this point. But it is much better to read this novel than a summary of it." R. A. Cordell

+ Sat R of Lit 30:10 Je 28 '47 900w

"Readers whose view of life is adequately mirrored in city tabloids may find Miss Goertz's pointless optimism momentarily heart-warming. Others will be irritated by the kind of tawdry romanticism whose bible is a horoscope and whose heaven is Times Square."

— Time 49:101 Je 30 '47 500w

Wis Lib Bul 43:141 O '47

GOFFIN, ROBERT. Horn of plenty; the story of Louis Armstrong; tr. from the French by James S. Bezou. 304p $3 Allen, Towne & Heath

B or 92 Armstrong, Louis. Jazz music 47-2554

"Story of the great jazz trumpeter told with enthusiasm and skill. Louis Armstrong was born in a New Orleans slum on July 4, 1900. Goffin tells of his childhood in a society of African survivals, low morals and high enthusiasms; of Armstrong as a newsboy, reform school inmate, coal man, muleteer, longshoreman and above all—a musician. You have already heard of the migration of jazz from New Orleans to Chicago to New York. Here is the story of a typical-in-all-but-genius participant." Library J

"Interesting as this story is, it is damaged by lavish writing and a number of factual errors. . . Too often, 'Horn of Plenty' stifles you with its perfumed prose." Herman Kogan

— Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Je 1 '47 400w

"Fact is here fairly easily distinguishable from fancy, of which there is plenty, but the material is well handled and reads well. Recommended as an excellent picture of recent times." Leonard Burkat

+ Library J 72:641 Ap 15 '47 130w

"There is in Mr. Goffin's analysis little understanding of what makes Louis 'Satchmo' (for 'Satchelmouth') blow. The author has written like a genealogist and jazz critic rather than a biographer. Never is there reason or even hint of reason given as to why Louis differed from the rest of the children who existed in that slum area, what drove him onward and upward." Lucy Greenbaum

N Y Times p32 My 4 '47 500w

San Francisco Chronicle p24 My 25 '47 270w

GOGH, VINCENT VAN. Vincent van Gogh, by Edward Alden Jewell. (Phaidon press art bk) 84p 651l 23 col il $5.50 Duell

759.9492 Paintings, Dutch 47-720

Brief analysis of the life and works of this Dutch artist, with reproductions of his work during ten years of his life: 1880 to 1890. Twenty-eight of the reproductions are in color. Bibliography. Index of illustrations.

Booklist 43:187 F 15 '47

Christian Science Monitor p16 O 25 '47 120w

"The color plates in this book were variously printed in Brussels and in this country, and range from satisfactory to poor. In cases where the originals could be checked, as the 'Postman Roulin,' the whole tonality seems wrong in the blues, and in others the printing is off register. One plate of a self-portrait is reproduced on the dust jacket and also in the book; they look like two different versions rather than the same painting. However, the black-and-white gravure reproductions are sensitive translations, and Mr. Jewell's interpretative commentary is buttressed by a good short bibliography and index, to complete a pleasant study of an engrossing subject." W. G. Dooley

+ N Y Times p27 F 16 '47 480w

"The reproductions in the book maintain a consistently high level of excellence. . . Fortunately, Mr. Jewell followed the example of the prewar Hyperion publications by including a bibliography as well as an index to illustrations. These features always increase the ultimate value of selective compilations, whether in the field of art or anything else." W. E. P.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 F 16 '47 190w

"A beautiful book with a rounded selection of the artist's work in color and gravure. Mr. Jewell, art critic of The New York Times, treats his subject with feeling, intelligence and perspective."

+ Theatre Arts 31:78 My '47 60w

GOLDBERG, MORRIS. English-Spanish chemical and medical dictionary. 692p $10 McGraw

610.3 Medicine—Dictionaries. Spanish language—Dictionaries. Chemistry—Dictionaries Med47-1315

"Gives not only the Spanish equivalents of English terms, but also definitions in Spanish. Thus the entry under dosimetry reads: 'dosimetria, dosimetria, f., determinación exacta de las dosis; sistema terapéutico basado en la administración de los alcaloides en forma de gránulos de dosis mínimas a intervalos definidos.' The number of words for which equivalents are given is about 30,000. Medical terms predominate, but there is a fair number of chemical terms." N Y New Tech Bks

Chem & Eng N 25:2526 S 1 '47 70w

"Invaluable new medical and chemical dictionary. . . [Contains] new terms involved in the study of hormones, sulphonamide compounds and penicillin. Not only are Spanish equivalents given for English terms, but clear, concise definitions are included." Alfred Carranga

+ Chem Eng 54:270 O '47 60w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:814 My 15 '47 50w

"An excellent dictionary."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 32:29 Ap '47

GOLDMAN, RAYMOND LESLIE. Even the night. 196p $2.50 Macmillan

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 47-31427

Autobiography of an American writer. In childhood he was stricken with infantile paralysis which left him a cripple for life; in adolescence he gradually became deaf; in early manhood, after the death of his first wife, he came down with diabetes. This book is largely an account of how he has fought to overcome these three handicaps.

Booklist 44:88 N 1 '47

Reviewed by Noreen Linduska

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 N 15 '47 250w

Kirkus 15:387 J1 15 '47 170w

"This is an expansion of The Good Fight published in 1935. Mr. Goldman's deep conviction, based on personal experiences, that faith can surmount all obstacles and eventually bring happiness should be helpful inspiration to other people similarly afflicted. The fact that he is keenly aware of the spiritual persecution of his own Jewish people gives added weight to his thesis. Recommended." R. P. Tubby

+ Library J 72:1103 Ag '47 90w

"Mr. Goldman has written, out of the stuff of life, an autobiography that proves a man can win through to happiness in spite of handicaps and hardships, for he has done it."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly BK R p19 N 30 '47 140w

GOLDMAN, R. L.—Continued

Reviewed by Thomas Lask
N Y Times p36 O 19 '47 500w

"Mr. Goldman, who has been a successful magazine writer, advertising man and mystery novelist, has undertaken in 'Even the Night' to tell the story of his life. The result is a book that is as uneven as a Mission street car track. On one level the book is standard, nostalgic, reminiscence. . . On another level 'Even the Night' is an awe-inspiring account of how a man found happiness. . . A third level of 'Even the Night' records Goldman's search for and development of a philosophy. This is, perhaps, the weakest part of the book. . . Between these levels Goldman's writing varies from facile to plodding." W. R. W.

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p23 O 12 '47 550w

GOLDMAN, RAYMOND LESLIE. Purple shells.
228p $1.98 Ziff-Davis

47-6382

Detective story.

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p53 N 16 '47 170w

"Good stuff."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:44 N 22 '47 50w

GOLDMAN, RICHARD FRANKO. Concert band. (Field of music, v 1) 246p il $3 Rinehart

788 Bands (music) 47-30020

The story of the concert band which the author defines as "a body of wind instrument players primarily occupied in giving concerts." Contains chapters on the development of the band, instrumentation, functions of the various instruments, music, etc. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 43:152 Ja 15 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p5 D 29 '46 50w

Kirkus 14:510 O 1 '46 100w

"This is strictly for the band enthusiast, and for that group Mr. Goldman has turned out a first-rate job." P. S.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ja 12 '47 110w

GOLDSCHMIDT, WALTER ROCHS. As you sow. 288p il $4 Harcourt

309.1794 Sociology, Rural. Agriculture—Economic aspects 47-5119

Study of the effect of industrialized farming on the American way of life. "Mr. Goldschmidt proposes three fundamental principles for farm policy. First, full utilization of American productive capacity; second, preservation of natural resources; third, the promotion of equity and opportunity for those whose life work is devoted to the production of agricultural commodities." (N Y Times) Index.

Reviewed by Van Allen Bradley

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Ag 10 '47 320w

"Mr. Goldschmidt has a plan for the land, the nation and the farmers. His plan is worth studying." R. H. M.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 20 '47 480w

Reviewed by E. S. Skillin

Commonweal 46:362 Jl 25 '47 550w

"A really valuable contribution to an understanding of the agricultural revolution of our times." W. M. T.

+ N Y Times p14 Jl 6 '47 500w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Jl 22 '47 650w

"The great fault of the book is that it is limited to a few of the more general and superficial aspects of social organization. What has been done has been well done, obviously to the end of laying a foundation for an overall policy statement for agriculture. The result is a handy volume for the policy maker or the extension 'specialist' and good preface for a teacher or a research worker." O. D. Duncan

+ — Social Forces 26:233 D '47 800w
Wis Lib Bul 43:138 O '47

GOLDSMITH, GENE. Murder on his mind.
247p $2.50 Mill

47-22177

Detective story.

"A pleasant, puzzling evening's entertainment."

+ Kirkus 15:142 Mr 1 '47 80w

"The author writes with such clarity and portrays his characters so well that even the lay mind is able to follow him through the mazes of his difficult subject." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p22 Je 15 '47 150w

"Damon is a personable new sleuth, though he reached his solution without using his psychiatric knowledge, or any other visible means." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Je 1 '47 70w

"Stylistic surface-noises and too assiduous scratching for effects mar otherwise interesting variation on popular theme."

Sat R of Lit 30:34 Jl 5 '47 40w

GOLDSMITH, MARGARET OLTHOF. Picture primer of indoor gardening; il. by Harrie Wood. 48p $2 Houghton

635.9652 House plants

Agr47-72

A small handbook on what plants to grow in the house and how to grow them, with special reference to decorative plants. Includes a brief section on growing herbs in the house.

Reviewed by C. R. Everitt

Atlantic 179:154 Ap '47 30w

Bookmark 8:7 Mr '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p2 Ja '47

"A worthy job. . . Author and artist are well known for the excellence of their taste in the field of interior decoration. Couple this with the fact that both are keen, experienced gardeners, and the stage is set for some unusual results." R. S. Lemmon

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20 Mr 2 '47 110w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 F 2 '47 80w

+ Springfield Union p18 Mr 20 '47 120w

Wis Lib Bul 43:34 F '47

GOLDSTONE, LAWRENCE ARTHUR. See Treat, L.

GOLL, CLAIRE, and GOLL, IWAN. Love poems; il. by Marc Chagall. 64p $3 Hemispheres editions, 136 Columbia heights, Brooklyn 2, N.Y.

841

"The Alsatian poet, Yvan Goll, is known for his song-cycles about modern uprooted man, Jean Sans Terre, a few of which have been translated into English. In the present book Yvan and his wife, Claire Goll, collect love poems they have written each other." N Y Times

"These poems, I believe, were originally in French. I reread two that had appeared, in their native tongue, in Decision. They confirmed an intimation that some of the bouquet had been lost in transit. Temperamentally the French tongue is crisp, formally organized, decisive in its rhythms. These very qualities encourage a certain extravagance of symbol and exuberance of ornamentation. . . The eight delightful Chagall drawings suffer no loss in translation." Lloyd Frankenberg

+ — N Y Times p18 Je 8 '47 320w

"A sad and tender charm pervades these verses. . . The format is pleasantly European."

+ New Yorker 23:119 My 17 '47 40w

GOLLOMB, JOSEPH. Window on the world.
208p $2.50 Harcourt

47-31313

"Ted Gusick has graduated from City High and is working on a New York newspaper. Here he faces personal problems as well as the question of his part in the problems that face the world today. The story tells of his growth under the strain, and his final decision." Sat R of Lit

Reviewed by Jane Cobb

Atlantic 180:148 D '47 90w

"Joseph Gollomb is a writer who strikes where the graft is trickiest, the prejudice thickest, the slugging foulest. His stories for older boys are tense, realistic, and swept by a revolving beam of idealism." M. B. King

Chicago Sun Book Week O 18 '47 130w

Kirkus 15:549 O 1 '47 80w

"How a wise-cracking, self-centered modern boy in New York learns to see beyond the glittering superficialities of newspaper life. The lessons the author tries to hammer home are almost lost in the confusion of character and incident and the Alger-like rise to success. But the book has point, and the mature reader will get it." M. B. Snow

+ Library J 72:1620 N 15 '47 60w

Sat R of Lit 30:53 N 15 '47 40w

GOLOBBEK, H., ed. Capablanca's hundred best games of chess; with a memoir by J. du Mont. 332p il $4 Harcourt

794.1 Chess. Capablanca, José Raoul

47-3485

"The Cuban Capablanca was world champion in chess for many years. Even in tournaments that he did not win, he sometimes got a special prize for 'the most beautiful game'. Here are 100 of his best in full detail, from 'P to K4' to 'checkmate,' with enlightening commentary by an expert." Christian Century

Booklist 43:327 Je 15 '47

Christian Century 64:626 My 14 '47
80w

Reviewed by J. R. Newman

New Repub 116:26 Je 30 '47 2100w

Reviewed by Dana Brannan

N Y Times p11 Ag 31 '47 120w

Reviewed by Robert O'Brien

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Jl 20 '47
170w

"It takes a certain degree of connoisseurship to appreciate the recondite beauty of his serene and apparently effortless style, but to those who can bring the right technical equipment to the study, his games yield a delight not to be equalled by the more obvious excitement of the romantic school."

Times [London] Lit Sup p575 N 8 '47
270w

GOOCH, GEORGE PEABODY. Frederick the Great; the ruler, the writer, the man. 376p il $5 Knopf

E or 92 Frederick II, the Great, king of Prussia

47-30852

"An English historian's assessment of the man who has been described by some people as the most enlightened and articulate of all European rulers, and by others as the most talented criminal in modern Western history. At the conclusion of a brisk survey of Frederick's part in the swirling politics of eighteenth-century Europe and a more leisurely study of his correspondence and political writings, Dr. Gooch takes a stand on the high, dry ground that is near the middle of every controversy. It is all right, he thinks, to say that Frederick was less benign in fact than he made himself out to be in his writings, but it is going too far to blame him for Count Bismarck and Adolf Hitler." (New Yorker) Index.

Booklist 44:67 O 15 '47

"Dr. Gooch himself is always interesting: his opening is masterly, he shows considerable narrative skill throughout, and his comments are incisive and revealing. But the quotations from Frederick are too long and too many. The fact is that Frederick, once he got a pen in his hand, and unless he was scribbling hurried letters from the front, was a bore." Eric Forbes-Boyd

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 My 24
'47 750w

"The author, writing in this postwar period, enjoys a marked advantage over previous historians. His study is a valuable addition to the reference works on this subject." Henry Sowerby

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 O 6 '47
650w

"To the extent which Mr. Gooch has written biography he has written an unsatisfactory book. He is a professional and highly practiced historian. Like Ranke, he is interested in governments, in diplomacy, in movements civil and military. He is thus able to give in his first three chapters an extremely useful if somewhat bristling account of the rise of Prussia. Since Mr. Gooch is concerned with Frederick the Ruler in every chapter except the three reserved for Voltaire, and since the latter subject survives any treatment, Mr. Gooch's book is of value throughout. But it is of most value where it is the purest history with Frederick as principal agent. The book does not add greatly to our understanding of Frederick as Writer or Man." Warren Ramsey

+ Commonweal 47:279 D 26 '47 3050w

Kirkus 15:381 Jl 15 '47 170w

"Readers who have suffered from an overdose of home-made American historical prose will find this importation a masterpiece by comparison. By any standards, however, it is a highly satisfactory piece of work. Recommended for general purchase." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 72:1189 S 1 '47 110w

"Dr. Gooch has not emerged unscathed from forcing his way through this jungle of grandiloquent rubbish. His style now echoes his authorities, and every sentence, without exception, contains a cliché or tired adjective; this is a remarkable achievement. It is also somewhat surprising to find him describing the well-known Austrian Nazi Srbik, a personal friend of Hitler's, as surveying 'the past from his lofty watch-tower without passion or prejudice.' This book is hardly one to be read at a sitting and it does not aim to give a precise picture of its hero; but it contains all one needs to know about a repulsive figure." A. J. P. T.

Manchester Guardian p3 My 2 '47 250w

Reviewed by Geoffrey Ashe

New Statesman & Nation 33:339 My 10
'47 850w

Reviewed by P. J. Searles

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly BK R p4 S 21
'47 700w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn

N Y Times p7 S 14 '47 1350w

"The book includes some excellent chapters on the hilarious carryings on between Frederick and Voltaire."

New Yorker 23:122 S 13 '47 150w

School & Society 66:351 N 1 '47 10w

"Dr. Gooch's new work is weighty. It is a presentation of the results of German scholarship on the career of Frederick the Great, reflecting perhaps a little too closely the lumbering efficiency of these authorities. It has been said of German scholars that they go down deeper and come up muddier than their foreign colleagues. It would be unfair and ungenerous to apply such comment to Dr. Gooch's present study, but particles of Teutonic dust adhere tenaciously to the pages of this book." F. W. Deakin

Spec 178:242 Mr 7 '47 800w

Time 50:114 O 6 '47 450w

"Dr. Gooch has not attempted a new biography of Frederick the Great, but has rather chosen to draw upon the whole range of Frederick's writings and immense correspondence in illuminating some of the principal aspects of his life and work. Of necessity he traverses much of the familiar political and biographical ground, while in pursuing what is at times a somewhat disconnected course he tends to be a little repetitive and to appear a shade arbitrary in selection. But of the fullness of his scholarship and the measure of his judgment, as also of his ease and grace of manner, there is never any question."

GOOCH, G. P.—Continued

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p152 Ap 5 '47
900w

GOOD, HARRY GEHMAN. History of western education. 575p il $5 Macmillan

370.9 Education—History 47-4775

"An attempt to prepare a balanced account of the growth of schools and of the evolution of educational thought and doctrine as a part of the general history of society and civilization. Unusual emphasis is given to the growth of American education. Indexed." School & Society

"I recommend it to all who are genuinely interested in education for reference use and for reading straight through." J. T. Frederick
+ Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Ag 24 '47
180w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 N 16 '47
240w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman
School & Society 65:312 Ap 26 '47 360w
School & Society 66:95 Ag 2 '47 40w
Social Studies 38:379 D '47 10w

GOOD HOUSEKEEPING INSTITUTE, NEW YORK. Good housekeeping housekeeping book; ed. by Helen W. Kendall. 491p il $3 McKay

640.2 Home economics [47-1821]

Directions and suggestions on various kinds of housekeeping from housecleaning, moving, and safety in the home, to dishwashing and pest control. Illustrated with photographs, some in color. Index.

Booklist 43:218 Mr 15 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '47

"The book has a pleasing format, and the content is clearly presented. Subjects are handled in a light, almost humorous manner in some cases, which makes the book very readable. This book would appeal more to city women than to farm or small-town women." Vivian Brashfar

+ J Home Econ 39:659 D '47 120w

"The entire atmosphere of the book is friendly and neighborly. The information on each topic is thorough and clearly stated. There are chapters on the weekly washing and ironing, or dishwashing, house pests and the like and welcome and unexpected chapters on moving, keeping a house safe and living in the country. This is an excellent book for the teenagers who are taking Home Economics I, for the young bride and for the housewife who has been on the job long enough to appreciate some practical help." Lois Palmer

+ N Y Times p22 Mr 9 '47 270w

GOODE, BILL, pseud. See Goodykoontz, W. F.

GOODIS, DAVID. Behold this woman. 281p $2.75 Appleton-Century

47-11501

Character study of a thoroughly evil woman who completely dominated her aging second husband and meek step-daughter. The scene is Philadelphia.

Kirkus 15:446 Ag 15 '47 170w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p26 N
30 '47 100w

"Seemingly written at top speed, with no time wasted on details, the novel mounts to a crescendo of physical violence and emotional conflict. Mr. Goodis' story, florid in style and sketchy in continuity, attempts more than he or the reader can cope with. The action is sufficient for half-a-dozen books—but as a portrayal of an egocentric, sadistic woman the novel requires several more grains of truth to achieve the flavor of conviction." Lawrence Dodd

+ N Y Times p48 N 9 '47 250w

GOODMAN, PAUL. Kafka's prayer. 265p $3 Vanguard

B or 92 Kafka, Franz 47-5154

"Kafka declared that writing is a form of prayer and here the subtleties of anxiety, supplication, pain and pride reflected in his work are analyzed by Paul Goodman." Library J

Kirkus 15:180 Mr 15 '47 170w

Library J 72:961 Je 15 '47 30w

"It is a brief but extremely provocative work in the right direction. . . As is to be expected, there are numerous generalizations and details of interpretation open to dispute. . . Nevertheless Goodman has boldly and with infinite sympathy begun to explore the path along which I think Kafka's truth is to be found." Angel Flores

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Ag
10 '47 750w

"All in all, on finishing this book one is tempted to say of Mr. Goodman's critical interpretation of Kafka what Professor Einstein said after reading one of Kafka's books, 'the human mind isn't that complex.'" Anthony Bower

N Y Times p7 Ag 24 '47 800w

"Nothing can be more hazardous than the attempt to pile one set of idiosyncrasies on top of another. Paul Goodman, in this new study of Kafka, has accepted the hazards of just such an attempt. The result is utter confusion. For the reader who has been baffled by Kafka will come to this book only to discover that he is now in need of an interpretation not only of Kafka but of Goodman too." Philip Rahv

Sat R of Lit 30:15 Ag 2 '47 1000w

GOODMAN, PERCIVAL, and GOODMAN, PAUL. Communitas; means of livelihood and ways of life. 141p $6 Univ. of Chicago press

711.4 City planning 47-3439

Modern ideas on city and regional planning with considerable criticism of the efficiency planning of recent years. The authors are brothers: the one an architect, the other a writer. Illustrated with many drawings and diagrams.

Reviewed by Svend Riemer

Am J Soc 53:232 N '47 800w

Current Hist 13:35 Jl '47 30w

"Frankly, the book is a circus, although soberness itself compared with some of Le Corbusier's. But I like circuses far better than I like bread. There is one paramount issue today: planning or chaos—with war as an unhappy medium. The Goodman brothers believe in planning, city planning, community planning. They are among the Children of Light. . . The illustrations offer a blend of William Blake, the blueprint, and the comic strip that I found very attractive." Albert Guérard

+ Nation 164:574 My 17 '47 550w

"A drastic improvement in our way of life is entirely feasible, if enough people understand what the improvement can be. The gentle common sense in 'Communitas' should help." C. K. Agle

+ N Y Times p15 Je 1 '47 850w

Reviewed by Paul Speegle

San Francisco Chronicle p12 Je 29 '47
430w

Reviewed by Guy Greer

Survey G 37:34 Ja '48 500w

"In spite of some unconvincing statements, and in spite of many irritations of style and opinion, the volume should be read by the student of physical planning because of its provocative challenges to the orthodox."

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:293 S '47 200w

GOODRUM, JOHN. Now you see it... magic with a new twist; il. by [the author]. 149p $2.50 Didier pubs.

793.8 Conjuring 47-1515

"Many of the tricks to be described are original. Some are either entirely new conceptions or old tricks to which a new form has been given. All are simple. None requires any special apparatus. For that reason each trick can be performed by the reader with a little diligent practice." (p. 3) Illustrated.

Booklist 43:259 Ap 15 '47

"Very simple apparatus is used and the illustrations are clear and concise. Welcome addition to our books on magic. Recommended." M. A. Webb

+ Library J 72:468 Mr 15 '47 50w

GOODWIN, HAROLD LELAND. Feathered cape. 188p $2 Presbyterian bd.

47-18420

Story of a Massachusetts boy of 1792, made prisoner on a British man-of-war. He was taken to Hawaii where he escaped to live with the natives. In time he was given twelve acres of land to keep as his own. For older boys and girls.

Booklist 43:364 Jl 15 '47

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 23:266 Jl '47 90w

Kirkus 15:191 Ap 1 '47 170w

"Not all children care for Pacific island stories, so this may have limited appeal." M. A. Webb

Library J 72:738 My 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Ap 6 '47 550w

"By taking his main incidents and characters directly from history, the author has produced an illuminating introduction to what may one day be our forty-ninth state." N. B. Baker

+ N Y Times p32 Je 8 '47 150w

Wis Lib Bul 43:122 Jl '47

GOODYKOONTZ, WILLIAM F. (BILL GOODE, pseud) The senator's nude. 227p $2.50 Ziff-Davis 47-3659

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 Jl 20 '47 70w

"The author tells [the story], flitting from one episode to another so swiftly and erratically that one never does discover how Stoney Hawk pieces all the clues together and gets the right answer. Is there a prize for the screwiest detective story of the year? If so, seek no further." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p26 Je 8 '47 200w

"Mr. Goode is a find; his blend of bawdry, politics, melodrama, farce and satire (with a sharp undertone of bitter reality), has the freshness of early Hecht-MacArthur, and his rapid-fire agile technique provides just the vehicle for it in the brightest debut so far this year." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p26 Je 8 '47 100w

"Beneath uproarious, and slightly synthetic, satire on blustering politicians, female publicity grabbers, titled rotters, and such, there lurks rather interesting plot."

Sat R of Lit 30:30 Je 14 '47 40w

GORDIS, PHILIP. How to buy insurance; the complete guide to better protection for less money. 352p $4 Norton

368 Insurance 47-2219

Practical guide to buying all kinds of insurance—health, life, personal property, accident, service policies, automobile, and home owners. Lists names of companies recommended. Index.

Booklist 43:267 My 1 '47

"A valuable handbook."

+ Kirkus 15:90 F 1 '47 120w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:814 My 15 '47 40w

Management R 36:502 S '47 60w

GORDON, DAVID LIVINGSTON, and DAN-GERFIELD, ROYDEN JAMES. Hidden weapon; the story of economic warfare; foreword by Thomas K. Finletter. 238p $3.50 Harper

940.531833 World war, 1939-1945—Economic aspects. World war, 1939-1945—Blockades 47-4324

Presents a panoramic view of the economic aspects of World war II. Among the topics discussed are preclusive buying of supplies; blacklisting of supplies aiding the enemy; and blockades against hesitating neutrals. Index.

Reviewed by H. W. Spiegel

Ann Am Acad 254:181 N '47 460w

Booklist 44:48 O 1 '47

"A clearly and soberly written account. . . The authors are in a position to present a reliable report, for they both served as Chief of the Blockade Division of the Foreign Economic Administration." H. J. Owens

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Jl 27 '47 250w

"During the war there was a standard set of Washington jokes about the civilian 'chairborne brigades' and 'paragraph troopers.' This was especially true of the economic warfare branch. Due to the tight security which was clamped on its work, public understanding of the magnitude and importance of its accomplishment was incomplete, and public sympathy almost non-existent. This volume is a careful, accurate and restrained study of this part of our war effort." R. R. Wohl

+ Commonweal 46:458 Ag 22 '47 750w

Kirkus 15:232 Ap 15 '47 160w

"One of the inside stories of operations during the recent war well told and very understandingly presented by men who worked with the Board of Economic Warfare." A. B. Lindsay

+ Library J 72:958 Je 15 '47 140w

"A valuable and interesting account." Keith Hutchison

+ Nation 165:107 Jl 26 '47 270w

"The modestly told story is readable, objective and useful to the student of history, even though it contains some surprising gaps, not all of which can be accounted for on the grounds of preserving official secrets. . . The authors do, however, present an illuminating account of the unfamiliar and extremely interesting techniques used in their field of action and this would be reason enough why their work should find a place in any collection of war documents." J. P. Warburg

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ag 31 '47 700w

"The authors of this volume write with lucidity, they hold the interest of the reader, and their conclusions are sensible and mature. At the outset the authors state that their study is not a scholarly one in the sense that it is fully documented. Despite their disavowal the volume is nevertheless a splendid piece of scholarship. It may lack the usual trappings of doctorate theses—chapter and verse are never cited—but it is a real contribution to knowledge and will be more useful than scores of doctorate theses. Both the general reader and the expert will profit from it." S. E. Harris

+ N Y Times p7 Jl 20 '47 1000w

Reviewed by Adrienne Koch

Sat R of Lit 30:16 Ag 9 '47 950w

GORDON, DOUGLAS HUNTLY, and TORREY, NORMAN LEWIS. Censoring of Diderot's Encyclopédie and the re-established text. 124p il $3 Columbia univ. press 034 L'encyclopédie; ou, Dictionnaire raisonné des sciences, des arts et des métiers.

Diderot, Denis 47-4553

"This monograph tells the story of an attempt to censor the Encyclopédie. It has long been known that Diderot was not only bedeviled by the official censorship of the Old Régime, but had to put up with the unofficial and surreptitious censorship of his publisher, Le Breton. . . The exact nature and extent of Le Breton's depredations, however, has not been known. In this study Messrs. Gordon and Torrey announce their discovery—Le Breton's own file of corrected page proofs, bearing Diderot's final instructions and barbed warnings to the printer not to tamper with his text, and Le Breton's subsequent deletions and modifications. Messrs. Gordon and Torrey have reprinted the original texts of the affected passages, together with the censor's changes, and have provided an historical account and textual analysis to show the significance of their discovery." (J Philos) Bibliography. Index.

GORDON, D. H.—Continued

"The restored passages contain much that is of literary and philosophic value, including an especially spirited and perceptive appreciation of Pierre Bayle by Diderot. They also show that Diderot, understandably enough, overestimated the extent of Le Breton's changes. In general, the documents highlight once more Diderot's intention to make the Encyclopédie a philosophic dictionary, a way of throwing light into the dark corners of Church and State. . . This study will be stimulating not only to eighteenth-century scholars, but to others who are interested in the history and drama of freedom of thought." Charles Frankel

+ J Philos 44:721 D 18 '47 650w

"In the passages which he singled out for deletion or change and in the skill with which he altered the more dangerous of Diderot's statements, Le Breton appears as a shrewd and adroit censor. That the publisher's operations were indeed highhanded receives ample justification from the present study, but the charge—made by Diderot and Grimm—that he had done a clumsy and 'Gothic' job in excision and alteration of texts apparently cannot stand. . . The absorbing story revealed in the present volume heightens one's admiration for Diderot and brings the reader behind the scenes of the great publishing venture of the eighteenth century, enabling him to see more clearly the moves and countermoves employed in the production of the Encyclopédie." D. F. Bond

+ Mod Philol 45:142 N '47 850w

"The first portion of the book reviews not altogether satisfactorily the stormy history of the publication of the Encyclopédie. . . Although documentary rather than technical evidence is introduced, the authors build a strong case for their contention that they have at last found Le Breton's page proof. Their conclusion is that, on the whole, the censored passages do not loom very large, that 'they represent at best only the peaks lopped off the heights of Diderot's audacity.' In the most important part of the volume, the re-established text of Diderot is given without translation and occupies approximately forty pages."

+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 3:232 S '47 290w

GORDON, H. PHOEBE, and others. Counseling in schools of nursing; a study of the principles and techniques of personnel services for students. 279p $3 McGraw

610.73 Nurses and nursing—Study and teaching. Counseling. Personnel service in education Med47-1429

"A very general discussion applicable to almost any profession. Contents: The professional background of the student in nursing; Understanding the student in nursing; Counseling and personnel services in schools of nursing; Developing the personnel program in a school of nursing. Most useful for the bibliography at the end of each chapter." Booklist

Booklist 43:355 J1 15 '47

School & Society 65:384 My 24 '47 30w

GORDON, JAMES. Collision [Eng title: Of our time]. 185p $2.50 Farrar, Straus 47-882

Starting with the shooting of a deserting English private by an officer from his company, the story goes back over the lives of the two men, and traces the steps which led up to the shooting.

"Each scene is neatly paced with the inexorable story-line well in mind. Though the backdrop is a dreary English cantonment and a no-less-dreary hideout in blitzed London, one is constantly aware that the pattern is appropriate to both sides of the Atlantic. Mr. Gordon has done precisely what he intended. To this reader, 'Collision' seemed as contrived as a time bomb, as foreordained as a tract, and almost as dull." C. V. Terry

N Y Times p14 Ja 19 '47 650w

"A story of our time, of a kind to make the most complacent pause, and acknowledge its truth and the consequent guilt of all of us." Kate O'Brien

Spec 177:432 O 25 '46 130w

"In both construction and style this novel bears the marks of the inexperienced writer, while its particular bias of imaginative concentration suggests a more general maturity. Nevertheless, 'Of Our Time' is an intelligent and acutely observed piece of work, which brings harsh illumination to the details of a sordid story of sexual obsession and crime."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p533 N 2 '46 480w

GORDON, RUTH. Years ago; a play. 173p $2 Viking 812

47-30272

A play founded on an incident in the author's own life. It describes a New England family living in a Boston suburb in 1912, and the excitement caused over the daughter's determination to go to New York and become an actress.

Booklist 43:287 My 15 '47

"Charming and witty."

+ Kirkus 15:56 Ja 15 '47 50w

"Enchanting comedy." George Freedley

+ Library J 72:811 My 15 '47 30w

"It is pure escapism, as light as a feather and twice as downy."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 My 25 '47 150w

Wis Lib Bul 43:95 Je '47

GORE, CHARLES, bp. Prayer and the Lord's prayer; with an introd. by Angus Dun. 124p $1.25 Harper

264.1 Prayer. Lord's prayer

47-31401

Thoughts on prayer and a study of the Lord's prayer, first published in 1896 in Commonwealth. The text of the Lord's prayer employed is that of the English revised version.

"The republication in convenient and attractive form should give these papers a second half-century of life." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 64:1522 D 10 '47 70w

"This is good devotional reading, inspiring and chastening." R. E. Keighton

+ Crozer Q 25:94 Ja '48 150w

Kirkus 15:671 D 1 '47 170w

GOSS, MRS MADELEINE (BINKLEY). Beethoven: master musician; il. by Carl Schultheiss. rev ed 364p $3 Holt

Beethoven, Ludwig van—Juvenile literature 46-8218

"[Fictionized] biography depicting the intimate life of the great artist and man showing his exceptional character and courage in facing the disappointments and struggles of life. Supplement by Elizabeth A. Moore of his works, recordings and index." (Library J) For earlier edition see Book Review Digest, 1931,

"All music lovers will read with pleasure Madeleine Goss's well written biography and this competent appreciation of the master musician's work." B. L. Conway

+ Cath World 164:379 Ja '47 120w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 23:44 Ja '47 20w

Kirkus 14:391 Ag 15 '46 60w

"Recommended for ages 12-16." S. J. Robinson

+ Library J 71:1811 D 15 '46 60w

"Here are noble heart and racked nerves, successive blows of fate, supreme agony of steadily thickening deafness—and yet with all this the book, however heartbreaking, is not depressing." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 F 2 '47 120w

"It is a book that has great value to teachers of music or of world culture and to all young people who are interested in music. Other great names in musical history are given short but excellent portrayals. The occasional inclusion of a part of a musical score adds to its value."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:29 Je 14 '47 160w

GOSSIP, ARTHUR JOHN. In the secret place of the Most High; being some studies in prayer. 210p $2.75 Scribner

264.1 Prayer

47-3918

"This volume contains studies in prayer by one of the most popular of present-day preachers. . . In successive chapters Dr. Gossip treats of sincerity and brevity in prayer; of the necessity of making thanksgiving, confession and adoration characteristic of our prayer life, and of the problems and opportunities of intercession and petition. These are not sermons, nor lectures, but studies." Kirkus

"Though there are many classic books on prayer, no book on that subject will be more helpful to the minister or layman today than this intelligent and inspiring study. It goes deep, reaches high and wide, and will last long."

+ Christian Century 64:798 Je 25 '47 60w

"This is a helpful book for both the clergyman who conducts services and for the layman in his prayer life. It is full of original and striking illustrations, simple common sense, and deep spirituality." W. L. Caswell

+ Churchman 161:16 Ag '47 130w

"The publication of a book by Dr. Gossip is like the announcement of an old friend. And this book is no exception. The title could not be more apt. Here is all the charm and sincerity, the wealth and gallantry, the inspiration and common sense, we expect of this author." J. S. Dauerty

+ Crozer Q 24:370 O '47 550w

"Dr. Gossip has a real gift of expression in the pulpit and through the printed page. While dealing with the most profound spiritual truths, he is able by apt quotations and illustrations and simple phraseology to make them seem clear and simple. . . Those who feel that their devotional life is a meagre affair, thin and stunted, will find this a helpful and easily read book."

+ Kirkus 15:307 Je 15 '47 110w

+ Manchester Guardian p3 My 29 '47 60w

GOTTLIEB, ELAINE. Darkling. 245p $2.50 Reynal

47-1229

A psychological novel which follows, chiefly, the thoughts and feelings of a young girl as she struggles to find a balance in life between her desire to become an artist and her desire to experience love.

"An excessively tremulous,—one might say trying—first novel which verbalizes the emotional involution and confusion of a young artist in the outside world—and in a flutter of prose expresses all her malaise, her maladjustment."

— Kirkus 14:582 N 15 '46 100w

"'Darkling' has a lyric quality that is especially appropriate to its theme. Miss Gottlieb writes sensitively and convincingly of the pain and perplexity of youth, especially to a youngster in whom the artist or poet has not died. What a girl herself could not have put in words, she catches with fresh and vigorous sensory imagery. The beautiful explicitness and originality of this first novel mark its author as a writer whose work is well worth watching." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Ja 19 '47 650w

"The yearnings of this dewy character, if treated objectively for what they are—adolescent stirrings—might have made a fine, sound novel. But in 'Darkling' not only the character but the rendering of the character—the approach, the attitude—is marked by a moody glamorizing. Cristabel is seen, not face to face, but as through a glass, ardently. Her reality as a human being is neglected in the earnest effort to project her as the aching young artist. Beneath the novelist's rhetoric there is little feeling for the honest values of human experience." Richard Sullivan

— N Y Times p20 F 2 '47 330w

"There can be no doubt that the author, with her scattered flashes of true perception, her extreme sensitivity to the problems of people like Cristabel, her intense, often original writing, her quick associations, will someday have a great deal to offer anyone who is interested in the human mind and its frustrations. But this book exhibits such a curious maze of shallow and profound, lucid and confused observation, so appalling a need for discipline in the matters of structure and selection, that it is actually difficult to judge how far and how well she can proceed." N. G. Chaikin

— + Sat R of Lit 30:19 Ap 5 '47 450w

GOTTLIEB, HINKO. Key to the great gate; tr. by Fred Bolman and Ruth Morris; il. by Sam Fischer. 178p $2.75 Simon & Schuster

47-11052

"A fantasy and satire. . . This modern fable is set in a German prison cell occupied by three Jews, which for three days they share with Tarnopolski whose magic powers enable him to provide food and wine, radios and pianos, trips through space, etc. At the close it is Tarnopolski who convinces them that they must look into their own lives and circumstances to find freedom in life." Kirkus

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week D 19 '47 450w

"A unique treatment of Nazi bondage, good humored, philosophically perceptive, but scarcely for a general audience."

+ — Kirkus 15:375 Ji 15 '47 110w

Reviewed by Thomas Sugrue

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 D 21 '47 900w

"Mr. Gottlieb is a Croatian journalist, now resident in Palestine, who has known the inside of more than one Nazi prison. 'The Key to the Great Gate' ranks as a first-rate tour de force." Richard Match

+ N Y Times p40 N 30 '47 750w

"A small classic of science fantasy delightfully translated and illustrated and worthy to rank beside the unclassifiable imaginings of such other Central European writers as Leo Perutz and Karel Capek." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 O 26 '47 170w

GOUDGE, ELIZABETH. Little white horse; il. by C. Walter Hodges. 280p $2.50 Coward-McCann

47-2972

"In end-paper maps C. Walter Hodges draws for us the scene of this story. . . It is the estate of the Merryweather family in Devonshire one hundred years ago. To it comes Maria, last of the Merryweathers, with her governess and her snooty little dog, Wiggins. And here Maria finds her kingdom and the fascinating people and animals who inhabit it. . . Here is Robin, the boy who played with Maria

GOUDGE, ELIZABETH—Continued
in her dreams. Here is lovely Lovejoy Minette, Robin's mother, and the dwarf, Marmaduke Scarlet, who is a superlative cook. Here is the Old Parson. Here are the animals. . . All of them are Maria's devoted followers in her struggle against the evil of the Black Men who live in the pine woods." Sat R of Lit

Booklist 43:349 J1 1 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 My 25 '47
160w

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold
Christian Science Monitor p14 My 29 '47 330w

"Fantasy and reality meet on equal terms in an exciting mystery story in which all of the characters, both humans and animals, come alive, and stay alive from start to finish. . . It is far more than an exciting story which will be eagerly read by girls of eleven or twelve onward that Miss Goudge has written. It stands out like a beacon light from all the planned books for the early teens, and also from the recent novels concerned with children or adolescents which seem to have no story at all." A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk 23:208 My '47 500w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 23:212 My '47 120w

"An elegantly written book with the thoughtful, polished air of a Jane Austen gone exquisite. Though the prose gives pleasure, I doubt that many young readers will stay with more than a few pages of the slow-moving, dreamy tale that floats between reality and illusion. . . The delicate humor, the enchanting landscape, the unreal light continue however to give these qualities and nothing more."

+ Kirkus 15:167 Mr 15 '47 210w

"Although the descriptions are sometimes over-long, this is a peculiarly charming story sure to please older girls who enjoy Elizabeth Goudge's way of weaving enchantment. . . Recommended." H. M. Brogan

+ Library J 72:738 My 1 '47 70w

"Grandmothers who loved George Macdonald, mothers who loved Kenneth Graham, may, if their descendants are at all like them, confidently give them this book." M. L. Becker
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11 My 11 '47 550w

"Practical-minded youngsters should be warned that this is hardly their dish. They will, I fear, find the whimsy and the quaintness over-sweet, and indeed it is laid on with a lavish hand. . . Yet for imaginative readers—chiefly girls of 10 to 14—this tale will have a strong appeal. There are richness of detail and a lovely use of color and light—sunshine, moonlight, and shadow, symbolically contrasted—to catch the fancy, and a spiritual quality in this parable of greed and pride vanquished by innocence and good-will. Mr. Hodges' expert drawings reflect both the bright and the mystery-laden atmosphere of the setting." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p33 Ap 27 '47 280w

"The theme of this story is as old as the fairy tales, and it is written with a haunting beauty of wording and atmosphere. The drawings have the same quality, with the touch of humor that constantly lightens the text. It is a book to cherish, to read again and again and again."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:37 Ap 19 '47 250w

GOUDSMIT, SAMUEL ABRAHAM. Alsos. 259p $3.50 Schuman

940.53185 U.S. War department. Alsos mission. Atomic bomb. World war, 1939-1945—Science 47-11609

"A report of the activities and findings of the Alsos mission, a military-scientific group sent to Europe in 1944 to follow the advancing Allied armies and obtain the earliest possible information about German scientific work of significance to the war. While Alsos was nominally concerned with all German war science, and did learn things of value about other matters, its principal directive dealt with atomic energy. . . Samuel Goudsmit—native of Holland, internationally known physicist and teacher at the University of Michigan—was the scientific leader of Alsos." (N Y Times) Index.

Booklist 44:149 D 15 '47

"By all means read 'Alsos' for the intense interest and great profit you will find in it. But, by all you hold dear, dissuade yourself, your neighbors and, if possible, Dr. Goudsmit from 'unified control' of science and research." A. A. Bates

+ Chicago Sun Book Week N 10 '47 750w

Kirkus 15:596 O 15 '47 100w

"To the extent that the average citizen is permitted to learn how his servants spend his money for the purpose of insuring his safety, it will be useful for every intelligent American to hear Goudsmit's story and ponder his views. In any case, 'Alsos' is highly entertaining." L. N. Ridenour

+ N Y Times p8 N 16 '47 2000w

GOULD, JACOB MARTIN. Output and productivity in the electric and gas utilities, 1899-1942. 195p $3 Nat. bur. of economic research

621.3 Electric utilities. Gas industry 47-741

"Both gas and electricity are considered in this single study because of the complex competitive relations between these industries. During the period covered in the report, electricity replaced gas as an illuminant, and gas, in turn, grew in importance as a fuel for cooking and as a source of heat. In the gas industry, rivalry between manufactured gas and natural gas, with the latter assuming an increasingly important position, makes the situation more complex. Indexes of output are computed for each industry and later used to measure technological progress." U S Quarterly Bkl

"Dr. Gould's book maintains the high standards hitherto established by the National Bureau in its research publications, both as to method and presentation. The author and his staff have done perhaps as thorough a job as is possible in view of the limited data. . . Perhaps the most significant shortcoming of Dr. Gould's otherwise excellent work is his failure to identify 'readiness-to-serve' as well as energy actually supplied as part of the physical output of service." Henry Herz

+ Ann Am Acad 254:210 N '47 600w

"This book is a useful addition to the National Bureau's collection of factual material concerning trends in the performance of American industry. It should be of interest both to the statistician and to the economist."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:156 Je '47 250w

GOULD, JEAN ROSALIND. Jane; il. by Jean Stahl. 248p $2.50 Houghton

Austen, Jane—Juvenile literature 47-30297

Story of the life of Jane Austen, written for high school girls. The book could be used as an introduction to her novels. Bibliography.

"The interest holds up throughout the book, and Jane Austen's personal charm has been caught without losing sight of the fact that she was human. The period is actually presented without being dull." Jane Cobb

+ Atlantic 179:130 Je '47 60w

Booklist 43:311 Je 1 '47

"The author of this fictionalized biography lacks her subject's ability to present boldly drawn characters, and she errs in including too many details and incidents. However, she has given us the background out of which came Jane Austen's writings." H. F. Griswold
Christian Science Monitor p12 Je 12 '47 270w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:267 J1 '47 90w

"Many of the models for Jane's characters are foreshadowed in this gay story of the creator of Pride and Prejudice, Sense and Sensibility, Northanger Abbey and so on. Her biographer shows a nice feeling for the work of this delightful writer, and has given her life and writings a pleasant unity. Good reading, and excellent background material."

+ Kirkus 15:192 Ap 1 '47 170w

Reviewed by S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 72:895 Je 1 '47 60w

"The charm and something of the nature of the charm of Jane Austen's person come through and the story is so well founded on what we know of her life through her letters and may fairly infer from her novels that a girl who thus makes her acquaintance will have nothing to unlearn later. Besides, she may get a convincing impression of what family life in this class of society was at this time, more especially in the well connected solidarity of the Austen family, so happily and naturally incorporating its cousins and in-laws into a clanlike community of mutual interest."

M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 My 11 '47 280w

"The author has made good use of letters and other sources to present an engaging account. Younger girls will read it happily as a 'family story' and it will be a painless introduction both to biography and to Jane's books."

M. C. Scoggin

+ N Y Times p27 Je 22 '47 190w

"Reads like a novel—and a very charming novel at that... This is sure to be a biography that will become popular. One wonders if it will not add many readers to Jane Austen's long list."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:36 My 17 '47 140w

Wis Lib Bul 43:100 Je '47

GOULD, JOHN. The house that Jacob built. 256p $2.75 Morrow

818 Country life. Maine—Social life and customs 47-11779

On the night in 1940 when the author's son was born the old Maine house built by Mr Gould's great-grandfather in 1780 burned down. In 1946 the house was rebuilt, as nearly like the old house as possible, with modern comforts and gadgets added. The book is filled with anecdotes of the lives of the families of the two periods.

Booklist 44:130 D 1 '47

"The over-all picture is authentic and convincing. It touches responsive chords, not only in those who know Maine, but in people everywhere who know the land and work with their hands." E. D. C.

+ Christian Science Monitor p24 D 4 '47 700w

+ Kirkus 15:493 S 1 '47 140w

"Indispensable to libraries in general, this successor to The Farmer Takes a Wife undoubtedly will enjoy a growing popularity and establish valued bonds of mutual enjoyment to readers generally. Highly recommended for purchase." H. S. Taylor

+ Library J 72:1609 N 15 '47 130w

"One more brilliant addition to the growing library of worthwhile books on Maine." Richardson Wright

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 D 14 '47 550w

"There are at least two excellent reasons for not missing this book, aside from the undeniable fact that it is captivating in itself. If you happen to live in Maine or to have your roots there, you will hasten to read it, for it is an unsurpassed picture of that unique and incomparable State and will evoke gratitude or homesickness as the case may be. And if you are tired of obscurities in literature and in life and want something real and simple to straighten out your mind and convince you that everything on earth isn't going completely to pot, that want will be satisfied within these seemingly casual pages." M. E. Chase

+ N Y Times p5 D 28 '47 700w

Wis Lib Bul 43:170 D '47

GOULD, RALPH ERNEST. Yankee drummer. (Whittlesey house publication) 236p $2.50 McGraw

B or 92

47-31352

An account of the author's experiences as a young man, selling farms in Maine, and later as a salesman for a farm machinery company.

Booklist 44:86 N 1 '47

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 Ja 18 '48 140w

"Readers of Mr. Gould's earlier reminiscences of a 'Yankee Storekeeper' will want to know at once whether his new book contains the same wealth of spontaneous if noisy humor and more of his tall stories of simple country matters like horse-trading, the weather, and good food. The answer is immediate and positive: Mr. Gould's new book perfectly complements his first." R. T. Bond

+ N Y Times p36 O 26 '47 600w

GOVAN, GILBERT E., and LIVINGOOD, JAMES WESTON. University of Chattanooga: sixty years. 271p il $3 Univ. of Chattanooga, Tenn.

378 Chattanooga. University 47-7200

A history of Chattanooga university from 1872 to 1946, written by the librarian of the university and a member of the faculty. Illustrated with photographs. Index.

Reviewed by N. K. Burger

N Y Times p14 Jl 13 '47 400w

School & Society 66:15 Jl 5 '47 30w

GRACIAN Y MORALES, BALTASAR. Art of worldly wisdom. 160p $2.50 Essential bks.

868 Aphorisms and apothegms 47-4712

"Three hundred precepts for success based on the original work of Baltasar Gracian, by Otto Eisenschiml." (Subtitle) The original book of this title was written by a Spanish Jesuit who lived in the seventeenth century; this work is called "a reworking" of the original and contains modern applications.

"From the negative point of view, this reviewer finds that the chief criticism which he is forced to make is that the book is too widely heralded as an interpretation of Gratian. This gives rise to the fear that many readers will pass over the candid statement of Dr. Eisenschiml in his preface regarding his departures from the original in both form and content. This reviewer feels that a different spirit breathes in each work. Gratian's work bears the stamp of an intensely Catholic spirit. Dr. Eisenschiml reflects the modern attitude of secularization." R. T. Zegers

Chem & Eng N 25:2774 S 22 '47 400w

Reviewed by Olive Carruthers
Chicago Sun Book Week p2 My 25 '47 420w

Reviewed by Anne Fremantle

Commonweal 46:338 Jl 18 '47 750w

Kirkus 15:154 Mr 1 '47 100w

"The report, I'm afraid, is that I can jolly well do without it. And so, I believe, can everyone else who has ever read the best-known translation, which is that made by Dr. Fisher, even though the latter does smell of the lamp a trifle." J. H. Jackson

— San Francisco Chronicle p14 Je 9 '47 750w

GRAEME, BRUCE, pseud. See Jeffries, G. M.

GRAFF, RAYMOND K., and others. The prefabricated house. 132p $2.75 Doubleday

728 Buildings, Prefabricated. Dwellings 47-2375

"A practical guide for the prospective buyer." (Subtitle) Discusses advantages and disadvantages, how to choose the best dwelling for particular needs, types of designs, extra cost factors, etc. Includes floor plans, photographs, and shows processes of assembly.

GRAFF, RAYMOND K.—Continued

Booklist 43:269 My 1 '47

Bookmark 8:5 My '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Ap 6 '47
70w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '47

Eng N 139:135 J1 10 '47 100w

Kirkus 15:89 F 1 '47 100w

San Francisco Chronicle p25 S 7 '47
60w

Wis Lib Bul 43:78 My '47

GRAFTON, CORNELIUS WARREN. My name is Christopher Nagel. 357p $2.75 Rinehart 47-2742

A novel about college life in the '20s. The central character, Christy, is a pre-med student and star baseball player, who makes mistakes both physical and mental. The story is supposed to be told by Christy himself, twenty years later.

"What nonsense. The only reason for reading this book is that it takes you through endless college life detail, and if you have some kind of nostalgia for reviewing such a thing, well, you might get a kick out of portions of Christopher Nagel's late adolescence. Otherwise, you would be wiser to retire to the nearest juke box and play the tune which begins 'My name is MacNamara . . .' The word combination there is more intriguing." T. E. Cassidy

— Commonweal 46:338 J1 18 '47 300w

Kirkus 15:118 Mr 1 '47 170w

"It may be a faithful transcript of undergraduate talk and a reasonably accurate report on campus and parked-car love making, but such material has been on the market a long while, and the freshness has gone out of it. When the college hero signs off in the last chapter with a letter to his father—'I've been doing a lot of thinking lately. I guess maybe I'm growing up'—there is no valid evidence to back up either claim." Lisle Bell

— N Y Herald Tribune Wkly BK R p13
Ag 3 '47 110w

Reviewed by Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p10 Je 29 '47
100w

Reviewed by Merle Miller

Sat R of Lit 30:29 J1 5 '47 410w

GRAHAM, AL. Mouse with the small guitar [verses; pictures by Tony Palazzo]. 35p $1.50 Welch 47-11971

These "songs of a mouse in a minor key" are short nonsense rhymes to be read aloud to children. They are all about familiar animals.

"Last year this author and artist wrote of 'Timothy Turtle.' Anyone who met Timothy will run to make the acquaintance of the guitar-playing mouse."

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p2A N 19
'47 90w

Kirkus 15:625 N 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by M. A. Webb

Library J 72:1783 D 15 '47 50w

"[These songs] are about as weighty as Mother Goose and just as hard to stop chanting once you have started on them. Tony Palazzo's pen and ink drawings add a great deal of fun to the breezy meters." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p54 N 23 '47 110w

Sat R of Lit 30:33 D 13 '47 30w

Wis Lib Bul 43:177 D '47

GRAHAM, DOROTHY (MRS J. W. BENNETT). Wind across the world. 278p $2.75 Putnam 47-2262

Novel about China from about 1896 to 1927. It is the story of an American girl who went out to China with her father, who was to build the first railroad up the Yangtse Valley. The Boxer Rebellion and the revolution figure briefly in the story, but the main theme is Kit Fenton's love and understanding of China and the Chinese.

Booklist 43:359 J1 15 '47

Cath World 165:380 J1 '47 250w

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ap 13 '47
180w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '47

Kirkus 15:134 Mr 1 '47 170w

"The heroine is a nice girl; several of the other characters seem exaggerated. The story is rather unsatisfactory. Recommended." Anne Whitmore

Library J 72:528 Ap 1 '47 80w

"As a picture of Shanghai, the book is often unsatisfactory, at least to one native of that city. It is not that what Miss Graham writes is inaccurate; indeed, with one or two exceptions, she is most careful in her geography. What is important is the peculiar lack of completeness in many scenes. In fact, throughout the book one is frequently left with the same feeling of incompleteness." J. J. Espey

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly BK R p10
Ap 27 '47 1200w

"Miss Graham has been successful in giving a compact and lucid picture of the changes of thirty years in terms of a western family living in Shanghai. She has a particularly keen feeling for atmosphere and her physical impressions of the Chinese city and countryside are set down with the vivid directness and succinctness of a Chinese print." Catharine Brody

+ N Y Times p16 My 11 '47 430w

"An interesting, competently written novel in which China is not only the setting but the principal character. . . . Miss Graham knows China intimately and, what is more important, seems really to understand the significance of the events of the past fifty years there."

+ New Yorker 23:117 Ap 12 '47 120w

Reviewed by A. K. D. Doughty

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ag 3 '47
800w

"As a stylist Miss Graham excels in the delicate touch, the balanced fusion of artifice and realism, that suits both 'the swift violence that was to cut away corruption' and the peopled landscape of 'flat fertile ricelands, the fringe of bamboos, the canals dark with junks.' In its own restrained and tolerant way, 'Wind Across the World' is a lesson in brotherhood." A. F. Wolfe

+ Sat R of Lit 30:25 My 31 '47 500w

Springf'd Union p9 Je 2 '47 120w

GRAHAM, EDWARD HARRISON. Land and wildlife. 232p il $4 Oxford799 Wild life, Conservation of. Land utilization
Agr47-258

A study of some of the land practices which have been useful in preserving wildlife. The author stresses practices on farms, such as use of ponds, brush, and hardy plants, as breeding places for fish, small animals, and birds. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:9 S 1 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 J1 '47

"A fascinating account . . . illustrated with handsome halftones. . . . [Mr Graham's] program is substantially documented with actual examples and yet presented in a manner readable enough to intrigue the armchair cultivator." E. S.

+ Commonweal 46:220 Je 13 '47 120w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:891 Je 1 '47 40w

"This is an important and much needed book. . . . It is a practical guide for all farmers and landowners and a book for the increasing number of general readers who are interested in conserving our national resources. The author has avoided many of the errors that have been made by other writers in the field." H. S. Pearson

+ N Y Times p14 Ag 17 '47 400w
School & Society 65:367 My 17 '47 20w
Springf'd Republican p5B S 14 '47 120w

GRAHAM, FRANK DUNCAN. Audels oil burner guide; installing, servicing, repairing. 364p il $1 Audel

697.7 Oil burners 46-5011

"This book is primarily for workmen who install and service oil burners. Although much of the information contained in it applies to the smaller types of oil burners used for the heating of dwellings, considerable information is included on industrial types of burners. The exposition is carried out mainly by questions and answers and by reproductions of diagrams and photographs of manufactured equipment." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 71:1128 S 1 '46 60w
N Y New Tech Bks 31:28 Ap '46

GRAHAM, LORENZ B. Tales of Momolu; il. by Letterio Calapai. 169p $2.50 McKay

Children in Africa 46-8058

Everyday adventures in the life of an African boy, who is waiting for his twelfth birthday. For grades five to six.

Booklist 43:138 Ja 1 '47

"In spite of the foreign setting, Momolu and his friends seem curiously like the boys down the street and the universality of human emotions appears as a positive overtone to the fun and adventures of everyday life." Martha King

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ja 19 '47 180w

"This kindly picture of native life is by a writer who knows western Africa well. The illustrations are drawn with sympathy and understanding." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:42 Ja '47 80w

"Fine for reading aloud to seven and older, and for fourth grade and up to read to themselves."

+ Kirkus 14:387 Ag 15 '46 120w

"Good portrayal of tribal customs and good characterization. Recommended for fifth and sixth grade readers." Elizabeth Johnson

+ Library J 71:1808 D 15 '46 60w

"These stories, collected while the author was visiting mission schools in Africa, show that the problems of growing up are essentially the same, whether one lives in an American community or at the edge of the jungle. Ten to 12 year old boys everywhere will understand Momolu's need for recognition and will enter wholeheartedly—and somewhat enviously—into the accounts of his daily life, here graphically presented in text and pictures." Elizabeth Hodges

+ N Y Times p31 F 2 '47 180w

GRAHAM, SHIRLEY. There was once a slave; the heroic story of Frederick Douglass. 310p $3 Messner

B or 92 Douglass, Frederick 47-2086

In semi-fictional form the author tells the story of Frederick Douglass, a slave who escaped from bondage before the Civil war, educated himself and became one of the leaders of the abolition movement, the friend of Lincoln, John Brown, and William Lloyd Garrison. Bibliography.

Booklist 43:271 My 1 '47

"Miss Graham has written a competent story but there is not the breath of vision and the drive in the work to do complete justice to such a heroic figure. Apparently she has fictionalized Douglass' autobiography, 'Life and Times of Frederick Douglass.' In doing this she has taken many liberties by introducing conversation and thoughts for which there is no documentation. She further confuses the reader in the latter half of the book by taking numerous direct quotations from the autobiography and making footnote references to other source material. . . However, the reading public which is not well acquainted with this great American character will find the book an interesting story as well as a source of insight to the man, the period and the genesis of the problem." H. R. Cayton

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Ap 13 '47 550w

Christian Science Monitor p18 Ap 2 '47 550w

Reviewed by L. J. Trese

Commonweal 46:98 My 9 '47 360w

Kirkus 15:113 F 15 '47 360w

"I cannot see that Miss Graham has made any contribution to interracial understanding, for she is so obviously determined to Uplift the Race that she makes Douglass a quite unbelievable hero and has robbed him of dignity and humanity alike. As serious biography this performance is very nearly ludicrous; and in the battle against intolerance it seems to me that the book's effect will be negligible." James Baldwin

— Nation 165:78 Jl 19 '47 800w

New Repub 116:33 Ap 21 '47 170w

"Miss Graham has skillfully woven excerpts from Douglass's own writing into her book, and everywhere she seems faithful to his spirit. 'There Was Once a Slave' has been written as a novelized biography, but it has the stamp of truth about it. It brings alive today an important and neglected figure of American history." Coleman Rosenberger

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 Mr 23 '47 1100w

"Douglass was important enough to deserve a detailed and critical evaluation: but until such a study of him is made, Miss Graham's sentimental and eloquent tribute may be read with pleasurable emotion." Lloyd Lewis

+ N Y Times p3 Ap 6 '47 850w

"Miss Graham's account is a dramatic and compelling one, but her style is amateurish and her dialogue, when she is on her own, filling in gaps left by Douglass's own works, is marked by hushed, Algeresque hero worship of her subject."

+ New Yorker 23:106 Ap 5 '47 120w

Reviewed by Alain Locke

Survey G 36:361 Je '47 380w

"A vivid picture of [Douglass'] times, very readable, and at moments full of suspense. . . Douglass' relationship with John Brown, his position in the Civil War conflicts, his appointment as Minister to Haiti and the end of his life are all movingly told. Shirley Graham, who was brought up on stories of Frederick Douglass, whom her grandfather had known, finds it difficult to curb her own hero worship of him, but the factual basis of her story and the dignity of her subject matter keep it from being sentimental."

U S Quarterly Bk1 3:148 Je '47 140w

Wis Lib Bul 43:118 Jl '47

GRANICK, HARRY. Underneath New York; diagrams by Philip Westerfield May. 211p il maps $3 Rinehart

352.5 New York (city). Public utilities 47-4548

Discusses what goes on under New York city's pavements: the arrangements for heat, light, sanitation, communication, and transportation. Illustrated with photographs. For grades six to nine.

Booklist 44:38 S 15 '47

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 23:449 N '47 130w

Kirkus 15:341 Jl 1 '47 120w

"Valuable book. . . Many readers will pore over the diagrams, maps and photographs. No index, but useful for reference. Recommended for children's rooms and adult collections." Eileen Riols

+ Library J 72:1280 S 15 '47 110w

GRANICK, HARRY—Continued

"No other writing has done the job so simply, with so many illustrations... [The author] tells, first, the story of how water reaches the city and how it is distributed—and it is fascinating reading. The accompanying photographs and etchings help understanding. Even the statistics, not too heavily laid on, should make excellent parlor conversation when the talk begins to flag. The story of waste disposal, though you wouldn't be inclined to think so, makes absorbing reading too." Meyer Berger

+ N Y Times p32 S 28 '47 500w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét

New Yorker 23:154 D 6 '47 80w

San Francisco Chronicle p21 D 14 '47 150w

GRANT, CHARLES HAMPSON. Design for flight; fundamentals of aviation demonstrated by building and flying models. 275p il $3.95 Greenberg

629.13334 Airplane models. Aeronautics

47-1570

"Aeronautic principles outlined with instructions and full-scale plans for building various types of model airplanes. Construction, tools, materials, parts, stability and performance are discussed." (Library J) No index.

Booklist 43:249 Ap 15 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p10 Mr 30 '47 50w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:642 Ap 15 '47 30w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:33 Ap '47

GRANT, EUGENE LODEWICK. Statistical quality control. 563p $5 McGraw 311.22 Sampling (statistics). Statistics

46-7259

"This book deals with the laws of probability that may be used to improve acceptance procedures and thus secure the best possible quality assurance from a given inspection cost. Explains the Shewhart control chart, its use in manufacturing to reduce costs of spoilage and rework, and to obtain a better coordination between design, production, and inspection. The careful explanation of basic principles is accompanied by many practical examples demonstrating the broad usefulness of quality control techniques in dealing with quality problems in mass production." Publisher's note

"A timely and carefully written volume." K. J. Arnold

+ Chem & Eng N 25:1077 Ap 14 '47 550w

"Professor Grant's book can be heartily recommended as a guide for those who require a working knowledge of the application of statistical methods to control of manufacturing operations. Its contents should be thoroughly assimilated by all technically trained people who are desirous of improving quality and uniformity of product, or decreasing manufacturing costs. Any serious approach to these problems requires a working knowledge of statistical methodology. This book offers a practical down-to-earth approach to this knowledge." H. M. Smallwood

+ Chem Eng 54:263 Ja '47 650w

Eng N 133:95 F 6 '47 140w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:825 Je 1 '46 100w

Management R 36:124 F '47 120w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:62 O '46

Reviewed by J. M. Juan

N Y Times p30 Ja 11 '48 80w

"The book is avowedly a working manual for production and inspection supervisors, for engineers, and for management; it may well find acceptance also as a textbook for college courses in business organization and management. There is some repetition and underscoring of the apparently obvious, many practical examples from the shop, and a number of lists of problems for the reader to solve. The book is of considerable importance from the point of view of priority as a full length, usable textbook on the recently developed subject of statistical quality control."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:109 Mr '47 260w

GRANT, JAMES J. Single-shot rifles. 385p il $5 Morrow

623.4422 Rifles

47-30115

"Of interest to gun collectors. Study of many models of single-shot rifles with complete listing of those produced by famous makers. Instructions on remodeling of old single-shot rifles and types of cartridges to use to-day. 175 illustrations cover all standard models." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 43:200 Mr 1 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:389 Mr 1 '47 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:8 Ja '47

"A gun addict's book, superbly illustrated and documented with facts and statistics on native and foreign rifles, cartridges and loads. The reader is constantly reminded, though never ostentatiously, of Mr. Grant's love for his subject." G. S. A.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 F 9 '47 150w

GRANVILLE-BARKER, HARLEY GRANVILLE. Prefaces to Shakespeare. v 1 552p $5 Princeton univ. press

822.33 Shakespeare, William—Criticism and interpretation (A47-347)

"First published in London, this is Volume 1 of the American edition. Included are discussions of Hamlet, King Lear, The Merchant of Venice, Antony and Cleopatra and Cymbeline. It is a study of meanings and stagecraft distinguished also for the quality of its writing." Current Hist

Booklist 43:166 F 1 '47

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Jl 6 '47 500w (Review of v 1 and 2)

"This will rate as among the most notable and permanently valuable contributions to modern Shakespeare criticism."

+ Christian Century 64:853 Jl 9 '47 140w

Christian Science Monitor p12 Ja 11 '47 360w

Current Hist 12:153 F '47 50w

"Indispensable for theatre collections, college and large public libraries. Highly recommended." George Freedley

+ Library J 71:1539 N 1 '46 110w

Reviewed by Arthur Mizener

Nation 164:549 My 10 '47 950w

Reviewed by Stark Young

New Repub 116:43 Ja 13 '47 650w

Reviewed by S. C. Chew

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Jl 6 '47 950w (Review of v 1 and 2)

"Much of Granville-Barker's thinking has already passed into common theatre practice. His reiterated insistence on the uncluttered freedom of the Elizabethan stage has already had its effect. Some of his theses, as for instance the importance he gives to the question of act-division in the plays, may seem of little practical importance nowadays. But we already owe him more than we know. The present writer is glad to acknowledge a profound debt to Harley Granville-Barker, and is grateful to renew, in this volume, an old and deeply valued acquaintance." Margaret Webster

+ N Y Times p4 Ja 26 '47 1150w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 23 '47 30w

"The American edition of the late Harley Granville-Barker's prefaces will be warmly welcomed by everyone who knows his Shakespeare either in or out of the theatre. Begun originally as actual prefaces to a fine edition of the plays, the series soon burst its bounds

... are full-length studies. Each of them is a probing analysis both of the play and of the main problems of its staging in Elizabethan and modern times."

+ Theatre Arts 31:70 F '47 140w

GRANVILLE-BARKER, HARLEY GRANVILLE. Prefaces to Shakespeare. v2. 449p $5 Princeton Univ. press

822.33 Shakespeare, William—Criticism and interpretation (A47-347)

The second volume of these "prefaces" contains long essays (150 pages each) on Othello and Coriolanus, and shorter ones on Julius Caesar, Romeo and Juliet, and Love's Labour's Lost." (Christian Century)

"Here, as before, the rare merit is the author's extraordinarily expert discussion of ways in which Shakespeare made the stage itself, and even the limitations and conventions of the time, serve his dramatic purpose, together with a sensitive appreciation of Shakespeare's poetry and the subtle nuances of his rhetoric in relation to changing situations."

+ Christian Century 64:927 J1 30 '47 270w

"Readers who are well-intentioned, but acquainted with only a few of Shakespeare's plays, will find these dissections (most of them longer than the plays themselves) somewhat tedious. But actors, producers, and advanced students of Shakespeare will find these prefaces indispensable, for Mr. Granville-Barker, with perhaps more solid authority and keener insight than any other critic in the particular field, has done justice in detail to Shakespeare's stagecraft, without overlooking his powers of characterization and poetic eloquence." Robert Berkelman

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 30 '47 360w

Reviewed by George Freedley

Library J 72:1272 S 15 '47 30w

"In his later years—when the prefaces were written—Granville-Barker seems to have led a decidedly isolated existence, isolated, that is, from modern critical sensibility. One would expect from a critic writing in the Nineteen Twenties, Thirties and Forties much more about Shakespeare's language and especially his imagery. The lack of such a contribution in Granville-Barker's prefaces is not a special, departmental lack only. One feels that he could have penetrated more deeply into each play as a whole had he shown more sensitiveness to tone and attitude in the particular word; in short, he could have understood more fully what Shakespeare's plays mean." Eric Bentley

N Y Times p4 J1 20 '47 1300w

New Yorker 23:71 J1 19 '47 80w

"To the student, the actor, even the casual reader of Shakespeare, this volume is an essential. And if you are fearful of its being covered with the dust of pedantry, stifle the misgiving. It will kindle in your mind an even greater desire to read the plays upon which it discourses." P. S.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ag 10 '47 120w

GRATTAN, CLINTON HARTLEY, ed. Australia; chapters by K. H. Bailey [and others]. (United Nations ser) 444p il maps $5 Univ. of Calif.

919.4 Australia—History

Partial contents: Land and people, by J. M. Holmes; The coming of the British to Australia, by Eris O'Brien; The triumph of the pastoral economy, by J. M. Ward; The gold rushes and the aftermath, by R. M. Crawford, and G. F. James; The commonwealth, by L. F. Fitzharding; Foreign policy, by Frederick Eggleston; Australia and the world economy, by E. R. Walker; Banking, finance, fiscal policy, by S. J. Butlin; The rôle of labour, by Lloyd Ross; The social structure of Australia, by C. H. Grattan; On Australian culture, by Vance and Nettie Palmer; Literature, by H. M. Green; Art, by Bernard Smith; Religion, by E. H. Burgmann; Education, by K. S. Cunningham; Native peoples, by A. P. Elkin. Index.

Booklist 44:170 Ja 1 '48

Chicago Sun Book Week p18A D 3 '47 50w

"To nearly all but the specialist, Australia remains a remote and vaguely considered never-never land. It is worthy of our attention; but where can the intelligent layman go for concise and accurate information? The present volume . . . is the best answer to this question that has yet appeared." Bruce Sutherland

+ N Y Times p26 Ja 25 '48 750w

GRAVES, HOWARD BRADLEY. Mineral key. 178p $4 McGraw

549.1 Mineralogy, Determinative 47-5385

"This little manual is intended to serve as a handy guide to the identification of mineral specimens. Written primarily for the amateur mineral collector, it includes only those species most likely to be encountered. Brief descriptions of methods for making physical and chemical tests, precede a tabulation of the physical properties and confirmatory tests for 823 minerals. The book will also be of value to prospectors and professional mineralogists who may not have access to laboratory facilities, for the suggested equipment is inexpensive or readily improvised; and the chemicals required are limited to those useful in a maximum number of tests." (N Y New Tech Bks) Indexes.

Booklist 44:84 N 1 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1112 Ag '47 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:54 J1 '47

GRAVES, LAWRENCE MURRAY. Theory of functions of real variables. 300p $4 McGraw

517.5 Functions of a real variable 47-554

"This book is designed chiefly for use in introductory courses in graduate schools. In the first chapter, the author briefly surveys the fundamental concepts and methods of mathematical logic that will be needed by the student and explains the symbols for logical connectives. In the second chapter, he shows a method for constructing the real number system from the assumed properties of natural numbers. In succeeding chapters, he treats such topics as point sets, the properties of continuous functions, the Riemann integral, the Lebesgue integral, and the Stieltjes integral. Although he has included some exercises, he has omitted many proofs, assuming that the student will develop these himself under the guidance of an instructor." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1715 D 1 '46 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:12 Ja '47

GRAVES, STELLA MARIE. Min River boat songs; tunes collected by Malcolm F. Farley. 48p $3 Day

784.4 Folk songs, Chinese 46-7445

"Working from the hundred boat songs of the Min River, of Fukien Province, collected by Malcolm Farley, Professor Graves has made of them ten truly lovely musical compositions. Four are quartets, the rest solos; none is a direct transcription of the original melody." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

"The effect has been to preserve the spirit and the general atmosphere, and this has been uncommonly well done. The concert program in America may be the richer for the resulting compositions."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 Ap 27 '47 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 D 1 '46 150w

GRAY, JOHN STANLEY. Psychology in human affairs; with the assistance of eleven contributors. 646p $3.75 McGraw

150.13 Psychology, Applied 46-8555

Primarily for the beginning student, or for any survey course in applied psychology. Includes sections on: Psychology in child development; Psychology in education; Psychological effects of nutrition, drugs, alcohol, and tobacco; Psychology in mental illness; Psychology in speech correction; Psychology in public opinion and propaganda; Psychology in crime; Psychology in industry—employment; Psychology in industry—training and merit rating; Psychology in work and efficiency; Psychology in business. Recommended supplementary readings at end of each chapter. Index.

Management R 36:237 Ap '47 20w

School & Society 65:446 Je 14 '47 20w

GRAY, MADELINE (MRS R. C. URBAN), and DE LO PADUA, VASS. How to cook for profit; il. by Robert C. Urban. 396p $5 Greenberg

641.572 Cookery 47-30340

"A complete guide to food in quantity, from order pad to diner's table." (Subtitle) The book is intended for the operators of an eating place, averaging about seventy-five seats. Includes general directions, and chapters devoted to recipes on special kinds of food: soups; fried dishes; hashes; curries; roasts; vegetables; sauces; etc. Index.

Booklist 43:342 Jl 1 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '47

"If you want to operate a good restaurant, it's a must volume, for by not doing what the authors suggest, you will have good food and not sink to the bad-food average of so many eating places." A. D. Faber

— N Y Times p19 Ag 3 '47 80w

GRAYZEL, SOLOMON. History of the Jews, from the Babylonian exile to the end of World war II. 835p il maps $3.50 Jewish pub.

296 Jews—History 47-26363

"Traces the story of the Jewish people from 586 B. C. to the modern experiments in cultural adjustment and survival. It especially emphasizes the history of the Jews in the United States; and it correlates the efforts to build a Jewish community in Palestine with the Jewish and general life of the modern age." (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Index.

"Although the book was written to inform or remind Jews of those factors which have made them a people apart, it will be of value to libraries for the unfamiliar information it assembles, particularly on the history of Jews in Europe and America."

+ Booklist 44:127 D 1 '47

"It seems reasonable to think that this will be the standard moderately popular one-volume history of the Jews until enough new history has been made to justify rewriting the story... The complicated fabric of events, movements and personalities during the medieval and early modern period is presented with enough detail to make it substantial and vivid, but with enough simplification to prevent undue strain upon the patience of the non-professional reader... No sensitive Christian can read Jewish history without some embarrassment, but the author makes it as comfortable for him as any honest historian could." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 64:1208 O 8 '47 290w

Social Studies 38:380 D '47 20w

GRAZEBROOK, OWEN FRANCIS. Nicanor of Athens; the autobiography of an unknown citizen. 359p $3 Macmillan

47-4696

"Author, English industrialist, has deep affection for Greek civilization, though he is not a classic scholar and does not read Greek. His amateur studies grew out of feeling that Athenians of Pericles' day and Englishmen of our time have much in common. To give colorful picture of Greek life in golden age, Grazebrook tells imaginary autobiography of Nicanor, wealthy Athenian whom he describes as contemporary of Cleon, Alcibiades, etc. Book is based on works of Thucydides, Plato and Aristophanes." Library J

Booklist 44:50 O 1 '47

Reviewed by H. C. Webster

Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Ag 10 '47 300w

"It is a good story, told in a lively but appropriate style." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 64:973 Ag 13 '47 220w

Reviewed by W. P. Sears

Churchman 161:20 S 15 '47 190w

Reviewed by E. P. Richardson

+ Commonweal 46:578 S 26 '47 290w

Kirkus 15:343 Jl 1 '47 120w

"Written with considerable charm it will be appreciated by adults interested in antiquity and by cultured young people of high school age, though certainly no substitute for reading Thucydides in the original. Recommended for larger public, school and college libraries." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 72:1029 Jl '47 140w

Reviewed by H. I. A. Fausset

+ Manchester Guardian p3 N 22 '46 130w

"Readers nowadays have come to expect historical fiction to stem naturally from its milieu. In this respect, 'Nicanor of Athens' is unconvincing. I doubt whether any fifth-century Athenian ever thought of writing an autobiography. . . The presentation of Athenian life, though correct in details, misses the real tone of the times. . . But chiefly the fault lies in weak characterization. Nicanor is never dramatized. As a protagonist he is unlikely to hold the interest of the general reader—who may never have heard of the Peloponnesian War." Eugene O'Neill, Jr.

— N Y Times p12 Ag 17 '47 230w

"The book may suffer from appraisal at the hands of classics as a modern 'Charicles'; but its author has so absorbed himself into the world he has chosen and has so sure a touch with his people that, whatever less amateur Hellenists say about it, it will, like Mr. Graves's 'Claudius,' stand out as a notable historical novel."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p561 N 16 '46 600w

GREEN, ANNE. The old lady. 250p $2.75 Harper

47-30285

A French grandmother, visiting her daughter in America, was caught by the war and could not return for the duration. She adopted an American girl, who had been running wild, and whiled away the time by training her to be a lady. At the end of the war, the old lady returned to devastated France with her foundling, and together they attempted to help in the rebuilding.

Booklist 43:290 My 15 '47

"This is a far more sprightly and up-to-the-minute story than the title might suggest. . . Even if Anne Green is not so subtle an artist as her brother Julian, she has made a refreshingly readable novel full of compassion and free from morbidity. The Catholicity of her characters is decidedly on the sketchy side, but one gathers that the author means well by them."

Cath World 165:476 Ag '47 220w

"The book is uneven; the part about America unconvincing. But in some of the pages dealing with present-day France, Anne Green has put here much love and understanding. And 'The Old Lady' might be France herself, defeated sometimes, but never conquered." C. H. Bishop

+ — Commonweal 46:220 Je 13 '47 200w

Kirkus 15:137 Mr 1 '47 160w

Reviewed by Mary Ross

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 My 11 '47 600w

"It is unfortunate that Miss Green's gentle manner with characters, her genuine sympathy, are not matched by her inventive powers and her skill in story-telling." Nona Balakian
N Y Times p13 Je 1 '47 600w

"A depressing reminder that the silly season is at hand... It is not probable that you will care what happens to any of the well-weathered types, whom the author has hardly bothered to dust off."

— New Yorker 23:106 My 10 '47 100w

San Francisco Chronicle p21 Jl 13 '47 100w

Wis Lib Bul 43:144 O '47

GREEN, FREDERICK LAWRENCE. Odd man out. 280p $2.75 Reynal

47-1336

The first novel of a young Irish novelist to be published in this country, altho he has published several novels in England. It describes the last eight hours on earth of a hunted, wounded man as he wanders thru the slums and dark streets of Belfast. He is a young Irish revolutionary who has inadvertently killed a man, and has been mortally wounded at the same time.

"As long as Mr. Green sticks to the outward events of his story, he tells an exciting tale. The robbery scene achieves an almost unbearable suspense, and the characters, from solid householders to minor chisellers, who pick Johnny up as an accident victim and then, realizing who he is, drop him back into the gutter, are sharply drawn, plausible, at once comic and terrifying. But when the author tries to penetrate the minds of his people, he is less successful. When he entangles himself with Johnny's soul, he is flatly defeated, and goes down in a flurry of adjectives. Although the good writing outweighs the bad here, the book is notable chiefly for proving that we need not mourn the passing of Hitler's agents. Any honest political recalcitrant will more than fill their boots." P. L. Adams

+ — Atlantic 179:145 Mr '47 300w

"'Odd Man Out' is more than a hare-and-hounds thriller; it is a psychological study... Inevitability is the unifying thread of the novel, and its vivid presence is the real proof of Green's skill." Ruth Boorstin

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Mr 30 '47 200w

Kirkus 14:579 N 15 '46 130w

"Mr. Green has a fine gift for creating swiftly an ominous setting and his characters, if mostly odious or contemptible, are curiously human. Yet his book as a whole conveys a sense of tedium and despair, its dilemmas have no force to move one, and the motivations of its main characters remain as strange as they are unethical." Iris Barry

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 Mr 2 '47 470w

"Perhaps the book's firm grasp upon the reader's attention is wound up with the uneasiness that stirs within most of us at the prospect of a stringent moral choice. 'Odd Man Out' will certainly not be easily forgotten once it is read." E. S. Holsaert

N Y Times p10 F 9 '47 350w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Mr 23 '47 240w

GREEN, PAUL D., and RITCHEN, RALPH. Car owner's handbook. 192p il $2.50 Essential bks.

629.2 Automobiles—Handbooks, manuals, etc. 46-7855

"This handbook introduces car owners and drivers to the make-up and function of the automobile. It also explains the importance of keeping a car in good condition, both from a safety and an economy standpoint." (Publisher's note) Index.

Booklist 43:164 F 1 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '47

Kirkus 14:442 S 1 '46 160w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1332 O 1 '46 40w

"A concise, easy-to-understand explanation of the mechanical and electrical makeup of an automobile... The procedures described do not require great mechanical ability and many of them are not beyond the strength of a woman. Caring for the finish and upholstery is included. The final chapter is an excellent summary of good driving practice for safety and economy."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 31:56 O '46

GREENBERG, DAVID BENJAMIN, ed. Countryman's companion; decorations by Jack Wilson. 412p $3 Harper

808.8 Country life 47-31127

A collection of literary comments on rural life. The selections are arranged under the following headings: The husbandman; The drama of nature; Country living as an art, a philosophy; Farming as a practical way of life.

Booklist 44:84 N 1 '47

"This is the loveliest book I've seen this year. Beautiful to look upon, it's also full of beautiful writing." David Marshall

+ Commonweal 47:235 D 12 '47 390w

Kirkus 15:383 Jl 15 '47 170w

"Some of it is really literature, some of it is not much more than casual journalism."

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p36 N 16 '47 40w

San Francisco Chronicle p21 D 14 '47 170w

GREENBERG, DAVID BENJAMIN, ed. Furrow's end; an anthology of great farm stories; introd. by Louis Bromfield. 307p $3 Greenberg

Short stories—Collections 46-7719

A collection of short stories and sections from books, all about farming. Partial contents: How much land does a man need, by Leo Tolstoi; The pomegranate trees, by William Saroyan; Early sowing, by O. E. Rolvaag; Arkansas, by Raymond Weeks; "My ninety acres," by Louis Bromfield; Ann and the cow, by J. V. Jensen; A crop of beans, by M. K. Rawlings; A shepherd's life, by E. B. White; A thresher's tale, by Rudolph Umland; Squatter woman, by Jesse Stuart.

Booklist 43:223 Mr 15 '47

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p17 D 29 '46 50w

"The first six stories mentioned in this review make the book worth having. The Rolvaag, Rawlings, Bromfield and Perry stories all deserve long remembering. In all of them is that earth strength, that human warmth that shines through experience, sweet or bitter. It adds up not to contentment, but to strength and integrity and, in the final analysis, to human dignity. Any furrow that can reach that end is worth the plowing." Hal Borland

+ N Y Times p12 N 10 '46 470w

Wis Lib Bul 42:169 D '46

GREENBERG, SAMUEL BERNARD. Poems, edited with an introduction by Harold Holden and Jack McManis; preface by Allen Tate. 117p $3 Holt

811 47-4715

"Samuel Greenberg died of tuberculosis in a hospital on Staten Island in 1917, when he was only twenty-three. His verse had attracted the attention of, and somewhat influenced, Hart Crane. The Messrs. Holden and McManis, drawn to Greenberg's work through their interest in Crane, present the obscure young poet's literary remains with care and reverence." New Yorker

Kirkus 15:235 Ap 15 '47 120w

"He had not, at the time of his death, acquired a consistent personal idiom or freed himself from the imitativeness of the adolescent poet, and much of his verse is filled with what Allen Tate's preface calls a 'cluttered rhetoric,' with curiously mingled echoes from the Elizabethans, Romantics, Imagists and any one else he had read or heard recently. Yet all this uncertainty and vagueness is at times simply burned away by a pure creative energy that leaves some half-dozen or more poems with (to quote Tate again) 'that rare combination of direct physical sight with imaginative insight which one finds in Blake's "London".' The involved diction of the young, uneducated intellectual suddenly becomes as precise and simple as science once dreamt it was." M. L. Rosenthal

GREENBERG, S. B.—Continued

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4
Ag 31 '47 420w

"There will be few books published this year that will hold greater interest to serious readers of poetry than the present selection of poems from the manuscripts of Samuel Greenberg. . . His editors have thoughtfully included his brief and memorable autobiography in prose at the end of the book; few documents of its kind are as moving or as convincing as his last words. . . At this moment when a renewed appreciation of devotional poetry is felt, Greenberg's poems will find readers who have a sincere regard (as apart from being merely 'fashionable') for unworldliness in poetic experience." Horace Gregory

+ N Y Times p4 J1 20 '47 900w

"Greenberg, though baffled by poverty, illness, lack of education, and an imperfect sense of English (he was born in Austria), sometimes wrote poems of simple intensity that outweigh his pervasive incoherence and oddity."

New Yorker 23:99 Je 14 '47 130w

Reviewed by Evalyn Shapiro

+ Poetry 71:158 D '47 1000w

"As one reads this volume, studded with startling images, fragments of an undoubted genius, one feels the pathos of this dying East Side Chatterton reciting 'in a furnished room all alone.' But the room is sometimes wonderfully full!" G. P. Meyer

+ Sat R of Lit 30:32 O 4 '47 330w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:243 S '47 260w

GREENMAN, RUSSELL L., and GREENMAN, MRS ELIZABETH B. Getting along with unions. 158p $2.50 Harper

331.116 Collective bargaining. Trade unions —U.S. 47-30043

"Principles and techniques for management to apply in negotiating and carrying out collective bargaining agreements. A book for practical use rather than general reading; fair in attitude toward organized labor." (Booklist) Index.

Reviewed by Avery Leiserson

Am Pol Sci R 41:783 Ag '47 180w

Reviewed by Kurt Braun

Ann Am Acad 252:153 J1 '47 240w

Booklist 43:163 F 1 '47

Bookmark 8:4 My '47

"This book represents progressive management at its best. The principles propounded are ones to which disinterested industrial relations experts will subscribe. It is to be hoped that progressive unionism will soon furnish a 'Getting Along with Management.'" A. Morgner

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p8 Mr 2 '47 550w

Kirkus 14:568 N 1 '46 100w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:891 Je 1 '47 50w

"The tone and style of Getting Along with Unions should make it a suitable text for the student of industrial relations, but it will have its greatest value as a reference for management executives, supervisors, and personnel specialists, particularly those who are new to the collective bargaining relationship or who are about to embark upon their first union contract negotiations." R. S. Newhouse

+ Management R 36:356 Je '47 440w

"The employer whose blood pressure is raised by nearly every contact with a union would do well to read and to observe how calmly practical is the approach of the authors to even the most touchy questions which give society growing concern in their long-range implications. It is a hard-headed discussion of how to 'get along with unions' and thus has much to commend it. They leave philosophizing on the results of the practical approach to the social scientist." E. M. Herrick

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p27
F 23 '47 550w

"To the growing library of books intended to guide personnel officials in handling their jobs better, the Greenmans have added an intensely practical and valuable volume." A. H. Raskin

+ N Y Times p28 My 11 '47 370w
Wis Lib Bul 43:33 F '47

GREENSTEIN, JESSE PHILIP. Biochemistry of cancer. 389p il $7.80 Academic press

616.994 Cancer Med47-848

"The book is prefaced by a chapter on the general phenomena and taxonomy of cancer. The first part deals with extrinsic and intrinsic factors involved in the induction of tumors; the second part deals with nutrition, endocrinology, and chemotherapy in attempts at control of tumor induction and tumor growth; the third part covers the chemistry of tumors, the chemistry of the tumor-bearing host, and the present status of the problem in relation to the properties of tumors. A comprehensive list of references for the work cited appears at the end of each chapter." Am J Pub Health

"Increased interest in all phases of experimental cancer has created a great need for up-to-date and critical technical treatises on that subject. This need, in so far as biochemistry is concerned, has been admirably filled by the timely appearance of this new publication. . . The book is highly technical and will find great use as a reference book and as a textbook for investigators in cancer research and students of medicine and related sciences." L. A. Scheele

+ Am J Pub Health 37:771 Je '47 270w

"This is an extremely valuable book for anyone desiring to become oriented in the field of cancer because the author has used wisdom in the selection of his material from an enormous mass of cancer literature and has presented a coordinated and relatively conservative viewpoint." R. J. Williams

+ Chem & Eng N 25:2590 S 8 '47 450w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1112 Ag '47 30w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:27 Ap '47

"The book is a valuable contribution to the literature of cancer research, recommended to the advanced student, although many sections can be read with profit by the general scientist. There is an author and a subject index."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:195 Je '47 240w

GREENUP, MRS RUTH (ROBINSON) and GREENUP, LEONARD. Revolution before breakfast: Argentina, 1941-1946. 266p il $4 Univ. of N.C. press

918.2 Argentina 47-30421

The authors were newspaper correspondents in Argentina from 1941 to 1946. They describe the life and times of those days in Argentina, stressing the rise of Perón, and the part played by his wife in his bid for power. Index.

Booklist 44:11 S 1 '47

Reviewed by J. F. Rippey

Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Ag 17 '47 700w

Christian Science Monitor p14 S 3 '47 500w

"It is too bad that the authors have yielded to the 'prodding' of their friends cited on the book jacket and sought to give a picture of 'what makes the people tick' in Argentina. For their on-the-scene, play-by-play description of Perón's rise to power is good reporting. The Greenups should have stuck to politics; their general observations are often revealingly superficial." E. S. Skillin

+ — Commonweal 46:484 Ag 29 '47 340w

Current Hist 13:294 N '47 40w

Kirkus 15:380 Jl 15 '47 160w

"A detailed account of Peron's domestic as well as diplomatic policies and practices makes for exciting reading. After a slow beginning the work 'warms up'; highly recommended." Joseph Borome

+ Library J 72:1103 Ag '47 110w

"All in all, the Greenups have written as good a popular introduction to Argentina and the Argentinians as one could desire. And even those who have been reading all the more serious books on the subject will get some new food for thought." B. D. Wolfe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 S 21 '47 550w

"This is the best book that has been written about Latin America for years. Most books about Latin America tend to paint the subject in black or white, with a tinge of passion for or against. To the average reader who does not know Latin America too well, they tend to be dull in that, usually, these books deal separately with politics, economics or travel. But here Ruth and Leonard Greenup have managed to produce an exceedingly readable, often amusing and singularly balanced book which gives in human and sympathetic terms the picture of a people, their leaders, their politics and their economy." F. L. Kluckhohn

+ N Y Times p5 Ag 24 '47 950w

"It is a very excellent job of reporting and writing and a very digestible introduction to the Argentine." L. L.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 O 5 '47 300w

"Though this book will have greater appeal for many readers than weightier volumes on Argentina, it will give them nevertheless a good general picture of the country's people and politics." Stephen Naft

+ Sat R of Lit 30:16 Ag 16 '47 850w

GREENWOOD, ROBERT. Wagstaff; a comedy. 350p $2.75 Bobbs

47-4820

Horace Wagstaff was a self-made Englishman; bluff and friendly and kind of heart, but almost completely uneducated. Having made a fortune, he retired to a historical town far from his native industrial city. In Hillchester he bought a beautiful estate, modernized it, and settled down to be a country gentleman and marry off his beloved daughter. Gradually his genuine goodness wore down the stiff snobbishness of his neighbors, and 'orace's dreams were realized.

Reviewed by Olive Carruthers

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 S 14 '47 50w

"As leisurely and as wholesome as Mr. Bunting in Peace and War." L. M. Kinloch

+ Library J 72:1107 Ag '47 80w

"So uncomplex a character does not permit much subtlety in story, and Robert Greenwood bows to the limitations. He has written a generous, chuckling roast beef and Yorkshire pudding novel." Lisle Bell

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 Ag 24 '47 110w

Reviewed by Judith Paige

N Y Times p14 Ag 31 '47 270w

Times [London] Lit Sup p489 S 27 '47 270w

GREER, GUY. Your city tomorrow. 210p $2.50 Macmillan

711 City planning 47-1191

"This book has been written in the expectation that the cities and towns of the world, for all the changes likely to occur in their over-all aspects, will remain about where they are now and that their form, though far less jammed up and congested, will be much the same as heretofore. Some will grow, some will shrink, some new ones will be built; but the age-old pattern of urban life will endure. Making the present urban communities into what they can and ought to be, is the main task here under consideration." Foreword

Booklist 43:238 Ap 1 '47

Reviewed by E. A. Grunsfeld

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Mr 2 '47 320w

"Direct, down to earth, this is good material, interesting in presentation."

+ Kirkus 14:569 N 1 '46 170w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:642 Ap 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by L. E. Cooper

N Y Times p14 Ap 27 '47 500w

"This is the best popular account of modern city planning, its philosophy and procedure, now available." N. J. Demerath

+ Social Forces 26:112 O '47 280w

"The handling of 'the blight problem' and 'the money problem' shows the clarity and comprehension already evidenced in the author's Urban Redevelopment and Housing: A Program for Post-War, written with Alvin H. Hansen in 1941. Housing matters are presented with skill, but not in terms of current shortages or current prices. . . Rather unaccountably, the conundrum of achieving coordination between municipal departments is omitted. In general, Your City Tomorrow is in the common-sense tradition. Such controversy as may be aroused by this comfortable little book may center upon its readiness to emphasize a few techniques which have proved successful in a few places in the last several years."

U S Quarterly BkI 3:182 Je '47 240w

GREGG, JOHN. Company for Susie; il. by Eloise Wilkin. 147p $2 Howell, Soskin

Susie, aged five, was really a city child and did not appreciate the cottage in Connecticut where she was supposed to soak up summer sunshine. She wanted someone to play with, and almost like an answer to prayer, a stray dog arrived, and Susie had a new object in life.

"The same droll humor that will make the story a favorite with small girls who listen to it distinguishes Eloise Wilkin's drawings. Fat little Susie, sober or twinkling, is good company even before reading sets in." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p32 N 16 '47 360w

"The descriptions of Susie's and Muffy's games are delightful. . . While the ending is not quite convincing, this doesn't detract too much from a readable book, delightfully illustrated, for 5-to-18-year-olds." R. A. Gordon

+ — N Y Times p54 N 23 '47 140w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét

New Yorker 23:146 D 6 '47 40w

GREGORY, ISABELLA AUGUSTA (PERSSE) lady. Journals, 1916-1930; ed. by Lennox Robinson. 342p $3 Macmillan

B or 92 Dramatists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Dublin, Abbey Theatre

47-30237

Extracts from Lady Gregory's diary kept between 1916 and 1930. The materials are grouped under several subjects: Coole; The Abbey theatre; Politics; Persons and books; The Lane pictures; Odds and ends. Index.

Booklist 43:271 My 1 '47

Christian Century 64:528 Ap 23 '47 80w

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell

Churchman 161:19 Je 15 '47 90w

Reviewed by J. D. Kernan

+ Commonweal 46:125 My 16 '47 330w

Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 21 '47 330w

GREGORY, I. A. P.—Continued

Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries
 Nation 164:577 My 17 '47 330w

"I don't doubt that Mr. Robinson has selected well; certainly he displays a scrupulous disregard for his own feelings, for he and Lady Gregory often found themselves at loggerheads in the direction of the Abbey. But the division of the book into six sections according to subject-matter has not worked out well: there is much overlapping, we sometimes come across the beginning of an episode of which we already know the end, and in any case the continual shuttling up and down the years is a distraction. Far better to have preserved a simple chronological sequence and given the book a proper index in place of the present one, which is so slipshod as to be useless." Desmond Shawe-Taylor

New Statesman & Nation 33:98 F 1 '47
 750w

Reviewed by Richard Watts
 + N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4
 Ap 6 '47 1300w

"Lady Gregory's personality and prose are those of hard-won simplicity, plain statement, courage and honesty. In her 'Journals' it is clear that she was of a line that had inherited the eighteenth-century virtues of a calm exterior and common sense in a country where those particular virtues were rare. To these she added her own qualities of warmth and unsentimental attachment to the Irish people, to the Gaelic League, The Abbey Theatre, to the giving of Hugh Lane's (her nephew's) collection of pictures to Ireland's National Gallery, to the Republican cause as it fought through the 'Rising' of 1916 to the Treaty of 1921." Horace Gregory

+ N Y Times p3 Mr 30 '47 900w

"Lady Gregory's diaries contains a considerable amount of informative gossip about Shaw, Yeats, Kipling, Cosgrave, De Valera, Michael Collins, and many another. She herself almost never makes a witty or illuminating remark, but she gives the impression of being a good observer and a truthful reporter, and her account, for instance, of John Dillon's comments on the Easter Rising probably has real historical value." George Orwell

New Yorker 23:107 Ap 19 '47 1600w

"The general reader will find little to interest him here... Not as long as they continue to reissue Pepys, anyway."

San Francisco Chronicle p9 Ap 6 '47
 100w

Reviewed by James Stephens
 Spec 178:49 Ja 10 '47 800w

"These journals, for all their deep, quiet and limpid candour, are likely to disappoint the unwarily expectant... Mr. Lennox Robinson has arranged the journals under separate headings. There is something to be said for the arrangement, but many will wish that the continuity of life had not been sacrificed to a lesser continuity."

Times [London] Lit Sup p66 F 1 '47
 850w

Wis Lib Bul 43:117 J1 '47

"Her comments on people—Shaw, Mrs. Jack Gardner, George Wyndham, Yeats, James Stephens, and others—are of interest; but it is the woman herself, unconsciously revealed, who, not for the first time, in every sense holds the stage." Sean O'Faolain

+ Yale R n s 37:165 autumn '47 700w

GRESHAM, ELIZABETH F. (ROBIN GREY, pseud). Puzzle in pewter. 216p $2.50 Duell 47-805

Detective story.

"Narrated with girlish glee and little or no light on mental ailments by Jenny Gilette, in love with a mender of antiques doubling as heavy thinker. Also Vsevyod Maitoff, violinist; Dr. Crump, amorous physician; Rangoon, a horse, and Sheriff Endicott." Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16
 Ja 26 '47 150w

N Y Times p37 F 9 '47 140w

"A pleasant improvement, technically, on Mr. Grey's 'Puzzle in Porcelain,' the first mystery in this series."

New Yorker 22:95 Ja 18 '47 100w

"A bit hard to follow in spots, but told with a great deal of placid charm."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ja 19 '47
 50w

"Attractive Old Dominion people and background, especially cavernous parts; amusing dialogue, ample thrills, and intricate plot can't be unravelled. Passable."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:23 Ja 25 '47 40w

GREY, ROBIN, pseud. See Gresham, E. F.

GRIBBLE, LEONARD REGINALD. Atomic murder. 235p $1.98 Ziff-Davis

47-31043

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
 Chicago Sun Book Week p35 O 17 '47
 50w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
 N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18
 O 12 '47 130w

"It failed to upset us. Heavy-handed writing for a man who is England's current Edgar Wallace. In output anyway." E. D. Doyle

— San Francisco Chronicle p26 O 5 '47
 80w

"Fair."

Sat R of Lit 30:30 S 27 '47 50w

GRIERSON, JOHN. On documentary; ed. and comp. by Forsyth Hardy; with American notes by Richard Griffith and Mary Losey. 324p $3.75 Harcourt

791.4 Moving pictures 47-11877

"A selection of articles and speeches reflects a British film maker's ideology and belief in the importance of the documentary film as a channel of communication. Much of the author's own experience has been in England and Canada; some of his critical articles are on Hollywood productions. This is a reflective book of interest to film makers, teachers, librarians, and those interested in the motion picture as an expression of our time." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 44:147 D 15 '47

Kirkus 15:643 N 15 '47 120w

"It would be an act of rare and constructive vision to appoint John Grierson film officer to UN. That is, at least, one conclusion arrived at by one reader of this intensely thought-provoking, nourishing, and illuminating book." Anne Fremantle

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5
 D 21 '47 700w

"Mr. Grierson has great confidence in the documentary as an instrument for international understanding, and his suggestion that educational films be more widely distributed to schools and libraries, and elsewhere outside the commercial film circuits, is an excellent one. However, his hope for the ultimate maturity of Hollywood, on which so many of his expectations depend, can be interpreted only as an example of British patience and good breeding."

New Yorker 23:60 D 27 '47 130w

School & Society 66:519 D 27 '47 20w

GRIEVE, CHRISTOPHER MURRAY (HUGH MCDIARMID, pseud). Speaking for Scotland; sel. poems of Hugh MacDiarmid. (Distinguished poets ser) 77p $2.50 Contemporary poetry

821 47-18092

"The first American edition of the work of the 'Scott Nationalist' poet whose belligerent individualism has made him a controversial figure in contemporary British letters." (New Yorker) Glossary.

"Whether in disapproval or high praise, he is generally acknowledged to be Scotland's major living poet, and in this country we are at last fortunate in having a beautifully printed and bound selection of his poems for all of us to read—and it is true that it speaks magnificently for twentieth-century Scotland." Horace Gregory

+ N Y Times p20 Ap 20 '47 1200w

"MacDiarmid functions better in his native Scots dialect than in plain English, and the poems here included are for the most part written in this dialect."

New Yorker 23:119 Mr 15 '47 90w

GRIFFIN, ARTHUR, il. See Forbes, E. Boston book

GRIFFIN, HOWARD. Cry cadence [poems]. 79p $2.75 Farrar, Straus 811 47-31487

A book of poems by the American writer who won the 1947 poetry contest sponsored by the League to support poetry.

Kirkus 15:530 S 15 '47 90w

"As theme, subject and treatment, this first book shows a facility of techniques and forms in the first section; in the second part, where the recent war is the over-all canvas, Mr. Griffin exchanges his literary currency for a conscious felicitous phrasing, and for better effect. But the preciousness of phrase does not accrue to the poems as a whole. Their balance as poems (completely poker-faced and overridden in conception) causes a flatness in design: even the most balanced craftsman must adapt his highs and lows. The alternative is a poem that is merely observation, studded by studied effects." Harry Roskolenko

+ N Y Times p34 N 23 '47 260w

"Here is a writer, thoughtful, sensitive, observant, who responds interestingly to the life around him and who writes up these responses very capably. But there seems to be no particular reason why they should be written up as poems. As in so much modern verse, one appreciates the ideas and perceptions of the writer but can find little or no poetic compulsion behind the writing. . . 'Cry Cadence' is an interesting volume, but it is difficult to see why the insights recorded in it are put forward as poems. The compulsion to find a poetic form derives from something more than intelligence and perceptiveness." David Daiches

+ Sat R of Lit 31:17 Ja 10 '48 270w

GRIMM, JAKOB LUDWIG KARL, and GRIMM, WILHELM KARL. More tales from Grimm; freely tr. and il. by Wanda Gág. 257p $2.75 Coward-McCann

398.2 Fairy tales 47-11377

Thirty-two of the tales of the Brothers Grimm, retold and illustrated by Wanda Gág. The book was nearly completed at the time of her death in June, 1946. For the earlier collection of tales illustrated by Wanda Gág, see Book Review Digest, 1936.

Booklist 44:138 D 1 '47

Reviewed by Martha King

Chicago Sun Book Week p1a N 19 '47 90w

"I read the illustrated galleys of More Tales from Grimm on the way over from Boston to New York and never did the journey seem so short. There is no letting down of the high spirit in the rendering of the stories, and if there are fewer pictures than the artist intended, we may be deeply grateful that so many had been completed." A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk 23:346 S '47 240w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 24:37 Ja '48 50w

Kirkus 15:580 O 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by J. D. Lindquist

Library J 72:1691 D 1 '47 50w

"There is a sure way to go on living on this earth, not as a memory but as a presence. It is to make a book that children take to their hearts and pass on to other children. Wanda Gág made many such: this is the last." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 N 16 '47 230w

"This last book of Wanda Gág was written and illustrated under the shadow of a fatal illness, but no hint of that can be found in it anywhere. The thirty-two stories are retold with all the gaiety and cunning skill which have made her earlier translations and her original stories so much beloved." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p5 N 16 '47 140w

New Yorker 23:136 D 6 '47 40w

Reviewed by Quail Hawkins

San Francisco Chronicle p14 N 16 '47 320w

"All of us who have realized, through our own delight or through sharing them with children, the great value of Wanda Gág's wording and illustration of the German folktales have a feeling of gratitude, of very real happiness that this book has 'come through.'"

+ Sat R of Lit 30:40 N 15 '47 360w

GRINDROD, MURIEL. The new Italy; transition from war to peace. 118p maps pa $1.50 Royal inst. of int. affairs

945.09 Reconstruction (1939-)—Italy 47-5329

"A really adult study of the current problem of Italy. . . [It tells] the political story of Italy's harrowing experience from 1943 to 1947, passing from Mussolini to Badoglio, to the German army's tyranny, to Allied Military Government, and the tentative steps toward a new régime. . . The famous six political parties are characterized, in their composition, their interrelations, and their internal tendencies toward fission; also the tentative steps toward reconstruction, both of administration and economy and of a documentary constitution; also in large outline the problems of the peace treaty." (Am Pol Sci R) Bibliography. Index.

"It is calm and free from maudlin sympathy; but, more notably, it abstains from the outsider's usual Pharisaic looking down the nose at all and sundry. The political story is told with limpid clarity. . . Much to be appreciated is the convenience of three maps, of a fairly minute chronology of the four years, and of a group of statistical tables which suggest problems of economic reconstruction." H. R. Spencer

+ Am Pol Sci R 41:1041 O '47 310w

"At a time when the ratification of the treaty with the new Italy presages the start of a new phase, this little book's quiet and dispassionate insights into our past mistakes should make thought-provoking reading." Percy Winner

+ N Y Times p6 Jl 27 '47 800w

"Within a very brief compass we are given a comprehensive and balanced account of the chief aspects of the Italian scene from 1943 to the opening of the current year."

+ Pol Sci Q 62:628 D '47 600w

"Miss Grindrod has provided precisely what she set out to do, a fair-minded and accurate handbook to the Italy which has emerged after Fascism. There is real need for such a thing." Elizabeth Wiskemann

+ Spec 178:696 Je 13 '47 550w

GRISWOLD, JOHN. Fuels, combustion and furnaces. 496p il $5.50 McGraw

662.6 Fuel. Combustion. Furnaces 46-7738

"In the 'Chemical Engineering Series.' Only up-to-date college text which covers the broad essentials and more specific details of technology, combustion properties, and utilization of fuels including apparatus used. Book also provides an introduction to petroleum refining technology, technology of refractories and the process industries using furnaces and heaters." (Library J) Index.

GRISWOLD, JOHN—Continued

"The author recommends the omission of some of the material if the book is to be used as a text for third year students, and deferment of the advanced material to a graduate course. It will be especially welcomed by those who specialize in petroleum engineering." A. H. White

+ Chem Eng 54:263 O '47 300w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1129 S 1 '46 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:60 O '46

GROGGINS, PHILIP HERKIMER, ed. Unit processes in organic synthesis. (Chemical engineering ser) 3d ed 931p il $7.50 McGraw 545.9 Chemistry, Organic—Synthesis

47-2791

"For advanced students in industrial chemistry and chemical engineering. Revised to include recent advances in chemical engineering and introduction of new compounds. Use of natural gas and petroleum rather than coal tar as a source of basic materials for carrying out unit process in organic synthesis and the use of acetylene for diverse synthesis following recent German practice are two of stressed items." (Library J) For earlier editions see Book Review Digest 1935, 1939.

"On the whole, the book will serve as an excellent reference work to provide for advanced students, chemists, and chemical engineers much of the theoretical reasoning and practical methods involved in commercial organic reactions. It could hardly be expected that one would find published all of the exact process and equipment details involved in present-day practices, but this book presents the chemical aspects of unit organic processes in a comprehensive and thorough manner." C. F. Prutton

+ Chem & Eng N 25:2320 Ag 11 '47 210w

Chem Eng 54:273 Ag '47 170w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1715 D 1 '46 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:46 J1 '47

GROLIER encyclopedia; editor, S. Edgar Farquhar; advisory ed. for Latin Am, A. Curtis Wilgus; advisory ed. for Canada, Lawrence J. Burpee. 1945 ed 11v il pl maps $69.50 Grolier soc.

031 Encyclopedias and dictionaries 46-12126

"This work first appeared in 1931 as the Doubleday Encyclopedia, and was the American adaptation of the English encyclopedia, Harmsworth's Universal, c1920, 1922 (both reviewed in Subscription Books Bulletin, April 1931). Other reviews appeared in the Bulletin, July 1932, and October 1940. In 1941 the Grolier Society took over the publication, and brought out an edition in 1943. The name was changed to Grolier Encyclopedia in the 1944 edition. According to the preface, this encyclopedia has been made and revised from the standpoint of the general reader. . . The publishers report 6197 changes since they took over the set in 1941. These include census figures, biographies, railroads, aeronautics, colleges and societies in the United States, material in Latin America, astronomy, and medicine. The 1945 changes are: 90 biographical articles, 33 geographical, 5 on state universities, and others including cyclotron, jet propulsion, mass spectrometer, and Tennessee Valley Authority." Subscription Bks Bul

"Completely adequate revision is lacking in some biographical articles. . . An effort has been made to bring geographical material up to date. . . The general arrangement and makeup of the set is confusing. Material for the most part is treated in brief articles on small specific topics. In many of the longer articles a method of using subheadings and headlines has been adopted which makes scanning for quick reference difficult. . . A new and enlarged index has been provided. . . Analysis of the Encyclopedia shows that where changes have been made, by revision or by added topics, account has not always been taken of related articles on a subject. This may be due to the difficulties involved in continuous encyclopedia revision. . . nevertheless, the Committee feels that this is a decided weakness in the set under review. Good binding and new colored plates do not make up for the unsatisfactory arrangement and out-of-date material. There is a great need for an adequate modern encyclopedia of this size and price range. Although commendable changes have been made, some new material added and a good program for continuous revision formulated, the editors have not yet produced a completely adequate encyclopedia. For these reasons, the Grolier Encyclopedia is not recommended for first purchase."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 17:30 J1 '46 1400w

GRONOWICZ, ANTONI. Gallant general, Tadeusz Kosciuszko [tr. from the Polish by Samuel Sorgenstein]. 136p $2.50 Scribner

B or 92 Kosciuszko, Tadeusz Andrzej Bonawentura—Juvenile literature 47-12010

A biography of General Kosciuszko, the Polish patriot who devoted his life to the cause of liberty. He is best known in this country for the part he played in the Revolution, and his work on the West Point fortifications. For grades seven to nine. Bibliography.

"Very stilted writing and in no way outstanding, but the book will be useful since there is little material available on this subject."

Booklist 44:174 Ja 1 '48

"Girls will enjoy the love story that runs through the book."

+ Commonweal 47:156 N 21 '47 40w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 24:44 Ja '48 100w

Kirkus 15:648 D 1 '47 100w

GRONOWICZ, ANTONI. Tchaikovsky; tr. from the Polish by Joseph Vetter; drawings by George Avison. 192p $2.50 Nelson

B or 92 Tchaikovsky, Peter Ilyitch—Juvenile literature 46-7251

Informal biography of the famous Russian composer, written for junior and senior high school age. Contains a list of Tchaikovsky's compositions, a selected biography, and an index.

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:45 Ja '47 40w

"An inflated life of a sensitive musician, written with emphasis on the abnormal sensitiveness which the author presumes are prerequisites for any creative endeavor. . . Interesting for its comments on local customs of the period (the turn of the century) in Russia and America."

Kirkus 14:527 O 15 '46 90w

"Author has given us another delightful music biography. . . Recommended for ages 12-16." S. J. Robinson

+ Library J 71:1630 N 15 '46 60w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8
Mr 2 '47 230w

GROSECLOSE, ELGIN EARL. Introduction to Iran. 257p il $3.50 Oxford 47-11574

Pictures the economic, social, and political life of Iran. The author gives much space to the reign of Riza Shah Pahlavi, from the coup d'etat of 1921 on, giving an account of the Shah's reforms, and his efforts to keep a balance between Russia and Great Britain. Bibliography. Index. No maps.

"Mr. Groseclose has been for twenty-five years in close contact with the country of which he writes so glowingly: as a teacher in Tabriz in his youth, later as Treasurer General of Iran. This book is most interesting about the reign of Riza Shah Pahlavi. . . Perhaps Mr. Groseclose overdoes the parallel between Persians and Texans: perhaps he is almost comic in his almost superstitious avoidance of the word Russian." Anne Fremantle

+ — Commonweal 47:283 D 26 '47 450w

"Although there are some excellent sections where sympathetic insight and literary craftsmanship combine to stir a glowing appreciation of many aspects of the arts and graces of Persian life and culture, and equally competent appraisals of economic situations and problems faced by the Iranian people, this introduction falls short of becoming standard or indispensable; there are too many inaccuracies and inadequacies for such attainment. . . . These strictures and limitations aside, it remains true that in this very readable book we have some unique and valuable contributions to an understanding of the modern exponents of an ancient and glorious history, who are bound to play an increasing part in the history which is now in the making." T. C. Young

+ — Sat R of Lit 31:12 Ja 24 '48 650w

Reviewed by S. B. Shear

Springf'd Republican p7B D 28 '47 90w

GROUT, DONALD JAY. Short history of opera. 2v 407;412-711p il $10; also in lv $6 Columbia univ. press

782.09 Opera—History and criticism 43-54;47-12034

Comprehensive history of the development of opera from the medieval liturgical drama to the present day. Contains pictorial and musical illustrations. Bibliography, p. 539-661. Index.

Kirkus 15:642 N 15 '47 170w

"If you can stock just one history of opera this is it. If you already have a shelf full of books on opera, you still will need it. Covers more ground more thoroughly and more systematically than any of its predecessors. A compact, serious, well written, quietly enthusiastic study which, in part because of its excellent bibliographical equipment, will double as a student's manual in the field. . . . A handsome job of book-making." C. K. Miller

+ Library J 72:1781 D 15 '47 120w

"Of Professor Grout's estimable book the obvious thing must be said first: it is neither a short history nor long enough to justify the discomforts of its two-volume format. . . . 'A Short History of Opera' is one of the books that will be consulted when and if an ideal history of opera is written. That unimaginable book will clothe in the living stuffs of human history the musical and literary data with which Professor Grout preponderantly deals. . . . It will be a richer and more humane book than his. But when it touches on those central aspects of opera history which he has taken as his subject, it can treat them no more wisely or usefully than he has treated them here." Herbert Weinstock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 D 28 '47 1000w

"The author has fulfilled his purpose admirably. You will find here little or no chit-chat about the private lives of composers, singers, conductors and the other people who impinge on the world of opera. The approach is sober, scholarly and based on illuminating musicianship. Here are both the facts and an evaluation of them." Howard Taubman

+ N Y Times p23 D 14 '47 750w

School & Society 66:463 D 13 '47 20w

GROVER, EDWIN OSGOOD, ed. Nature lover's knapsack; an anthology of poems for lovers of the open road. enl ed 294p $3 Crowell

821.08 Nature in poetry 47-30907

"This attractively printed collection of 300 nature poems, first published in 1927 [Book Review Digest 1927], is reissued in a slightly enlarged edition. Author, title, and first line indexes." Booklist

Booklist 44:153 D 15 '47

"In some degree this collection has its points. The editor admits frankly that he has not tried to be inclusive, and that these are simply poems he liked. On the other hand, it is a little odd in a book of this kind to find, for example, no Yeats whatever, not even 'The Lake Isle of Innisfree.' . . . As for the 'revision,' it does seem that in such a revision a little more work might have been done on the three indexes—author's name, title, and first-line, which are an important part of any anthology of poetry." J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 27 '47 600w

GROVES, HAROLD MARTIN. Postwar taxation and economic progress. (Committee for economic development. Research study) 432p $4.50 McGraw

336.295 Taxation—U.S. 46-2782

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

"This is a curious, though valuable, book, which has many penetrating things to say about the desirable qualities of the postwar tax structure." E. D. Allen

+ J Pol Econ 55:80 F '47 1350w

Reviewed by E. H. McDermott

Management R 35:494 N '46 650w

"Most of the postwar plans that have appeared in such numbers in recent years have emphasized immediate steps rather than ultimate goals. This volume, on the contrary, gives little space to transition measures. It puts forward, rather, a comprehensive program for a relatively permanent and coordinated federal, state, and local tax system. The proposal offers no startling innovations but it should prove a useful guide for those concerned with better taxes." Mabel Newcomer

+ Survey G 36:211 Mr '47 550w

GRUBER, FRANK. Beagle scented murder. 188p $2 Rinehart

47-255

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 D 29 '46 50w

"Fast-paced and pugnacious."

Kirkus 14:531 O 15 '46 90w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p15 D 29 '46 120w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p25 Ja 5 '47 160w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 5 '47 80w

"Shoddy."

— Sat R of Lit 30:26 Ja 4 '47 50w

GRUBER, FRANK. Fourth letter. 250p $2 Rinehart

47-11648

Detective story.

Kirkus 15:517 S 15 '47

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Ja 11 '48 90w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p50 N 30 '47 190w

"Gruber can always hold our attention from the first page even unto the last, although Elmhurst, Iowa, wouldn't be one of our favorite locales for murder, bucolic or otherwise." E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p20 D 14 '47 100w

"Bucolic background, pleasant, tricks of rural journals' sub-getters fantastic, amateur sleuthing creditable, and pay-off unsuspected."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:88 D 6 '47 40w

GRUBER, FRANK. Honest dealer. 188p $2 Rinehart

47-2063

Mystery story.

GRUBER, FRANK—Continued

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ap 27 '47
90w

"This is fairly ABC if you don't take your eyes off the cards."

Kirkus 15:112 F 15 '47 60w

"Good-natured rough stuff and no pretensions to abnormal amounts of suspense or psycho-analytical profundity." Will Cuppy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14
Je 8 '47 110w

N Y Times p33 My 4 '47 150w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ap 27
'47 50w

"Standard toughie."

Sat R of Lit 30:32 My 31 '47 50w

GRUBER, FRANK. Whispering master. 188p
$2 Rinehart

47-5592

Detective story.

"Enterprising certainly, and entertaining for those who like this series."

+ Kirkus 15:323 Je 15 '47 90w

"Mr. Gruber's idea of fun may not be yours in your most classic mood, but you've got to admit that a lively sense of entertainment pervades his stories. Although his personae may be slightly subhuman, their desire to please, even to knocking themselves out repeatedly, almost converts you to their cause." Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p17
S 7 '47 170w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p12 Ag 31 '47 170w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ag 31 '47
90w

"Exhilarating."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:30 Ag 30 '47 40w

GRUSKIN, ALAN D. Painting in the U.S.A.
223p il $7.50 Doubleday759.1 Painting—U.S. Paintings, American 47-791

"The author urges the common run of citizen to be at ease with contemporary American painting and to enjoy it by becoming better acquainted with the paintings themselves. A résumé of American painting since colonial times gives a background for appreciating the present status of art and artists and 142 paintings are reproduced, almost one half in color, for the reader's careful examination, although the author avoids analyzing these paintings or overburdening the reader with instructions for observation. A large, well-made book, good reproductions." (Booklist) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 43:219 Mr 15 '47

"This reviewer feels that when sixty-three illustrations out of one hundred and forty-two are in full color and beautifully done in a text of about two hundred pages, they merit special commendation. But Mr. Gruskin's writing, which skips gaily back and forth from one date to another, is well-informed, topical, and interesting." J. W. Lane

+ Cath World 165:185 My '47 550w

"In his own way, with little sense of literary organization as such, Gruskin has written for, and should reach, a widely diversified general public. The behind-the-scenes glimpses of the art world, and the handsomeness of the book should make it a welcome addition to many libraries." R. A. Florsheim

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Mr 9 '47
330w

Reviewed by B. P. Rank

Christian Science Monitor p17 Ap 12
'47 240w

Cleveland Open Shelf p5 Mr '47

"Most visitors will probably leaf through the pictures without bothering with the neatly printed text. That is just as well, for Mr. Gruskin's exhortations about appreciating art and making the most of museums are none too amusing. The pictures themselves do not indicate any great vitality or meaning in contemporary American painting."

— Commonweal 45:478 F 21 '47 100w

Kirkus 14:445 S 1 '46 210w

Reviewed by W. G. Dooley

N Y Times p9 Ja 19 '47 500w

"A rather simply written, chatty, discussion of the whole field of American painting as seen through the eyes of a gallery director. It is interesting to note that lesser known examples of most of the painters' works were selected for inclusion, thus giving the reader a chance to see pictures not widely reproduced so far." W. E. Parker

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 F 2 '47
300wGUERNEY, BERNARD GUILBERT, ed. Portable Russian reader. (Viking portable lib) 658p $2 Viking891.7082 Russian literature—Collections
47-11310

"Of the 658 pages in the 'Reader' Mr. Guerney devotes about sixty to folklore, proverbs, letters and miscellaneous writings earlier than the classical era of Russian literature, which he begins with Krylov. He includes no verse, only two excerpts from novels, and none from plays. In fact, the body of the book is almost entirely short fiction, of which about a third belongs to the time since the revolution of 1917." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p36
N 16 '47 250w

"The volume is a disappointment. After all, no country in the nineteenth century created so many rich and powerful prose works as Russia; and no country has had leveled at it so many claims and counterclaims with regard to its culture since 1917. The editor of a new Russian Reader which includes Soviet works surely ought to pause for some discussion of Soviet life and the effects, of any, on Soviet art." Harvey Breit

N Y Times p61 N 23 '47 230w

"An honest anthology rather than a quick pasteup of threadbare material. Mr. Guerney, an industrious admirer of Russian literature, translated each of his selections, and introduces each author with a spirited note."

+ New Yorker 23:135 O 25 '47 90w

GUETZKOW, HAROLD STEERE, and BOWMAN, PAUL HOOVER. Men and hunger; a psychological manual for relief workers. 72p il $1 Brethren pub.

612.391 Hunger 46-7642

"In 1944, at the University of Minnesota, a group of some thirty-six conscientious objectors submitted themselves as subjects for an experiment in human starvation. These 'guinea pigs' were fed normal diet for three months; semistarved for six months; and then rehabilitated for three months—all under carefully controlled laboratory conditions. Exact records of the diets and weights of the subjects, their physical and mental output, their psychological reactions at each stage, and other pertinent matters, were kept. A serious, detailed, and probably lengthy scientific report of the experiment will be forthcoming. Meanwhile, it was felt, there was need to present some of the facts learned, in brief form, for workers with starving or undernourished people. This little manual is the result." Crozer Q

Reviewed by R. B. Seymour

Christian Century 64:305 Mr 5 '47 650w

"Brief, readable, and concise, the volume will be interesting not only to the workers for whom it was intended, but to all who seek to understand human personality and human problems. Its references to the experiment, however fragmentary, and its photographs add to its value not only as a scientific record, but also as a human-interest story, and an appreciative tribute to the men who, in the words of the dedication, 'starved voluntarily in the hope that their privation might aid millions who starve involuntarily.' J. W. Thomas

+ Crozer Q 24:90 Ja '47 350w

GULICK, PEGGY. Sing, Sang, Sung and Willie; ill. by Elizabeth Dresser. [31p] $1.50 Knopf

47-18106

Picture storybook about three jolly little pandas and their playmate Willie Black Bear. For three-year-olds.

Reviewed by Jane Cobb
Atlantic 179:126 Je '47 80w
Chicago Sun Book Week p4 My 25 '47 40w

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p12 Je 24 '47 180w

+ Kirkus 15:98 F 15 '47 160w

"The numerous black-and-red illustrations are most attractive and tell the story beautifully. Preschoolers will love this picture story-book." M. F. Cox

+ Library J 72:392 Mr 1 '47 70w

"The big bright pictures are jolly throughout. All panda pictures are funny, but these embody a very little child's idea of thoroughly satisfactory fun." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ap 13 '47 180w

"To the literal minded 2½-3 year set, familiar with stuffed pandas, the story will be easily comprehensible. The illustrations are gay and lively with just enough detail like mama panda's high heels." Lillian Gerard

+ N Y Times p40 Ap 13 '47 140w

GUNN, NEIL MILLER. Drinking well. 384p $3 Stewart

47-30332

The Scotch highlands and the slums of Edinburgh are the backgrounds for this novel. It tells the story of Iain who loved the land and was forced by his mother to go to an Edinburgh office. But he came back to his hills to a new life and Mary, whom he loved.

"Excellent characterization, good writing, and an absorbing story would make this book popular were it not for the numerous non-essential discussions in which some of the characters indulge."

+ Booklist 43:330 Je 15 '47

"A story that is often written with beauty and a certain gayety, and moments of high adventure, though it may be here and there a bit overlaid with economics." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 My 28 '47 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '47

"Neil Gunn's market is a fairly predictable one; those of us who like him like him very much,—like him for his ability to carry us into the lives and hearts of his Scottish villagers, like him for conveying the sense of conflict between their taut pride and their deep conviction of the rightness of their way. . . There's better pace of story and adventure than in some of his earlier work, though he still bogs down in irrelevancies at times. But always, his people ring true, and his picture of the period between wars is vividly drawn."

+ Kirkus 15:75 F 1 '47 180w

"There is plenty of dramatic incident in the tale and the characters live as simply and convincingly as the land itself and the elements." H. P. A. Fausset

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 14 '47 190w

"Solidly constructed and written in workmanlike prose, The Drinking Well is all that Mr. Gunn's readers will expect from his practised hand. And if his characters are rudimentary, subdued to the spirit of place, what matter." D. S. Savage

+ Spec 178:378 Ap 4 '47 80w

"Mr. Gunn is a novelist, not a writer of tracts, and his characters are not tailored to suit a preconceived thesis. He starts with wholly credible individuals and sets them in action within the framework of conditions in the Highlands as they were ten years ago. Iain's eyes are opened not by 'economic necessity' or 'pressure of circumstances' but by Mary, the girl who does not want to leave the glen for the university, and Mad Maraig, the old wife whose daftness is itself a challenge to the Highlander's fatalistic acceptance of alien values. And it is through Iain's experiences as an individual that he reaches his general conclusions."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p113 Mr 15 '47 500w

Wis Lib Bul 43:118 Jl '47

GUNTHER, JOHN. Inside U.S.A. 979p maps $5 Harper

917.3 U.S.—Description and travel 47-30309

To show America to the Americans, John Gunther turns the USA inside out. As much a political as a geographic guidebook, this volume is crammed full of facts and superlatives about "the greatest, craziest, most dangerous, least stable, most spectacular, least grown-up and most powerful and magnificent nation ever known." Wherever he went the author asked questions: What makes this community distinctive? what does it contribute to the nation as a whole? who runs it? and, to the people themselves, what do you believe in most? The answers he received form the basis of his book. Bibliography. Index.

"Inside USA does not pretend to be a profound analysis of American civilization in the manner of Tocqueville. It is rather a lively, gaudy, intelligent panorama of American life: cities, topography, personalities, wisecracks. There are some brilliant set pieces. . . The point of view is broadly humane and liberal, with the humanity generally triumphing over the liberalism when the two threaten to clash. Mr. Gunther obviously finds it practically impossible to dislike anyone with whom he has had an affable interview. This kindness gives his portraits warmth and sympathy; but it seems at times to make his judgments indiscriminating, if not glib. . . The alert reader will doubtless detect errors and omissions. . . But the America that he describes is a nation bursting at the seams with vitality and driven on by an instinct for happiness." A. M. Schlesinger, Jr.

+ Atlantic 179:120 Je '47 3300w

Booklist 43:307 Je 1 '47

Reviewed by Erik v. Kuehnelt-Leddihn

— Cath World 165:472 Ag '47 350w

"Despite the labor that has gone into it, the book as a whole seems more like a first or second draft of a literary work than a finished product. Over and over, Gunther laments about how hard it is to compress his material into the space he has—and these lamentations are but one of the ways in which he wastes that space. 'Inside U.S.A.' is intensely human, readable, full of bounce. But succeeding editions ought to convey its information and its message, and could convey them without tossing overboard a single major subject, in 75 per cent—or less—of the present wordage." W. F. Morse

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p1 Je 1 '47 1250w

"Inside U.S.A. is not only good: it is overwhelming. It isn't a book, it's an encyclopedia. It's a five-foot-shelf. Within it are compounded Mr. Gunther's lifetime as a hard, penetrating reporter, his tirelessness, his ability to write colorfully. . . It is impossible to record all the excellencies of this book. Mr. Gunther has tried to report everything of importance within the United States, to explain its meaning, to describe the men and women who run the country. His last chapter is stupendous." E. D. Canham

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Je 3 '47 700w

"It was a mammoth job and there is no getting away from the conviction that in the

GUNTHER, JOHN—Continued
main Mr. Gunther has done it well." Edward Skillin

+ Commonweal 46:217 Je 13 '47 550w

Current Hist 13:33 Jl '47 120w

Foreign Affairs 26:224 O '47 40w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Horn Bk 24:67 Ja '48 80w

Kirkus 15:248 My 1 '47

"Gunther's interest in political personalities—his most persistent inquiry everywhere was: 'Who runs this community?'—results in some lively profiles of American mayors and governors, industrialists and labor leaders. This is also a vivid panorama of local atmospheres, an anthology of local anecdotes, and a long [1000 pages] and somewhat breathless Baedeker." H. W. Hart

Library J 72:805 My 15 '47 130w

Reviewed by D. W. Brogan

Manchester Guardian p3 S 23 '47 950w

"There are the fascinating and little-known bits of early history of the various states, lively, illuminating, and usually introduced with good purpose. . . . Strewn over every page of sober and shrewd observation are countless oddities and trivial notes that would not have occurred to a Tocqueville or a Bryce. . . . It is impossible in a review to do more than suggest the enormous energy that has gone into this book or the wealth of information that comes tumbling out." Robert Bendiner

+ Nation 164:716 Je 14 '47 2000w

"Inside USA is more valuable for its reporting than for its generalizations, which occasionally seem based chiefly on the author's good will and blithe spirit. And the evidence which his skill as a reporter provides, while giving cause for hopefulness about the future, has its depressing aspects. . . . The only trouble is that, when you recall how splendid [our] background and record are, it is difficult not to start wondering why, with such a tradition behind us, Gunther's evidence, as well as the evidence of all other careful students of contemporary American life, shows so little of its fine, bold spirit left in us. Such melancholy reflections, while suggested by John Gunther's book, should cause no one to forget that it is basically a gay and cheerful work, filled with the vitality and gusto characteristic of American life at its best." Richard Watts

+ New Repub 116:25 Je 2 '47 1100w

"Here at last is a book which will thoroughly confuse people about America, thus giving them an honest picture of a nation as confusing as it is confused. John Gunther was ignorant enough when writing about Europe and Asia to impose some sort of order on the facts at his disposal, but as a native son his information about the United States has outrun all bounds, even those of a 900-page volume. Inside U.S.A. is about each of the 48 States but it doesn't add up to the United States, so the author is planning yet another volume on the Federal Government." John Morton

New Statesman & Nation 34:234 S 20 '47 700w

"John Gunther has not achieved the impossible, but he must be given credit for making a manful effort, and for coming closer to success than any one ever came before. . . . John Gunther is one of the most brilliant reporters now in practice, and this volume proves that he has not lost his touch. By far the greater part of the book sparkles and glows. Now and then, staggering under the enormous weight of his data, he begins to plod in the dry, factual manner of an article in 'The National Geographic Magazine,' but it is not often. The greater part of it is highly readable." G. W. Johnson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 Je 1 '47 1500w

"'Inside U. S. A.' is something of a Baedeker, an omnibus State Guide, a modernization of Steffens and Ostrogorski and Bryce. It covers forty-eight States, deals with politics, society and economy, includes portraits of politicians and bosses, business men and social workers, labor leaders and educators, and manages to work in a potpourri of anecdotes, gossip, poetry and other relevant odds and ends. It is narrative; it is descriptive; it is analytical; it is interpretative. And it is consistently intelligent and makes unfailingly good reading." H. S. Commager

+ N Y Times p1 Je 1 '47 1600w

Reviewed by J. M. Lalley

New Yorker 23:74 My 31 '47 700w

Reviewed by Gordon Pates

San Francisco Chronicle p10 Je 1 '47 2150w

"A great many things will be said about this book. It will be liked and disliked—and read. It deserves comparison with both James Bryce and the WPA Guides of the States. But essentially what John Gunther has written in this big, sprawling, colloquial book is a great contemporary adventure story about the United States. It is written, he says, for both the American himself wherever he may be, and for the Man from Mars—or Moscow. But actually it is the exciting, provocative, penetrating, and occasionally credulous story of John Gunther's struggle against time and space and swarm to accomplish the understanding of the United States in 946 tightly printed pages as of May 28, 1947." Jonathan Daniels

+ Sat R of Lit 30:9 My 31 '47 1750w

Reviewed by D. W. Brogan

Spec 179:372 S 19 '47 1100w

Springf'd Union p3 Jl 1 '47 650w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen

Survey G 36:356 Je '47 250w

Time 49:104 Je 2 '47 900w

Times [London] Lit Sup p501 O 4 '47 6100w

Wis Lib Bul 43:116 Jl '47

Reviewed by R. S. Brown

Yale R n s 37:148 autumn '47 850w

GUPTILL, ARTHUR LEIGHTON. Norman Rockwell, illustrator. See Rockwell, N.

GURKO, LEO. Angry decade. 306p $3 Dodd

810.9 American literature—History and criticism. Social problems in literature. U.S.—Civilization 47-11236

"Mr. Gurko's book is an examination of the course taken by American thought in the decade of the '30s. . . . There have been several volumes on the same general theme recently. . . . Mr. Gurko's approach is more strictly literary than that of any of the others. He confines himself to the latter half of the Long Armistice and so has little to say about the writers of the '20s except Hemingway." (N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R) Selected reading list. Index.

Cleveland Open Shelf p21 N '47

"It's an unusual book. And it's a tormenting book—so well written, so full of good things about books and writers, and yet so false in the picture it gives of that period that began with the crash of stocks in Wall Street and ended with the crash of bombs at Pearl Harbor. . . . Let me ask: Is this really supposed to be history, or is Dr. Gurko trying to cook up hatred of somebody?" David Marshall

Commonweal 47:285 D 26 '47 450w

"It is rewarding to read the synthesized whole which this keen student of the American scene has developed for a depressing but strategic era. Value of this compendium is not compendium-like. Rather the author's reactions and unbiased judgments toward the enormous quantities of material which he manipulates are by their canniness, wit and lack of spleen, a most admirable feature of the book." F. W. Stewart

+ Library J 72:1371 O 1 '47 110w

"Mr. Gurko is scholarly, but far from pedantic. He links grace with learning in the happiest of alliances. He is a critic of parts who will probably be heard from again, very effectively." G. W. Johnson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 N 16 '47 550w

Reviewed by Charles Poore

N Y Times p5 O 26 '47 950w

GUSTAFSON, AXEL FERDINAND, and others. Land for the family; a guide to country living. 501p il $4 Comstock pub. co.

630 Agriculture—U.S. Farm life Agr47-262
 "A handbook of concise, practical information for small, family farming; covers many subjects from selecting the farm to nutrition and food preservation. Some of the material is drawn from state and federal bulletins; government publications as well as books are listed among the references for each chapter." Booklist

Booklist 44:6 S 1 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '47

"Undoubtedly the information given is applicable to most areas in which live families who wish to farm as a side line to the major means of earning a living. However, for some areas some of the information might not be very suitable. Throughout the book greater emphasis seems to be placed upon satisfactions derived from the production of one's own food than upon economic gains. This emphasis may be wise since in some cases there may not be any such gains. The book may make farming seem too easy for amateurs who are certain to encounter many disappointments, backaches, and at least some 'bad luck.'" J. V. Coles

+ — J Home Econ 39:595 N '47 300w

GUSTAVSON, HARRY. Up goes the house! pictures by Elizabeth Ripley. [37]p $1.25 Oxford

For days lonely Tommy watches a house being built next door and is made happy when another little boy moves in with his parents and baby sister. Picture story book for four-year-olds.

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 My 27 '47 80w

"Accurate—with nothing of the fanciful approach and correlated material of the Golden Book New House in the Forest, which is better merchandise—more book for less money. This is a bit pedantic, but it does follow the main steps of building just such a small suburban house as would be familiar to many small boys and girls."

+ Kirkus 15:238 My 1 '47 80w

"Full-page illustrations in soft colors by Elizabeth Ripley combine with the simple text to make an attractive picture book." Margaret Miller

+ Library J 72:894 Je 1 '47 60w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20 My 11 '47 200w

Wis Lib Bul 43:100 Je '47

GUTHRIDGE, SUE JANET. Tom Edison, boy inventor; il. by Betty Graham. 200p $1.75 Bobbs

B or 92 Edison, Thomas Alva 47-2065

Biography of Thomas L. Edison, written for fourth and fifth grades, covering mainly the years of his childhood.

Kirkus 15:68 F 1 '47 170w

"Another welcome addition to the Bobbs-Merrill series. Excellent silhouettes and good print. Especially suited to fourth and fifth grades." C. W. Field

+ Library J 72:644 Ap 15 '47 60w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Ji 20 '47 150w

Springf'd Republican p5B S 14 '47 40w

GUTHRIE, ALFRED BERTRAM. Big sky. 386p $3.50 Sloane

47-3316

Novel of the opening of the American west, during the years 1830 to 1843. It is the story of the primitive life of the frontier, with its dirt, savagery, and Indians. The hero is Boone Caudill, a Kentucky boy, who tried to kill his vicious father, then stole his gun and set out for the West.

"The story is told in prose that is worthy of the book. There are passages of sheer poetry that suggest Carl Sandburg while remaining entirely Guthrie, passages that one is tempted to quote at length for the sheer joy of transcribing them. This book, which succeeds so beautifully in evoking a time, a land, and a people, ought to have a long, long life." Bruce Lancaster

+ Atlantic 179:131 Je '47 480w

Booklist 43:330 Je 15 '47

Reviewed by Robert Halsband

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 My 11 '47 500w

"History accelerates at times and, by taking advantage of this pitifully swift era, almost episode, Mr. Guthrie has written for us a genuinely tragic novel. It is a memorable novel, hard and often brutal but without doubt faithful to fact where its humans are concerned, beautiful and exact in the myriad glimpses of its setting, moving and engrossing as a tale. It is not for the young or the too sensitive. But the West-lover will find its glories and grim humor outweighing its rufianism. I know I shall find myself reading it again." T. M. Longstreth

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 My 16 '47 600w

"In the telling, Guthrie has unwillingly opened the Audubon journals to the kind of 'nature talk' which is nature itself. His people's voices and accents go with the big sky and the breathless valleys and the winds of the West with their 'rushing, torn, lonely sound.' The poetry of his pages and his people is the poetry which comes of feeling the land and the times and the meaning of the movement of his story." C. A. Wagner

+ Commonweal 46:145 My 23 '47 390w

"One of the most exciting discoveries of many months—a novel with a primitive virility—a vitality—a closeness to the hearts and spirits of those men who contributed largely to the opening up of our frontiers—an integrity and unity of conception and development which some other novels of this genre have lacked."

+ Kirkus 15:241 My 1 '47 340w

"Fine character studies of trappers, and Indians. A story rough as the men it characterizes, with frontier frankness and language and situations which may offend. Men will enjoy it." L. R. Etzkorn

+ Library J 72:638 Ap 15 '47 80w

"I can't help feeling that Mr. Guthrie has applied the realistic technique to material of which the reality cannot be captured by the documentary method. This method serves him well in one respect. The brutality and the plain squalor of life in the early West come through. On the other hand, one suspects that its rather solemn and pedestrian compulsions inhibit him in another respect. Though a few tall tales are spun around campfires, he makes very little use of the humorous myth-making which was and still is a constant and deeply indigenous American way of coping with the overwhelming presence." Margaret Marshall

+ — Nation 164:632 My 24 '47 950w

"We have plenty of monuments to the pioneer mother, in her sunbonnet and long full skirt, her lean vital children clustered around her. . . But none, till now, of the mountain man, he who hated and feared homes with peaceful hearthstones, who hated women, who had no use for children, little liking for his fellow man, who, wild hearted as the eagle or the woodchuck, or the wolf, had but one love—the great spaces of the untarnished new country. . . The book is exactly what it should be to chronicle and portray this figure of an American past who has never before been set in the center of our attention." D. C. Fisher

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 My 4 '47 1400w

"The Big Sky" is an authentic and exciting novel. . . Mr. Guthrie, a former Montanan now living in Kentucky, has poured into his book all of the Westerner's fierce fondness for sun and sky and space; and he has succeeded in explaining (perhaps for the first time in fiction) what motivated the wilderness wanderers of a century ago, the rough and ruthless men who dreamed of freedom under the big sky." J. K. Howard

GUTHRIE, A. B.—Continued

+ N Y Times p1 My 4 '47 1100w

"When all the discounts are made, what remains is an extraordinarily interesting first novel. Its technical faults and the cloudiness of its characterizations are to a large extent compensated for by the author's understanding of the mountain country and its moods and by his imaginative treatment of historical detail, which is vividly attested to by such episodes as the almost instantaneous extermination of an Indian tribe by smallpox. And if Boone Caudill is not the Aeschylean tragic hero Mr. Guthrie seems to believe, he is nevertheless a recognizable, and even familiar type." J. M. Lalley

New Yorker 23:110 My 3 '47 1500w

"It is [the author's] early association that gives his book validity and absorbing interest. Told with spirit and realism, this book about the time when the Northwest was almost virgin country, is as packed with action as any Western." Jane Voiles

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 My 18 '47 850w

"In this skillfully planned and beautifully finished novel, Mr. Guthrie has caught the spirit of the beaver-trappers and the adventurous times of Ashley, Fitzpatrick, Glass, and Bonneville. His book is essentially slight. It has only one important character, the others all being rather shadowy, and its action is devoid of complexity or suspense. It does, however, achieve a vivid piece of portraiture in Boone Caudill, so powerful in dealing with the wilderness and so weak in facing human nature and social institutions." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 30:9 My 3 '47 1000w

Springf'd Union p3 J1 5 '47 140w

"A fine sense of proportion and a refusal to compromise with traditional clichés mark the novel, which has no romantic love interest and little for the traditional 'woman reader'—if she still exists." Harry Hansen

+ Survey G 36:450 Ag '47 140w

"The Big Sky is one of those books that has obviously taken a lifetime maturing in the writer's mind. It is a strong and savory tale of adventure with the first white hunters in the West. Honestly imagined and true to history, it is also a parable of the way the pioneers, as immoderate as children, took their measureless paradise and spoiled it."

+ Time 49:108 Mv 12 '47 650w

"The book, written with ease and unobtrusive directness, is full of scenes and people which will remain in the reader's mind. Neither an historical romance nor an altogether regional novel, this achieves a skillful balance between sentiment and realism."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:241 S '47 280w

Wis Lib Bul 43:82 My '47

Reviewed by Orville Prescott

Yale R n s 36:767 summer '47 270w

GYSIN, BRION. To master—a long goodnight; the story of Uncle Tom, a historical narrative. 276p $3 Creative age

B or 92 Henson, Josiah 46-7380

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

Christian Science Monitor p17 Mr 15 '47 80w

"Mr. Gysin writes exceedingly well. The story of Josiah Henson, taken simply, is a brave story in a great tradition, and he gives it full value." Henrietta Buckmaster

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22 Mr 16 '47 650w

"Brion Gysin has resurrected Henson's character from the bottom of the ocean of tears shed over Mrs. Stowe's novel. In so doing he has rendered a service to clarity of thought on the problem of race relations in the present. His book is not a work of original scholarship, but he writes history with the narrative pace of fiction, without being corny." That, in our day, deserves a cheer." J. M. Morse

+ N Y Times p18 Ap 6 '47 600w

Reviewed by Jonathan Daniels

Sat R of Lit 30:23 F 8 '47 250w

H

H. D. See Doolittle, H.

HAAS, KENNETH BROOKS, and PACKER, HARRY Q. Preparation and use of visual aids. 224p il $4 Prentice-Hall

371.335 Visual instruction 46-8176

"The authors address themselves to those interested in the effective use of audio-visual aids in merchandising, advertising, sales promotion and industrial training programs. The nature and utilization of thirteen distinct media, beginning with motion pictures and ending with television, are described in straightforward fashion. There are many itemized recommendations and cautions as well as ample pictorial illustrations. Particularly valuable are the extensive source lists, representing firms throughout the United States." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 43:150 Ja 15 '47

"A practical approach to a specific problem, this book will be only incidentally helpful to the librarian interested in the use of audio-visual aids in the library." Kurtz Myers

Library J 72:382 Mr 1 '47 140w

Management R 36:125 F '47 50w

School & Society 65:253 Ap 5 '47 30w

Reviewed by W. H. Hartley

Social Educ 11:96 F '47 170w

HABE, HANS, pseud. (JEAN BEKESSY). Aftermath [tr. by Richard F. Hanser]. 345p $3 Viking

47-31425

"Stripped of its political trappings, this novel amounts to a prolonged discussion of an old question . . . whether American women are the physical and intellectual equals of European women. The plot, which has to do with the activities of two American Army officers in postwar Germany, is given an air of depth and complication by the dilemma of one of the principals, a major in the O.S.S., who was born in Germany and fled the country when the Nazis began to take it over." New Yorker

Booklist 44:68 O 15 '47

Kirkus 15:227 Ap 15 '47 180w

"Unfortunately, Hans Habe has chosen to limit the account he gives of the American occupation in 'Aftermath' to two not very typical American officers and to confine his examination of the feminine side of the problem to a restatement of the old theme that American women in love are inferior to European women. Nevertheless, 'Aftermath' ought to be valued by readers who are not yet aware of profound changes that are being wrought in many sensitive and sensible Americans in Germany." Herbert Kuperberg

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 N 2 '47 550w

"It becomes clear, early in the novel, that Habe deserts what might have been his main theme to write just another love story. This is a pity, for his fluency, craftsmanship and adroitness show up best in all scenes dealing with political realities. . . . In a way Habe has stacked the cards against himself. By presenting Peter's wife as rich, spoiled, cold, pretentious, and by idealizing Maria (there's nobody who isn't charmed by her), he has written the familiar story of a man torn between two women. The arduous love scenes are frequently overdone; and though they might be pleasantly shocking to some readers, others might find their lushness rather conventional." Richard Plant

+ N Y Times p16 O 19 '47 450w

"Nothing very much, actually."

New Yorker 23:125 O 11 '47 150w

"Hans Habe tells the story from first-hand knowledge. As a major he was in charge of combat propaganda in Europe. Later he was responsible for all American publications in the German language in Germany. 'Aftermath' reflects, to a large extent, his experiences." W. R. White

San Francisco Chronicle p24 O 19 '47 550w

"Over all, while 'Aftermath' is a highly readable novel, is always interesting and occasionally eloquent, its treatment of what is one of the important themes of our day seems generally too slick and superficial to be taken seriously. Entertaining, yes; a major novel, no. A lot of American women are probably going to be very angry indeed, but maybe they should be." Merle Miller

— + Sat R of Lit 30:16 N 1 '47 750w

HABERMAN, MRS HELEN (LIEBMAN).
Justice is a woman. 360p $3 Prentice-Hall 47-3424

Portrays a New York lawyer, an attractive bachelor in his early forties, who has a courtroom presence and is rising to fame. However, he has an inferiority complex and refuses to marry the intelligent newspaper woman he loves. Instead he chooses a rather stupid but malleable woman. When he returns from war, crippled, he has a second chance at happiness.

Kirkus 15:198 Ap 1 '47 120w

"Readable and intelligent treatment, but not particularly important." Jayne Doughman
+ — Library J 72:888 Je 1 '47 80w

"The author may not have meant to do it, but her man of distinction frequently has the aura of an old fogey."

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9
Jl 6 '47 100w

"Mrs. Haberman can make legal shop sound nearly as universally interesting in fiction as medical shop. . . . A good sample of Mrs. Haberman's work is the chapter concerning a condemnation case before the Court of Appeals; no innocent client in the deathhouse, no weeping mother, no fireworks—but rather the kind of writing that stimulates the brain instead of the emotions." Catherine Brody
+ N Y Times p18 Je 29 '47 280w

HACKER, LOUIS MORTON. Shaping of the American tradition; text by Louis M. Hacker; documents edited by Louis M. Hacker and Helene S. Zahler, text ed 1247p $6; trade ed 2v $7.50 Columbia univ. press
973 U.S.—History 47-1257

"It is the intention of this book—by the use of examples—to show how American ideas and institutions have been developed. Its materials fall into two parts: text and contemporary documents. The text, in effect a book in American history, serves as a series of introductions to the documents." (p. xxiii) Index of documents.

"The weight of the book (almost six pounds) makes it cumbersome to handle. The table of contents divided, as is the subject matter of the book, into eleven parts, does not clearly differentiate introductory comment from text of document or from narrative summaries; hence it is difficult to use. There is no general index. Within the limits described, this is a monumental presentation. In the collection of unusual materials, and in the distribution of attention to the successive periods in our history, it is an outstanding example of pedagogical skill and scholarly interest. For courses in contemporary civilization it should prove invaluable." E. E. Robinson
+ — Am Hist R 53:117 O '47 1450w

Reviewed by Carleton Mabey
Ann Am Acad 254:189 N '47 550w
Booklist 44:11 S 1 '47

Reviewed by R. A. Billington
Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Jl 27 '47 700w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 64:949 Ag 6 '47 1100w

"Too few contemporary Americans really understand the forces and factors that have shaped our philosophy and way of life. Here, in a format that is easy on the eye and a style that is delightfully clear and comprehensive, is the synthesis of a scholar who has examined these forces and factors; better yet, here are many of the original documents and records that have helped him to understand and enabled him to evaluate the work of successive generations of Americans." R. A. Brown

Christian Science Monitor p14 Jl 24 '47 650w

"Professor Hacker doubtless intends his current offering to be of value to university students. It will repay any reader who will give the time to absorb a pretty good idea of his country from political, economic and intellectual angles. It will not be a dry and arduous task; except in a few spots it is easy reading, with occasional moments of sprightly human interest thrown in for good measure." Roy Hillbrook

+ Current Hist 13:163 S '47 1050w

Kirkus 15:332 Je 15 '47 220w

Reviewed by B. B. Libaire

Library J 72:1030 Jl '47 140w

Reviewed by Keith Hutchison

Nation 165:342 O 4 '47 1900w

"Hacker's special world is that of economics, and he belongs to it so wholeheartedly that he tends to think American life has been shaped almost exclusively by economic causes. Beginning in this faith as a stout admirer of the property-minded John Locke, of the 'realistic' Alexander Hamilton and of the triumphs of American business enterprise, he comes out talking a language almost as deterministic as that of Karl Marx. The net result is that this 1,250-page collection is rich in texts that have to do with material self-interest, but is curiously short on discussions of other aspirations. . . . This is a rich and brilliant book nevertheless, with its wealth of words mined from [varied] sources. . . . Hacker may be more favorably disposed toward the merchants and gowned mentors and solid folk of our past than he is toward recurrent mavericks and trouble-makers such as the early Levellers, the Jeffersonians, the Jacksonians, the Utopians, the Populists and the insurgent New Dealers, but at least he lets them have their say. It is useless to wish that they had been allowed to say more. For the book covers a vast area, even if it often misses the high ground." W. H. Hale

+ — New Repub 117:29 Ag 25 '47 1100w

"Mr. Hacker has written a book in which each document takes its place as one of the structural elements. Balance and form make it an entity; yet at the same time it is a fine collection of notes on American history from the most divergent sources, some of them hard to come by." G. W. Johnson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1
Jl 6 '47 1300w

"In a work of this type everyone will miss one of his favorite readings or documents. There is no point in listing the omissions, but it might be said that both text and documents lean too heavily to the economic side. . . . But this stricture is relatively unimportant beside the fact that here is a work containing more solid excerpts from the American past than a reader could find for himself in years, strung together with a narrative and introductions that are longer, sounder and clearer than those customarily found in this type of book." W. B. Hamilton

+ — N Y Times p1 Jl 6 '47 1550w

Reviewed by R. H. Gabriel

Sat R of Lit 30:11 Jl 5 '47 1150w

School & Society 65:197 Mr 15 '47 30w

"High schools will find it worthwhile to have copies available for students of more than usual interest and ability; teachers who are tired of secondhand summaries and who want to read in a limited number of sources will welcome this opportunity to gain a deeper understanding of the history which they teach. In colleges the use of this work should help to relieve pressure upon inadequately-stocked libraries. . . Like the Bible, this work is a library in itself." R. E. Keohane

HACKER, LOUIS M.—Continued

+ Social Educ 11:235 My '47 950w

"For the intelligent American citizen, this book can be recommended as a review of our history, especially needful in the present critical state of our affairs." D. C. Coyle

+ Survey G 36:703 D '47 470w

U S Quarterly Bk1 3:277 S '47 360w

"The collection is a remarkably fresh one, and one which provides vivid and provocative illustration of the major trends in the development of American attitudes and ideas." D. M. Potter

+ Yale R n s 37:174 autumn '47 850w

HACKETT, FRANCIS. On judging books; in general and in particular. 293p $4; text ed $3.20 Day

804 Literature. Books—Reviews. Criticism 47-30351

Includes several essays on the general subject of book reviewing, the function of the writer, and the importance of individualism. Then follows some of the author's own book reviews, written over a period of years and reprinted from The Saturday Review of Literature, The New York Times Book Review, and The American-Scandinavian Review. No index.

Booklist 43:356 J1 15 '47

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 J1 13 '47 270w

Christian Science Monitor p10 J1 19 '47 400w

Current Hist 13:165 S '47 70w

"Adds up to less than the title implies. Not needed in most collections." R. E. Kingery

— Library J 72:636 Ap 15 '47 70w

"It is always a pleasure to read a book written in good prose, and this pleasure Mr. Hackett gives in abundance." DeLancey Ferguson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 J1 6 '47 360w

"Clifton Fadiman once said that book reviewing serves the public as 'a mildly useful sieve.' . . Well, Hackett is also a fountainhead, and what gets into the sieve is not only run-of-the-millstream water but pure mineral impregnated liquid from the deep underground of a long and significant experience in Ireland, Denmark and the United States. Hackett has lived a life, which is always useful in interpreting literature." John Chamberlain

+ N Y Times p1 Je 22 '47 1400w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p12 Je 16 '47 800w

Reviewed by Horace Reynolds

Sat R of Lit 30:16 Je 28 '47 1000w

Reviewed by George Britt

Survey G 36:489 S '47 500w

HADER, MRS BERTA (HOERNER), and HADER, ELMER. Big city [il. by the authors]. [78p] $2.50 Macmillan 974.71 New York (city)—Juvenile literature 47-11618

Brief text and many pictures in gray or in color tell the history of New York city, and then give a view of the New York of the present. For ages six to ten.

Booklist 44:156 D 15 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p7A N 19 '47 70w

+ Commonweal 47:151 N 21 '47 70w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 24:34 Ja '48 50w

"This could be a good book, but sloppy writing and illustrations make it a disappointing one. . . Recommended only for lack of other picture books on New York." J. H. Dohm Library J 72:1784 D 15 '47 80w

"Companion piece to 'Little Town' which delighted so many boys and girls from six years onward, 'Big City' has a harder task to fulfill, and to its fulfillment the Haders have devoted the same care in getting material and the same skill in presenting it." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 D 14 '47 220w

"The book should be useful in preparing out-of-town children for similar visits, and city kids will find a lot that's helpful, too, for exploring their home ground." R. C. Benét

+ New Yorker 23:144 D 6 '47 90w

"A very good book to send to the children of other countries."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:38 N 15 '47 50w

HADER, MRS BERTA (HOERNER), and HADER, ELMER. Skyrocket [il. by the authors]. 146p $2.50 Macmillan 46-8409

Young Roger stows away on a new round-the-world plane, and he and the pilot have a fine time, collecting and delivering mail, and even a burro, as they circle the globe in twenty-four hours.

"The Haders' pictures are delightful."

+ Horn Bk 23:110 Mr '47 50w

Kirkus 14:525 O 15 '46 160w

"Although not up to the Haders' usual standard, this is an exciting story. . . Superman quality about this story will appeal to boys from eight to twelve, but its absurdity is relieved by its humor. Colored pictures and many black-and-white sketches have a great deal of fun and adventure." N. L. Rathbun

+ — Library J 72:166 Ja 15 '47 80w

"The pictures are so lifelike that they help the imagination and help to make an amusing Christmas book that will last much longer than the holidays." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 D 22 '46 250w

Wis Lib Bul 43:39 F '47

HAGEDORN, HERMANN. Prophet in the wilderness; the story of Albert Schweitzer. 221p $3 Macmillan 47-11858

B or 92 Schweitzer, Albert

A biography of Dr Schweitzer, who held degrees in theology, philosophy, music, and medicine, when he went to central Africa to doctor the natives. Bibliography. No index.

Booklist 44:132 D 1 '47

"Of the three recent books about Schweitzer (including one made out of his own writings), this one is easiest to read, shortest, most dramatic."

+ Christian Century 64:1555 D 17 '47 110w

"A splendid interpretation of the life and work of this remarkable man, and it should have a wide reading, both because of the man portrayed and the significance of his message for our day."

+ Kirkus 15:537 S 15 '47 240w

"A complete and interesting biography—not too scholarly for the average reader but scholarly enough for the serious-minded student." O. G. Lawson

+ Library J 72:1189 S 1 '47 130w

Reviewed by Herbert Kupferberg

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 D 7 '47 410w

Reviewed by James Stern

N Y Times p6 N 30 '47 400w

Reviewed by K. N. Rhoades

Survey G 37:31 Ja '48 280w

HAGEN, LOUIS E. Indian route march. 192p il $2.50 Pilot

915.4 India—Description and travel. India—
Social conditions [47-15567]

Vivid account of the author's fourteen months in India during the war, describing in straightforward fashion the things which he observed. He makes no attempt to sentimentalize or take sides.

"At last a book about India which does not try to prove a case for or against the British Raj. . . It is nowhere mawkishly sentimental, insanely in love with British rule or Congress. It is not scholarly. It has not got hundreds of dates and long quotations to prove this or that. It is without pretensions: there is no claim to lay bare the soul of India, or to interpret the tortuous ways of Mr. Gandhi or the rigid inflexibility of Mr. Jinnah. It is not even solemn and at times it is positively light-hearted. Above all it is normal and healthy—the reactions of a brilliant observer who knows how to write without self-consciousness." Woodrow Wyatt

+ New Statesman & Nation 22:402 N 30
46 800w

"It is not a well planned book nor is the analysis very penetrating. But it records on a level far above the average the impressions of an Occidental on a tour of duty in a strange land at a time of economic and political crisis." W. N. Brown

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12
Ap 6 '47 340w

"This is an honest, entertaining and informative book about India in these days when good books about India are necessary. . . It would be misleading, however, to offer this book as a comprehensive or expert analysis of the Indian situation. It does not claim to be such, for it is simply the kaleidoscopic impressions of an acute and overwhelmingly curious young man who was thrown into the Indian vortex because of the war and who managed to keep his head, despite the dizziness." H. L. Matthews

+ N Y Times p4 Mr 23 '47 850w

"Mr. Hagen describes some experiences and sets forth some conclusions with the clear-cut precision so notably displayed in his earlier anonymous work 'Arnhem Lift.' His personal qualifications for writing a book on India may seem at first sight slender; for by his own confession he brought to his task little but a prejudice or two against 'pukka sahibs.' But he possesses the indispensable equipment of the reporter: the seeing eye, the immediate recognition of what is or can be made to appear significant, the insatiable curiosity, and, perhaps above all, the honesty that preserves a completely open mind. In consequence, the picture which he draws is as vivid as it is objective, even if it represents only one tiny sector of the enormous whole which he had no opportunity of viewing."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p543 N 9 '46
330w

HAGEN, MIRIAM ANN. Plant me now. 219p
$2 Doubleday

47-4019

Detective story.

Kirkus 15:178 Mr 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16
Jl 20 '47 150w

"Jimmy Wells and Janie Chase, the two leading characters in this merry tale of murder, speak the same language—one that you may have some difficulty in understanding unless you are hep to the jive. In other words, if you don't dig it, it doesn't send you. But natch! . . . Seldom has murder been made so enjoyable." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p22 Je 1 '47 150w

"Singularly poor plotting and construction regrettably weaken the first jivetalk whodunit—at its best so fresh and lively that even an icky square like Boucher succumbs completely." Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Je 1 '47
100w

"Non-essential reading."

Sat R of Lit 30:32 My 24 '47 40w

HAGSTROM COMPANY, INCORPORATED.

Loose leaf market atlas of the United States for sales managers, advertising directors, business executives; ed. by A. G. Hagstrom [and others]. 2d ed rev & enl 11lp 61 maps $34.50 The company, 20 Vesey st, N.Y. 7
912 Atlases, Marketing Map47-566

"Hagstrom's Market Atlas is intended as a reference work for those concerned with marketing, and consists of a marketing center map for each state supplemented by statistical data pertinent to an appraisal of existing and potential marketing opportunities. . . The state maps are arranged alphabetically and appear on the right-hand pages with the statistical data for each state on the page opposite. The maps, black and white, are uniform in size (17 inches by 22 inches) and show county boundaries, county seats, cities and towns. Yellow circles outlined in red indicate marketing centers of varying sizes determined by 1940 population figures. The population area which each circle represents is indicated at the bottom of each map. Inset maps show marketing areas in metropolitan communities. An alphabetical index to towns with 1940 population is shown on the back of each map. . . Following the main section . . . are charts of summaries of consumer buying power by states; distribution of population by states and divisions; and a condensed survey of cities of more than 50,000 population. The latter shows in tabular form the total number of stores and sales according to selected business groups in each city. There are also twelve weather maps to be used as guides for weather-controlled merchandising. These indicate average seasonal temperatures, sunshine, precipitation and dates of killing frosts." Subscription Bks Bul

"The information is well chosen, well organized and accurate. A careful examination bears out the claims of the publishers. The Atlas should prove very useful to special business libraries and to business branches and departments of public libraries. It should be noted, however, that with few exceptions, notably the listing of individual income tax returns and the circulation of newspapers and magazines, the information is also found in the annual Rand McNally Commercial Atlas and Marketing Guide. The physical make-up of the Atlas is satisfactory. The maps are clear and the tables and graphs simple and legible. The Hagstrom's Loose Leaf Market Atlas of the United States is recommended for all libraries needing information in this specialized subject field."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 18:37 Jl '47 500w

HAHN, EMILY (MRS CHARLES BOXER).
Miss Jill. 273p $2.75 Doubleday

47-12047

Story of an Australian prostitute living in Shanghai when the war broke out. During the war, as an inmate of a Japanese prison camp she learns a great deal from the people around her. By the time the war ends Miss Jill is headed for a better situation in life.

"Facile fictionization which has a certain authenticity of place and personality, but no particular purpose in being."

Kirkus 15:514 S 15 '47 130w

"At times Miss Hahn's material seems to get a bit out of hand. I am not at all sure that she is conscious of the stunning effect she produces when, half way through her story, she casually informs the reader that Jill, who has up to this point hardly been pictured as an outdoor type, plays a good game of tennis! . . . And though I admire the courage with which she handles the closing scene . . . I am not certain that Miss Hahn has the right to be annoyed if it calls forth a slightly ribald reaction from some of her readers." J. J. Espey

HAHN, EMILY—Continued

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p19
N 30 '47 750w

"Setting, style and local color, all excellent in themselves, barely serve to keep their heroine alive until the day of liberation. Miss Hahn's subtlety never takes us far from the surface of human emotions; the theme of this book requires deeper soundings than the light touch allows for." Isabelle Mallet

N Y Times p12 D 14 '47 500w

"A witty and convincing novel, on a theme that in less skillful hands would certainly have evolved into a sentimental mishap."

+ New Yorker 23:133 N 29 '47 120w

"Almost inevitably, Miss Hahn's treatment of red-light society calls up Kuprin's 'Yama.' Despite the rococo touch, the Russian novel stands out as an honest indictment and an authentic human document. 'Miss Jill' comes off by comparison as the prank of an enfant terrible." A. F. Wolfe

Sat R of Lit 30:40 D 6 '47 650w

HAHN, HARRY. Rape of LaBelle; with an introd. by Thomas Hart Benton. 274p 9pl $5 Frank Glenn pub. co, inc, 113 W. 12th st, Kansas City 6, Mo.

759.5 Leonardo da Vinci, Millbank, Joseph Duveen, 1st baron

In 1920 Sir Joseph Duveen (art dealer) declared a certain picture in the possession of a Mrs Hahn was a copy and not the original work of Leonardo da Vinci. Some years later suit was brought against the dealer for damages and it is the evidence pro and con in that case which is the subject matter of this book.

"The reader will note the author's passionate bias. He will have neither time nor inclination to go through the book assaying the evidence for himself, but if he should stumble on but one bit of juggled evidence like the one cited—and it is not the only one—he may have some doubts about the remainder. This is really too bad, because Mr. Hahn may be right about the painting, and his impatience with professional art connoisseurship is not without justification. He obviously expected the book to create a considerable furor. Its failure to do so can be blamed chiefly on his lack of self-discipline, and to a minor degree on some of the grubbiest illustrations that ever got into a five-dollar book about paintings." Murray Pease

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p48
D 1 '46 900w

"Its catchpenny title, repetitious and over-emphatic style, confusing presentation of evidence and air of uneasy defiance should not be allowed to put readers off this book and the problem it attempts to solve. . . . If the author's single-minded persistence, his industry in research and his healthy scepticism of ex cathedra pronouncements had been matched by an equal capacity for the clear and economical marshalling of his case, he would have written a better book; despite its faults, it is still a fascinating one."

Times [London] Lit Sup p155 Ap 5 '47
2400w

HAHNEL, EUGENE STEPHENS. Down to earth; the pleasures and perils of becoming a farmer; il. by Fred Dreher. 106p $1.75 Rutgers univ. press

630.1 Farm life Agr47-343

Pertinent facts for the city resident who longs to be a farmer, without knowing the pitfalls. The author, who speaks from personal knowledge, comments on some of the less well-known aspects of expense, etc.

"For the city character with a yen to get his teeth into farming here is a book to cut those teeth on." H. F. R.

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Jl 6 '47
220w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p19
My 18 '47 320w

"This small book sets forth candidly the snares, pitfalls and dangers that await the too-enthusiastic, inexperienced city dweller who is making plans to wrest a living from the soil. In certain sections the book is almost brutal in emphasizing the dark side. But the author's purpose is starkly clear. He wants dreamers 'never seeing the costs but calculating the savings' to realize what awaits them on a family farm. One weakness of the book is that not enough is said regarding the possibilities of smaller farms where produce is sold at retail prices from roadside stands."

H. S. Pearson

+ N Y Times p12 Ag 3 '47 240w

"What Mr. Hahnel seeks to do—and he succeeds in it—is to chill the romantic ardor of those who are dissatisfied with city life and who think they can find something better by simply moving to a patch of land. Thousands can find greater security on the land, but only if they want to work hard for it. Mr. Hahnel makes this plain, and has done a fine service to any farmer-to-be who picks up his book." Arthur Moore

+ Sat R of Lit 30:24 Je 7 '47 1000w

HAIEN, JEANNETTE MICHAEL. Rip Van Winkle's dream [a narrative poem]. 95p $2.50 Doubleday

811

47-3035

A poetic interpretation of the story of Rip Van Winkle which attempts to discover the legend's symbolic possibilities. The author is a young American poet.

"Granted the current interest in American folklore and the vogue for reworking many an old tale, I can see very little of value or interest in this particular rehash. It has neither historical, local nor poetic appeal."

— Kirkus 15:124 F 15 '47 150w

"The poet has come up with a 'philosophic' poem; ironically, it does not appear that she has resolved thoroughly the philosophic content of her own dream and, as a consequence, Rip's dream is deficient as well. What Miss Haien reveals is a lush vocabulary and a wanton prodigality of metrical eccentricities—neither of which is helpful equipment in shaping a long, philosophic poem. . . . One must concede, at the same time, that Miss Haien reveals genuine feeling when she is writing of the landscape and nature phenomena." Anne Peacock

+ N Y Times p26 Mr 30 '47 240w

"'Rip Van Winkle's Dream' will prove disappointing to lovers of narrative poetry. First of all it suffers by comparison with Irving's poetic fable in prose and by its failure to surmount Poe's judgment against any long poem. Whenever it touches on nature, or the background of Rip's long dream, the style is more certain and the versification as well. Yet even here there is much too much nature and not enough human nature." Alfred Kreymborg

+ Sat R of Lit 30:26 My 24 '47 140w

HAIG-BROWN, RODERICK LANGMERE HAIG. A river never sleeps; il. by Louis Darling. 352p $4 Morrow

799.1 Fishing

Agr47-75

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

Booklist 43:201 Mr 1 '47

Bookmark 8:7 Mr '47

"Only rarely does marked literary skill combine with sound knowledge and rich experience to produce a really good angling book, but Roderick Haig-Brown's 'A River Never Sleeps' is just that." Ed Zern

+ N Y Times p38 F 9 '47 450w

HAIGHT, MRS ANNE (LYON), ed. Portrait of Latin America; as seen by her print makers (Retrato de la América latina hecho por sus artistas gráficos) Monroe Wheeler, foreword; Jean Charlot, introduction. 180p il $5 Hastings house

769.98 Engravings. Latin America—Pictorial works 47-30116

"This is a collection of etchings, lithographs, drypoints, engravings, monotypes, aquatints and woodcuts by 138 artists, most of them famous in their own countries, many of them unknown elsewhere. A great deal of the work represented in this volume is folk art, rather than fine art, portraying the local scene or characteristic inhabitants; some of it was conceived for political persuasion or religious edification; but, altogether, it shows us what is being done in Latin-American nations in the important media of the print." San Francisco Chronicle

Booklist 43:201 Mr 1 '47

Kirkus 15:85 F 1 '47 160w

"Effect is restless; one does not derive a clear-cut impression of any one country or artist, but study of the collection will lead to ultimate understanding of citadel and countryside."

Library J 72:529 Ap 1 '47 140w

"Accidents of availability and the desire to cover many lands affect the quality of some of the work. But fine art or folk art or mere regional art, all of it is of interest as a 'Portrait of Latin America' and a reflection of the present fairly high estate of the graphic arts. And much of it is of interest by any standard the art lover may choose to apply." B. D. Wolfe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Mr 2 '47 900w

New Yorker 23:111 Mr 29 '47 90w

Reviewed by Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p11 F 23 '47 470w

Times [London] Lit Sup p462 S 13 '47 500w

"A broadly representative sample of contemporary graphic arts in Latin America, this volume is a useful addition to the excellent museum and exhibition catalogs already available on other phases of modern Latin American art... The book will be indispensable to students and connoisseurs of Latin American art." U S Quarterly Bk1 3:127 Je '47 160w

HAINES, CHARLES GROVE, and HOFFMAN, ROSS JOHN SWARTZ. Origins and background of the second World war, 2d ed 729p maps $4 Oxford

909.82 World war, 1939-1945. World politics 47-4096

"Apart from the correction of several minor textual errors, the authors have not revised their original work that was completed in 1943 [Book Review Digest 1943]. But to that work they have added a short analytical history of the Second World War, especially in its political aspects. This addition was made to increase the book's utility for basic instruction in the history of international politics."—Note

"A highly informed narrative." Garland Downum

+ Am Pol Sci R 41:1045 O '47 260w

Booklist 43:362 Jl 15 '47

San Francisco Chronicle p18 D 14 '47 150w

HAINES, WILLIAM WISTER. Command decision. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 258p $2.50 Little

47-30044

An American brigadier general, commander of a unit of B17 bombers based in England, is the hero of this short war novel. His job was to finish Operation Stitch, which was directed against the jet-propelled airplane factories in Germany. The story is concerned with Dennis' struggle to accomplish his mission, against bitter odds: lack of planes, visiting congressmen, poor weather, etc.

Booklist 43:170 F 1 '47

Reviewed by Clinton Textor

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ja 12 '47 320w

"This is an exciting book. I hope it won't fall before the hurdle of public reluctance to read war books, for it is a war book. That must be faced. But it is more than that—it is a book about men's passions and angers and ambitions and fears; a book about big decisions under fire of public opinion and political pressure; it is a book that will cause discomfort among the big brass in high places, but will hearten the public that wonders whether men who make the split second decisions can stand up against the top rank pressure, vacillation and uncertainties. Haines writes well."

+ Kirkus 14:601 D 1 '46 250w

"Read this admirable book at one sitting for its full impact. Buy several copies." F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 72:76 Ja 1 '47 90w

"'Command Decision' is immensely readable and unflagging in its excitement. It seems almost certain that a great many Americans will be on the edges of their chairs during the next few months, reading and approving it." William Abrahams

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Ja 5 '47 1200w

"This taut, continuously engrossing novel of an American bomber command based in England packs a solid impact from its first page... 'Command Decision' is not the 'What Price Glory?' of World War II: it's too slick for that. But it will do nicely until something better comes along." C. V. Terry

+ N Y Times p9 Ja 5 '47 650w

"Highly effective short novel... The politics, jealousies, official timidity, and plain stupidities that beset the commander of the division make a story of waste illuminated by his stubborn, though unavailing, heroism. Mr. Haines manages to keep all trace of anger out of his voice and is even divertingly humorous at times, but there is no doubt about how he feels toward the Army."

+ New Yorker 22:84 Ja 11 '47 150w

Reviewed by William Hogan

San Francisco Chronicle p19 F 2 '47 450w

"It is an extremely difficult assignment, which he has handled with a skill worthy of the highest praise. What is more, he has brought off successfully the difficult job of telling his story almost entirely through dialogue so brilliantly written that it always strikes exactly the correct note. 'Command Decision' is easy to read and worth reading, whether as a story or for the implications that come with it." Fletcher Pratt

+ Sat R of Lit 30:12 Ja 18 '47 400w

Time 49:102 Ja 20 '47 390w

Wis Lib Bul 43:69 Ap '47

"Command Decision is good reading, illuminating in its revelation of what actually went on among the 'brass hats' of the air force, and continuously entertaining. But Mr. Haines has kept his entire story on so superficial a level and worked out his plot so neatly to a surprise happy ending that his book is only clever and interesting. It has no depths of emotion, no breadth of imagination, no genuine power. Which doesn't mean that within its own rigid limitations it isn't a very competent piece of work." Orville Prescott

+ — Yale R n s 36:575 spring '47 320w

HALDANE, JOHN BURDON SANDERSON. Science advances, 253p $3 Macmillan

504 Science

[47-29325]

"In his new collection of essays, most of which appeared in the (British) Daily Worker during the war, Haldane makes no attempt to conceal the fact that he is a Marxist. Indeed, he rubs it into the reader's mind at nearly every turn of the page... In 250 pages Haldane chats about a breath-taking number of topics. He gives short sketches of a number of men whose scientific achievements have impressed him. He discusses cats, insects, potatoes, trees, and lobsters. He writes of temperature, blood, evolution, and fatigue; of diseases ranging from the common cold to cancer; of X-rays and coal mine explosions; of the spectroscope and electron microscope. Altogether there are over eighty separate essays." Sat R of Lit

HALDANE, J. B. S.—Continued

"The fact that the author is so eminent a scientist and so able a popularizer may lead the expectant reader to think, 'Ah, here at last I can get an integrated picture of what the scientists are doing, and why.' Such hopes will only partly be fulfilled, for the scope of the book is far less broad than the title indicates. . . . They were written during his busy war years, and all are very topical and timely as to the week in which they were written, but apparently unedited except for an occasional footnote. . . . The book can be recommended, but American capitalists, aristocrats, and bourgeoisie who are subject to high blood pressure will do well to subscribe to a special filtered edition." G. R. Harrison
Atlantic 180:162 N '47 1350w

"Simple essays, delightfully written." Benjamin Harrow
+ Nation 165:318 S 27 '47 750w

"Criticism has been directed at this book for its little Marxian morals tacked on unashamedly at the conclusion of many of the essays. . . . I am not disposed to quarrel with Haldane's right to mix La Fontaine with science, even if some of the fables seem far-fetched and the coupling with the main body of an essay is sometimes weak and strained. . . . When a writer is primarily concerned with the contribution that science can make to social and economic improvement, I am prepared to let him choose his labels. Good sense and good morals do not seem to me to be less good when incorporated in Marxian doctrine. On the whole, I feel the same about Haldane's penchant for Marxism as did Lincoln about Grant's drinking habits." J. R. Newman
+ New Repub 117:27 S 29 '47 1250w

Reviewed by H. M. Parshley
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p38
D 7 '47 220w

"The ninety short essays in this collection are competently written, for Haldane is not only a biologist of the first rank, but a writer able to express himself well to the non-specialist. The essays are remarkable in two ways. First, they are not cluttered with the peripheral detail that is so common in most writing on 'popular' science. Second, Haldane is a professed communist . . . and a Marxist moral is drawn wherever possible. . . . Whatever the reader thinks of Haldane's Marxism, he is likely to be entertained and informed by Haldane's science." L. N. Ridenour
+ N Y Times p4 Ag 10 '47 1050w

"At the risk of being subpoenaed by the Un-American Activities Committee, this reviewer must say that he thoroughly enjoyed the book. Haldane is without question one of the few men in the world who does a good job of explaining science, its attitudes, and methods to the citizen. It is entirely possible to disagree with his politics and at the same time to enjoy his science. As an essayist he is superb." Harrison Brown
+ Sat R of Lit 30:24 S 27 '47 700w

"The author is sincerely anxious to spread knowledge of science and he is no doubt equally sincere in his Marxian faith, but he has failed to distinguish fact from fancy, assertion and conjecture from proof."
— + Times [London] Lit Sup p318 Je 28 '47 1500w

HALE, GARTH, pseud. See Cunningham, A. B.

HALE, KATHLEEN. Henrietta, the faithful hen; pictures by [the author]. 32p $2.85 Transatlantic

"As this picture book opens, the hen and her mistress, comfortable, kind Mrs. Fowler, are in the dumps, for Henrietta hadn't laid an egg in six weeks, and so there was no money to pay the rent. Valiantly Henrietta scratches for treasure, finds instead an old Roman city which brings her fame and fortune, romance and a brand new castle complete with moat and turrets." N Y Times

"The gaily colored pictures in this robust and slightly sophisticated nonsense tale are full of go and a high absurdity." A. T. Eaton
Christian Science Monitor p12 D 12 '47 210w

"Kathleen Hale, now and at any moment for the last ten years, if a contest started for the most popular writer among the children of Britain, would in all probability win first, second and third prizes. . . . Having come to the last page [of this book] a child turns back to the first and brings it to somebody else to read aloud." M. L. Becker
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8
N 16 '47 320w

"Like Orlando, the Marmalade Cat, created by the same author-artist, the faithful hen has the gift of living through delightfully improbable events with the most convincing air of plausibility, and is an equally satisfying personality. Kathleen Hale tells her story with a fine use of fitting details and embellishes it with stunning pictures which are as funny as the text." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p47 N 30 '47 140w

HALE, RICHARD WALDEN. Tercentenary history of the Roxbury Latin school, 1645-1945. 170p il $2 Riverside press

373.744 Roxbury Latin school, Roxbury, Massachusetts 46-5253

History of the three hundred years of continuous service of the Roxbury Latin school. "Mr. Hale's book should be of interest not only to graduates of the school but to all who are interested in or concerned with secondary education—past, present, and future. Here is a school which has tended to business for three hundred years. It is at once conservative and progressive. It provides no frills, but has always put major emphasis on its careful choice of teachers and a tradition of long service in teaching. It has been a democratic school, open to able boys from every walk of life. It has been an independent school and yet a 'free' school to all qualified children of Roxbury. Today as in John Eliot's time, it is devoted to public service and has maintained uncompromisingly high standards of scholarship. As Mr. Hale remarks, it ' . . . might be called a Public School in both the English and American senses of the word.'" New Eng Q

"Mr. Hale has done a real service to secondary education. His book is readable and especially significant at this time. It presents solid and worthwhile food for thought as we face the uncertain future." W. G. Saltonstall
+ New Eng Q 19:556 D '46 450w

"The available material does not permit accurate reconstruction of school life during the days when Roxbury Latin was a one-room, one-master school. It is regrettable that we can learn no more of the nine Indians the school once attempted to prepare for Harvard, or of the Revolutionary days when the schoolhouse was between the American siege lines thrown about Boston. On the other hand, the book is blessedly free from the cow-in-the-belfry sort of anecdote." Alan Vrooman
N Y Times p16 Ag 25 '46 450w

"Dr. Hale's volume is well integrated, and, despite the almost complete omission of formal documentation, betrays the hand of the historian." W. W. Brickman
+ School & Society 65:409 My 31 '47 170w

HALE, WILLIAM HARLAN. March of freedom; a layman's history of the American people. 303p $3 Harper

973 United States—History 47-3443

A brief over-all view of American history, which overlooks dates in order to stress reasons for and interpretation of the main trends.

Events are followed chronologically, and are related to the past and the future. Index.

Booklist 43:357 J1 15 '47

"A caricature of American history and a travesty on man's long, hard struggle for a better life." R. H. M.

— Christian Science Monitor p16 My 24 '47 750w

"A blend of history and analysis that, closely read, provides argumentative material—fresh interpretation of too complacently accepted facts. Interesting in its sustained theme, its handling of its arguments."

+ Kirkus 15:119 F 15 '47 120w

"Significant events are explained fully and entertainingly. Hale makes history seem alive and vital. He treats it informally, and the result is brilliantly successful—even those who disagree with his point of view will find it stimulating. An intelligent, refreshing and probably controversial view of events too often made dull. Enjoyable reading, this book makes it possible to look at America with new perception, to read other histories with new curiosity. Highly recommended." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 72:636 Ap 15 '47 130w

Reviewed by Keith Hutchison

+ Nation 165:149 Ag 9 '47 240w

"Mr. Hale is usually in a hurry. The pace he sets for himself prevents him from making necessary explanations. . . Ralph Waldo Emerson appears on at least half a dozen pages, but his role in American life remains obscure. The struggle over the advance of slavery into the common territory of the Union is discussed at length, but with only casual or cryptic references to such salient facts as the Missouri Compromise, the compromise of 1850, the Kansas-Nebraska bill, the Dred Scott decision and the Freeport Doctrine. As a result the lines of controversy are much too simply defined; they run straight through the years, dividing North and South. . . The author is much happier in his brisk interpretation of the last sixty years. So much of his writing about the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries has been done with an eye fixed on the twentieth century that there is a distinct lift in his book when he finally reaches the period in which he is most interested." J. A. Krout

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 My 18 '47 800w

"Mr. Hale is very frank in admitting that there is nothing new in 'The March of Freedom' except his opinions and some misinformation. He has a lot of opinions, and a good many people will find the book cocky and brash. Clever, upstanding, opinionated Yaleman Hale writes a good deal like his fellow-Yalemen on Time magazine. . . Other mannerisms are also somewhat irritating." H. F. Pringle

N Y Times p3 Je 29 '47 750w

Reviewed by Templeton Peck

San Francisco Chronicle p14 My 13 '47 700w

Reviewed by John Lydenberg

Sat R of Lit 30:23 Je 14 '47 600w

School & Society 65:414 My 31 '47 10w

HALEVY, DANIEL. Péguy and Les Cahiers de la Quinzaine. 304p $3.50 Longmans

B or 92 Péguy, Charles Pierre 47-11780

"Authority presents noted French author and poet through the columns of his famous Cahiers. A puzzle to both anti-clericals and Catholics, Péguy sought truth through a maze of literary, political and religious complications including famous Dreyfus Affair. His bookshop near the Sorbonne was a meeting place of great minds of the time. Péguy himself found an obscure soldier's death on the Marne in 1916. Personal comments of author add some vivacity to lengthy quotations." Library J

Kirkus 15:454 Ag 15 '47 120w

"Of special interest to students of French literature and Gallicanism. Revision and enlargement of previous work (1918). For mature readers and larger libraries." R. J. Hurley

Library J 72:1190 S 1 '47 120w

Reviewed by Sheila Rein

New Statesman & Nation 32:469 D 21 '46 550w

Reviewed by Anne Fremantle

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p46 D 7 '47 750w

"For anyone who wants to understand that era in France, this book by Halévy is pivotal and indispensable." Justin O'Brien

+ N Y Times p14 Ja 4 '48 800w

New Yorker 23:141 N 29 '47 130w

"An evocative volume in a fluid, readable English and a really remarkable rendering of excerpts of French verse." E. C. Hugli

+ Sat R of Lit 30:34 N 22 '47 750w

"Of course, Péguy was often unjust. He was (on the whole) unjust to Jaurès; he was, less certainly, unjust to Romain Rolland. An anarchist, he could not accept the contagion of the world's slow stain that all active politicians have to endure. By 1914 the Cahiers were on the rocks. Had Péguy lived, he must have tried a new line of attack. But he died in the Battle of the Marne. . . He was not always great; sometimes he was a little too like Jules Vallès; sometimes he was too repetitive and pessimistic like Bernanos. But his posthumous fame and literary canonisation were fully deserved, as M. Halévy makes plain in this act of piety that is also an excellent literary essay. It deserved better translation, for although great pains have obviously been taken (except in the matter of spelling), the flavour of the French and even its meaning is too often lost." D. W. Brogan

Spec 177:550 N 22 '46 1000w

Reviewed by H. L. Varley

Springf'd Republican p10B Ja 4 '48 130w

"M. Halévy's Life of Peguy is already an authoritative work in France and it deserves a warm welcome from English readers. Miss Bethell's translation is clear and accurate, and the book is likely to remain the primary source of information about Peguy until Romain Rolland's more massive and subtle study finds a London publisher."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p544 N 9 '46 1050w

HALIFAX, EDWARD FREDERICK LINDLEY WOOD, 1st earl of. American speeches; with a pref. by Hamilton Fish Armstrong. 449p $5 Oxford

940.504 World war, 1939-1945. World politics. Great Britain—Foreign relations

47-2934

"The texts of 65 addresses delivered while British Ambassador, between March 1941 and May 1946, on a wide gamut of topics before widely differing audiences in all parts of the United States." Foreign Affairs

Foreign Affairs 25:705 J1 '47 30w

"I recommend these speeches for careful reading." R. H. S. Crossman

+ New Statesman & Nation 34:274 O 4 '47 310w

"Lord Halifax spoke of the world crisis temperately, forthrightly and with an unflinching instinct for the right word at the right time. He dealt with the many points of friction and misunderstanding that arose between this country and his own patiently, without any abatement of his deep, just pride in the heroic British fight, but equally without abating the sensitivity of his hosts at any point. And he strove constantly to lay a firm foundation for amity and co-operation between Britain and America, in war and in peace. As a tour de force of diplomacy, Lord Halifax's speeches are well worth re-reading in this handsome form." H. W. Baehr

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 Je 1 '47 400w

Springf'd Union p4 S 26 '47 90w

"The speeches catalogue the progress of a great achievement by a great servant of his country. Neither private grief nor personal discomfort was allowed to delay that progress. Americans were quick to recognize its merits. British readers can now read the record, and see why."

HALIFAX, E. F. L. W.—Continued

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p543 O 25 '47 1200w

HALL, MARJORY. Copy Kate; il. by Elinor Darby, 241p $2.50 Houghton

47-30716

Career story for teen-age girls. It is the story of a modern girl in her first job as a secretary in an advertising agency. Gradually she works into the coveted position as copy writer. The scene is a small town.

Booklist 44:114 N 15 '47

Kirkus 15:342 J1 1 '47 130w

"Will be popular with teen-age girls. Recommended." M. F. Cox

+ Library J 72:1382 O 1 '47 70w

"It is a lively story with a good insight into the mind and emotions of a girl who is seeking a career."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:52 N 15 '47 50w

Wis Lib Bul 43:135 O '47

HALL, MELVIN ADAMS. Journey to the end of an era; an autobiography. 438p $3.75 Scribner

B or 92 Adventure and adventurers

47-30151

Autobiography of an American army air corps officer, retired, who has traveled all over the world, and took an active part in both world wars. Index.

Booklist 43:222 Mr 15 '47

Reviewed by Serrell Hillman

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 F 23 '47 250w

"The book is mainly a collection of anecdotes about bizarre happenings and ' quaint' people, most of which are rather banal. . . The book is free from bitter or arrogant prejudices and, as one reads of the many amusing characters, he feels no aversion toward them, and yet no sympathy or understanding either. They're merely interesting gadgets." R. H. M.

Christian Science Monitor p10 My 3 '47 700w

Foreign Affairs 26:221 O '47 30w

Kirkus 14:635 D 15 '46 120w

"Colonel Hall is a raconteur of first quality; though his stories are sometimes only diplomatic service anecdotes or sportsman's tales, at their best they recreate the adventures, bizarre and entertaining, of an active and varied life." H. W. Hart

+ Library J 72:223 F 1 '47 80w

"Of this roaming career he has written with jaunty detachment, glad to have known the world as it was before, trying desperately to destroy itself, it succeeded only in wiping out a large part of what was fine, beautiful and gracious, both in the works of man and in his human relationships." Edward Angly

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20 F 16 '47 1500w

"A zestful and entertaining autobiography. . . This is not the sort of foreign report Leland Stowe might have written or the sort of personal history Vincent Sheean has written. But it is amusing, instructive and always readable." Richard Match

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 16 '47 700w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p12 F 21 '47 650w

"There isn't a dull paragraph in the memoirs of this man who has been privileged to enjoy a frequently adventurous and never uninteresting life." Linton Wells

+ Sat R of Lit 30:16 Ap 5 '47 550w

"With a prodigious memory for detail, a penetrating insight and a deft ability to picture persons and places, Col. Hall has created a stirring and instructive portrayal of the course his extraordinary career has followed." E. A. F.

+ Springfield Union p9 Ap 10 '47 330w

Time 49:100 Mr 3 '47 700w

HALL, MRS RUBYLEA. Great tide. 535p $3.50 Duell

47-30754

Long novel about plantation life in Florida during the 1830's and '40s. The heroine is the glamorous "Caline" Cohran, who married for money, and regretted her choice. The collapse of a Florida boom; the yellow fever; and finally a disastrous hurricane ended all hope of life in St Joseph, and Caline had to revise her plan of living.

Reviewed by Enid Sheppard

Canadian Forum 27:190 N '47 210w

"The author knows her background, and she has a fine feeling for description. The Negro dialogue is very good, but the speech of the white characters tends to be stilted and stiffened by high-flown phrases. The promise of this first novel is really in the character development of Caline Cohran, and it is a fine promise for future work." Olive Carruthers

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p2 S 21 '47 230w

"A first novel which explores the region and the period in detail, which uses incident and some drama to focus its characters in their emotional and mental problems."

Kirkus 15:402 Ag 1 '47 170w

"Characterizations are excellent, the story moving and interesting, but it is the background—the description of the way of life of that time which makes this a great novel. A huge book but sustains interest throughout its hundreds of pages. A sure best seller. Highly recommended for all libraries." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 72:1194 S 1 '47 100w

"Thrill-craving readers will find plenty to satisfy them here. Mrs. Hall's account of the yellow-fever epidemic and the tidal wave that reduced St. Joseph from a teeming city . . . to a sandy waste is good reading. . . Mrs. Hall has written an historical first-novel which would seem to be truly historical. She has gathered all the rather sketchy information available on Florida in the 1830s and has, moreover, garnered a great deal of first-hand material from talks with pioneer families and visits to the site of St. Joseph's ruins." Peggy Thomson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p23 S 28 '47 400w

"Where the book shines is in background detail. Mrs. Hall, a librarian at the University of Florida writes with real authority of the Florida frontier: her book comes alive in these passages, when the plot doesn't stifle the Americana." Catharine Brody

+ N Y Times p20 S 14 '47 500w

Reviewed by Guy Patrick

San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 9 '47 650w

"Much research obviously went into the writing of this book. It is crammed with antique detail. Strangely, perhaps, the most serious fault in the book lies in the very vividness and vigor of the historical material in which the author has worked. . . For those leisurely people waiting for long, leisurely historical novels, however, Rubylea Hall has described her Caline, her clothes, her houses, her horses, her happy slaves, her airs and graces with skill and much charm. 'The Great Tide' will be, I think, a popular book and afterwards a successful movie." Jonathan Daniels

+ Sat R of Lit 30:19 O 4 '47 600w

HALL, WILBUR. Mr Jory. 281p $3 Ziff-Davis

47-6357

Adam Jory came to Los Angeles as a gangling youth in the 1890's and grew up with the city. He forged his way from vegetable peddler to financier, but in time the very weight of affairs crushed him. It was not until he was an old man that he realized what had been his best investment.

"The main fault of 'Mr. Jory,' its generally perfunctory treatment of character, is connected with its principal virtue, a fast-moving, objective development which makes it quite good quasi-historical narrative. Jory's story, in a very real sense, is the story of Los Angeles, and, regarding him as a significant cog in the machinery of a city's dramatic history, one is willing to disregard certain obvious oversimplifications of his personality." Richard Spinney

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 N 30 '47 430w

"All this is trite and naive enough. Mr. Hall never approaches a serious interpretation of Southern California life. His characterization is without dimension, his prose clumsy, and his outlook akin to that of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce." Arthur Foff

— N Y Times p16 D 14 '47 320w

"The book is crammed with thinly veiled facts and personalities lifted almost bodily from life. Even this reviewer, a native, unreconstructed and practically provincial San Franciscan had no trouble spotting such obvious instances as the evangelist 'Sister Alice,' 'Major Oddie,' publisher of the 'Los Angeles Sun,' and a murder not at all unlike the William Desmond Taylor case." Edward McQuade

San Francisco Chronicle p18 O 19 '47 600w

HALL, WILLIAM NORMAN. Seven little elephants; pictures by Finl. [32p] $1.50 Crowell 47-30908

Colored picture book all about seven little elephants named for the days of the week. For children from three to six.

"Not recommended." R. O. Bostwick
— Library J 72:1477 O 15 '47 40w

"Not distinguished but useful. Kindergarten and first grade would enjoy dramatizing the story." F. W. Butler

+ — Library J 72:1477 O 15 '47 70w

"This is an instructive, entertaining book for readers from three to six. The simple continuity of the story can easily be followed and will absorb the knowledge-thirsty set." L. G.
+ N Y Times p42 N 16 '47 110w

Reviewed by Maryann Mulligan

San Francisco Chronicle p9 N 16 '47 250w

"An amusing and slightly burlesqued picture book."

Sat R of Lit 30:40 N 15 '47 30w

HALLE, LOUIS JOSEPH. Spring in Washington; il. by Francis L. Jacques. 227p $3.75 Sloane

574.9753 Natural history—Washington, D.C. Washington, D.C.—Description 47-30273

Essays on the coming of spring in Washington, D. C., on the bird life of the city at all seasons of the year, and other manifestations of nature observed by the author on his bicycle excursions in the city or along the nearby shores, creeks, and marshes.

Booklist 43:288 My 15 '47

"Detailed observation is enhanced by the perfection of Francis Lee Jaques illustrations and the whole is, in its many digressions and often wry commentary, an outdoor book of special value."

+ Kirkus 15:180 Mr 15 '47 110w

"[The author's] pure delight in making his observations of the birds, trees, wind and weather; his lively imagination which relates these observations to eternity itself, will inspire in the reader an awareness of the drama in the universe around him. Beautifully and appropriately illustrated by Francis Lee Jaques." B. B. Libaire

+ Library J 72:636 Ap 15 '47 110w

"Mr. Halle is a sort of ornithological Richard Jeffries, who relieves the tedium of turning out reports on world consequences of a change in the price of wolfram by rising at dawn to watch for the first warbler and then writes about it with the pen of an angel. What he thinks about birds and men reveals him to be a penetrating commentator on the futility of our strange mores and petty concerns. Richard Jeffries wrote 'The Story of My Heart' from his accumulated field observations in natural history. 'Spring in Washington' is the story of Mr. Halle's heart." Richardson Wright

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Ap 27 '47 800w

"Sensitively observed and finely written account." Coleman Rosenberg

+ N Y Times p10 My 4 '47 550w

"This is the perfect gift book for lovers of the out of doors." J. V.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 Jl 6 '47 140w

"In this fresh and lovely writing Mr. Halle tells the story of the way spring comes to Washington, from the first, chill, spare beginnings until the full oppressive splendor of summer sweeps in." D. C. Peattie

+ Sat R of Lit 30:12 My 10 '47 700w

Spring'd Republican p8A S 21 '47 180w

Wis Lib Bul 43:94 Je '47

HALLIDAY, BRETT, pseud. See Dresser, D.

HALLSTROM, JOHN L. Relax and listen; how to enjoy music through records. 272p $2.50 Rinehart

780.072 Music—Analysis, appreciation, etc. Phonograph records 47-2187

The book was written for the layman, for those who know little about music, but would like to know more. It explains musical terms, gives brief descriptions of the music of famous composers, and describes orchestral instruments. Contains a list of records, arranged by musical form. Glossary. No index.

Booklist 43:286 My 15 '47

Theatre Arts 31:76 Je '47 30w

HALSEY, GEORGE D. Handbook of personnel management. 402p $5 Harper

658.3 Employment management 47-31129

Handbook on methods in personnel management in organizations of less than 3000 employees. Partial contents: Job analysis; Increasing the effectiveness of the employment interview; The employment of physically handicapped persons; Training employees—objectives, methods, and principles; Some typical training programs; Selection and development of supervisors; Correction and discipline; Lay-offs and dismissals; Special considerations in the employment and supervision of women; Group insurance and retirement; Collective bargaining from two viewpoints; Labor relations in non-unionized plants; Outline for a self-audit of personnel management; Index.

Booklist 44:101 N 15 '47

Kirkus 15:251 My 1 '47 170w

"In scope and depth of treatment, in 'heightened common-sense,' hard to beat. . . Good for years. Unreservedly recommended." R. E. Kingery

+ Library J 72:1030 Jl '47 130w

HALSEY, WILLIAM FREDERICK, and BRYAN, JOSEPH. Admiral Halsey's story. (Whittlesey house publication) 310p il maps $4 McGraw

B or 92 World war, 1939-1945—Naval operations 47-11076

Admiral Halsey's story which he calls "not an autobiography, but a report." He reports on his own life from naval academy days in the early 1900's to Tokyo 1945. The years 1940 to 1945 occupy most of the book, and give a documented history of the war in the Pacific. Index.

"The value of the book is that which attaches to the personal reminiscences of a man who was deeply involved in many of the most important and complicated naval operations known to history. It contains a carefully checked record of the missions confided to him and an honest statement of the measure of success which attended their execution. . . . The book is well put together and has a good index." Joseph McSorley

HALSEY, W. F.—Continued

+ Cath World 166:283 D '47 550w

Reviewed by P. H. Douglas
Chicago Sun Book Week p7 O 19 '47 500w

"Throughout the entire book, the reader goes through each battle as a silent bystander on the Admiral's bridge. . . . Although Halsey raves and rants throughout his book, he is gracious to his war colleagues. . . . As for the reasons for Japan's final collapse, Halsey believes that neither Russia's entry into the war nor the atom bomb were decisive factors. 'They merely gave the Nips an excuse and helped them to save face,' he feels. Victory, to him, was a Navy job. Such observations, together with Halsey's own lucid descriptions of actions he fought, give his book ample reader interest." Gordon Walker

Christian Science Monitor p18 O 24 '47 1200w

Kirkus 15:382 J1 15 '47 250w

"A very gripping document." A. B. Lindsay
+ Library J 72:1266 S 15 '47 140w

"Admiral Halsey begins his narrative by saying, 'This will not be an autobiography, but a report.' . . . Call it what he will, the Navy has never known a report like this, a regular hoopla of fact, wit, extravaganza and seriousness, just what could be expected from such a colorful actor, a joy to read. . . . No autobiography, memoir or report of a military leader in World War II quite approaches 'Admiral Halsey's Story' in sheer fascination, for it has just about every quality of sustained interest." P. J. Searles

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 O 19 '47 1100w

"This is an extremely interesting book from two quite different points of view. In a technical sense, it is an almost perfect example of what ghost-writing can and should be. . . . Mr. Bryan is permitted to offer his own comments and those of others in footnotes, whenever he feels the admiral has been too modest or has not given the whole story. These outside comments lend a certain amount of balance to the book, but they are not fundamentally necessary, since it is already so balanced and in so good a narrative manner without them." Fletcher Pratt

+ N Y Times p3 O 19 '47 1050w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 2 '47 650w

"This book will make fascinating reading for every American who served under Halsey in the Pacific. To learn what went on behind the wartime newspaper reports, here is an incomparable document. Admiral Halsey has written simply and modestly a book that will further enhance the Halsey legend." R. A. Low

+ Sat R of Lit 30:64 D 6 '47 850w
Spring'd Republican p11C D 7 '47 2650w

Time 50:108 N 10 '47 500w

HAMBLETON, JACK. Fisherman's paradise.
172p il $3 Longmans

799.1 Fishing—Ontario

A guide to fishing in Ontario today, telling where to go, how to get there, what kind of tackle to use, how to use it, and what it will cost. No index.

Chicago Sun Book Week p8 My 11 '47 50w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '47

"Entertaining tales of the author's fishing adventures are included." Herman Forster
+ N Y Times p24 My 18 '47 70w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p10 Ap 27 '47 170w

HAMILTON, DONALD. Date with darkness.
248p $2.50 Rinehart

47-3664

A novel of espionage, in which an American naval lieutenant on leave, becomes involved with an attractive, mysterious French woman. She had had a pro-Vichy father and a collaborationist husband, and is being pursued by a group who want revenge.

"The best thriller I have read since Eric Ambler's 'A Coffin for Dimitrios.' . . . The novel's sea-borne finale and its acrid little post-script conclude the tale admirably." James Sandoe

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Je 29 '47 210w

"Intricate intrigue, with some explicit amatory touches, this is a very good time passer." Kirkus 15:226 Ap 15 '47 120w

New Repub 117:29 J1 21 '47 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p32 O 26 '47 90w

"If it is Mr. Hamilton's purpose to suggest that the French underground was no better than the Nazis, he had better try again, with a straight face, considerable documentation, and less attention to the works of Raymond Chandler, who is all too often aped these days. Mr. Hamilton's lieutenant, unlike Chandler's Marlowe, it is only fair to point out, suffers convincingly and over a human period of time from his tortures." B. V. Winebaum

+ N Y Times p12 J1 6 '47 230w

"Underplayed harsh melodrama, written with an appalling contempt for the callous viciousness of all its characters." Anthony Boucher
San Francisco Chronicle p16 Je 22 '47 70w

"Tough and Torrid."
Sat R of Lit 30:34 J1 19 '47 30w

HAMILTON, GORDON. Principles of social case recording. (N.Y. school of social work. Publications) 142p $2 Columbia univ. press 361.8 Social work A46-1191

"The subject matter of the ten chapters covers the principles and uses of recording, recording styles, the disciplined professional use of case material, the relation of recording to agency structure, and a chapter on letters. The main focus of the book is on consideration of recording as a part of professional practice, directed toward service to clients." (Social Forces) For the author's Social Case Recording, see Book Review Digest, 1936.

"In her new book on recording Miss Hamilton has made every word count. She has written so simply that the beginning worker may gain something of the 'feel' and method of recording, yet so profoundly that the able case worker may find within the same words the essence of a philosophy and practice of professional responsibility for clients of social agencies which should challenge her to increasing quality of service and of recording. . . . The brevity and conciseness of this presentation enhance its value and its readableness." Cordella Cox

+ Social Forces 25:237 D '46 550w

"Those who struggle along with case-work recording will find in Miss Hamilton's book 'Principles of Social Case Recording,' many valuable and practical suggestions for better recording. . . . However, the greatest value of Miss Hamilton's book lies in her expressed principles of recording, which are woven into every chapter." Yonata Feldman

+ Survey 82:307 N '46 400w

HAMILTON, JAMES WILLIAM, and BOLCE, WILLIAM JOSEPH. Gateway to victory; foreword by Douglas MacArthur. 220p pl $3; pa $2 Stanford univ. press

940.541273 World war, 1939-1945—Transportation. World war, 1939-1945—California —San Francisco. U.S. Army. Port of embarkation, San Francisco 47-1385

"The wartime story of the San Francisco army port of embarkation." (Subtitle) "Among the subjects discussed are the training of personnel, efforts to streamline the administration, complications and duplications inherent in swift expansion, the regulation of the receipt of trainloads of cargo, the technical problems of ship loading, unique problems of handling enormous quantities of ammunition of all kinds, the security of troop movements, the handling of the unbelievable tons of mail sent c/o Postmaster, San Francisco, and the preparation, for spray splashed voyages, of the wildest possible assortment of mechanical equipment." (U S Quarterly Bkl)

Current Hist 12:239 Mr '47 60w
San Francisco Chronicle p11 Mr 16 '47 250w

"The book is designed for the general reader and is presented in a somewhat journalistic style. It is, however, probably the most complete account that will be written on this part of the greatest logistical problem ever posed—a problem which was solved with a high degree of efficiency."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:58 Mr '47 200w

HAMILTON, LEICESTER FORSYTH, and SIMPSON, STEPHEN GERSHOM. Calculations of analytical chemistry. 4th ed 387p $3.50 McGraw

545 Chemistry, Analytic—Quantitative 47-2789

"This fourth edition of Calculations of Quantitative Chemical Analysis has been enlarged to include stoichiometry and qualitative analysis but body of the book is devoted to calculation of quantitative analysis with short chapters on conductometric and amperometric titrations. Many new problems added." (Library J) For first edition see Book Review Digest 1922.

Booklist 43:332 Je 15 '47

"The book is now an adjunct to both qualitative and quantitative courses."

+ Chem Eng 54:272 Jl '47 60w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:389 Mr 1 '47 40w
N Y New Tech Bks 32:46 Jl '47

HAMILTON, PATRICK. Riverside [Eng title: Slaves of solitude]. 284p $2.75 Random house 47-5253

Pictures life in a dull boarding house in a London suburb, where a gloomy collection of people had fled for refuge from the bombing of London. The characters include Miss Roach, a spinster worker in a London publishing house; a sadistic elderly man who hates Miss Roach; a drunken American lieutenant; and a German-born woman, bent on making trouble. She succeeds and open battle and a death mark the end of the novel.

"Patrick Hamilton concerns himself little with plot and greatly with characterization, at which he is expert. This is not a book for readers desirous of 'blood and thunder' on their reading agenda; rather, it is an example of skillful handling of human emotions and behaviors under stress." Van Allen Bradley

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Jl 13 '47 250w

Kirkus 15:244 My 1 '47 180w

Reviewed by Harold Brighthouse
Manchester Guardian p3 My 30 '47 240w

Reviewed by Mary Ross
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 S 28 '47 230w

"The blue note is so relentlessly sustained, the agony so grimly suppressed, that even the most ardent Hamilton fan will be bored by the monotone. . . There's a climax, of course—a few pages of faint screaming, no more: things are wound up fast thereafter, as though Mr. Hamilton, too, had grown bored with his sleazy material. It goes without saying that his sense of character never falters: each person we meet is brilliantly observed, etched with camera sharpness. But these are characters with no place to go: the evil that simmers in their souls is sparked by boredom, nothing more; the chill is there, but it does not reach the reader." James MacBride

+ N Y Times p22 Jl 13 '47 360w

"Here, standing apart from the season's crop of homiletic fiction, is an admirable reminder that a novel does not have to deal with a socially important theme to be good. Mr. Hamilton's skillfully satiric dissection of a number of Londoners who have taken refuge in a boarding house on the Thames to escape the blitz not only is good but, in its special and quite unpretentious way, almost couldn't be better."

+ New Yorker 23:65 Jl 12 '47 180w

"What Mr. Hamilton does is to reflect the whole struggle of life in miniature. He does it very well, too. But to be frank, he does too much of it. I have a notion that he discovered that he was creating Mr. Thwaites so well that he just fell in love with the character—in a kind of reverse fashion of course. Whatever the reason, it is not until the German woman moves into the boarding house that the story really begins to move." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Jl 9 '47 850w

"With the exception of a somewhat inappropriate final intrusion, Mr. Hamilton presents a consistently fascinating novel. And he strengthens, alas, a notion about the sensitivity of English writers as compared with our own, and their ability to carry off fiction of psychology, which for some years I have been resisting on the hopeful grounds that it was only a critical stereotype." N. G. Chaikin

+ Sat R of Lit 30:22 Ag 9 '47 470w

"Mr. Hamilton does the boarding-house décor and the horrors of enforced propinquity very well. The impact upon the victims of the wholly inconsequent and amoral American is brilliantly described. What is to be regretted is the over-emphasized style, the too insistent pity, the scream of personal anguish which Mr. Hamilton permits himself too often."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p277 Je 7 '47 420w

HAMLIN, BENSON. Flight testing; conventional and jet-propelled airplanes. 147p il $5 Macmillan

629.1345 Airplanes—Testing. Jet propulsion 46-8285

"Flight testing is treated in this book from the viewpoint of the flight engineer. The author outlines a typical test program, describes the basic measurements upon which flight tests are based, then discusses both the theory and practice of determining from test data such information as true airspeed, stalling speed, critical altitude, maximum speed, climb performance, and range of the airplane under test. Scientific principles that underlie the taking of measurements, such as Bernoulli's equation, are explained. Graphs and mathematical formulas useful in the reduction of data are supplied liberally. The author is Project Engineer for the Bell Aircraft Corporation." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 71:980 Jl '46 40w
N Y New Tech Bks 31:55 O '46

HAMLIN, FRED. Land of liberty. 354p $3.50 Crowell

973 U.S.—History 47-11712

"Being an informal history of the common people and their heroes." (Subtitle) "Among impressionistic and panoramic descriptions of the way Americans worked and played, courted and bickered, raised families and grew old, from the age of the Puritan to the era of the New Deal, Mr. Hamlin intersperses accounts of the careers of a dozen men, including Nathaniel Bacon, Thomas Jefferson, Andrew Jackson, Abraham Lincoln, Woodrow Wilson, and Franklin Roosevelt." (Sat R of Lit) Bibliography. Index.

HAMLIN, FRED—Continued

"This is vivid reading—all the way from Benjamin Franklin to Huey Long." Keith Wheeler + Chicago Sun Book Week p7X D 21 '47
320w

"Mr. Hamlin had a story to tell, and a wonderful story it is, too, but in his eagerness to set it down he allowed himself to be betrayed into a carelessness with facts, with syntax and even with grammar, that damages his case. This is serious, because his thesis is a controversial one and critics who cannot attack his main argument successfully will welcome small errors by which they may hope to undermine it. . . . Captious critics may object also to certain verbal eccentricities, such as 'whom he supposed were his allies,' 'cathedral-donating business men' (donating?), 'public exposal' and 'a smoking ruins.' These are points at which the book is vulnerable, but taken all together they do not prevent it from being a brisk and readable narrative of the long fight against exploitation, a narrative full of gusty humor and containing no small amount of solid information." G. W. Johnson
+ N Y Herald Tribune Weekly Bk R p36 D 7 '47 750w

"The 'informality' of Hamlin's history is so pronounced that it has practically no form at all. . . . Regarded not as a 'history,' but as a collection of observations on the personalities and influences that have made—or tried to break—democracy, the book has a good deal to offer. The reader who picks it up to scan a section here or there will be treated to some interesting comments on America's progress by an author whose instincts are the right ones, and to many curious and entertaining side lights of American history." Marvin Sargent
+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 D 11 '47 550w

"Much of Mr. Hamlin's style, like much of his philosophy, is inspired by those two other bards of democracy, Walt Whitman and Carl Sandburg. The result is a long prose poem, a rolling and frequently singing restatement of a legend dear to the hearts of most Americans. But Mr. Hamlin offers his book not as a poem, but as a serious work of history. Unhappily, he has not subjected his efforts to the exacting discipline which history demands. Many of his pages are studded with minor errors of fact; he gives individuals the wrong first names, events the wrong dates. More fundamental is his failure to define his terms clearly." Raymond Walters
Sat R of Lit 30:18 D 13 '47 600w

HAMLIN, TALBOT FAULKNER. Architecture, an art for all men. 279p il $3.50 Columbia Univ. press

720 Architecture 47-2376

"A complete rewriting of The Enjoyment of Architecture [Book Review Digest 1921], with the double aim of preserving its original character as an elementary guide to the understanding and appreciation of architecture as a whole and of making it an introduction to the architecture of today. . . . So complete were the changes that were found necessary—changes frequently of basic attitude—and so large the amount of new material, both in text and illustration, that a new title to indicate the new approach seemed desirable." (Foreword) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 43:293 My 15 '47
Christian Science Monitor p12 Ag 9 '47 130w
Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '47
Eng N 140:111 Ja 8 '48 120w

"Highly recommended volume."
+ Library J 72:529 Ap 1 '47 90w

"This book is, as a whole, a well balanced survey of critical standards in the art and science of building; if not very profound it is at least comprehensive; and if at times it is flavored with a certain complacency, it also avoids that high and obscure philosophy which usually decorates the pages of architectural critics." Joseph Hudnut
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Ag 10 '47 950w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ap 4 '47 110w
Times [London] Lit Sup p547 O 25 '47 1100w

"Most of the aspects of architecture are adequately and gracefully covered—including discussions of such subjects as design and construction, form, decoration, and the meaning of style. Since the book is intended particularly for the general reader with little or no previous interest in architecture, the critical positions taken are perhaps deliberately eclectic, or catholic. Thus, the position of the author emerges as not particularly original or subtle, although his book is better reading for the layman to whom it is addressed than would be one in which more extreme or more completely synthesized positions were maintained. The general effect is sound rather than penetrating."
U S Quarterly Bkl 3:126 Je '47 160w

HAMMAN, MARY, and others. Mademoiselle handbook, for the girl with a job and a future, by [the author] and the editors of Mademoiselle [il. by Frederick Chance]. (Whittlesey house publication) 196p $2 Mc-Graw

331.4 Woman—Employment. Conduct of life 46-8352

A realistic study of the various aspects of the modern business girl's life: conduct in the office; with men; in sharing an apartment with other girls; clothes; etc.

Booklist 43:128 Ja 1 '47

"A smart veneer gives this an attraction for young hopefuls, but does not obscure its pertinent practicality."

+ Kirkus 14:511 O 1 '46 90w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p25 My 4 '47 180w

School & Society 64:472 D 28 '46 20w

HAMMOND-INNES, RALPH (HAMMOND INNES, pseud). Fire in the snow [Eng title: Lonely skier]. 243p $2.50 Harper

47-2978

A novel of suspense and intrigue. The scene of the story is a ski lodge in the Dolomites; the narrator is a writer of film scripts who has been sent there to gather material for a moving picture.

Booklist 44:16 S 1 '47

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 My 11 '47 170w

"Action-packed melodrama, mostly on skis and in Alpine territory, with all the ingredients for good fireside thriller."

+ Kirkus 15:109 F 15 '47 170w

New Repub 116:35 My 5 '47 90w

"It's fast, exciting and likable." Will Cuppy
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p25 Ap 27 '47 200w

"The top-drawer British psycho-thriller (in the projection-booth can, or between book-covers) has always been notable for its mastery of creeping suspense, its ability to sit down over a dish of tea and let death ooze through the cracks in the scenery: the present importation is no exception to that admirable rule." James MacBride

+ N Y Times p31 My 11 '47 150w

"Rather fantastic activities, but full of suspense."

New Yorker 23:100 Ap 26 '47 70w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ap 27 '47 70w

"First-rate!"

+ Sat R of Lit 30:32 My 31 '47 40w

HANCOCK, LUCY AGNES. Resident nurse.
254p $2 Macrae Smith co.

47-774

Frances Gaynor was brought up in an orphan asylum, and it took years for her to outgrow her feeling for institutions. After she had become a successful nurse she still remembered it, and the doctor's son who had kissed her and been slapped by her for his presumption. When the young doctor announced his engagement to a wealthy girl Frances realized that she loved him, but still had her pride.

Booklist 43:186 F 15 '47

Kirkus 14:621 D 15 '46 90w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p25
F 23 '47 110w

HANCOCK, RALPH. Rainbow republics: Central America. (Invitation to travel ser) 305p
$4 Coward-McCann

917.28 Central America—Description and travel 47-11679

Information for travellers in the seven Central American countries south of Mexico. Combined with historical material there is considerable Baedeker type material. The author considers the capital cities, picturesque villages, hotels, food and drink, fine arts, handicrafts, fiestas, archeological finds, and trade opportunities. Index.

Booklist 44:105 N 15 '47

"A factual, inclusive guide book, practical in detail and realistic in approach, for any traveler contemplating a trip to Central America."

+ Kirkus 15:563 O 1 '47 100w

"A delightful appreciation of these fascinating lands. Highly recommended." J. L. Ross
+ Library J 72:1266 S 15 '47 100w

"Ralph Hancock seems diffident in attempting to retell Central American history, and makes a poor effort at it. Even so, he makes unnecessary mistakes. . . . He fills his book with an enormous amount of detail about cities, villages, food, games, people—much of it interesting and useful—but he does not succeed in making those Central American satrapies come to life." Hubert Herring

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p50
D 7 '47 270w

"Mr. Hancock wastes no time with personal goings on. He wraps his material into neat packages, labeled lodging, food and drink, the arts, and so on. Each chapter is heavy with meat, too much for any one meal but something to keep nibbling at along the Central American trail. It contains a lubricant for every possible point of friction; tells where to stay, what to pay, how to get along with people. Like the Army's GI guides, 'The Rainbow Republics' occasionally strays from fact or omits something important." Arthur Goodfriend

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:43 N 22 '47 300w

HANDLIN, OSCAR, and HANDLIN, MARY (FLUG). Commonwealth: a study of the role of government in the American economy: Massachusetts, 1774-1861 [pub. for Committee on research in economic history, Social science research council]. 364p pa $3.50 N.Y. univ. press

338.9744 Massachusetts—Economic conditions, Industry and state 47-5376

"There is a widespread popular assumption that throughout American history, until recent decades in which the Federal Government has risen as the regulator of economic enterprise in the general interest, government pursued a laissez faire attitude toward business. The validity of this proposition is now being tested in a series of studies of four representative states; Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Georgia, and Illinois. The present volume, dealing with Massachusetts, is the first published result in the study." U S Quarterly Bkl

Reviewed by H. L. Elsbree

Am Pol Sci R 41:998 O '47 900w

"If the reader can take in stride a social change that both tears apart modes and drives fissures, he will find in the book an undogmatic, judicious survey that is in the best tradition of empirical scholarship. . . . Although it does not make a neat dialectical pattern, [the book] has the virtue of being, on the first level of abstraction, wholly commensurate with the facts." Perry Miller

+ — N Y Times p28 Ag 10 '47 1050w

Reviewed by R. B. Morris

Pol Sci Q 62:581 D '47 2850w

School & Society 66:207 S 13 '47 20w

"Heavily documented, and based on exhaustive research, this study is designed in form and language for the scholar rather than the general reader."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:277 S '47 280w

HANKERSON, FRED PUTNAM. Cooperage handbook, 182p il $3.75 Chemical pub. co.

674 Coopers and cooperage 47-1820

"First complete book on wooden barrel industry with historic introduction. Manufacture of barrels, choice of satisfactory barrel for shipping, lining to use, handling and storage, are described. Gives needful tables and specifications, export specifications and I.C.C. regulations. Glossary. Illustrated." Library J

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:814 My 15 '47 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:6 Ja '47

HANKEY, MAURICE PASCAL ALERS HANKEY, 1st baron. Diplomacy by conference; studies in public affairs, 1920-1946. 179p
$3 Putnam

327.42 Great Britain—Foreign relations

[46-22897]

A volume of essays based on the author's experiences during thirty years of official life in and around Whitehall as Clerk to the Privy Council, Secretary of the Cabinet, and member of the War Cabinet. Contents: Diplomacy by conference; The Machinery of government; The Cabinet secretariat; The Committee of imperial defence; The Study of disarmament; International forces; The Dominions and the war; The Empire and the future; The control of external affairs. Index.

Reviewed by E. P. Chase

Am Pol Sci R 41:1022 O '47 600w

Library J 72:321 F 15 '47 20w

Reviewed by Hector Bolitho

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18
My 4 '47 900w

Reviewed by P. W. Wilson

N Y Times p10 Mr 30 '47 500w

"[This work] may be authorship in fetters, but it is a book which no one concerned with public affairs can afford to miss—which does not mean that every thesis expounded will commend itself to every reader. There is, of course, no reason why it should." H. W. H.

Spec 177:320 S 27 '46 750w

Times [London] Lit Sup p532 N 2 '46
1150w

HANNUM, MRS ALBERTA (PIERSON). Roseanna McCoy. 256p $2.75 Holt

47-11489

Novel based on the McCoy-Hatfield feud in the 1850's. It is the love story of Roseanna McCoy of Kentucky, and Jonse Hatfield of West Virginia, who met at a mountain rally, and fell desperately in love. The result was a renewal of the feud and more bloodshed and death.

Booklist 44:109 N 15 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '47

"Affecting, absorbing reading. The most distinguished book Alberta Hannum has done."

+ Kirkus 15:514 S 15 '47 170w

"Excellent characterization marks this novel. . . . Recommended for purchase, but not essential." H. S. Taylor

+ Library J 72:1540 N 1 '47 70w

HANNUM, ALBERTA—Continued

"Mrs. Hannum's style is interesting and original. It has the minor cadences of mountain speech, and a flavor all its own. If she makes her star-crossed lovers more thoughtful and subtle than we might have thought them, who shall say that she is not right?" Lorine Pruette

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 N 23 '47 80w

"Mrs. Hannum has created two appealing and believable protagonists, and has given their story some of the flavor of fine folklore with her knowing use of the regional idiom. She is at her best when writing in stately and serious vein—and, in some of her love scenes, achieves an almost lyrical beauty. Only in her lighter moments does she seem somewhat labored." Beverley Britton

+ — N Y Times p28 N 16 '47 360w

"Quite decently written in places, but not strong enough to drown out the distant sound of fiddles and stomping feet."

+ — New Yorker 23:136 N 15 '47 90w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 N 11 '47 650w

HANSEN, ALVIN HARVEY. Economic policy and full employment. (Whittlesey house publication) 340p $4 McGraw

338.973 Economic policy. U.S.—Economic policy 47-529

An advocate of economic planning discusses employment programs, domestic and foreign, and considers the risks and alternatives to a full employment policy. The author is Littauer professor of political economy at Harvard university. Index.

Reviewed by F. M. Marx

Am Pol Sci R 41:564 Je '47 550w

Reviewed by T. J. Kreps

Ann Am Acad 254:208 N '47 600w

Reviewed by G. G. Higgins

Commonweal 45:546 Mr 14 '47 550w

Current Hist 12:237 Mr '47 60w

Foreign Affairs 26:222 O '47 40w

Kirkus 14:612 D 1 '46 170w

Reviewed by B. B. Seligman

Nation 164:458 Ap 19 '47 280w

"My misgivings about the effectiveness of this admirable program, assuming it could be put into effect and reasonably well managed, arise from reflections about what private enterprise might be doing about prices, production and wages at the same time." George Soule

New Repub 116:39 F 10 '47 750w

"What his proposals lack in newness is made up in part by their timeliness. Already the crystal-gazers warn us of the first familiar phases of approaching economic eclipse, but these are not easily discerned through the rose-colored glasses which predominate in boom times." J. J. Friedman

N Y Times p6 Ja 12 '47 1550w

"A real service is rendered by the author to students of economic theory and to policy makers in restating views on controversial economic tenets such as deficit spending, and flexible tax policy. Current dominant political thought runs directly counter to many of the fiscal theories here expressed, although it must be noted that, perhaps to the surprise of many, Professor Hansen will be found forcefully opposing some positions commonly attributed to him."

U S Quarterly Bki 3:156 Je '47 300w

HANSEN, HAROLD ALBERT, and others, eds. Fighting for freedom. 502p $4.50 Winston 940.53082 World war, 1939-1945—Documents, etc., sources. Democracy 47-2070

"A source book of documents and speeches which reveal the ideologies, the origin and course of World War II, ending with the United Nations Charter and documents on the control of atomic energy. Editors present the war years as a climax in man's fight for freedom and have assembled from widely scattered sources the memorable words of wartime leaders. The framework is largely chronological and the many introductory passages encourage its reading as narrative. Reference value has occasionally been sacrificed by deletions made for the sake of reader interest." Library J

Christian Century 64:560 Ap 30 '47 100w

"A useful book, especially for the school library." G. D. McDonald

+ Library J 72:636 Ap 15 '47 90w

"It is a stirring record that deserves a place in the home library as well as in the schools and colleges."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:60 N 15 '47 130w

School & Society 65:367 My 17 '47 10w

HARBAGE, ALFRED BENNETT. As they liked it: an essay on Shakespeare and morality. 238p $2.75 Macmillan

822.33 Shakespeare, William—Religion and ethics. Literature and morals 47-30198

A study of Shakespeare's plays with the idea that the dramatist wrote about moral problems to please his audiences. "Professor Harbage's vision of that public is one of a cross section of Elizabethan humanity. The dramatist's work was shaped by their tastes, and their tastes, like humanity's now, ran to a discussion of characters—as to whether they were admirable or not, whether what they did was right or wrong, and whether the play 'came out right.' The qualities and actions of men and women were Shakespeare's stock in trade. 'My project—was to please,' he once wrote. It happened that, since Shakespeare was extraordinarily perceptive and so much an artist, his plays have a profundity and a permanence that surpassed his aims; and the plays, purposely laden with moral stimulus for his public and done with consummate skill, have induced moral excitement for more than three centuries." (Christian Science Monitor) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 43:239 Ap 1 '47

"An Essay on Shakespeare and Morality may sound like a throw-back to some of the duller Victorians, but no such notion must keep anyone from reading this book. With Professor Harbage the time-worn theme regains its freshness." R. S. Knox

+ Canadian Forum 27:70 Je '47 210w

+ Christian Century 64:527 Ap 23 '47 210w

"It is not only provocative, but intellectually beneficial, to follow the line of reasoning in this lucid and undogmatic book, so appropriately named 'As They Liked It.'" W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 F 17 '47 700w

"This is a stimulating study of Shakespeare's plays from an original point of view. . . Every lover of Shakespeare, especially the clergyman, will get much from this book." W. L. Caswell

+ Churchman 161:17 Ap 15 '47 130w

Kirkus 14:570 N 1 '46 110w

"Excellently written. . . This is an absolute must for college and university libraries and is highly recommended for all theatre libraries and collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 72:74 Ja 1 '47 110w

Reviewed by Milton Crane

N Y Times p41 Mr 16 '47 450w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 23 '47 30w

Reviewed by John Garrett

Spec 179:602 N 7 '47 260w

"Professor Alfred Harbage has entered the lists before this with his Shakespeare's Audience as well as his books on Killigrew and the early English drama. He is adept at the parry and thrust of scholarly encounter and has a refreshingly unhackneyed approach to his subject."

+ Theatre Arts 31:78 Ap '47 650w

U S Quarterly Bki 3:132 Je '47 280w

HARBAUGH, ROSE OLLER. Eddie Elephant has a party; il. by Susanna Suba. [30p] $1 Rand McNally

Eddie Elephant behaved very well at his autographing party in a department store until it was time to go back on the jiggly elevator. Eddie balked and set about exploring the rug and candy-packing departments to the consternation of the employees. The rest of this true story tells how Eddie was brought down from the third to the first floor without using the hated elevator.

"Susanna Suba, who did the illustrations for the book Eddie was autographing, has also done the drawings for this volume. An unusual aspect of her talented pictures is the fact that they are caricatures of the Chicago authors, critics and publishers who were present that afternoon. For this reason the book holds a special interest for adults as well as for children, and indeed classifies as a collector's item. Mrs. Harbaugh was described by John Tebbel in his recent book, 'The Marshall Fields,' as a 'literary figure in her own right.' In [this book] she demonstrates she is also a gifted and witty storyteller." Emmett Dedmon

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3A N 19 '47 250w

Kirkus 15:647 D 1 '47 90w

"Children of picture-book age, for whom it is evidently intended, will probably miss the point, and older ones may feel that nothing much happened. Many pictures in color by Susanne Suba add a gay note." R. O. Bostwick

+ Library J 73:48 Ja 1 '48 70w

"Miss Harbaugh has taken something that really happened and made it into the funniest story for children this year." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 D 14 '47 150w

HARBURG, E. Y., and SAIDY, FRED. Finian's rainbow; a musical satire, 143p $2.50 Random house

812

47-31198

A satirical fantasy in which an Irishman borrows a pot of gold from a leprechaun, brings it to the United States, and buries it at the foot of a special rainbow of his own.

Booklist 44:87 N 1 '47

"It has a coherent story which is saved from silliness by its satirical point. It has pleasant interludes for song and dance. It dashes its romance with tart humor and makes a preposterous fairy tale into something of a fable for the times. That should be enough to ask of any Broadway musical even after 'Oklahoma!'" W. P. Eaton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p23 O 19 '47 140w

Review by C. V. Terry

N Y Times p45 N 30 '47 40w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 D 14 '47 150w

HARD, WALTER R. Connecticut; il. by Douglas W. Gorsline. (Rivers of America) 310p $3.50 Rinehart

917.4 Connecticut river

47-3553

Description of life along the Connecticut river from that day in 1614 when it was first seen by a white man, to the present. The frontier days are emphasized. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 43:344 J1 1 '47

Current Hist 13:165 S '47 70w

"Newcomer to the chronicles of American regional history, this seems more selective, episodic than the earlier volumes, though it does not neglect the same basis of factual, comprehensive approach for which they are noted."

+ Kirkus 15:211 Ap 1 '47 90w

"Vigorous bits of anecdote and humor (e.g. Ethan Allen's proposal, the octogenarian General Smith's 'girls' and Yankee pedlar yarns) liven a valuable, concise history of the River region—the inland New England often slighted in favor of our coastal cities." Elaine Lambert

+ Library J 72:885 Je 1 '47 100w

"Mr. Hard gives further currency to the myth that the Pilgrims and other early English settlers lived in log cabins, although there is plenty of evidence to show that America's so-called pioneer classic home—really an importation by the Swedes—did not come into use in New England until the eighteenth century. Nor is Louisburg in Maine. Not one but two Vermonters were killed in the dubious Westminster 'massacre,' and ten wounded. These are minor slips. The book suffers most in this reviewer's estimation, from far too many and too lengthy quotations from other books." Stewart Holbrook

— N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Je 8 '47 750w

"The book suffers from an overdose of being pleasant and of being diffuse. . . This does not mean, of course, that the book is without merit. It has many merits. The story of Thomas Hooker, who more than any one man made the river English, hence American, is always worth retelling; it is here retold pleasantly if not heroically. . . Mr. Hard is a Vermont man, and his account of the founding of Vermont is good and illuminating. . . These and many other episodes make the book worth reading. Yet these episodes are like bright beads more or less casually strung together. They can be—and many of them have been—found in volumes dealing not with the Connecticut River but with Connecticut, Massachusetts, New Hampshire or Vermont. Mr. Hard has written of things that happened at or near the river—but the book about the river is yet to come." T. C. Chubb

— + N Y Times p7 Je 15 '47 550w

Reviewed by Violet Janes

San Francisco Chronicle p10 J1 27 '47 250w

"The Connecticut is indisputably the greatest river of New England. . . In Mr. Hard's book the reader will find an adequate summary of its history. But the river itself, as often happens in this series, has not got the epic treatment it deserves. Too much history happened on or near its banks, too much in which the river had no significant part. As a result, here, as elsewhere, excellent chapters alternate with condensations of general history of theology or Indian warfare." H. S. Canby

+ Sat R of Lit 30:24 Ag 16 '47 320w

Wis Lib Bul 43:116 J1 '47

HARDING, MRS BERTITA (LEONARZ). Age cannot wither; the story of Duse and d'Annunzio, 281p $3.50 Lippincott

B or 92 Duse, Eleanora. Annunzio, Gabriele d' 47-11803

A fictionized biography of Eleanora Duse which gives most prominence to her love affairs, especially the unfortunate one with Gabriele d'Annunzio. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Ralph Habas

Chicago Sun Book Week p18X D 7 '47 490w

"Author documents with footnotes much of what she has written but persists in telling us what the great Duse was thinking. Regrettably we still are in need of a new life of Duse. Recommended only for larger theater collections which aim at completeness." George Freedley

— + Library J 72:1372 O 1 '47 100w

"For dramatic effect Bertita Harding has sharpened the contrast between her characters until they seem angel and devil, or nearly so, but none the less interesting for all that." Lorine Pruette

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p38 D 7 '47 800w

"'Age Cannot Wither' adds little to the Duse literature or to the Duse legend, and yet—though it is undistinguished in its writing—holds one's attention throughout. The story it tells is familiar, but repetition has not robbed it of its fascination." T. Q. Curtiss

+ — N Y Times p44 D 7 '47 1050w

HARDING, BERTITA—Continued

"As a sympathetic and more or less documented story of the actress, the book is worth your attention, provided you can put up with the author's invertebrate style."

New Yorker 23:138 N 22 '47 140w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p18 D 5 '47
550w

HARDING, THOMAS SWANN. Two blades of grass: a history of scientific development in the U.S. Department of agriculture. 352p il $3.50 Univ. of Okla. press

630.72 Agriculture—Experimentation. U.S. Agriculture, Department of Agr47-159

"Interesting record of government's search for rust-proof grain, pure foods, better apples and vegetables, for better methods of soil and forest conservation, prevention of disease in plants and animals, for control of insects, for economic uses of farm products and by-products." Library J

Reviewed by C. H. Bailey

Am Hist R 53:186 O '47 320w

Reviewed by A. F. Vass

Ann Am Acad 252:157 J1 '47 360w

Booklist 43:326 Je 15 '47

"The book serves a very useful purpose in making available to the layman, as well as the scientist, a description of the scientific accomplishments of the department." H. R. Kraybill
+ Chem & Eng N 25:3246 N 3 '47 270w

Reviewed by Russell Lord

Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Je 8 '47
750w

Commonweal 46:556 S 19 '47 140w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

+ Library J 72:874 My 15 '47 50w

"Do you ever doubt that science is wonderful? If so, here is a book to renew one's belief. T. Swann Harding, a veteran of more than thirty years in the United States Department of Agriculture, has written a fascinating account for the layman of scientific developments in the department." W. M. Teller
+ N Y Times p14 J1 6 '47 600w

Reviewed by A. P. Chew

Sat R of Lit 30:24 Je 7 '47 650w

Reviewed by J. C. Marquis

Survey G 36:706 D '47 500w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:189 Je '47 100w

HARING, CLARENCE HENRY. Spanish empire in America. 388p $5 Oxford

980 Latin America—History. Spain—Colonies 47-1142

"This volume brings together what is known about the institutional history of the Spanish colonies in America from the Discovery in 1492 down to the Wars of Independence. [It is] concerned with the transfer of Spanish modes of government and society from the Old World to the New, and with their evolution in a remote and very different American environment. . . As a history of institutions the volume leans more to description than to narrative. Throughout, however, the concept of development has been kept clearly in view." (Foreword) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by W. S. Robertson

Am Hist R 53:110 O '47 650w

Booklist 43:270 My 1 '47

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Mr 9 '47
70w

"There has been a surprising dearth of satisfying books on the Spaniards and Portuguese who conquered and organized America from the Golden Gate to the Straits of Magellan. It will stir warm gratitude in many a reader's heart to discover Clarence H. Haring's 'The Spanish Empire in America,' a stout and fascinating account of Spanish doings in the new world from the sixteenth to the nineteenth centuries." Hubert Herring
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p30
My 4 '47 2000w

"Within the fairly wide and difficult limits the author has set for himself, his 'Spanish Empire in America' is a completely successful book. . . The general organization of the book is excellent, and the reading, surprisingly smooth if not, as a rule, exciting." B. D. Wolfe
+ N Y Times p16 J1 27 '47 1050w

Reviewed by L. B. Simpson

San Francisco Chronicle p11 Ag 31 '47
700w

Reviewed by Garrett Mattingly

Sat R of Lit 30:24 Je 14 '47 600w

HARKINS, LOTHAR BERNARD. Magnesium fabrication. 149p il $2.75 Pitman

671 Magnesium alloys 47-30117

"This brief guide for the vocational student and practical worker outlines the basic principles and methods of magnesium alloy fabrication. . . Among the topics discussed are layout, cutting and trimming, drilling and riveting, heat treatment, machining, welding and painting. In most cases the illustrative examples refer to the construction of airplane parts, but other industrial applications are discussed in the final chapter. Technical data on the properties of magnesium alloys as compared with other structural materials are tabulated at the end of the volume." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 43:200 Mr 1 '47

N Y New Tech Bks 32:11 Ja '47

HARKINS, PHILIP. Big silver bowl. 218p $2 Morrow

47-19424

Sports story for older boys. Jake Carson, an ex-football player who took up tennis on a bet is the hero. Jake was subjected to some unwarranted criticism, but he kept on until he won a place on the Davis cup team, and was able to start his pre-medic course with his earnings.

Booklist 43:295 My 15 '47

Reviewed by Martha King

Chicago Sun Book Week p8 Je 1 '47
80w

"The story is well written, the action, quick-fire, and the players ably characterized, to make an absorbing story for young people who care for tennis." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 23:268 J1 '47 90w

"A good story on several counts."

+ Kirkus 15:70 F 1 '47 110w

"Will appeal to boys and girls of high school age who like sports stories." Margaret Taylor

+ Library J 72:819 My 15 '47 60w

"A straight, fast sports story, it comes from the inside." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18
My 11 '47 420w

"Since 'The Big Silver Bowl' is made up almost entirely of play-by-play accounts of tennis matches, it is strictly for tennis enthusiasts. For these, however, it makes good fast reading, and Mr. Harkins' account of the tension and excitement in the big international matches is well done. He also has interesting sidelights on the snobbishness and social pressure in big time tennis." Creighton Peet
+ N Y Times p25 Je 29 '47 200w

Wis Lib Bul 43:100 Je '47

HARKINS, PHILIP. Touchdown twins. 224p $2.50 Morrow

47-6521

"Story of college football that brings out the effect of 'semi-pro' football when scholarships or even salaries are given to strong players. It follows the adventures of two players into professional football." Sat R of Lit

Kirkus 15:508 S 15 '47 170w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p21
N 16 '47 400w

Sat R of Lit 30:58 N 15 '47 40w

HARLEY, JOHN EUGENE. Documentary textbook on the United Nations; humanity's march towards peace: a volume emphasizing official co-operation for world peace, especially the United Nations and related specialized agencies. 952p $7 Center for int. understanding.

341.1 United Nations (organization)

"The materials here collected, arranged and indexed include practically all the principal documents which are the source materials for a history of international organization. Since the author's interest is chiefly in the problems of the present and the prospects for the future, rather than research into the far past, the earlier projects for universal peace are dealt with only in outline. . . Fourteen projects from the Amphictyonic Council to the Holy Alliance are compressed into 13 pages; the measures proposed or adopted during the hundred years beginning with 1815 get only about the same space; about 60 pages are sufficient for the League of Nations and its associated enterprises; the remainder of the volume of 952 pages is devoted to the agreements, declarations and organizations from and after the Atlantic Charter of 1941. Only enough interpretative and connective material is introduced to clarify the succession of basic documents which constitute the bulk of the text. A 78-page bibliography, a chronological outline and an index are added." Christian Century

Reviewed by D. B. McCown

Am Pol Sci R 41:821 Ag '47 300w

Booklist 44:28 S 15 '47

"This is a fundamental book of reference which will be useful to every serious student of this vital theme."

+ Christian Century 64:593 My 7 '47 250w

"It is too bad that Dr. Harley neglected to discuss the controversial veto in the Security Council. This, however, is the only important omission. The book is a particularly valuable addition to any library." George Barrett

+ — N Y Times p19 Je 15 '47 500w

School & Society 66:48 Jl 19 '47 20w

HARLOW, ALVIN FAY. Road of the century; the story of the New York Central. (Railroads of America ser) 447p il $4 Creative age

385 New York Central railroad 47-4718

A detailed, extensive history of the New York Central railway system from its beginning, in the 1820s, '30s, and '40s, down to the present. Bibliography. Index.

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Je 22 '47 120w

Eng N 139:111 O 2 '47 280w

"Mr. Harlow, an experienced writer, has made the most of his topic. From the merger of 'the 12 little railroads' of April 1853, to the present—when the note of special pleading intrudes a little—interest is steadily sustained." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 72:636 Ap 15 '47 90w

"Mr. Harlow, who has in the past written so well and so entertainingly on New England railroads, on express companies, and other aspects of communication, has done in his present book another solid and readable job, graced with humor and understanding." Stewart Holbrook

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Ag 24 '47 550w

"On the whole, 'The Road of the Century' is accurate and vital, a broad panoramic sweep that picks you up in 1825 and sets you down, breathless with admiration, in 1947." F. H. Hubbard

+ N Y Times p22 Ag 24 '47 650w

"The book is by no means definitive; it is, however, far and away the best and most readable history of the New York Central yet written, easily surpassing the books of Stevens and Hungerford." E. L. De Golyer

+ Sat R of Lit 30:24 Jl 19 '47 410w

HARLOW, REX FRANCIS, and BLACK, MARVIN MCKENDREE. Practical public relations; pub. under the sponsorship of Am. Council on public relations, San Francisco, California. 442p $4 Harper

301.154 Publicity. Advertising 47-2176

"Subtitled 'Its foundations, divisions, tools and practices,' this comprehensive, well-documented text book on public relations presents more than a general overview of the field in an organized, thorough manner. Much of the material has been tested in Stanford University classrooms; other parts have been used in numerous public relations courses conducted from coast to coast by the American Council on Public Relations. Bibliography, appendix and index are of practical value." Library J

Booklist 43:249 Ap 15 '47

"A thoroughly sincere book on public relations."

+ Kirkus 14:617 D 1 '46 110w

"Experienced workers as well as beginners may follow the safe reasonable presentations from definitions to successful conclusions without resort to tricks or temporary spotlights. Recommended for general purchase." H. S. Taylor

+ Library J 72:385 Mr 1 '47 120w

"The book offers wise counsel to both individual beginners and experienced executives and to the entire group working in the field of public relations, particularly in regard to the future of public relations and those in it. The chapter on 'Personal Relations' offers particularly detailed guidance for the public relations executive seeking to establish the proper working relations with other elements in a large organization." E. K. Moss

+ Management R 36:300 My '47 270w

School & Society 66:366 N 8 '47 20w

HARMAN, RICHARD, comp. Countryside character. 235p il $3.75 Transatlantic

630.1 Country life [47-5236]

"Consists of sixteen essays on various aspects of life in the country, each by a different writer, to which are added coloured reproductions of two paintings by Mr. Peter Scott, a section of photographs . . . and very pleasant and apt woodcut head-pieces by Miss Joan Rickarby. . . Miss Daphne Du Maurier writes of the long fascination exercised over her mind by a Cornish house—the house in which she now lives. Mr. Henry Williamson, Mr. Adrian Bell, Mr. A. G. Street and Mr. Harry J. Scott tell of the life of the farm, Lord Mottistone speaks of the pleasures, and excitements, of sailing a boat and Mr. H. J. Massingham's 'The Chair-Maker' is a gallant protest on behalf of the ancient crafts of the country. Other well-known contributors are Miss Frances Pitt, Mr. J. Wentworth Day and Mr. S. L. Bensusan." Times [London] Lit Sup

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 Jl 6 '47 230w

"By far the best of the literary contributions is 'Time and the Welsh Mountains,' by Mr. Rhys Davies, a vivid and sensitive picture of a remote farming community, written by one who, though of the same stock, has been far enough away to see it with detachment as well as understanding."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p69 F 1 '47 250w

HARMS, ERNEST, ed. Handbook of child guidance. 751p $8.60 Child care publications, 30 W. 58th st, N.Y. 19

136.7 Children—Management. Child study. Education of children 47-5857

Outlines the "broad fundamental problems which the science of child guidance must encompass." (Pref) The volume consists of forty articles by experts in their fields. The articles are arranged under the following headings: The development of child guidance in the U. S. A.; Guidance of the normal child; Guidance of the physically handicapped child; Guidance of the problem and subnormal child; Training for child guidance; Social aspects of child guidance; Religious aspects of guidance; Special viewpoints for guidance. References at ends of many of the chapters. Index.

HARMS, ERNEST—Continued

"This is the best and most comprehensive book which has yet appeared in this complex field. . . . This is essentially a technical book. As such it is primarily of value to workers professionally engaged in dealing with children's lives and problems. It is an excellent compilation for the use of workers in the field of child guidance and for assisting teachers in dealing with the whole child, not just with the matter of facilitating rote learning." L. G. Lowrey
+ N Y Times p48 N 16 '47 700w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman
School & Society 66:330 O 25 '47 360w

HARPSTER, HILDA THANKFUL. The insect world; il. by Zhenya Gay. 211p $3 Viking 595.7 Insects 47-31421

Information on some of the common insects, describing how they live, eat, and reproduce. An appendix includes an identification chart, and a list of other books on insects. Index.

Reviewed by Jane Cobb
Atlantic 130:148 D '47 30w
Booklist 44:94 N 1 '47
Chicago Sun Book Week p8a N 19 '47 100w

"A serious fascinating book." L. S. Bechtel
+ Commonweal 47:151 N 21 '47 100w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn BK 24:45 Ja '48 120w
Kirkus 15:470 S 1 '47 250w

"Very readable book on insects for older children and adults." J. F. Kennedy
+ Library J 72:1696 D 1 '47 80w

"As interesting as it is informing."
+ Sat R of Lit 30:58 N 15 '47 50w

HARRE, THOMAS EVERETT, ed. Treasures of the kingdom; stories of faith, hope and love. 533p $3.98 Rinehart

Short stories—Collections 47-3064

An anthology of twenty-nine stories, all designed to bring spiritual solace. They are written by Catholic, Jewish, and Protestant writers. Partial contents: Where love is, there God is also, by Leo Tolstoy; The story of the other wise man, by Henry Van Dyke; Passing of the third floor back, by J. K. Jerome; "Consolatrix afflictorum," by R. H. Benson; The woodcarver of Tyrol, by E. A. Walsh; The Sabbath breaker, by Israel Zangwill; Brother Leo, by Phyllis Bottome; Black rock, by Ralph Connor; The white people, by F. H. Burnett; The stranger's pew, by T. N. Page; Our Lady's juggler, by Anatole France; St. Veronica's kerchief, by Selma Lagerlöf; The Crucifixion (from Ben-Hur), by Lew Wallace.

Booklist 43:359 J1 15 '47

"An anthology of stories dealing with the theological virtues is as unusual as it is welcome, and Mr. Harre has made some charming selections which truly hearten and embolden us in a doubting day."

+ Cath World 165:573 S '47 150w

Kirkus 15:161 Mr 15 '47 90w

New Yorker 23:79 Je 21 '47 140w

HARRIMAN, PHILIP LAWRENCE, ed. Encyclopedia of psychology; written by many contributors. 897p $10 Philosophical lib.

150 Psychology—Dictionaries and encyclopedias

"Dr. Harriman, with the aid of eighty collaborators, has compiled a volume of authoritative studies dealing with the major topics and problems of modern psychology. Thus, the reader may acquaint himself with the latest developments in the fields of educational psychology, primate psychology, psychopathology, semantics, and so forth." San Francisco Chronicle

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Ja 19 '47 90w

"If one wishes to find the meaning of a particular term or to gain some knowledge of some minor movement in psychology, this volume is of little use. To complicate matters further, the index is completely unsatisfactory. A better job could have been done if the publishers had followed the plan of their 'Encyclopedia of Religion.'" A. Foff

San Francisco Chronicle p12 D 1 '46 140w

School & Society 65:286 Ap 19 '47 30w
"There are one hundred signed articles alphabetically arranged on a miscellaneous variety of topics in the field of psychology but the title 'Encyclopedia' is quite misleading. One looks in vain for many topics that one might expect to find in an encyclopedia of this sort. . . . At the front of the book is a list of topics labeled 'Index.' It is by no means, however, a complete index to material covered in the book, nor are any page references given. It lists main articles, sometimes in an inverted form of heading from that used in the text, and gives see references either to other related articles or to topics treated within them. . . . In general the work shows evidence of incomplete coverage of the subject, disproportionate treatment of subjects in comparison with their importance, unsatisfactory arrangement, inadequate indexing of specific information within long articles, uneven bibliographical references and careless make-up. Information covered in long articles can be located more easily in handbooks in the field and specific information is more readily available in Warren's Dictionary of Psychology. The Encyclopedia of Psychology is, therefore, not recommended."

— Subscription Bks Bul 18:34 J1 '47 750w

HARRIS, SIR ARTHUR TRAVERS. Bomber offensive. 288p $2.75 Macmillan

940.544942 World war, 1939-1945—Aerial operations 47-11857

Story of the British Bomber command in World war II, told by its operational director. He evaluates the Command's strategic bombing of German industry, its contribution toward the invasion of Europe, its use against the V-weapons, and in the final destruction of the German synthetic oil plants. Index.

"No argumentative matter is allowed to obscure the Air Marshal's story of the war achievements of his Command, which covers an immense and complex field of activity with a clarity, proportion, and narrative force rarely matched on such a scale. Difficulties of supply and training and the technical developments which so continually influenced tactical methods are adequately and simply described, but each in its own place and for its bearing on the operational story. That flows easily forward with hardly a dull page and the result is as readable as it may be taken to be authoritative." H. D. N.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 24 '47 300w

Reviewed by Gladwin Hill
N Y Times p18 N 23 '47 750w

Reviewed by J. M. Spaight
Spec 178:81 Ja 17 '47 1100w
Times [London] Lit Sup p73 F 8 '47 3900w

HARRIS, SEALE. Banting's miracle; the story of the discoverer of insulin; with a foreword by Elliott P. Joslin. 245p il $3 Lippincott

B or 92 Banting, Sir Frederick Grant Med46-329

Biography of the Canadian doctor who discovered insulin, written by an American doctor who has himself discovered a disease which is the exact opposite of diabetes. Dr Harris writes of all sides of Banting's life, showing him as the scientist, as the doctor, and as a painter and sculptor. Index.

"The story reads like a novel—a good novel." J. J. Bikerman

+ Chem & Eng N 25:1296 My 5 '47 350w

"This biography is not great literature. It is not prettified, it is not glamorous, but it is Banting as we knew him; knew him as growth of the soil, the indefatigable single tracker, the inhibited, uncultured, ill-at-ease young man with a profound sense of colonial inferiority. All human!" Peter Williamson
+ Chicago Sun Book Week p5 D 29 '46 430w

"Dr. Harris has written a biography which is laudatory, inspired by his love for a great man, but its value lies in its honest facts and in its revelation of the research man's attitude toward a life of research in which there are no miracles." Gerald Wendt
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 Mr 2 '47 750w

"Dr. Harris has brought to his task an obviously great admiration for his subject, a facile pen which all too few medical writers possess, and a faculty of bringing out the human side of his subject. . . That Dr. Harris has managed in this volume to bring us all the facets of this delightful personality serves to make this book a must for the student of science and medicine, as well as a blueprint for those who choose the hard road of research as their way of life. To them, particularly, it will be an inspiration, for told here is the whole story of disappointment, despair and final victory." F. G. Slaughter
+ N Y Times p28 Ja 26 '47 750w

"The eminent scientist is portrayed with a simplicity and directness which matches his personality. . . The story is one of fascinating interest, vividly told in nontechnical language, and is a glowing tribute to a great benefactor and humanitarian."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:38 Mr '47 200w

HARRIS, SEYMOUR EDWIN, ed. The new economics; Keynes' influence on theory and public policy. 686p $6; text ed $4.50 Knopf 330.1 Economics. Keynes of Tilton, John Maynard Keynes, 1st baron 47-31172

"The pervasive, almost romantic influence of Lord Keynes on the political economics of capitalist countries is the subject of Professor Harris's book, which includes his own observations and contributions from many other economists, both pro- and anti-Keynes. The reader who is not at home in economic jargon might well start with the chapters by Ragnar Nurkse and Benjamin Higgins, and then proceed to the account of Keynes's lifework by Professor Harris, and to such of the other chapters as he can digest. The story is worth knowing, for Keynes, though he did not invent much that can positively be called new, contributed a surge of new energy to the political thinking of this century." (Sat R of Lit) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:83 N 1 '47

Christian Science Monitor p14 O 25 '47 270w

"Written by dyed-in-the-wool Keynesians as well as by dissenters, the articles—particularly those by Paul Sweezy, Paul Samuelson and Ragnar Nurkse—are gems of expository writing." B. B. Seligman
+ New Repub 117:32 O 20 '47 230w

"This man has left an imprint on his generation that the calmer perspective of history can more justly settle than can contemporary judgment. But, despite the austere views of his opponents and the frank adulation of his disciples, no one can deny that he brought a freshness of outlook and a quickening of interest to economic thought that is rare as well as noteworthy. It is perhaps the greatest merit of this book that every reader will be able to sense the magnitude of this contribution." R. R. Wohl
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22 N 2 '47 900w

Reviewed by D. C. Coyle

+ Sat R of Lit 30:24 N 8 '47 470w

HARRISON, ARTHUR EDWARD. Klystron tubes. 271p il $3.50 McGraw

537.53 Vacuum tubes 47-4878

"Presents the theoretical basis for the electrical characteristics of velocity modulation tubes. Its purpose is to supply the background which is required for the realization that the behavior of these new tubes is not mysterious but merely different from the older types that did not involve transit time effects." (Special Libraries) The author is a member of the electrical engineering department at Princeton University.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:227 F 1 '47 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:59 Jl '47

Special Libraries 38:86 Mr '47

HARRISON, MRS ELIZABETH. Whip for time; poems. 28p $2 Macmillan

811

[47-24415]

"Canadian poets continue to gain in stature with the appearance of 'A Whip for Time' by an English-born artist. Mrs. Harrison's poems reflect a woman's point of view in wartime." Sat R of Lit

"This is a most uneven collection of verse, ranging from the highly effective to the disappointingly trite, and occasionally combining both aspects in one poem. . . There are passages worth finding; and it is a pity they do not occur more frequently." M. R. G.
— + Canadian Forum 27:120 Ag '47 280w

"The book is over laden with war poems, and one wishes to encounter more sonnets such as 'Canadian Spring,' or tight-rhymed lyrics with the imagistic power of 'The Swallow.'" A. M. Sullivan
+ — Sat R of Lit 30:29 Jl 12 '47 150w

HART, BASIL HENRY LIDDELL. See Liddell Hart, B. H.

HART, MOSS. Christopher Blake. 115p $2.50 Random house

812

47-2274

Play depicting the effects of a divorce on a sensitive boy of twelve.

"Moss Hart sincerely tried to write a compassionate play. . . Unfortunately, he wrote in such strident tones as almost to parody his theme. Some little theatres will attempt production but demand will likely not be strong. Recommended for theatre collections." George Freedley

Library J 72:640 Ap 15 '47 50w

"An honest and touching play." W. P. Eaton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p27 My 25 '47 140w

"Mr. Hart has simply smothered it in scenery and routine fantasy. The same methods that made his 'Lady in the Dark' a memorable evening in the theatre are fatal here: the dramatization of Christopher's tortured day-dreams has not more than a surface effectiveness." C. V. Terry
— + N Y Times p12 Ap 6 '47 200w

San Francisco Chronicle p23 My 11 '47 160w

HART, MRS SARA (LIEBENSTEIN). The pleasure is mine; an autobiography. (Valentine-Newman publication) 288p il $5 Abraham Lincoln bk. shop

B or 92 Social workers—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 47-1908

Autobiography of an American woman who has served on many Chicago public service institutions. "There has been hardly a civic enterprise in the first half of this century which has not counted her among its strongest and most active backers. In 'The Pleasure Is Mine' she looks back on her many years of activity in civic causes and tells of her work in starting the Juvenile Court of Cook County and of other pioneer efforts on behalf of the underprivileged in which she participated." (Chicago Sun Book Week) Index.

HART, SARA—Continued

"For those interested in a personal view of Chicago history, and in particular of social work in the city, this book is to be recommended."

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Mr 2 '47 100w

Reviewed by T. M. Longstreth

Christian Science Monitor p15 Mr 1 '47 600w

"'The Pleasure is Mine' is written with style and integrity, and it is more than a personal history. It is a good chronicle that reflects a period, the growth of a city, and the expanding place of women in our particular culture."

R. H. Alschuler

+ Survey G 36:360 Je '47 320w

HARTE, BRET. Best of Bret Harte; selected by Wilhelmina Harper and Aimée M. Peters. il. by Paul Brown. 434p $3.50 Houghton

47-11050

"This volume is intended to include those selections from the voluminous writings of Bret Harte that best represent the author's characteristic work." (Foreword) Partial contents: The luck of Roaring camp; Tennessee's partner; How Santa Claus came to Simpson's bar; The idyll of Red Gulch; The postmistress of Laurel Run; The bell-ringer of Angel's; A passage in the life of Mr. John Oakhurst; Colonel Starbottle for the plaintiff; The outcasts of Poker Flat; Plain language from truthful James.

Reviewed by Nelson Olmsted

Chicago Sun Book Week p8 O 26 '47 160w

"Whether in our adolescent years or in our gray-haired adolescent moods, Bret Harte has given to plain bread and butter a welcome spreading of [jam] for almost everybody who reads. Some of his tales are likely to continue to be jam for so long as reading is used as an escape, and that time promises to be long indeed. We need not quarrel with Mr. van Gelder's acknowledgment that, to his thinking, the stories later written are improvements on the early ones. Every man to his taste, but taste so far has run in the direction of the adventures of Mr. John Oakhurst, of Tennessee's pardner and of the infant named Luck—early creations, all of them." E. R. Mirrielees

+ N Y Times p39 O 26 '47 550w

"It's a good collection, in which you will find almost anything you want to run down in Harte's shorter tales." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 O 23 '47 600w

HARTLEY, LESLIE POLES. Sixth heaven. 438p $3 Doubleday

47-4933

The second volume in the trilogy on the life of Eustace Cherrington, the first of which was The West Window (Book Review Digest 1945). Eustace, a veteran of World war I, is an Oxford student; Hilda, still more beautiful and dominating, is head of a clinic for crippled children. There is a summer in Venice for Eustace, and a love affair for Hilda, before the brother and sister are brought together again by a tragic happening.

Booklist 44:16 S 1 '47

"The book is long, and Eustace's psychological excursions are sometimes tedious. But the whole thing is a sharp satire of life in upper-class England between the wars." Olive Carruthers

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Jl 27 '47 320w

Christian Science Monitor p12 Ag 23 '47 700w

"There's a sensitivity here, a skill, an accuracy of thought and feeling which will recommend this to a discriminating following."

+ Kirkus 15:244 My 1 '47 180w

"All done in engaging and delightful comedy, keen observation and brilliant, well-rounded dialogue. Highly recommended for the general reader who will wait eagerly for the third and concluding story about really nice people." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 72:1033 Jl '47 130w

"Mr. Hartley's dialogue is admirable. He has the gift of making his people speak to the point of the action and at the same time reveal thoughts and wishes of which they are hardly conscious themselves. . . Without any suggestion of indebtedness to Virginia Woolf, this is a novel that will please admirers of her writing." Charles Marriott

+ Manchester Guardian p3 D 27 '46 360w

"A lengthy sequel, which, it must reluctantly be admitted, is one of the least enchanting narratives recently encountered. It has to do with the grown-up life of the brother, his almost unhealthy absorption in his sister, his half-romantic dependence on older women, and his effusive friendships with his Oxford companions. Mr. Hartley's dutiful, snobbish, self-critical, generous young man is a credible projection of the childish martyr to indecision portrayed in the earlier book, but credibility is not enough to prevent this pallid, over-worked narrative from being a disappointment."

— New Yorker 23:67 Jl 12 '47 160w

"'The Sixth Heaven' is a series of causeries, polished, witty, contrapuntal; whatever significance lurks in the string of incidents escapes this reviewer. But the events are of little importance: what matters is the author's fine sense of the ludicrous which permeates the story and makes it frequently delightful."

R. A. Cordell

+ Sat R of Lit 30:34 Ag 23 '47 410w

"The material is precisely that from which the hardened reviewer of fiction automatically shrinks. He has, he believes, read it all before, so many times before; it is the material of nearly every English novelist's first attempt at fiction, whether published or not. The miracle is, Mr. Hartley makes it new and exciting, so exciting that one is not aware, as one reads, of all the other variants of similar material that have preceded it. His work is unique, reminiscent of no other writer. In other words, Mr. Hartley is an artist." Walter Allen

+ Spec 178:56 Ja 10 '47 650w

"Most of the book consists of dialogue, but the vivid persuasion of the narrative is such that one is scarcely conscious of that at the time of reading. More than anything else, it would seem, it is the peculiar truthfulness of memory which goes only with a certain modesty of temperament that gives Eustace and the world about him their live and engaging quality. . . It is gay, warming, irresistible comedy and something more."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p21 Ja 11 '47 550w

HARTLEY, RUTH EDITH. Sociality in pre-adolescent boys. 118p $1.85 Teachers college

136.7 Child study. Social psychology

A47-780

"[The] study is directed toward the analysis of the functioning of sociality in boys from ten to twelve years of age, toward the study of the consistency of this impulse, and toward the answering of such specific questions as: what is the relation between sociality and actual relations with peers? How accurately do individuals rate themselves in sociality? What is the relation between self-ratings and self-satisfaction? How do negatively toned incidents, such as rebuffs and aggressive actions, affect the expression of sociality in situations involving interaction among individuals?" (School R) Bibliography. No index.

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman

School & Society 66:332 O 25 '47 270w

"Hartley's study does, indeed, throw some light on the relations between the individual and his group and on the operation of a drive for social contact. It would seem, however, that, had she spent less time on the collection of test data on a large number of cases and more time on the detailed analysis of the social-group behavior of fewer cases, the results would have proved far more productive. . . One further criticism might be made. That is, despite the well-intentioned and scientifically appropriate effort to isolate the single factor of sociality, a less gross classification of the relations of the individual to the group might have been more realistic in terms of the behavioral complexities of these relations and might have resulted in more definitive, if more complex, generalizations. In spite of these objections, conclusions of considerable interest emerge from her data." W. E. Henry + School R 55:120 F '47 1500w

HARTWELL, NANCY, pseud. See Callahan, C. W.

HARVEY, HILDEBRANDE WOLFE. Recent advances in the chemistry and biology of sea water. 164p $2.75 Macmillan

551.46 Sea water [46-863]

"Readable book by a British author on the chemistry of the sea, covering most of the oceans and at all depths. Chemical composition of sea water, analysis with attention to carbon dioxide phosphate and nitrogen compounds. Last chapter covers fertility of sea water. Author's findings and those of others. Chapter bibliographies." Library J

"Dr. Harvey has been unusually successful in recording clearly and concisely the data which has accumulated during the years immediately preceding the war and in stating the ideas which emerge. Progress in the investigation of the subject has been so great, comparatively, that its review gives a very adequate picture of our whole state of knowledge of the chemistry of the sea." A. C. Redfield
+ Am Chem Soc J 68:538 Mr '46 420w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:761 My 15 '46 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:64 O '46

HARVEY, WILLIAM FRYER. Beast with five fingers; twenty tales of the uncanny; ed. with an introd. by Maurice Richardson. 219p $2.50 Dutton

47-1580

Twenty tales of horror, murder, or fantasy.

Reviewed by Nelson Olmsted

Chicago Sun Book Week p9 Mr 9 '47 450w

+ Kirkus 15:73 F 1 '47 100w

"The style is at all times literate and at times acutely accurate, as in my favorite of the collection, 'The Star,' adding to the oddness of the situation a correctness and authority that are not often to be found in the escapist pages of uncanny fiction." B. V. Winebaum
+ N Y Times p14 Mr 2 '47 270w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Mr 9 '47 120w

"Excellent collection."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:44 Mr 8 '47 50w

HASELL, ULRICH VON. Diaries, 1938-1944; with an introd. by Allen Welsh Dulles. 400p $5 Doubleday

943.086 Germany—Nazi movement. World war, 1939-1945—Germany

"The story of the forces against Hitler inside Germany, as recorded by a leader of the movement." (Subtitle) Index.

Booklist 44:103 N 15 '47

"In a brief introduction, Allen Dulles says that this book is 'an invaluable record.' I think it is even more. It is a reminder of what Western civilization once was and a portent of what it can again become." G. N. Shuster
+ Cath World 166:381 D '47 800w

Reviewed by Irving Pflaum

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 N 2 '47 270w

Christian Science Monitor p22 D 6 '47 150w

Reviewed by H. A. Reinhold

Commonweal 47:204 D 5 '47 360w

Kirkus 15:489 S 1 '47 170w

Reviewed by Kurt Schwerin

Library J 72:1372 O 1 '47 140w

"A remarkable series of snapshots of life under totalitarianism—both of the leading Nazis in their postures of triumph and of the long, patient, valiant, despairing attempts of the conspirators." Arthur Schlesinger, jr.
+ Nation 166:48 Ja 10 '48 700w

"This diary is more than the story of the anti-Hitler conspiracy. It is a portrait of that extraordinary person, the whole man. . . The most unexpected of all is von Hassell's habit of seasoning his accounts of grave affairs with a jest. At a time when he knew that the Gestapo might be at his door the next minute he had the detachment to jot down humorous anecdotes. . . Behind him von Hassell has left an enduring example, and in this diary a fitting monument." W. E. Jackson
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 O 19 '47 1100w

"If [the book] does not go into the plots with as much technical detail as the narrative of Fabian von Schlabrendorff . . . or as luridly as Hans Gisevius' 'To the Bitter End'—it is much deeper and broader. It gives us the state of mind, the social milieu, the inner process. If it is not as spectacular as Count Ciano's diary, it is the nearest thing to it that has come out of Germany. Since it now appears that Ciano added many of the spiciest items as afterthoughts on the margins of pages and even on separate pieces of paper pasted on to the originals, Hassell's journal can be read with a good deal less reserve." Theodore Draper
+ N Y Times p7 O 12 '47 1050w

New Yorker 23:113 N 1 '47 120w

"An excellent translation. . . Few books published in English have provided any real insight into the intellectual atmosphere within the Axis countries during World War II. In this respect, Hassell's journals belong in the select company of 'The Ciano Diaries' and Malaparte's 'Kaputt.' Unlike Ciano and Malaparte, however, Hassell emerges from his pages as a morally impressive and generally rather attractive personality." Franklin Ford
+ Sat R of Lit 30:41 O 11 '47 850w

HATCH, ALDEN. Franklin D. Roosevelt; an informal biography. 413p il $3.75 Holt

B or 92 Roosevelt, Franklin Delano 47-963

A "novelized biography" which portrays Roosevelt as a great leader and as a lovable personality. Bibliography. Index.

"This volume is definitely simple, informal, and impressionistic, with dialogue supplied to heighten effects. Otherwise it offers nothing new and the laudatory tone is shaded only by the chapter on the London economic conference (1933) entitled 'Franklin Makes a Mistake.'"

Am Hist R 52:801 Jl '47 60w

Reviewed by B. E. Nelson

Ann Am Acad 253:222 S '47 370w

Booklist 43:227 Mr 15 '47

"Hatch's simply told narrative, dealing at considerable length with F. D. R.'s pleasant boyhood and early manhood which coincided with one of the more spacious periods of American history, has a charm of its own which fittingly matches that of its subject." W. F. Morse
+ Chicago Sun Book Week p6 F 16 '47 320w

Foreign Affairs 26:225 O '47 20w

Kirkus 14:545 N 1 '46 90w

"A happy combination of scholarship with a popular style makes this the best Roosevelt biography to date." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 72:158 Ja 15 '47 130w

"The great revelation of the book is the way in which Roosevelt's career lends itself to dramatic treatment. Without doubt, this is a book destined to have a long line of successors. The material is too perfect to be ignored. One cannot read this book without being sure that novelists and playwrights will be busy with Roosevelt for a long time to come, and probably poets, too. For that reason it holds interest even for those who dislike fictionalized biography; but it is contraindicated for any Republican with high blood pressure." G. W. Johnson

HATCH, ALDEN—Continued

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6
F 9 '47 750w

Reviewed by M. S. Watson
Sat R of Lit 30:19 Mr 15 '47 750w
Wis Lib Bul 43:67 Ap '47

HATCH, ALDEN. Woodrow Wilson. 280p il $3 Holt

B or 92 Wilson, Woodrow—Juvenile literature 47-11473

A biography of Woodrow Wilson, written for young people of junior and senior high school age. Bibliography. Index.

"Mr. Hatch says on the blurb that he has never written about a man for whom he does not have sympathy and admiration, and this is apparent on every page. Nevertheless, his attitude gives the book a vitality it would lack if written with more detachment, and it is well documented, with both index and bibliography." Jane Cobb

+ — Atlantic 180:148 D '47 80w

Booklist 44:155 D 15 '47

"To those who resent unbalanced newspaper reading about crises this book is a gift of perspective to young citizens."

+ Commonweal 47:155 N 21 '47 80w

"Excellent biography."

+ Kirkus 15:509 S 15 '47 70w

"The author has presented a colorful and appealing portrait. Some adults may judge the characterization too favorable. Yet if there was ever a time when young people needed to understand and follow the idealists, it is now." R. A. Brown

+ — N Y Times p28 D 14 '47 230w

"A careful study of Woodrow Wilson's background based on new material distinguishes a biography that is less successful with the years of the First World War, and the tragic years that followed."

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:60 N 15 '47 40w

HATCH, ERIC. Unexpected warrior. 241p $2 Rinehart

47-760

Novel about a meek, but nice man, married to a super-successful actress. The only friend he had in his sumptuous Beekman Place home was the dog. Then he was suddenly catapulted into the war and the picture changed completely.

Reviewed by John Broderick
Commonweal 45:451 F 14 '47 250w

Kirkus 14:558 N 1 '46 160w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p25
F 23 '47 150w

"It's perfect, smacko—except that, at any one time or cumulatively, it's neither very funny nor very dramatic. . . You can't win a war with whimsy alone, not even in light novels. And neatness in writing does not engender action." B. V. Winebaum

N Y Times p16 Ja 26 '47 320w

HATCH, MARY COTTAM. Rosamunda; pictures by Edgun. [39p] $1.75 Warne

46-22912

Picture story book about Peter and his much-loved pig, Rosamunda. When his grandmother needed money and decided to sell Rosamunda, Peter sadly set out for the fair. But it all turned out well: Rosamunda won first prize.

+ Horn Bk 23:107 Mr '47 70w

Reviewed by Isabel McLaughlin
Library J 72:324 F 15 '47 80w

HATCH, MARY COTTAM. 13 Danish tales, retold; il. by Edgun. 169p $2.50 Harcourt Folklore, Danish 47-30505

These folk tales are based on the J. C. Bay translation which was first published in this country in 1899. For ages six to nine.

Booklist 44:38 S 15 '47

Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun Book Week O 25 '47 60w

"Illustrated by Edgun, the sturdy humor, the vigor and lively action of the Scandinavian folk tales and the fact that they deal largely with everyday objects touched with magic—talking pots, enchanted cats and knapsacks that are never empty—are particularly appealing to six to nine-year olds." A. T. Eaton

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 S 30
47 180w

Churchman 161:17 N 15 '47 30w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 23:441 N '47 80w

Kirkus 15:428 Ag 15 '47 70w

"Amusingly written and skilfully adapted, they form excellent material for the storyteller. Print and format good. Edgun's lively illustrations in black and yellow add to the book's appeal. Recommended." Clara Adams

+ Library J 72:1197 S 1 '47 60w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Hodges

N Y Times p28 D 14 '47 180w

"Engaging and humorous Danish folktales. . . They are the real 'peasant' tales—homely, funny, sometimes a bit sly and cryptic. It is a gay-looking book with apt illustrations."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:36 O 18 '47 70w

Springf'd Republican p10B N 16 '47 60w

Wis Lib Bul 43:133 O '47

HATCHER, JOSEPHINE. Bubble and the circus; il. by the author. 52p 75c Transatlantic 47-31490

"Bubble was a bear who, when his house burned down, took his clever pony and joined a caravan. 'So Bubble and Bongo worked in the circus and Mr. Brown-bear gave Bubble lots of money and Bubble was able to buy a beautiful blue caravan.'" Library J

"The pictures in their clear, delicate colors have real beauty and the simple little story has a childlike directness that other boys and girls will enjoy." A. T. Eaton

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 D 12
'47 150w

"A little English book, obviously the first effort of a young author-artist, but with a fresh, naive charm all its own." M. B. Snow

+ Library J 72:1784 D 15 '47 70w

"A notice from the publisher informs us that the author and artist of this book is only seven years old. Her career promises to be an interesting one. . . Here are charm, humor, and originality."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:33 D 13 '47 180w

HAUMAN, GEORGE, and HAUMAN, DORIS. Surprise for Timmy; il. by the authors. 78p $1.25 Macmillan

46-8408

The five older children in the family had all made a pet of the baby, Timmy, but when Timmy was five years old he rebelled. Thereupon one by one the other children acquired new pets, and on Timmy's sixth birthday he received the finest pet of all from Mom and Dad when they returned from their trip to South America.

Booklist 43:157 Ja 15 '47

Kirkus 14:386 Ag 15 '46 90w

"Good fourth-grade book." Gertrude Andrus

+ Library J 71:1131 S 1 '46 70w

Wis Lib Bul 43:24 Ja '47

HAUSER, MARIANNE (MRS FREDERIC KIRCHBERGER). Dark dominion. 316p $2.50 Random house

47-623

A psychological novel. Told in the first person by the brother of the principal character, it is a study of the conscious and subconscious acts and feelings of a woman and two men, her husband, a psychiatrist whose patient she has been; and her lover, who in turn becomes her husband's patient. The story travels back and forth between present day life in New York city and Beatrice's childhood in Switzerland.

Reviewed by Herman Reinsteine
Chicago Sun Book Week p4 F 2 '47
230w

"An almost Dali-esque distortion of a profession and the personalities involved makes this a very drear digression into this dark dominion which has none of the sympathy of Mine Own Executioner, and much that is exaggerated in its eccentricity."

Kirkus 14:559 N 1 '46 130w

"Not recommended." R. E. Kingery
Library J 72:76 Ja 1 '47 70w

"Compelling for its rich prose and deeply delineated characterization, for its logical resolution in ultimate tragedy, 'Dark Dominion' is nevertheless a difficult book to read. The descriptions and analyses of dreams on which the novel is built become monotonous in repetition, however effective in establishing the characters' abnormal preoccupation with the subconscious. Rather than a novel, the book becomes at times an exercise in Freudian interpretations." Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4
Ja 12 '47 650w

"Marianne Hauser has gifts of a high order, yet while they stand in relief in this novel they call for something else which has not yet emerged: compassion. Yet, though this book lacks the deep human warmth of a great novel, it has excellencies of its own. It fulfills the form inevitable to it and does so with consummate grace." J. S. Untermyer

+ N Y Times p9 Ja 5 '47 650w

"Miss Hauser has originality and imagination, but her narrative, which wavers between the dreams of her unprepossessing characters and a Surrealist view of housekeeping on the West Side, might have been more successful if she had employed a less eccentric and more restrained prose."

New Yorker 22:70 Ja 4 '47 90w

"A high degree of literary talent is evidenced in the writing of this extraordinary novel. Miss Hauser's handling of words and images is so impressive that one could wish she had chosen a less incredible set of characters and circumstances with which to display her facile brilliance." M. B. Hexter

+ Sat R of Lit 30:18 F 15 '47 410w

HAUSNER, HENRY HERMAN. Powder metallurgy; principles and methods. 307p $7 Chemical pub. co.

669 Powder metallurgy 47-4490

"Principles of powder metallurgy are shown in schematic drawings. Methods of manufacturing metal powder are briefly described. Physical and engineering properties of powder metallurgical products are shown. Glossary of terms. Very complete bibliography, over 1000 references are given and 120 graphs and tables." Library J

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:1112 Ag '47 40w
N Y New Tech Bks 32:56 Jl '47

HAVIGHURST, WALTER. Land of promise, the story of the Northwest territory. 384p $3 Macmillan

977 Northwest, Old 47-30019

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

"Professor Havighurst is a charming writer, whose literary skill the reviewer frankly envies; and Land of Promise will both entertain and inspire its readers. From the point of view of careful scholarship, however, certain reservations are necessary. The inclusive sweep of the volume is commendable, but this very quality necessarily compels a scanty treatment of many of the subjects introduced and perhaps explains, if it does not justify, the employment of numerous and too careless statements or too sweeping generalizations." M. M. Quaife

+ Am Hist R 52:512 Ap '47 650w

"The vivid and thought-stirring personalities among the first comers don't really crowd each other, and the author has not sought out to emphasize particularly the historic themes which might best be exemplified in the development of the land from Lake Superior to the Ohio. So the story takes its time accumulating interest. It does best describing the actual transport and travel into the frontier region, by river, road, canal, lake and railway."

+ Commonweal 45:598 Mr 23 '47 120w

Current Hist 12:374 Ap '47 40w

"With his customary skill in giving warmth and vitality to historical studies, Walter Havighurst has written a book which he describes as 'the story of the Northwest Territory.' . . I have only one criticism of this excellent and stirring book—its title. 'Land of Promise' is a trite bit of nomenclature for an author of Mr. Havighurst's talent and imagination." R. L. Neuberger

+ Sat R of Lit 30:13 F 8 '47 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p422 Ag 23 '47
210w

Wis Lib Bul 43:36 F '47

HAVILL, EDWARD. Big Ember. 238p $2.50 Harper

47-30420

Novel based on fact. It describes life in a section of southern Minnesota, settled by a group of Norwegians in 1862. The daily life of the frontier is described in episodic fashion, the story ending with a devastating raid by Sioux Indians.

Booklist 44:90 N 1 '47

Reviewed by J. T. Flanagan
Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Ag 10 '47
400w

"Mr. Havill's clear and simple style fits his subject. He evokes an appreciation of the qualities of his characters and the scene, and a sharp realization of the way of living, in 1862, on the edge of the untilled prairie." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 11 '47
480w

Churchman 161:17 N 15 '47 40w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '47

"A sincere, simple, often moving account."

+ Kirkus 15:265 My 15 '47 120w

"Sturdy character, loyalty to family and country are adequately portrayed. Interesting reading, though not too important. For young adults as well as older readers." L. R. Etzkorn

+ Library J 72:1107 Ag '47 80w

Reviewed by Stephen Stepanchew
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6
Ag 10 '47 360w

"The tense climax of Mr. Havill's fine novel is as convincing as its earlier pages. Indians besieging settlers may be old stuff, but Mr. Havill proves that the thrill is still there." Richard Match

+ N Y Times p16 Ag 17 '47 380w

"There is something warm and fresh in his chronicle of decent, self-reliant people taking root in a new land."

+ New Yorker 23:63 Ag 9 '47 100w

"What makes 'Big Ember' a genuinely good novel is the author's understanding of what he's getting at. He knows he is writing a bigger story than his immediate tale of Lars and Guri Erikson. And he has a quiet, good feeling for the great grassy sweeps, the fine black soil, the beautiful lakes of the Minnesota country." J. H. Jackson

HAVILL, EDWARD—Continued
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 5 '47 650w

"Because it is quietly written, unpretentious in its language, 'Big Ember' is a book of almost surprising depth. . . It is a pity that a novel which discloses so objectively and well the innermost thoughts and feelings of its highly reserved folk, should fail, in a sense, in any characterization drawn." Nea Colton
+ — Sat R of Lit 30:22 Ag 9 '47 650w
Wis Lib Bul 43:141 O '47

HAVINGA, E., and others. Modern development of chemotherapy. (Monographs on the progress of research in Holland) 175p il $3.50 Elsevier

615.1 Chemotherapy Med47-1051

"This volume on the development of chemotherapy in Holland during the war has been summarized from the chemical standpoint by Havinga and Veldstra, while pharmacological and clinical studies are summarized by Julius and Winkler. . . While most of the volume is concerned with sulfa compounds, there is a short chapter by J. J. D. deWit on antibiotics." Am J Pub Health

"A valuable contribution to the literature of chemotherapy." M. L. Crossley + Am Chem Soc J 69:727 Mr '47 290w
Reviewed by C. D. Leake
Am J Pub Health 36:1444 D '46 450w

HAWKINS, DENIS JOHN BERNARD. Sketch of mediaeval philosophy. 174p $2 Sheed

189.4 Philosophy, Medieval 47-3881

"Philosophy is more important than its history, but the readiest way to understand it is through its history. This conviction has governed the writing of this small book. . . It represents the substance of a course of ten lectures, given on two occasions to the Newman Association, which were intended to give the hearers, through a selection of the historical facts, a notion of what mediaeval philosophy was about." (Foreword) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Otto Bird
Commonweal 46:412 Ag 8 '47 250w

"This small volume represents a remarkable achievement in a number of directions and should serve a number of uses very well. The dangers attending sketches of this kind are notorious; the standards they must meet, very strict. Comprehensiveness, without burdensome detail; articulation, without disjointedness; an infallible sense of historical value—these are but a few of the qualities to be achieved, and each is a potential pitfall. The present work meets these standards and avoids the accompanying pitfalls with considerable felicity. The result is a modest but authentic work of historical synthesis." A. R. Caponigri
+ N Y Times p22 Ag 3 '47 430w

School & Society 66:144 Ag 23 '47 30w

"The author and the publishers are alike to be congratulated on this small book, which should do a great work of popularization. Its usefulness is enhanced by the admirable bibliographical note."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p454 S 21 '46 600w

HAWKINS, MAXWELL. Torpedoes away, sir! our submarine navy in the Pacific. 268p $2 Holt

940.5451 World war, 1939-1945—Naval operations—Submarine 47-30018

An account of the activity of United States submarines in the Pacific during the first year and a half of the war. Gives a picture of the life aboard a submarine and of some actual engagements. Illustrated with photographs. No index.

Booklist 43:156 Ja 15 '47

Foreign Affairs 25:699 Jl '47 20w

+ Horn Bk 23:118 Mr '47 80w

"A competent but not an inspired job."

Kirkus 14:459 S 15 '46 160w

"Well illustrated and pleasing to handle volume. . . Should be welcome to many boys of early teen age." Eileen Riols

+ Library J 72:166 Ja 15 '47 80w

Springf'd Union p18 Mr 20 '47 210w

Wis Lib Bul 43:58 Mr '47

HAWKINS, QUAIL. Mark, Mark, shut the door! il, by Raffaello Busoni. [31p] $1.50 Holiday

Mark never remembered to shut doors, but when his mother left him home for a while to mind the baby he learned that "it is so much work when you leave doors open."

"Fairly simple text for third and fourth grade readers." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 72:1542 N 1 '47 40w

San Francisco Chronicle p9 N 16 '47 200w

Wis Lib Bul 43:177 D '47

HAWLEY, GESSNER GOODRICH. Small wonder; the story of colloids. 220p il $3.50 Knopf 541.3452 Colloids 47-31199

"An explanation for the layman of what colloids are and how they enter into our daily life in the form of foods, plastics, soap, and glue, and in industrial processing. A popular explanation of this phase of chemistry." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 44:84 N 1 '47

Kirkus 15:487 S 1 '47 80w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1615 N 15 '47 70w

HAWORTH, JAMES P. Plant magic. 148p il $3 Binfords

581.15 Botany—Variation Agr46-243

Study of the scientific method by which the experimenter in plant-breeding develops new and unusual or more prolific plants. For the layman. Glossary. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 43:83 N 15 '46

"There can be no question of the fascination of plant life, or of the hobby appeal which research in it holds for certain types of people. But to this reviewer it seems that perhaps unavoidably, 'Plant Magic' is itself too technical to kindle much enthusiasm in the average reader. Chromosomes, mutations, polyploid tissues and many other freely used comparable terms belong to science, not to magic." R. S. Lemmon

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20
Mr 2 '47 140w

HAWTHORNE, HILDEGARDE (MRS J. M. OSKISON). Born to adventure, the story of John Charles Frémont; pictures by Bruce Adams. 230p $2.75 Appleton-Century

B or 92 Frémont, John Charles 47-30717

The author of this biography for young people tells the exciting, adventurous life of John Charles Frémont, and includes in the volume a great deal of the story of the making of the West, and of the early days of California.

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 23:448 N '47 90w

Kirkus 15:399 Ag 1 '47 170w

"Excellent supplementary material to the study of U.S. history. Good black-and-white illustrations. Recommended for older boys and girls." C. W. Field

+ Library J 72:1279 S 15 '47 70w

"Frémont was to become and remain one of the most romantic figures in American history, and of this Hildegard Hawthorne makes the most in her rapid, absorbing narrative." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 N 16 '47 340w

Reviewed by Helen Price

San Francisco Chronicle p9 N 16 '47 160w

HAWTREY, RALPH GEORGE. Economic rebirth. 161p $2 Longmans

338.942 Great Britain—Economic policy, Reconstruction (1939-) 46-7353

"The author is greatly disturbed by the loose thinking on financial and monetary matters prevalent in the world today. He directs attention to the enormous destruction of wealth in two world wars, to the interdependence of nations, and to the dangers lurking in accepting quack nostrums, such as cheap money, as cures for economic ills. His chief concern is with money and credit; and he asserts that 'a country suffering from the curse of redundant money is on the edge of an abyss.'" (Ann Am Acad) Index.

"The book is thought provoking but so condensed that is not easy reading." Paul Knaplund

Ann Am Acad 253:226 S '47 250w

Foreign Affairs 26:222 O '47 40w

"Money is a 'forbidding yet fascinating subject' and its fascination weighs very heavily in the balance of this book. Mr. Hawtreys attaches peculiar importance to the influence of money, in the strict sense of cash and bank balances, on the price level. He therefore advocates, as the only means of preventing further severe inflation, a forced loan to mop up the enormous mass of redundant money which he believes to be in circulation and a period of high interest rates to keep the quantity of money to its contracted level. The argument at this stage is difficult to follow and the conclusion delusively simple."

Times [London] Lit Sup p411 Ag 31 '46 750w

HAY, JOHN. Private history [poems]. 61p $2 Duell 811 47-5282

Poems by a young American, veteran of World war II, whose grandfather was Lincoln's private secretary. "Although he follows traditional forms—in blank verse, often in stanzas of rhymed pentameters, occasionally in variations of stanzaic and metric length—his speech has modern flavor without recognizable modern poetic devices." (N Y Times)

Kirkus 15:235 Ap 15 '47 50w

"It is a pleasure to read a first book of poetry and feel that the author has already developed a sound and flexible language of his own in which to present his work. . . In the main, the poems are simple in grammar and reasonably familiar in words." Hubert Creekmore

+ N Y Times p10 Ag 3 '47 500w

Reviewed by Alfred Kay

San Francisco Chronicle p25 S 28 '47 220w

"There is fresh and stimulating poetry in 'A Private History.' . . Whether at home or abroad, the New Englander's Atlantic washes through John Hay's poetry. Like his contemporary Robert Lowell, he is at his best in poems where the sea has left its mark. 'The Herring Run,' 'Man of the Sea,' 'Hérons,' 'A Kingdom's Vanity,' are outstanding in this volume." Starr Nelson

+ Sat R of Lit 30:26 Ag 2 '47 360w

HAYDN, HIRAM COLLINS, ed. Portable Elizabethan reader; with an introduction. (Viking portable lib) 688p $2 Viking

820.8 English literature—Collections

47-30028

A collection of prose and poetry, history, drama, religious and scientific writings, memoirs, essays and translations, from England's great age of literature. Included are Marlowe's Faustus, Foxe's account of the deaths of Ridley and Latimer, Sidney's Apology for Poetry, Spenser's Epithalamion, passages from Bacon's Advancement of Learning, lyrics and sonnets by Wyatt, Raleigh, Spenser, Lodge, Jonson, etc.

Booklist 43:187 F 15 '47

Kirkus 14:414 Ag 15 '46 90w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p21 Ja 12 '47 200w

"The Viking Portable Library and Mr. Haydn have rendered a valuable service by making available and understandable to the twentieth-century reader the ideology of the Elizabethan period, and we have every reason to be grateful to them, but we are also justified in expecting that they will some day give us another anthology which will really represent the strictly literary achievements of that golden age." Eugene O'Neill, Jr.

+ N Y Times p29 Ap 20 '47 800w

San Francisco Chronicle p12 Mr 2 '47 70w

"The wealth of the represented period is so well known, and has been so thoroughly worked, that it would have been an easy matter for Mr. Haydn to put together a volume of pure literature, in prose and verse, without ever venturing beyond the confines of the exceedingly familiar. But he decided to do something much more interesting; he decided to essay an anthological portrait of the Elizabethan mind, temper, and way of life. As a result he has drawn on many kinds of writings—religious, scientific, educational, philosophical, geographical, controversial, dramatic, lyric—and has mingled the comparatively unknown with the famous."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:34 F 1 '47 470w

HAYDN, HIRAM COLLINS, and CURNOS, JOHN, eds. A world of great stories. 950p $3.95 Crown

Short stories—Collections

47-11447

An anthology composed of 115 stories arranged in geographical groups, and representing the work of twentieth century writers. Contains surveys of the literature of each country represented and an essay on the short story in world literature. Biographical data on each author.

"Nothing better about the short story has recently been written than the modestly labeled 'introduction' by John Curnos. Author, critic and editor, Curnos' pithy comments and wisdom should be a textbook for this special and admirable medium of authorship. . . The book of Messrs. Haydn and Curnos has been finely conceived and executed." Virginia Dale

+ N Y Times p32 N 30 '47 700w

"A World of Great Stories' is nowhere near a comprehensive volume on universal literature, but it does serve the purpose of bringing to your attention many a fine person with a strange name from a strange land with a strange and wonderful thing to tell you." A. K.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 26 '47 180w

School & Society 66:366 N 8 '47 10w

HAYES, ALFRED. Shadow of heaven. 278p $2.75 Howell, Soskin

47-11139

"The major figure of this novel is a labor organizer who has had all he can stand of the contemporary American scene and his own inadequate part in it. He is prevented from doing anything very spectacular about either one, however, by a grotesque accident that befalls him while he is attempting to extricate himself from a love affair." New Yorker

HAYES, ALFRED—Continued

Kirkus 15:558 O 1 '47 250w

"There is good poetic writing in 'Shadow of Heaven' as there was in Mr. Hayes's earlier novel, 'All Thy Conquests,' and once again the author shows his talent for vivid dialogue and characterization. But in depicting Harry Oberon, sick of himself and of people, a burned-out crusader, dead in a sense before the story opens, Mr. Hayes creates an atmosphere of pedestrian fatigue which weighs the reader down." J. D. Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14
O 26 '47 550w

Reviewed by James MacBride

N Y Times p28 O 19 '47 500w

"A sound and disturbing story, marred only by Mr. Hayes' tendency to envelop the labor organizer's reactions to his surroundings in quasi-poetic mist."

+ New Yorker 23:125 O 18 '47 110w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 N 20 '47
650w

Springf'd Republican p9D N 9 '47 110w

HAYES, LINDSAY. Take this woman. 308p $3 Macmillan

47-31445

Story of a marriage which almost fails but is eventually helped to endure when the wife and mother, thru experiences in a psychiatric hospital, learns to handle herself and others.

Booklist 44:151 D 15 '47

Kirkus 15:444 Ag 15 '47 170w

"Will be liked by those readers whose taste runs to Kathleen Norris, Grace Richmond, etc. Not an essential purchase for small libraries." Mary Clark

Library J 72:1194 S 1 '47 40w

"What 'Take This Woman' does is to put many of the cards of modern marriage on the table. It doesn't fake about any of the important give-and-take, and it is quite serious without ever becoming solemn. Mr. Hayes knows what he's writing about, but he never clubs you with that knowledge." Seymour Krim

+ N Y Times p14 N 9 '47 320w

HAYES, WAYLAND JACKSON, and NET-BOY, ANTHONY. The small community looks ahead. 276p il $3 Harcourt

323.354 Villages. Community life 47-30169

"Mr. Hayes believes that small communities, like cities, require planning, and he shows how they may go about it by taking stock of their own resources and needs, developing community spirit, and directing the course of their own improvement instead of letting deterioration take its natural course. One considerable section, with pictures, is devoted to showing the good results under T/V.A." Christian Century

Reviewed by A. E. Wood

Am Soc R 12:611 O '47 550w

"As a guide to community leaders in the average American community, the book offers less than one might hope for. The author's thinking has been too much colored by the highly artificial development of the Tennessee Valley where revolutionary change rather than a natural growth has taken place." P. H. Landis

Ann Am Acad 252:166 Jl '47 280w

Booklist 43:217 Mr 15 '47

Reviewed by Caroline Sherman

Chicago Sun Book Week p10 Mr 30 '47
210w

Christian Century 64:337 Mr 12 '47
140w

"Dr. Hayes has added an excellent analytic and descriptive study of the small community to a growing concern over the transition out of the rural rugged individualism that pioneered in 'winning the west' and indeed all the pioneering frontiers." A. W. Taylor

+ Churchman 16:119 Je 15 '47 240w

"The strongest argument in favor of living in the city rests on the educational, medical, religious, cultural and other facilities which a metropolis affords. This volume is invaluable as a practical indication of what the small community with its many advantages for the family can do under enlightened leadership to provide these facilities."

+ Commonweal 45:526 Mr 7 '47 70w

Kirkus 15:86 F 1 '47 120w

Reviewed by Granville Hicks

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18

Mr 16 '47 600w

"Three of the nine chapters are worth the general reader's attention: 'The Planning Process in Tennessee Valley Communities,' 'The University and the Small Community,' which analyzes three types of university-sponsored local programs, and 'Citizens' Workshops.' The ten rules for launching and developing local programs formulated by Professor Brunner should be thumbtacked on the wall in front of everyone who seeks to influence the life of his community. But beyond these three chapters only the plodding reader will venture. For the other six chapters are largely padding and so dull. Professor Hayes speaks of 'the strategic importance of the small community.' . . . But strategic things require strategic thinking; and I get the uneasy feeling that this book offers us only tactics, with strategic considerations evaporating into words." R. S. Lynd

+ Sat R of Lit 30:31 Ag 2 '47 600w

Reviewed by G. W. Blackwell

Social Forces 26:114 O '47 450w

"Those concerned with the problems and possibilities of the small community will find much to interest them in this study."

U S Quarterly BkI 3:183 Je '47 260w

Wis Lib Bul 43:51 Mr '47

HAYWOOD, CAROLYN. Little Eddie; il. by [the author]. 160p $2.25 Morrow

47-30839

Eddie had three older brothers who considered him too young to join their gang. But Eddie had the collector's habit, and he was enterprising. This story for grades two to four describes what Eddie did about it.

Reviewed by Jane Cobb

Atlantic 180:144 D '47 60w

Booklist 44:21 S 1 '47

Reviewed by Martha King

Chicago Sun Book Week p17a D 3 '47
40w

"This story has a lively plot, and the naturalness and flashes of humor so characteristic of Miss Haywood's books." F. C. Darling

+ Christian Science Monitor p4 S 9 '47
190w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 S '47

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 23:351 S '47 50w

+ Kirkus 15:465 S 1 '47 60w

"Individual chapters would make excellent storytelling material. Highly recommended." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 72:1198 S 1 '47 40w

"These episodes, making a continuous story, are each the right length for reading aloud. They have qualities that will make them called for more than once—till, in all probability, the habit of ready reading will be well started." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12
N 16 '47 320w

Reviewed by S. C. Gross

N Y Times p40 N 16 '47 140w

Reviewed by Sara Dickson

San Francisco Chronicle p10 N 16 '47
120w

Springf'd Republican p14B N 2 '47
100w

Wis Lib Bul 43:133 O '47

HAZELTINE, ALICE ISABEL, and SMITH, ELVA SOPHRONIA. Easter book of legends and stories; il. by Pamela Bianco. 392p $2.75 Lothrop

Easter—Juvenile literature 47-30244

Stories, legends, poetry suitable for children's reading celebrating the Easter season. Materials are grouped under such headings as: The first Easter; The waking year; A lesson of faith; As the custom is; In the spirit of worship.

Booklist 43:276 My 1 '47

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ap 6 '47 90w

"They have drawn these Easter stories and poems from the best in literature and their choice is fresh and inspiring. Pamela Bianco's many delicate imaginative drawings give beauty to the book and deserve to be on better paper." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:221 My '47 80w

"There's a real need to fill here; available collections to date seemed to be unsound in their balance. But this is very successful—a generous collection of poems, stories, and plays by a wide variety of authors."

+ Kirkus 15:217 Ap 15 '47 120w

"A fine, varied and much needed collection of Easter stories and poems. Beautiful illustrations by Pamela Bianco. Not very good paper, but good, strong binding." J. D. Lindquist

+ Library J 72:644 Ap 15 '47 30w

"It is harder to make a fine Easter anthology than one for Christmas, for so much weeding out must be done among stories that attach themselves to the celebration of the festival rather than grow naturally from its spirit. We have needed a collection that could be called comprehensive, on which schools and libraries could continually draw for Easter program material and children, men and women depend at any time for loveliness in literature. Two experts on holidays, Miss Hazeltine and Miss Smith, who have collaborated before, do so again and the result is a book of pure delight."

M. L. Becker
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Ap 6 '47 330w

"Pamela Bianco, whose childhood drawings will be well remembered by mothers of today's children, has provided a happy setting for these stories and poems of Easter. . . Not all the stories are distinguished as literature, yet each is marked by the day's wonderful sense of returning life. The selection of poems, ranging from Latin carols to such moderns as A. E. Housman, Robert Frost, Padraic Colum, is richly rewarding. This is a very generous collection for family, school and church use."

E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p27 Ap 6 '47 150w
Wis Lib Bul 43:71 Ap '47

HAZELTON, ROGER. God we worship. 160p $2 Macmillan

231 God 46-8098

"Believing that man's chief end is to know God and that man can best know God when at worship, Dr. Hazelton of Andover Newton Theological School, reexamines the basic Christian beliefs concerning God in an attempt to rethink the whole question of Christian worship at this time when the world is so desperately in need of dynamic faith. Superb chapters on God's holiness, goodness, power and love; the place of Christ in worship and the meaning and value of the sacraments." (Library J) No index.

"A suggestive and well balanced book. . . The value of the book is more in its sidelights than in any spotlight that searches out and pitilessly exposes the object of its illumination." E. E. Aubrey

+ Christian Century 64:175 F 5 '47 350w

"The present volume will prove of value to all who seek truly to worship and who desire a theology by which to guide the worship experience." G. W. Davis

+ Crozer Q 24:181 Ap '47 850w

Kirkus 14:499 O 1 '46 110w

"Very well written. Will interest all students of religion, but will have little popular appeal." G. W. Wakefield

+ Library J 71:1462 O 15 '46 130w

HAZLETT, EDWARD EVERETT. He's Jake! the story of a submarine dog; il. by Paul Brown. 154p $2.75 Dodd

47-31343

A group of crew members of the U.S. submarine Starfish pick up a stray bull terrier while on shore leave, and sneak him onto the submarine with them. The story is of the dog, called Jake, and his service to his new masters.

"Story is not unusual, but the background seems authentic, and it is kept lively with incidents and the Paul Brown drawings. Book is particularly heavy with very unattractive block type. As an adequate dog story for older boys it is recommended for limited purchase where the book fund is unlimited." Anne Izard
Library J 72:1694 D 1 '47 90w

"It is good entertainment by man and beast and good information, on professional authority, about submarines. Captain Hazlett knows; sixteen of his thirty-four years of active naval service have been spent in the submarine branch." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 N 16 '47 500w

HEAD, MATTHEW, pseud. See Canaday, J. E.

HEADLEY, ELIZABETH. Take a call, Topsy! with il. by Janet Smalley. 216p $2 Macrae Smith co.

47-4661

Topsy, at fifteen, decided she wanted to be a ballet dancer, and was given a year by her family to prove that she was sincere in her desires. She had many conflicts, but Topsy never wavered in her intentions. For ages twelve to fifteen.

Kirkus 15:239 My 1 '47 90w

"Plot is rather thin, but the people are real and the atmosphere of school and family is well done. Although the book does not touch as closely the everyday problems of teen-age girls as Date for Diane, it will probably be enjoyed by the junior high school group." Esther Gorey

+ Library J 72:1041 JI '47 70w

"More serious in theme than 'A Date for Diane,' this lacks something of that book's quick spontaneity and finish, but like it, this one too portrays the 'teen-ager's world—the parties, the dates, the first pangs of hero-worship—with understanding of their importance, even to one who is dedicated to her art." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p25 JI 20 '47 180w

HEAL, EDITH (MRS GIL MEYNIER). Golden Bowl; il. by Marian Cannon. 72p $1.50 Lothrop

47-30152

The Golden Bowl was a little restaurant in the French quarter of New Orleans where they served delicious food but had too few customers. Marie, the little farm girl whose father served the Golden Bowl with fresh vegetables, had a plan for supplying customers, and at the last hour the plan worked. For ages six to ten.

Booklist 43:228 Mr 15 '47

Reviewed by Martha King

Chicago Sun Book Week p10 Mr 30 '47 180w

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

Christian Science Monitor p10 JI 15 '47 180w

"The fragrance of good food clings to the simple story which is touched with humor and feeling and colored by New Orleans charm and gaiety." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:356 S '47 100w

HEAL, EDITH—Continued

Kirkus 15:66 F 1 '47 130w

Reviewed by B. W. Bell

Library J 72:324 F 15 '47 70w

"You can fairly smell and taste the food as you spend Saturday mornings at The Golden Bowl. Better than that, you can feel the warm tenderness a little restaurant like this can inspire, especially if it's a French one in New Orleans. And the Countess was right when she said it was 'like being in Paris again.'" M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8
F 16 '47 290w

"The story is slight, but it has charm and a benign sense of people working pridefully together. It is meant for little girls of 6 to 10 and that is not a bit too soon to inculcate into future housewives the importance of good cooking as this does." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p31 F 2 '47 110w

"In both text and pictures this is an interesting story in an unusual setting."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:43 Mr 8 '47 110w

HEARD, GERALD. Doppelgangers; an episode of the fourth, the psychological, revolution, 1997. 281p $2.75 Vanguard

47-1725

A fantastic tale of the future in which two opposing dictatorships fight for supremacy.

"Poorly written and clumsily contrived, what symbolism there is, what analogy, is lost in a welter of words."

— Kirkus 15:11 Ja 1 '47 170w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p21
Ap 27 '47 100w

"The last fourth of the book is disappointing. The scientific talks grow longer, the suspense quietly slips out. It is then that the reader might weary of his opaque approach, of the over-abundance of mythological allusions and the words calling for consultation of Webster ('Hypnogenic,' 'three-fold symbiote,' etc.). Yet, on the whole, Mr. Heard has managed a remarkable tour de force—a thriller with depth, an 'Amazing Story' for the intellectual gourmet." Richard Plant

+ N Y Times p14 Mr 2 '47 700w

New Yorker 23:98 Mr 8 '47 120w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Mr 9 '47
100w

"A thoroughly exciting and stimulating book, combining a horror story, a political and philosophical treatise, a study of modern revolutions, with other elements that made Aldous Huxley's 'Brave New World' a gruesome satire on what man's life might be like if a police dictatorship were ever run by cold-blooded scientists." Harrison Smith

+ Sat R of Lit 30:14 Mr 15 '47 1050w

HEARD, HENRY FITZGERALD. See Heard, G.

HEATON, HUGH. Story of Professor Porky; il. by H. E. M. Sellen [Eng title: Professor Porky]. [36p] $1 Oxford

Professor Porky was absent minded because he was always thinking of salt butter. There came a time when he was able to do a farmer a good turn, and so was assured of a steady allowance of his favorite food.

Kirkus 15:500 S 15 '47 80w

"Not recommended." R. O. Bostwick

— Library J 72:1545 N 1 '47 20w

"This reviewer objected to the conversation between animals and a human being, but children will enjoy the book. Binding weak for library use." M. J. Meade

Library J 72:1545 N 1 '47 80w

"Adults will find certain observations in this fable more amusing than the 3 to 6-year-olds for whom it is written, but the latter will enjoy old Porky's prickly revenge, and even more than the slight tale, they will like the funny, charming pictures in color." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p41 O 5 '47 140w

"A small, attractive book."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:55 N 15 '47 50w

HEBERDEN, MARY VIOLET (CHARLES L. LEONARD, pseud). Search for a scientist. 192p $2 Doubleday

47-31137

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p35 O 3 '47
90w

Kirkus 15:379 J1 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20
S 28 '47 80w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p30 S 21 '47 110w

"Some pungent pictures of contemporary French demi-monde, several corpses, competing agents, frequent fracases, tragic romance, and numerous odd characters. Easy reading."

Sat R of Lit 30:30 S 27 '47 40w

HEBERDEN, MARY VIOLET (CHARLES L. LEONARD, pseud) They can't all be guilty. 224p $2 Doubleday

47-2974

Detective story.

"Complicated, melodramatic—and exhausting."

Kirkus 15:81 F 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p25
Ap 13 '47 150w

"Shannon batters his way through all opposition to his inquiries in his usual aggressive manner, collecting a few minor injuries along the way and gets his man in the nick of time, which is just what one has learned to expect of Desmond Shannon." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p25 Ap 6 '47 140w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ap 20
'47 100w

"Tough and timely."

Sat R of Lit 30:46 Je 21 '47 50w

HECHT, BEN. The cat that jumped out of the story; il. by Peggy Bacon. 31p $1 Winston

Cats—Legends and stories

47-12371

Story of Catarinka, the most beautiful cat in the world, whose mother was the moon, and whose life was dedicated to keeping a great secret. A tough alley cat almost got Catarinka to give up her secret, but she outsmarted him, and the alley cat became the one "that jumped out of the story."

Reviewed by M. B. King

Chicago Sun Book Week p31 D 20 '47
90w

"The first part of this small tale is both funny and eerie and there are two lovely night songs, but the literary metaphysics of the ending constitute an adult's idea of a joke. However, there are pictures by Peggy Bacon and no one can equal her in depicting the raffish, midnight habitués of the roof-tops." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p45 N 16 '47 130w

"Has some of the foggy quality of Mr. Hecht's less successful scenarios, but Peggy Bacon's lovely cat pictures in color are worth the price of admission." R. C. Benét

+ New Yorker 23:146 D 6 '47 60w

HECHT, SELIG. Explaining the atom. 205p il
$2.75 Viking

541.2 Atoms. Nuclear physics. Atomic energy 47-2792

"This is a book for the complete layman. It follows the steps that were taken historically in going from the earliest questions about the nature of common substances to the large-scale liberation of atomic energy. The number of these steps is small, and the ideas involved are simple. They can be described in all their essentials without assuming any knowledge of physics, chemistry, and mathematics. I have done this before in five lectures at the New School for Social Research in New York to an audience most of whom had had no training in any science. The steps are explicitly stated in the Table of Contents and form a skeleton summary of the story." (Pref) The author is professor of biophysics at Columbia university. Index.

"Scientists have been hoping for a book of this sort ever since the explosion of the first atomic bomb. Recommending reading matter to the pleading layman who wished an undistorted picture of the successful release of atomic energy has been difficult. Now it is easy. The lay reader who completes this book, which he can do in a couple of evenings, will not, as some have suggested, find himself qualified to do research in atomic physics, but he will have a greatly increased understanding of what nuclear energy means, and will be able to discuss atomic politics and to vote much more intelligently than before." G. R. Harrison

+ Atlantic 179:132 Je '47 420w

Booklist 43:304 Je 1 '47

Reviewed by D. H. Killeffer
Chem & Eng N 25:1830 Je 23 '47 300w
Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '47

"There are a number of popularizations on this subject on the market, but this is one of the very best. . . Professor Hecht must be a topnotch teacher, if one can judge from the clear, logical progression of theory and experimental evidence that he derives from a complex subject."

+ Kirkus 15:122 F 15 '47 150w

"Dr. Hecht is a distinguished biophysicist and this is the best book on the atom for the lay reader to date." L. A. Eales

+ Library J 72:891 Je 1 '47 70w

"A little masterpiece of popularization. I have always felt that a successful application of the art of simplifying science for the layman requires not only that the writer be a good writer but that he be a good scientist. . . Hecht is both a first-class scientist and a writer who express himself with ease and polish." Benjamin Harrow

+ Nation 164:719 Je 14 '47 500w

"It is, in my opinion, a first-class job of popularization—clear, unpretentious, written at the right pace, free of condescension and without metaphysics." J. R. Newman

+ New Repub 116:33 Ap 28 '47 1200w

Reviewed by Gerald Wendt

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7
My 18 '47 280w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:44 Jl '47

"Dr. Hecht has written what is by all odds the best book on atomic energy so far to be published for the ordinary reader. In style, in conception and in content his book proves once again that the scientist-turned-writer is a far more efficient popularizer than the writer-turned-scientist. The effectiveness of the book can be traced, in large part, to the fact that Dr. Hecht approached its composition with a clear picture of what he planned to achieve." Stephen Wheeler

+ N Y Times p4 Ap 27 '47 400w

Reviewed by Milton Silverman

San Francisco Chronicle p23 Je 8 '47
1000w

Reviewed by L. N. Ridenour

Sat R of Lit 30:14 Je 28 '47 320w

School & Society 65:447 Je 14 '47 20w

Reviewed by H. M. Davis

Springf'd Republican p10B N 30 '47
190w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:314 S '47 220w

HECKERT, JOSIAH BROOKS. Business budgeting and control. 546p il $5 Ronald 658.154 Budget, Business 46-8349

"A guide to effective budgeting and control procedures for university students of accounting and management, and for business executives and accounting officers who are responsible for budgetary planning and control." Management R

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:79 Ja 1 '47 30w

Management R 36:240 Ap '47 20w

Special Libraries 38:53 F '47

HECKSCHER, AUGUST. Pattern of politics. 244p $3 Reynal

321.8 Democracy. U.S.—Politics and government 47-30893

"The author of this plea for a more mature approach to American politics feels that the future course of the United States will depend to a considerable degree on whether or not we are able to get rid of the established notion that politics is a shabby, committee-room business that has very little relation to the proper conduct of a nation. Mr. Heckscher, a young newspaper editor from upstate New York, is inclined to blame most of the inadequacy of our political development on the misty belief (a heritage from Emerson and his Transcendentalist friends) that the citizens of a democratic state should resist the temptation to separate their business and politics." (New Yorker) Bibliography.

Booklist 44:83 N 1 '47

"August Heckscher has forsaken teaching for journalism, but some of the professors are going to use his book. He may properly be counted in the company of men like Lippmann and the young Schlesinger, who have written extraordinary books at a surprisingly early age." R. D. MacCann

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 O 28 '47
600w

"A learned, introspective dialectic of political theories as they have been expressed in American history and as they have been shaped by the precedents and philosophies of Europe. . . An intelligent, well-stocked political tract on the main ideological currents in American political thought."

+ Kirkus 15:360 Jl 1 '47 150w

"The book is filled with keen insights upon past and present, couched in an urbane, almost Addisonian style. Though one may quarrel with some of the historical illustrations, the main impact of the argument is to renew a sense of the resources of our democratic past; and Mr. Heckscher's case for social planning shows that enlightened conservatism may play a creative role in assuring a stable and hopeful future." Arthur Schlesinger, Jr.

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3
S 21 '47 1150w

"Good, disturbing thinking, somewhat rhapsodic in spots, perhaps, but that's not a great failing."

+ New Yorker 23:122 S 13 '47 180w

San Francisco Chronicle p17 D 21 '47
70w

HEDDEN, MRS WORTH TUTTLE. Other room. 274p $2.75 Crown

47-3951

A young woman of a proud Virginia family goes to teach in a New Orleans college. Insufficient inquiry about the college left Nina unprepared for the shock of finding it a Negro college. At first she contemplated flight, but instead she stayed, taught for a year, and gradually lost her inherited prejudices.

Reviewed by John Cournos

Atlantic 180:124 S '47 330w

Booklist 44:17 S 1 '47

HEDDEN, MRS. W. T.—Continued

"A novel with a theme such as this naturally calls for depth and drama; unfortunately, The Other Room has little of either. Interest is further lessened by stretches of poor and frequently careless writing."

— Cath World 165:572 S '47 150w

"One of those usually forbidden Southern subjects is treated here without sensationalism, with sympathy and a deft hand. Mrs. Hedden works not for shock, or for lurid effect, but for a quiet understanding of people and situation. There have been more profound works on racial subjects, and more burning ones; few have carried a greater measure of honesty. . . . With a sure touch, with comprehension and understanding, Mrs. Hedden develops a convincing series of situations. Some may question her denouement; many may wonder about the behavior, here and there, of her heroine. Not many will, I think, put down the book without feeling that the author is a woman whose gift of literary creation almost matches her earnestness." H. T. Kane

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Je 29 '47 360w

"A sustained story of romantic attraction, racial taboo, not on the literary level of previous firecrackers but certainly readable."

+ Kirkus 15:195 Ap 1 '47 150w

"The worthiness of its purpose and especially the courage with which it handles the theme of miscegenation makes one wish 'The Other Room' were a better book—a novel with more skill in narrative, less time out for instruction, and more depth of characterization. The subject of Negro-white relations would seem to have reached the point, so far as fiction is concerned, where good-will without art is almost as dismaying as art without good-will." Diana Trilling

Nation 165:188 Ag 23 '47 180w

"One of the most interesting and provocative novels of the year." Coleman Rosenberger

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Je 22 '47 900w

N Y Times p20 Jl 13 '47 360w

"A warmhearted, superficial, and rather girlishly written story. . . . But the novel, unfortunately, is likely to interest only those who confuse good propaganda with good writing."

+ New Yorker 23:67 Jl 5 '47 90w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p12 Jl 10 '47 750w

"'The Other Room' will probably offend a great many people. That they can be offended by the truth is to their discredit, not to that of Mrs. Hedden's honest and courageous book." S. H. Hay

+ Sat R of Lit 30:12 Jl 12 '47 1200w

Survey G 36:449 Ag '47 430w

HEGEDUS, ADAM DE. Patriotism or peace?

266p $3 Scribner

320.15 Nationalism and nationality. Peace 47-4020

Study of the history and meaning of nationalism and its influence upon the political scene in recent years. The book "opens with the theme that nationalism 'still remains the greatest political force and the greatest political reality.' . . . [The author] quickly punctures the argument that race consciousness and race antipathy are instinctive; he exposes the fallacy of believing that language is an infallible or 'universal criterion of nationality,' and he moves smoothly to a plane where the reader can see nationalism for the synthetic product that it is." (N Y Times)

"Mr. de Hegedus, a Hungarian by birth, is today a British citizen. He has visited the United States and has crossed it at least once. He is widely read in a certain segment of contemporary political literature, and frequently cites studies by Burnham, Laski and Ortega y Gasset. He has an unusual facility with words, and a fertility of suggestion that is sometimes illuminating. . . . Despite these flashes of quality, the book as a whole is inadequate. In the first place, the author evidences no familiarity with previous writings on the subject of nationalism and its relationship to the great wars of our century. Throughout the pages of the volume—there is no index—the reviewer looked in vain for any mention of G. Lowes Dickinson, Sidney B. Fay, Carlton J. H. Hayes, Hans Kohn, G. P. Gooch, or others whose scholarly studies should be basic to writers in this field. In the second place, the book is marred by rash generalizations and by occasional vulgarisms in expression which add nothing to its effect. In the third place, there are numerous glaring errors of fact, in connection with European or American history or their interrelations." J. D. Squires

+ Christian Century 64:714 Je 4 '47 700w

Foreign Affairs 26:220 O '47 20w

"An incisive, unillusioned analysis, sobering rather than reassuring."

Kirkus 15:115 F 15 '47 180w

"This is an excellent book, brilliantly written; unfortunately, its title is incorrect, and so is its conclusion. Patriotism is not the antithesis of peace. . . . The antithesis of peace is war. . . . Mr. de Hegedus's style is fascinating, a successful blend of English scholarship with the wit of a Hungarian journalist. His scholarship is made evident by his thorough knowledge of the relevant literature and his lack of bias. His wit is wise. . . . The journalist in him occasionally shows itself in factual inaccuracies. Thus, he mistakes Paul Valéry for the 'frightened poet-ambassador' Paul Claudel. . . . These inaccuracies are only minor blemishes on Mr. de Hegedus's fine portrait of nationalism. His diagnosis is not matched by his suggested cure. Not only does he indulge in the paradox that 'war comes when the horrors of peace exercise a more powerful impression than the horrors of war,' but he also believes that power politics is a necessity." Rustem Vambéry

+ Nation 165:166 Ag 16 '47 850w

"The arguments are presented in an anecdotal and discursive style, and are supported by references from a wide range of historical experience. Mr. de Hegedus writes trenchantly and quite often wittily, but his book lacks organization. The most serious criticism to be made against Mr. de Hegedus's point of view is that he minimizes the influence of economic factors." H. B. Parkes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 S 7 '47 500w

"In so far as the writer confines himself to a descriptive analysis, he has turned out a creditable piece of work. . . . The difficulty with this volume is not in the general pitch to which the arguments are keyed—the real trouble lies in the fact that such a large part of the material simply involves a reworking of low-grade ore that has been practically exhausted. . . . In several instances Mr. de Hegedus exposes himself to more concrete criticism—some of which might have been avoided by the use of more temperate language. . . . Despite a few reservations, there are still several significant features to commend the reading of this book." Malcolm Moos

+ N Y Times p7 My 25 '47 1050w

Reviewed by Asher Brynes

Sat R of Lit 30:13 Ag 23 '47 120w

Reviewed by L. O. Kattsoff

Social Forces 26:238 D '47 300w

HEIDEL, ALEXANDER. Gilgamesh epic and Old Testament parallels. 269p $3.50 Univ. of Chicago press

299.219 Gilgamesh

A46-5633

"This is the companion volume to the author's The Babylonian Genesis [Book Review Digest 1942] dealing with the Babylonian 'Creation Epic.' In both volumes there is a translation of the Babylonian poems and of related material, as also a discussion of Old Testament parallels. The Gilgamesh Epic, known through cuneiform tablets dating from 1700 to 630 B.C., deals with the tragedy of death and the vain search for immortality. The Story of the Flood—in the eleventh of the twelve tablets of the poem—and other episodes have been inserted from separate sources." U S Quarterly Bkl

"The book merits study, not alone because of the continuing importance of the great body of ancient literature that is its central theme, but because of the thoughtful challenge it offers to many accepted ideas." W. A. Irwin
+ Christian Century 64:177 F 5 '47 800w
Christian Science Monitor p12 Je 14 '47 240w

Reviewed by F. J. Moore
Churchman 160:15 D 1 '46 180w

"Despite the overzealous effort to establish the religious superiority of the Hebrew stories this book is an extremely useful work. A host of students will be grateful for the fresh translation into English of so much Babylonian material on the subject of death and the life after death." J. B. Pritchard
+ Crozer Q 24:174 Ap '47 650w

Reviewed by E. G. Kraeling
J Religion 27:149 Ap '47 550w

"Dr. Heidel minimizes the influence of Babylonian literature on Biblical writers, and stresses the superiority of the moral and religious teaching of the Bible. While his translations will be of service to all readers, his views on the Bible will appeal primarily to 'Fundamentalists' who believe in the inspiration and inerrancy of the Scriptures."

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:30 Mr '47 240w

HEILPERIN, MICHAEL ANGELO. Trade of nations. 234p $3 Knopf

337 Commercial policy 47-269

"Thoughtful approach to the problems of international economic security and stability. Beginning with an elementary explanation of international trade Heilperin launches an attack on economic nationalism, then considers possibilities and problems of world economy, and finally, outlines America's position and how she could contribute to world prosperity." (Library J) Index.

"The book is not technical, and in the reviewer's opinion not suitable as a text. Neither is it a 'contribution' to pure theory; it does not pretend to be. It does, however, survey the field with comprehension, competence, and clarity." John Donaldson

Ann Am Acad 252:138 Jl '47 360w
Booklist 43:268 My 1 '47

"This is a sound and well reasoned exposition of the advantages of free trade between nations and of the evils of protective tariffs, import quotas, export dumping, artificial depreciation of exchanges, and other restrictive devices. . . . While Dr. Heilperin's book is far too specialized to make any great appeal to the general reader, as did the Corn Law Tracts and speeches by John Bright and Richard Cobden, it nevertheless deserves to be read by all businessmen and politicians who may have a hand in the shaping of foreign trade policy during the coming and fateful years." P. H. Douglas

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Mr 2 '47 410w

Current Hist 12:374 Ap '47 70w

Foreign Affairs 26:221 O '47 60w

Reviewed by Tibor Scitovszky
J Pol Econ 55:475 O '47 1100w

"A learned, controversial view of America's place in postwar international economic relations."

+ Kirkus 14:616 D 1 '46 170w

"Within a brief compass he offers a clear, non-technical exposition of a very important phase of the problem of lasting peace. Highly recommended for university and public libraries." Walter Hausdorfer

+ Library J 72:158 Ja 15 '47 80w

"The bias of the book is strongly toward freedom of trade, based as far as possible on competitive free enterprise within the nations. . . . Yet so wedded is the author to classical theory that he scarcely understands the argument for trade controls which are advocated on more social grounds." George Soule

Nation 164:430 Ap 12 '47 480w

Reviewed by A. D. Gayer
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9
Ag 31 '47 1100w

"A timely, informative, and challenging, if not wholly convincing, book. . . . The essential weakness of the book is compounded by a discursive style, a partisan presentation of the issues, a confusing indecisiveness at the political intersections, and a loose employment of such flexible terms as nationalism and internationalism, collectivism and free enterprise." J. J. Friedman

+ N Y Times p28 Je 15 '47 1250w

Reviewed by William Diebold
Pol Sci Q 62:607 D '47 1000w
San Francisco Chronicle p18 S 21 '47 50w

Reviewed by L. M. Hacker
Sat R of Lit 30:19 Ag 9 '47 950w
U S Quarterly Bkl 3:157 Je '47 280w

HEIMANN, EDUARD. Freedom and order; lessons from the war. 344p $3 Scribner

321.8 Democracy. Liberty. Political science 47-3608

"Mr. Heimann begins by discussing the causes of Fascism and the failure of the democracies to take action against it at the right time; but he goes on to interpret the war as an expression of certain profound weaknesses in both the structure and the spirit of the European civilization of the last three hundred years. By profession an economist and sociologist, Mr. Heimann is also a student of theology and has been deeply influenced by the reinterpretations of Pauline and Lutheran Christianity which have been put forward by such men as Reinhold Niebuhr." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

"How we shall strike that unhappy medium where neither freedom nor order can turn into a menace, Professor Heimann is unable to tell. Retreating into theology, he merely demands a revival of religious fervor and moral strength, without being more specific—and we somehow do not like seeing a scholar lose himself in metaphysics. Nevertheless, Freedom and Order is a thought-provoking book, more difficult to read but also more profound than the average of the political essays appearing in this era of decision." Alfred Werner

+ Christian Century 64:1178 O 1 '47 650w

"The author, a refugee from Hitler's Germany, has been closely associated with Socialism. He has been schooled in Marxism and shows much attachment to it. However, that has not robbed him of objectivity and has driven him neither to dogmatism nor to partisan fury. He shows much human sympathy and a broad understanding." R. H. M.
+ Christian Science Monitor p16 My 19 '47 650w

Reviewed by K. M. Chworowsky
Churchman 161:16 N 1 '47 180w

"Only one standpoint seems fair from which to judge this book: greatness and declivity from greatness. The book is great in historic scope and in contemporary relevancy. It is great in its appreciation of man's inner life—its complexity, its profundity, its pathos, its glory. It is great in the multi-dimensionality of grasp, grasp of both individual and collective reality. But it is small in that it overbids its greatness and commits what it charges against another position: it achieves a 'stand-ard' by which 'nothing can be determined.'" T. V. Smith

+ Ethics 57:304 Jl '47 1150w

"Freedom and Order' is an unusually comprehensive and penetrating analysis of the central problems of Western civilization. But it is addressed to the general reader, and its argument is at all times easy to follow." H. B. Parkes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14
My 25 '47 1200w

HEIMANN, EDUARD—Continued

"Few will quarrel with the need for a spiritual regeneration at this hour, but Dr. Heimann gives no hint of how such a revival of spirit is to be brought about. And his careful, sincere, well-meant but heavy volume is not one to kindle the light of the Lord in very many hearts and souls." Alan Cranston
— N Y Times p14 Ag 3 '47 800w

"What the author undertakes to do is to tell us that as Christians as well as citizens we must submit to the joint authority of a totalitarian State Department and a remodeled church around the corner. Here, then, is a volume of advice which will seem sardonic to an American who has twice seen his country compelled to go to war against the nation which once swallowed the same, holus bolus." Asher Brynes

— Sat R of Lit 30:13 Ag 23 '47 900w

Reviewed by R. A. Brown
Survey 83:324 N '47 320w

HEIMER, MELVIN LEIGHTON. Big drag; il. by Peggy Bacon. (Whitlsey house publication) 201p $2.50 McGraw

917.471 New York (city)—Social life and customs 47-30390

The "Big Drag" is the name which the author applies to that section of midtown Manhattan on and off Broadway in the forties and fifties. The book is a collection of sketches which picture the life of the place and the manners and customs of its inhabitants.

Reviewed by Dale Harrison
Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Ag 17 '47 360w

Kirkus 15:332 Je 15 '47 120w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 Ja 11 '48 140w

Reviewed by Lewis Robbins
N Y Times p18 S 7 '47 490w

"Though the presentation is somewhat tedious, the author phrases skilfully, at times, alert observances representative of Rialto life. . . But semi-truths and errors punctuate the text." Bernard Sobel

Sat R of Lit 30:11 Ag 23 '47 600w

"Broadway's glamour comes from one source alone, and that is the nightly miracle that takes place behind the facades of its numerous playhouses, when audience, play and players bring theatre to life. . . To write all around the periphery of Broadway without ever touching on this core, and yet to make a lively book, takes a greater skill than Mel Heimer has to command." H. R. Isaacs

Theatre Arts 32:67 Ja '48 200w

HEINE, THOMAS THEODOR. I wait for miracles; tr. from the German by Clara G. Stillman. 376p $3.50 Greenberg

47-31285

A semi-autobiographical satirical novel by the man who was the founder and for thirty-seven years the guiding spirit of the satirical weekly: Simplicissimus. It is the story of a guileless artist who is evidently protected by some good fortune from the wiles of his less honest fellow-Europeans.

"[The book] reveals more about Germany, about Europe and about our modern world in general than many philosophical or historical treatises by serious scholars. Without illusions as to the dubious nature of man but also without bitterness, Heine has the moral and mental courage to believe in the indestructible force of life. 'I Wait for Miracles,' written in his eighth decade, is a powerful antidote for the fashionable nihilism of existentialists half his age." Franz Schoenberger

+ N Y Times p4 O 19 '47 700w

"It is all very acute and funny, but the final effect is rather sad, probably because the sprightliness serves as a reminder that the attitude of men like the author, who was one of the founders and for many years an editor of the German comic weekly Simplicissimus, was never really understood by the Germans."

New Yorker 23:122 O 11 '47 120w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn

Springf'd Republican p10B N 30 '41 300w

HEINLEIN, ROBERT ANSON. Rocket ship Galileo; il. by Thomas W. Voter. 212p $2 Scribner

47-6539

A story for older boys. It describes the experiences of three high school seniors and a physicist on the first space ship to land on the moon.

"It is so real that one feels that the idea may become an actuality at any moment. And the book is not too technical to be understood. For all ages up to one hundred." Jane Cobb
+ Atlantic 180:148 D '47 40w

Booklist 44:155 D 15 '47

"A nice piece of science fantasy by an author well known for his science fiction."

+ Kirkus 15:602 N 1 '47 120w

"A hard subject skilfully handled due to author's knowledge of adolescent language and psychology. Well bound; few illustrations; paper will probably not stand hard usage that book will receive when it is discovered." M. I. Ross
+ Library J 73:49 Ja 1 '48 90w

"Exciting fiction, with a more or less scientific background to keep it from getting out of hand." R. C. Benét

+ New Yorker 23:156 D 6 '47 40w

"Combines experience in naval aviation and science, with a thrilling adventure for older boys." R. L. Morgan

+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 N 30 '47 100w

HEINSHEIMER, HANS W. Menagerie in F sharp. 275p $2.75 Doubleday

B or 92 Musicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 47-4000

These informal memoirs of a music publisher begin with his arrival in New York, a refugee from war-shadowed Europe. Some pages of his book are devoted to music and musicians in Europe, more to the music and musicians of America, in New York, Hollywood, Boston and the middle West.

Booklist 43:345 Jl 1 '47

"Having breathed the air of the wide spaces of America, Dr. Heinsheimer is full of optimism. He expects the United States to carry on the torch of culture which, he feels, is dropping from the weakened fingers of Western Europe. His book should be a tonic to all Americans." L. A. S.

Christian Science Monitor p10 Je 14 '47 650w

Kirkus 15:153 Mr 1 '47 170w

Reviewed by C. K. Miller

Library J 72:312 My 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by G. W. Johnson

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 My 11 '47 1000w

Reviewed by M. C. Hastings

+ N Y Times p12 Jl 13 '47 500w

"Not only a delightful book, but a coherent one, with one of the most sensible viewpoints yet presented on the place of music in our society—which does not detract in the least from its somewhat zany joy. It's a book as witty, as quotable and almost as malicious as Oscar Levant's 'A Smattering of Ignorance'—and if one-tenth of its wise ideas find fertile soil in one twentieth of its (I hope unnumbered) readers, the future of American music will be a glowing one." A. P. W.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Jl 13 '47 300w

Theatre Arts 32:69 Ja '48 60w

HEINZ, MRS DORIS (HALE), and BOLT, MRS KATHERINE (SMITH). Modeling for motherhood; heir conditioning the modern Mrs; il. by Doris Hale Heinz. 74p $2 Wiley
618.2 Pregnancy Med47-295

Text and illustrations give facts and advice on the subject of prospective motherhood. Gives exercises, with drawings, for the period of pregnancy and after the baby is born. The facts have been checked by an obstetrician.

Booklist 43:269 My 1 '47

"This is not one of those generally useless, but engaging (if you're not 'it') books about pregnancy which should be listed together somewhere under the all-inclusive title 'Isn't It a Perfect SCREAM?' Pregnancy is not a scream to Mesdames Heinz (though her illustrations are) and Bolt, both of whom were there, Charlie. But they discuss it with light hearts, good common sense and whimsy of a very tidy variety. Since the book does not pretend to take the place of sound medical advice (indeed, insists that you get it), it is not the type to do any harm." Phyllis Liapes
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 D 25 '46
650w

HEISENBERG, WERNER, ed. Cosmic radiation; fifteen lectures; tr. by T. H. Johnson; pub. and distributed in the public interest by authority of the U.S. alien property custodian. 192p il $3.50 Dover 537.53 Cosmic rays 47-547

"Series of 15 articles written by leading German scientists during World War II, translated by T. H. Johnson, and prepared as an anniversary volume in honor of Arnold Sommerfeld's 75th birthday. A survey of the problems of cosmic radiation. Of interest to physicists." (Library J) Index.

"This is undoubtedly the best book on cosmic rays which is available." G. T. Seaborg + Chem & Eng N 25:724 Mr 10 '47 350w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:227 F 1 '47 50w

"Necessarily technical, [these papers] form an excellent review of what we now know about this radiation." James Stokley
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p33
My 4 '47 200w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:59 O '46

HELLMAN, GEOFFREY THEODORE. How to disappear for an hour; il. by Steinberg. 272p $3 Dodd 817 47-31333

A collection of the author's essays, in humorous vein, most of them reprinted from the New Yorker. Includes four Profiles—Jean Delacour, Dr Frank M. Chapman, Dr Gilbert Grosvenor, and Robert W. Service.

Reviewed by Russell Maloney
Atlantic 180:136 O '47 320w

Booklist 44:87 N 1 '47

"The spirit behind all such writing is essentially urbane. Mr. Hellman lacks the pathos of Lamb and the delicacy of Beerbohm, to compare him with the best in his field. His work, like much of the material of the New Yorker Magazine, to which he has contributed some 50 profiles, is a little brittle. If you set it down hard, it is likely to break in pieces. But it is mighty good entertainment, and amusing satire, acutely underlined by Steinberg's drawings." Horace Reynolds

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 O 16 '47
750w

"Those in the know at 'The New Yorker' say that Mr. Hellman's writing is in that rare category of prose which the magazine's unpredictable editor, Harold Ross, can read without wincing. In this, as in most literary matters, Mr. Ross's taste is impeccable." John Durston

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6
O 26 '47 600w

"This is a painless and amiable collection of absentee thinking. When, in taut contemplation of our planetary misfortune, you feel that your mind will crack, try Hellman. He'll split it right down the middle for you." Max Wyllie

N Y Times p44 N 9 '47 500w

Reviewed by Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p22 S 28 '47
70w

"The trouble begins when Mr. Hellman feels he must embroider his sketches with instantaneously funny beginnings and madly whimsical endings, as if he didn't trust the rest of it. . . One becomes uncomfortably aware that, in these artificial starts and finishes, Mr. Hellman is imitating his fellow New Yorker contributor S. J. Perelman. Mr. Perelman doesn't need the flattery, and Mr. Hellman has plenty on the ball without imitating anybody." Jack Iams

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:14 S 27 '47 700w

HELLMAN, LILLIAN. Another part of the forest; a play in three acts. 134p $2 Viking 812 47-30238

The Hubbards of "Little Foxes" [Book Review Digest 1939] in a play which is set twenty years before the former drama in "another part of the forest." This shows how Ben succeeded in wresting the family wealth from his tyrannical father.

Booklist 43:269 My 1 '47

"Not so good for Little Theatre consumption —leaves a nasty taste behind."
— Kirkus 15:56 Ja 15 '47 40w

Reviewed by George Freedley
Library J 72:811 My 15 '47 30w

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R
p27 My 25 '47 180w

"It is unfortunate that Miss Hellman's very real talent for anatomizing sadism, lechery and plain, old-fashioned greed has been allowed to run wild in this instance. Her sordid thumb-nails of the Hubbard clan (dotty mother, monstrous father, wastrel son, etc.) have their engrossing moments: the sum total is all too likely to remind the casual reader of 'The Curse of the Claghorns.'" C. V. Terry
— N Y Times p12 Ap 6 '47 160w

San Francisco Chronicle p12 Jl 27 '47
100w

HELM, WILLIAM PICKETT. Harry Truman: a political biography. 241p $3 Duell
B or 92 Truman, Harry S. 47-30892

Covers Truman's official career from his first nomination for senator in 1934 to his succession to the presidency. Index.

Booklist 44:67 O 15 '47

"Beyond establishing a favorable record for the man during his earlier political position as Senator, the material holds little of interest to the reader—or even campaigner."

Kirkus 15:413 Ag 1 '47 170w

"This is as neat a bit of reporting as a reporter can give—the by-line reporter at his best." A. B. Lindsay

Library J 72:1190 S 1 '47 140w

"Mr. Helm's purpose in writing as he does is difficult to make out. He is effusive in his expressions of personal friendship for the President. The publisher's blurb says that the book was written 'with the President's knowledge, consent and co-operation.' Yet this book is as ruinous to Mr. Truman's reputation as Parson Griswold's biography was to that of Poe. . . This does not present Mr. Truman in any very attractive light to either side. To the friends of Roosevelt it makes him resemble a merger of Judas Iscariot, Benedict Arnold and Vidkun Quisling, retaining the worst features of each. To the enemies of Roosevelt it makes him resemble a modern Uriah Heep, fawning with hatred in his heart." G. W. Johnson

— N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p15
S 14 '47 800w

HELM, W. P.—Continued

Reviewed by Turner Catledge

N Y Times p16 O 26 '47 700w

"His style has a city desk slovenliness without the small corrective graces of a good copy reader. The cliché comes naturally to him, and when he essays a metaphor to make his writing 'fancy,' it is a clumsy and unfortunate effort. He has nothing to add to the Truman record (outside of a few naive conclusions and a somewhat remarkable explanation of why Truman booted Wallace out of his Cabinet), and his retelling of the familiar material from the files lacks both interest and distinction." J. D. Weaver

— Sat R of Lit 30:16 S 27 '47 700w

HELMERICKS, MRS CONSTANCE, and HELMERICKS, HARMON. We live in the Arctic.

329p $4 Little

917.98 Alaska—Description and travel

47-11048

The further adventures of the authors of We Live in Alaska (Book Review Digest 1944). This is an account of a year's trip within the Arctic circle. Illustrated with photographs and a plan of their cabin. Map on endpapers.

Booklist 44:105 N 15 '47

Kirkus 15:451 Ag 15 '47 170w

"They transmit their feeling for this country and enrich their story with critical interpretations. This is an Arctic-bewitched account of those far, hardly scratched regions. . . For all their nip-and-tuck struggle to survive there isn't a hint of heroics or melodrama in this courageous and modest story." M. C. Hubbard
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 O 19 '47 290w

"Their story is interesting reading, and their tales of hunting are absorbing. The account of their struggle against starvation during their first spring above the Arctic Circle and of their search for meat makes exciting reading." Robert Dinsmore

+ N Y Times p12 N 30 '47 270w

"Whether observing Arctic flora and fauna, struggling with river travel in the small canoe, facing a formidable black bear, the Helmericks record it all with buoyancy and happy wit." J. V.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ja 11 '48 350w

Wis Lib Bul 43:151 N '47

HELSETH, HENRY EDWARD. Chair for Martin Rome.

198p $2.50 Dodd

47-2397

While attempting to rob a bank Martin Rome killed a policeman. He knew he had to die, but in order to shield the girl he loved he escaped. During this time out of prison he killed again, but he succeeded in making the way clear for his sweetheart. When he was recaptured he went to the chair without a struggle.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 My 11 '47 180w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p19 Ap 6 '47 280w

"This is in no sense a detective story, nor is it merely a tale of crime and punishment. It is something more than either of these, and it is definitely a novel which reveals a rare talent on the part of its author." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p25 Ap 6 '47 230w

"A farrago of clichés and claptrap, worth noting only as the most arrant romantic sentimentalizing over a criminal since Bulwer Lytton's 'Eugene Aram.'" Anthony Boucher

— San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ap 13 '47 80w

"Just about most real and convincing tough-job that has come in season too full of this genre. Not easily forgettable."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:68 Ap 12 '47 50w

HENDERSON, ALGO DONMYER, and HALL, DOROTHY. Antioch college; its design for liberal education.

280p $3 Harper

378 Antioch college 47-97

"The record of an outstanding experiment of the past 25 years in which this college has succeeded in helping students 'organize more effective and highly motivated lives.' Indexed." School & Society.

Reviewed by M. G. Fraser

Ann Am Acad 254:224 N '47 400w

Booklist 43:180 F 15 '47

Bookmark 8:4 My '47

Reviewed by J. J. De Boer

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 D 29 '46 270w

Kirkus 14:536 O 15 '46 120w

Reviewed by Benjamin Fine

N Y Times p26 Mr 2 '47 1100w

School & Society 64:447 D 21 '46 40w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman

School & Society 65:493 Je 28 '47 360w

Springf'd Union p3 S 16 '47 150w

"The report stands as more than a statement of work in progress; it presents a successful endeavor 'to make education real,' and should be valuable to many concerned with problems of higher education. Several appendices furnish special information on details of administration."

+ U S Quarterly Bk1 3:162 Je '47 220w

Wis Lib Bul 43:65 Ap '47

HENDERSON, JAMES LEAL. Whirlpool.

$3 Prentice-Hall

47-6622

Realistic novel depicting the characters of a half dozen lost and degenerate individuals living in a small town on the Pacific coast of Mexico.

Kirkus 15:477 S 1 '47 80w

"Brutal and vicious novel. . . Whole tone of the novel, the language, the many immoral references and situations make book unfit for public library use." L. R. Etzkorn

— Library J 72:1374 O 1 '47 40w

"The essentials of good writing, believable conflict and compelling characterization, are only spottily represented here. The frequent shifting of scene soon becomes wearisome and confusing. However, on the credit side, Mr. Henderson writes a brisk dialogue, and his word picture of the Mexican scene is done with a sure stroke." J. G.

— + N Y Times p63 N 9 '47 230w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p11C D 7 '47 90w

HENDERSON, LE GRAND (LE GRAND, pseud). Augustus rides the border; il. by the author.

134p $2 Bobbs

47-3101

This is the eleventh book in the series about Augustus. This time Augustus and his family in their car and trailer are headed for the Mexican border. They lose the car, so they turn into goat herders and Augustus saves the herd from a mountain lion.

Chicago Sun Book Week p5 My 25 '47 70w

Kirkus 15:164 Mr 15 '47 80w

"The poor literary quality is the chief drawback of these stories." E. T. Dobbins

Library J 72:818 My 15 '47 60w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 My 11 '47 270w

HENDERSON, ROBERT WILLIAM. Ball, bat and bishop: the origin of ball games; with an introd. by Will Irwin. 220p $5 Rockport press

796 Games. Baseball 47-11018

"Discusses the development of all modern games played with bat and ball, finds their common origin in the ancient Egyptian-Arabian-Persian fertility rites, a carry over into Christian religious ceremonies and festivals, and the gradual emergence of ball games for recreation. Separate chapters on polo, tennis, football, racquets, golf, billiards, lawn tennis and cricket. More extended discussion of baseball which should explode for all time the persistent myth that baseball was 'invented' by Abner Doubleday at Cooperstown, New York in 1839." Library J

Booklist 44:102 N 15 '47

"Original and scholarly contribution, not only to the literature and bibliography of sport (this is explicitly documented), but of substantial interest to students of religious history, cultural anthropologists and of course residents of Cooperstown." R. E. Kingery

+ Library J 72:1190 S 1 '47 140w

Reviewed by Lloyd Lewis

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8
S 14 '47 450w

"Robert W. Henderson is a man who deserves a high place in the official records, scrolls, halls of fame and semi-pantheons by which organized sport has begun to glorify itself in the last fifty years. For Mr. Henderson is by all odds the world's foremost student and soundest historian of the origin and growth of games that are played with a ball." John Lardner

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 3 '47 800w

HENDRICKS, LUTHER VIRGIL. James Harvey Robinson: teacher of history. 120p pa $2 King's crown press

B or 92 Robinson, James Harvey A47-848

"This modest work is concerned with James Harvey Robinson as an educator. It essays to describe and to evaluate this historian's place in the movement which changed the emphasis for the teaching of history from attention to dates and dynasties to concern for the many aspects of man's life in the world. In this movement, which began at the turn of this century, Robinson was a leader." (Crozer Q) Bibliography.

"This work is a careful study which is likely to be of considerable use to educators in the field of history." J. B. Pritchard

+ Crozer Q 24:188 Ap '47 200w

Reviewed by Garrett Mattingly

Sat R of Lit 30:32 Je 7 '47 650w

School & Society 65:126 F 15 '47 50w

Reviewed by Michael Kraus

Social Educ 11:329 N '47 250w

Reviewed by R. A. Brown

Social Studies 38:377 D '47 320w

"What the study has not even tried to do is to discriminate critically among the various and by no means inseparable strands in Robinson's program, appraising each on its separate merits. In addition, although isolating a subject of real importance, the study has faults in common with many doctoral dissertations, driving home its points with annoying iteration and a redundancy of footnote references." U S Quarterly Bkl 3:54 Mr '47 280w

HENIUS, FRANK. Dictionary of foreign trade. 745p $10 Prentice-Hall

382 Commerce—Dictionaries 46-1171

"This new reference book on foreign trade has been written particularly for an anticipated large number of new entrants into foreign commerce and for peoples of foreign countries having commercial dealings with the United States. . . . The title gives a good indication of the subject scope of the work, but in form it is more than a dictionary. In addition to defining terms, it has many of the characteristics of an encyclopedia and a manual, giving discussions of subjects and descriptions of procedures. For example, credit man is merely defined; import broker is discussed at length; and under drawback settlement instructions are given for obtaining a drawback. These fuller treatments make the book much more useful than a dictionary strictly limited to definitions. . . . A few pages of abbreviations in English, Spanish, German, and French precede the main portion of the book." Subscription Bks Bul

"Consistency in forms of entry and cross references is not impeccable. There is a reference from blocked exchange to exchange, blocked, but not from blocked account to account, blocked. Airwaybill, written as one word, appears as a see reference to air transportation, but not to the two-word entry, air waybill, which is the form used. . . . The errors pointed out are minor defects in a valuable, authoritative reference work which seems to be well suited to the needs of those for whom the book is intended. The Dictionary of Foreign Trade is recommended for libraries and for firms and individuals interested in the subject."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 17:28 Jl '46 370w

HENNING, WILLIAM EDWIN. Heller. 294p $2.75 Scribner

47-6380

The setting is a midwestern city. Anne Karkan, a tough seventeen-year-old high school girl, disappointed in love, leaves school and marries one of her mother's boarders. Leonard was older and wiser than Anne and in a few months she had "settled down" and viewed her recent past with disfavor.

"There are some minor flaws in the book: occasional sags in plot tension, patches of clumsy writing, and a profusion of gabby minor characters who lack individuality. But in the main 'The Heller' is a refreshingly pungent story of youth today." Robert Halsband
+ Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Jl 13 '47 410w

"This avoids cheapness by its serious interest in a phase of adolescence, but for all its detailing of a youngster's contemporary background and growing up, the girl herself arouses little more than clinical interest."

Kirkus 15:349 Jl 1 '47 170w

"Young people may enjoy this book and mothers may be interested in the tragic effect an unhappy home has on a child's behavior and future life; otherwise it is just another spicey novel, filled with dates, sex and the trivial doings of a popular, beautiful young girl. Characters are well drawn, but boisterous, crude and always dashing about breathlessly. Recommended." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 72:1033 Jl '47 70w

"Mr. Henning doesn't clothe his story with indignation or satire, he hands it out straight—and it is good. . . . Many a solid citizen, finishing the book, will likewise recall—though more dimly—an era of prohibition, Stutz bearcats and bathtub gin." Florence Crowther

+ N Y Times p5 Jl 20 '47 700w

"Presumably these are backbone materials: grocery salesmen, small shopkeepers, ice cream clerks. In Mr. Henning's hands they lack reality and are not sufficiently grotesque for satire. They remain simply unpleasant and often dull." C. M. Brown

— Sat R of Lit 30:25 Jl 12 '47 400w

Springf'd Union p15 S 24 '47 120w

HENRICH, MRS EDITH (DODD). Quiet center. 73p $2.50 Sloane 811

46-23080

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

Booklist 43:269 My 1 '47

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 16 '47 70w

Reviewed by Ruth Lechlitner

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p26
O 26 '47 350w

HENRICH, EDITH—Continued

"Mrs. Henrich's tries are small, her perceptions, though lacking in range and intensity, are intelligent, and she is quite in control of the material. Her language resources are efficient and deficient. There are good occasional rhymes, like fresh surprises, and most of the time the vocabulary is adequate, but there is no great resourcefulness of poetic language." Harvey Breit

+ — Poetry 70:49 Ap '47 370w

Reviewed by George Snell

San Francisco Chronicle p19 F 16 '47 40w

"Mrs. Henrich's first book is a collection of quiet, thoughtful, well-turned poems. If, as the title implies, this is 'the quiet center at the heart of the storm,' there is little indication of any storm itself. There was nothing that struck me, as I read, with that indefinable but unmistakable emotional impact which stabs the spirit broad awake." S. H. Hay

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:17 Mr 22 '47 650w

Wis Lib Bul 43:52 Mr '47

"Edith Henrich is another observer of hills and seasons, and in her scientific environment she can gracefully include a poem on the spectrum, on Space and Time as well as on Uranium. She writes with a grave intensity, often in sonnets and irregular metres at a cool high level of skill." Eugene Davidson

+ — Yale R n s 36:540 spring '47 170w

HENRICI, ARTHUR TRAUTWEIN. Molds, yeasts, and actinomycetes; a handbook for students of bacteriology; 2d ed. by Charles E. Skinner [and others]. 409p il $5 Wiley 589.2 Fungi 47-2478

New edition of a work first published in 1930. "In the 17 years that have elapsed since the first edition of this book an enormous amount of work has been done, and a great deal of new information has been brought to light in the field of mycology. Consequently, on the basis of a rather concise monograph on molds, yeasts, and actinomycetes written primarily for bacteriologists, the revisers of Henrici's work have been able to build an excellent textbook of 409 pages. The size and form of the book are little changed. . . In general, the 2nd edition presents more on the activities of yeasts, molds, etc., than did the first. The sexual phenomena of yeasts and molds have been more fully described, and new developments in the field of hybridization are discussed. New classifications are given." (Am J Pub Health) Bibliographies. Index.

Reviewed by Martin Frobisher

+ Am J Pub Health 37:1051 Ag '47 430w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1715 D 1 '46 30w

HENRY, MARGUERITE. Always Reddy; il. by Wesley Dennis. (Whittlesey house publication) 79p $1.75 McGraw

Dogs—Legends and stories 47-5835

Reddy, whose real name was Shamrock Queen, belonged to Adam Hoops who had trained her to be one of the finest of hunting dogs. When the time came when Reddy had to leave Mr Hoops' home, she went to live at the City Hall and there proved her faithfulness and courage in another way.

Booklist 44:53 O 1 '47

Reviewed by B. J. Thompson

Cath World 166:236 D '47 70w

Kirkus 15:429 Ag 15 '47 160w

"With pictures by Wesley Dennis that catch the beautiful dignity and liveliness of Irish setters and with a story attuned to their feelings, this author and artist have proved again how well they work together. Recommended for all dog-lovers." Anne Izard

+ Library J 72:1477 O 15 '47 80w

"In Always Reddy Marguerite Henry has made use of her magazine writing technique which would seem to make her book more appealing to adults than to the juvenile readers for whom the format would indicate it as being intended. It is the story of the relationship between a man and his dogs and may find a negligible place among the books for sportsmen in large libraries." Elizabeth Sussdorff

Library J 72:1478 O 15 '47 80w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Book R p6 D 28 '47 300w

"Though the book will probably be enjoyed by the 'doggy' young of any age, the very young in years may miss some of its humor." F. S.

+ N Y Times p41 N 16 '47 110w

"The drawings are delightful. For boys and girls of a wide age range."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:54 N 15 '47 30w

Spring'd Republican p13B Ja 18 '48 120w

HENRY, MARGUERITE. Benjamin West and his cat, Grimalkin; [il. by] Wesley Dennis. 147p $2.50 Bobbs

B or 92 West, Benjamin—Juvenile literature 47-3820

Story of the boyhood of Benjamin West, including his friendship with the cat whose tail supplied him with hairs for paint brushes. For ages 10 to 14.

Booklist 43:349 J1 1 '47

"These are real people. Marguerite Henry knows how to make a day out of the past flash with color and hum with activity. She makes Benjamin's big family as friendly as your neighbors yet holds the suspense of the story. It's a high moment when Benjamin sets forth for Philadelphia. Wesley Dennis catches all the humor and vitality of the story, so that to look at his pictures alone is a great satisfaction." Martha King

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Je 8 '47 300w

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

Christian Science Monitor p12 N 11 '47 240w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 J1 '47

"The happy way in which Benjamin West's biography is combined with a real cat story gives this book an unusually friendly appeal." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:262 J1 '47 130w

"This is one of the most unusual and one of the best of the excellent Boyhood of a Great American series. . . Tops in supplementary reading."

+ Kirkus 15:67 F 1 '47 80w

"An excellent picture of colonial life in the province of Pennsylvania with vignettes of Quaker family life. Beautiful illustrations by Wesley Dennis, good print and wide margins. Recommended for ages 8-12." C. W. Field

+ Library J 72:962 Je 15 '47 110w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R Je 22 '47 380w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p27 Je 22 '47 200w

+ Sat R of Lit 30:28 Je 14 '47 230w

"In this story, illustrated with lively black and white drawings, Marguerite Henry draws a warm and charming picture of an eighteenth-century Quaker household, and brings to life the childhood of a great American painter."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:245 S '47 100w

HENRY, MARGUERITE. Misty of Chincoteague; il. by Wesley Dennis. 173p $2.50 Rand McNally

Horses—Legends and stories 47-11404

Legend says that the wild ponies of Assateague are descendants of a boatload of Spanish horses wrecked on the island three centuries ago. This tale for boys and girls describes the experiences of a Virginia brother and sister who captured a very special wild pony and her foal, and their adventures with the colt, Misty.

Booklist 44:117 N 15 '47

"One of the finest horse stories you'll find for the eight to 12 year-olds." M. B. King
+ Chicago Sun Book Week O 18 '47 190w

"The salty atmosphere of the Atlantic pervades this story, which discloses much about the peculiar life on Chincoteague and introduces some fine appealing characters. It is also absorbing reading strengthened by fine pictures." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 24:38 Ja '48 110w
+ Kirkus 15:581 O 15 '47 80w

Reviewed by J. H. Dohm
Library J 72:1691 D 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14
N 16 '47 380w

"The simple story is told with a fine sense of values, a feeling for drama, deft characterization. The illustrations are full of life and movement." E. S.

+ N Y Times p41 N 16 '47 140w

Reviewed by R. C. Benet
New Yorker 23:151 D 6 '47 60w

Reviewed by P. F. Ladd
San Francisco Chronicle p6 N 30 '47
150w

"Excellent format and fascinating drawings."
+ Sat R of Lit 30:54 N 15 '47 60w
Wis Lib Bul 43:157 N '47

HENRY, ROBERT SELPH. Trains. new ed
119p il $3 Bobbs
625 Railroads—U.S. Railroads—Trains
47-2623

Revised edition of a book on American railroading which first appeared in 1934 (Book Review Digest 1934) and has been revised twice before. The new material in the present edition consists of a chapter on railroads in modern warfare. An appendix lists freight car initials.

"Although with the universal cost of manufacture, the price of Colonel Henry's book has advanced from the $1.75 of the third printing to the $3 of the current redaction, some of its plates, particularly the frontispiece, have suffered the mutations of use. 'Trains' remains, however, far and away the best book in its over-all field, simple enough for the layman, technical enough not to affront the informed, and so far superior to other recent books on railroading from the head end, the rear end, or the patently and commercially subsidized end as to be above all comparison." Lucius Beebe

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:24 J1 19 '47 470w

"'Trains' quite effectively brings the story of American railroads up to date with an authoritative text and a profusion of pictures." E. A. F.

+ Springf'd Union p4 Je 9 '47 180w

HERBST, JOSEPHINE (MRS JOHN HERRMANN). Somewhere the tempest fell. 344p $3 Scribner
47-11576

In the foreground of this novel the story concerns a group of people living in Chicago in the last months of World War II—the chief characters being a successful novelist and his wife and daughter, the daughter's fiancé, a young divorcee, a jazz pianist, a journalist, and others. In the background are memories of other times and other places, particularly Italy before the war.

"Miss Herbst presents this segment of Chicago society without comment for her readers' contemplation. It is an inconclusive but not an unimportant book. For as one of the more sensitive characters remarks in a moment of vision: 'It is not the practical people we need, but those that dare to make us see.'" E. C. Ince

+ — Christian Science Monitor p16 N 19 '47
390w

Kirkus 15:408 Ag 1 '47 170w

Reviewed by Diana Trilling
Nation 165:652 D 13 '47 1050w

"There are so many good things in Josephine Herbst's 'Somewhere the Tempest Fell' that one hesitates to say that as a novel it is disappointing. Its writing mirrors a keen and mature mind; it has character perception that is both sensitive and satiric; it transmits the mood of defeat, ineffectuality and disillusion that Miss Herbst is concerned with. But, except for some of its parts, the book leaves one uneasy and dissatisfied." Rose Feld

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 N
23 '47 400w

"The question is simply that old one of how hard a reader may justifiably be expected to work over a piece of fiction which, when slowly and carefully examined, reveals rewarding compensations. 'Somewhere the Tempest Fell' is a sound and deliberate, scrupulous and valid novel. Yet it is difficult. In a time when so much fiction is uncraftermanlike gush it is hard not to praise such writing as Josephine Herbst's simply because it is so complicatedly honest, and it is not at all a pleasant thing to have to decide, ultimately, that here perhaps the complexity has got a little in the way of the admirable seriousness and depth of the intention." Richard Sullivan

+ — N Y Times p24 N 23 '47 600w

HERMAN, LEWIS HELMAR, and HERMAN, MARGUERITE SHALETT. Manual of American dialects for radio, stage, screen and television. 326p $6 Ziff-Davis

427.9 English language—Dialects. Americanisms
47-2509

Guide to the use of the regional dialects of the United States, written for the use of radio, stage, and screen actors. A system of visual phonetics makes the book easy to use. Bibliography.

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Je 29 '47
60w

"It is a very painstaking and illuminating case study of the peculiarities of speech in different sections of the country."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ag 31
'47 50w

"The Manual of American Dialects is a useful source book for anyone in search of dialectical information. Directors, teachers and writers will find it exceedingly valuable, and for actors it is indispensable." Dorothy Sands

+ Theatre Arts 31:66 S '47 320w

HERNDON, HENRIETTA (ROBINSON). Farming for profit. 211p il $3.75 Thomas, C.C.

630.973 Agriculture—U.S. Farm management
Agr47-138

"A farmer who learned farming the hard way, from other farmers' experiences and from her own trial and error method, but still made a profit by it, tells what she believes the best practice in farm management, including equipment, home, soil, grain farming, and livestock raising. Her farm is in Illinois and her book is addressed particularly to corn belt farmers." Booklist

Booklist 44:63 O 15 '47

"This book is well organized but poorly written. I dislike the author's habit of dogmatic generalization (in which [she] is sometimes incorrect) but [she] does give a lot of sound advice on purchase and practical operation of a Corn Belt farm." J. T. Frederick

+ — Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Mr 2 '47
70w

HERRICK, ARTHUR DONALD. Food regulation and compliance. v2 $10 Revere

614.3 Food law and legislation (44-46012)

"This volume continues the discussion of the subject mainly from the standpoint of adulterants, contaminated foods, coal-tar colors, inspection and factory sanitation, as well as the regulation and prosecution under the laws of the Federal food, drug and cosmetic act. Volume I was concerned chiefly with labeling. Appendix quotes Federal food, drug and cosmetic act and general regulations for its enforcement. Large and some smaller libraries will want." (Booklist) For first volume see Book Review Digest 1945. Index.

HERRICK, A. D.—Continued

Booklist 44:7 S 1 '47

"The present reviewer recommends this work as provocative reading for food chemists generally. Its authoritative and comprehensive treatment of the subject should make it valuable for legal and technical reference purposes."

B. L. Oser

+ Chem & Eng N 25:3753 D 15 '47 420w
 J Home Econ 40:37 Ja '48 10w

HERRON, EDWARD ALBERT. Alaska, land of tomorrow. (Whittlesey house publication) 232p il $2.75 McGraw

917.98 Alaska—Description and travel
 47-2858

Study of Alaska which emphasizes the fact that it is a land of opportunity for people with enough money to develop its natural resources. The author, who has lived in Alaska much of the time since 1935, divides his material according to the twelve months of the year. The book contains material on the country itself, the people, and the possibilities of the country. No index.

Booklist 43:307 Je 1 '47

"Mr. Herron has written like any responsible man who thinks he has stumbled upon a good thing. That is to say, he is properly guarded in praising its virtues, but only by disciplining an almost irrepressible enthusiasm. . . . Preoccupation with physical details of climate, geography, and natural life characterizes this book and leaves an impression of Alaska as a land of unexplored wealth, which is, undoubtedly, the impression Mr. Herron meant to leave." M. M.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 My 10
 '47 340w

Commonweal 46:69 My 2 '47 20w

"A friendly guide to the country, its economic and social possibilities, with a sense of humor to make sparkling reading."

+ Current Hist 13:35 Jl '47 40w

Kirkus 15:209 Ap 1 '47 220w

"A valuable compendium for anyone who would settle in Alaska or invest capital there. Mr. Herron has accumulated many facts; a lot of them are presented for the first time. He is one of the first writers to analyze the long-standing political controversy between Gov. Ernest Gruening, a former New York physician and editor, and the absentee canneries and gold-mining corporations." R. L. Neuberger

+ N Y Times p17 Je 1 '47 400w

Reviewed by Ernest Gruening

Sat R of Lit 30:28 Ag 2 '47 70w

Wis Lib Bul 43:96 Je '47

HERSEY, MRS JEAN. Halfway to heaven; a Guatemala holiday. 259p il $3.75 Prentice-Hall 917.281 Guatemala—Description and travel
 47-11927

Description of leisurely trip to Guatemala, which included excursions to picturesque villages off the beaten track, as well as the cities and towns. Index.

Kirkus 15:498 S 1 '47 100w

"Recommended." J. L. Ross

+ Library J 72:1465 O 15 '47 110w

"There have been many books written about Guatemala in the last few years, and choosing among them is a matter of taste partly. But I'd risk the statement that if a prospective visitor wanted to select two out of the lot, this one and Erna Fergusson's 'Guatemala' would be ideal."

J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 N 18 '47
 650w

"Mrs. Hersey had a swell time, learned a lot, met loads of interesting people and tells all in the travel-is-so-broadening spirit. She names names, hotels, prices and puts a heap of interesting facts and figures into the mouths of her Latin acquaintances who slip it to you in their quaint English. . . . Chief flaw in the Hersey approach is that once again Latins are dished up as queer, impractical folk, oozing the old 'mañana' mood—charming, but—to be blunt about it—dumb." Arthur Goodfriend

Sat R of Lit 30:43 N 22 '47 300w

HERSKOVITS, MELVILLE JEAN, and HERSKOVITS, FRANCES (SHAPIRO). Trinidad village. 351p $4.75 Knopf

917.298 Toco, Trinidad, Negroes in Trinidad
 47-1309

"Dr. Herskovits is well known as an anthropologist who has made field studies in West Africa, the West Indies, South Africa and the U. S. More than any other scholar he emphasizes the influence of Negro culture in the New World. This present volume is a study of 'Protestant Negro culture' in the Caribbean and further documents the Herskovits thesis." (Library J) Index.

"Trinidad Village was written for a wide audience, and the professional anthropologist can but admire the skill with which the authors have met the initial difficulties that occur whenever scientific material of no great external dramatic interest is to be presented in popular form." Alfred Métraux

+ Am Anthropol 50:116 Ja '48 2000w

"The felicitous writing style of these authors is augmented throughout by faithful accounts of statements made in the picturesque words of their informants. Trinidad Village is an invaluable comparative study of New York Negro culture and life, and it is an exceedingly important book on the processes and results of acculturation in human civilization everywhere." G. E. Simpson

+ Ann Am Acad 253:252 S '47 480w

Booklist 43:221 Mr 15 '47

Reviewed by Fay-Cooper Cole

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Je 8 '47
 270w

Foreign Affairs 26:233 O '47 20w

"Will be of particular interest to college professors and college students." L. D. Reddick
 Library J 72:317 F 15 '47 70w

"'Trinidad Village' contains little of the spectacular within its pages, but it is a careful sociological study of the life of the village of Toco, of how far the villagers have come along the road to an acceptance of Western mores and methods and of how much is possible under the economic and racial deterrents. In this laboratory examination of the ordinary life of the village the authors have done a remarkable piece of work, and the book will be extremely useful to other researchers in that field." Z. N. Hurston

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20
 Mr 9 '47 1050w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:293 S '47 200w

HERVEY, HARRY CLAY. The veiled fountain. 370p $3 Putnam

47-11674

Portrait of an English musician from his childhood when his mother took him along on her singing tours; thru his adolescence, when he learned that he was not Cedric Kimberley's son; to his mature years, when, in India, he fell in love with the woman with whom his adored brother had had an affair. The background is at times Europe; at other times India.

"A strange, beautifully phrased piece of work is Harry Hervey's latest novel. . . . Touches of Indian mysticism in the story are only a part of the background and, as they are treated, should hardly incommode any reader." W. K. R.

Christian Science Monitor p16 Ja 16 '48
 480w

Kirkus 15:555 O 1 '47 170w

"London's sophistication, the continent's gaiety and India's romanticism are fused into a colorful background. A readable novel with sustained interest which will be moderately popular." E. P. Nichols

+ Library J 72:1540 N 1 '47 70w

"An unusual book, well written and carefully paced. Its many characters, however unbelievable their actions, rarely lose their hold upon the reader. Unfortunately, the plot is less convincing than those who act it. There is a deep obeisance in the direction of Hollywood when Daphne-Vivian sacrifices one of her eyes that the blinded Brian might see again and complete his symphony." H. B.

+ — N Y Times p40 N 30 '47 320w

HERZBERG, JOSEPH GABRIEL, ed. Late city edition, by Joseph G. Herzberg and members of the N. Y. herald tribune staff. 282p $3 Holt

070.4 Journalism. Newspapers 47-31261

Study of the details of the making of a city newspaper. The book is composed of twenty-nine chapters having to do with the departments of the paper from city desk to business office. Each chapter is by a man or woman who works in the department he or she describes.

Reviewed by C. W. Morton

Atlantic 181:125 Ja '48 90w

Booklist 44:82 N 1 '47

Kirkus 15:386 Jl 15 '47 80w

"An essential and fascinating addition to any library." M. C. Manley

+ Library J 72:1116 Ag '47 70w

"A lively and realistic account of the daily making of a great metropolitan newspaper. . . The book's 29 chapters cover all relevant phases of newspaper work, including some that have rarely before been described. All the chapters are competent and precise." E. D. Canham

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6
O 19 '47 650w

"This symposium, if that is what it is, was 'originally planned as a new kind of textbook for journalism students.' The students will be interested and the book will do them good. But the appeal is far wider. Every working newspaper man, of no matter how long experience, will be interested. And one suspects that many members of the general public doomed by an unkind fate to work at other jobs than journalism, will turn these pages with a sense of adventuring in a new and fascinating world." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p12 N 30 '47 600w

"The book avoids the dull, generalized tone of a textbook, and can be read for entertainment alone."

+ New Yorker 23:127 O 11 '47 80w

Reviewed by Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 19 '47
210w

HERZOG, WILHELM. From Dreyfus to Petain; the struggle of a republic; tr. by Walter Sorell. 313p $3.50 Creative age

944.08 Dreyfus, Alfred. France—Politics and government 47-31286

"Interpretation, from the left, of personalities and social forces involved in the Dreyfus case and in the Petain régime. Author is a German journalist and playwright who lived in France during the 1930s. His thesis, based on a study of French and German sources, is that the Petain Affair was the revenge of the General Staff and other conservative groups for their defeat in the Dreyfus Affair. Not a narrative history but an analysis and denunciation of enemies of the Third Republic, and a fervent and persuasive tribute to its heroes—Zola, Jaures, Clemenceau." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:131 D 1 '47

Christian Science Monitor p16 N 8 '47
550w

Current Hist 13:356 D '47 90w

"Outgrowth of considerable study, documentation, this is nonetheless a readable consideration of the Dreyfus Affair."

+ Kirkus 15:530 S 15 '47 150w

Reviewed by H. W. Hart

Library J 72:1190 S 1 '47 80w

"The many chapters on the Affaire constitute a most valuable repository of data on the issues, the forces, the developments and the personalities involved, which soon overshadow the personal drama of an undistinguished Jewish captain accused of betraying French military secrets to the enemy. . . His pen sketches of individuals—Zola, Jaures, Clemenceau, Dreyfus himself, Colonel Picquart—are brilliantly written and rich in psychological acumen. He reconstructs the controversy which split France into two hostile camps with breadth of understanding and dramatic fervor." Leo Gershoy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8
O 19 '47 900w

"Though poorly organized as historical narration, 'From Dreyfus to Petain' presents the very striking parallels between the crisis of anti-Semitism in France of the Eighteen Nineties and its recurrence in Hitler's Germany, a generation later, upon a scale almost incalculable to the human mind. . . The famous Affair that was a turning point in world history has been 'covered' in thousands of books and articles by now. Yet Mr. Herzog . . . presents for the English-reading public new and definitive testimony; that of the most important witness in the case which was not given at the time. I refer, of course, to the German Government and its chief espionage agent in France." Matthew Josephson

+ — N Y Times p6 O 19 '47 1000w

"A thorough and able review of the still astonishing Dreyfus affair."

+ New Yorker 23:113 S 27 '47 170w

"The author's preface announces his aim of scientific documentation and objective review. However, the book is neither scientific nor dispassionate. His analyses are peppered with vitriolic condemnations of the righteous arrogance of the military caste, the 'yellow' press, the clergy and the anti-Semites. . . While the scholarly acumen of this book could have scored a powerful indictment of the military castes, the autarchic power seekers, Mr. Herzog's flurried, repetitious, unacademic literary style and lack of co-ordination lessens its vital effects. Perhaps it would not have been quite as intense, but the application of more logic and less vituperation might have presented a sharper panorama of the conflicts." Beverly Wexler

— San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 12 '47
650w

HESELTINE, MARJORIE MOULTON, and DOW, ULA MAY. Basic cook book; a completely rev. and enl. ed. of Good cooking made easy and economical; with a photographic supplement. 740p $3 Houghton

641.5 Cookery 47-30352

"An enlarged edition of Good cooking made easy [Book Review Digest 1933]. A new feature is a section of excellent photographs showing steps in food preparation, baking, canning, and carving." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 43:362 Jl 15 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '47

"It is exactly what the title indicates—a basic cook book, and an excellent choice for brides and beginners. Nothing is taken for granted. . . There's nothing particularly stimulating to the imagination of the cook of long standing looking for new ideas. But for anyone who needs a first cook book, this is tops."

+ Kirkus 15:353 Jl 1 '47 180w

Wis Lib Bul 43:148 N '47

HESLOP, HAROLD. The earth beneath. 305p
$3 Day

47-11381

A story of the industrial revolution in England, following the fortunes of a family, led by a young son, who leave their ancient farm in the Yorkshire dales to go to work and earn their bread underground in the coal country.

"You will learn more from this novel about mines and miners than you will get from a dozen textbooks. . . The evils of child labor, the inadequacy or lack of safety devices, the day-to-day drudgery, are brought out in a well-written story that makes a good companion to 'How Green Was My Valley.'" R. C. Ludlow

+ Commonweal 47:309 Ja 2 '48 210w

"You will learn more from this novel about mines and miners than you will get from a dozen textbooks. . . The evils of child labor, the inadequacy or lack of safety devices, the day-to-day drudgery, are brought out in a well-written story that makes a good companion to 'How Green Was My Valley.'" R. C. Ludlow

+ Commonweal 47:309 Ja 2 '48 210w

Kirkus 15:552 O 1 '47 85w

"Mr. Heslop writes movingly and with authority, and his book has the simplicity, staunch dignity, and warmth of the men and women whose way of life he chronicles." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p26 N 23 '47 550w

"From his own experience as a miner (and from the stories told him by his father and his grandfather, who were miners before him) Harold Heslop has fashioned a gripping, passionate novel of the English coal miners who opened up the treasures of the earth beneath Durham County through the long years of the Victorian era. . . One hopes that as Heslop continues to write he will turn his attention to the problems of form. Toward the end of 'The Earth Beneath' he depends more and more on an episodic treatment of his subject. Lacking a completely thought out and dynamic structure he is not always able to integrate some of these episodes meaningfully." J. B.

+ N Y Times p12 N 2 '47 500w

"His feeling for people is true and he frequently will give us an entire character in a few lines. . . Heslop's description of the emotions of a child's first day in a mine is superb, true writing. Perhaps the novel should have been double its size? Of how many novels can one say this? This indicates the quality of 'The Earth Beneath.'" Benjamin Appel

+ Sat R of Lit 31:11 Ja 3 '48 700w

HESS, FJERIL. Fly away home. 241p $2.25
Macmillan

47-1777

Petey Hardcastle loved her western ranch home, but was lonely after her mother's death. Nevertheless after a happy winter spent in New York with friends where she was allowed to share household duties, she decided to return to the ranch and make a real home for her father. For older girls.

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Ap 10 '47 190w

"The kinds of things girls in the early teens would want to know about traveling and visiting in New York are many of them there. . . As a story, it is a little contrived for Fjeril Hess." Kirkus 14:457 S 15 '46 160w

"A warm family story, for junior high school girls, which deepens one's appreciation of the rich American scene. Should appeal especially to those interested in riding and outdoor life." Eileen Riols

+ Library J 72:326 F 15 '47 70w

"The book becomes a most useful guide for young people visiting the city or beginning to live here, while those who always have done so will respond to the charm of seeing in print places and people they scarcely thought of as guidebook material. The Rockefeller Plaza open air ice rink, Christmas shopping in six foreign quarters, the clock shop on Liberty Street, the Hudson from an adjoining ninth floor, Thanksgiving parade with big balloons, a rodeo as witnessed by a ranch girl, and the hearty pleasures of week-end camping take on new aspects when for the first time Petey sees them." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 Mr 16 '47 330w

"It's a thin story, but girls will enjoy the glimpses of big city life through a tenderfoot's eyes." M. C. Scoggin

+ N Y Times p30 Mr 9 '47 180w

HESSE, HERMANN. Steppenwolf; tr. from the German by Basil Creighton. reprint 309p $2.75
Holt

This book, by the winner of the Nobel prize for literature in 1946, was originally published in German in 1927, and translated and published in English in 1929 (Book Review Digest 1929). It is "a strange introspective study of a man, who regards himself as a dual personality . . . half man and half wolf of the steppes."

Reviewed by Emily Schossberger

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Mr 16 '47 450w

Kirkus 15:177 Mr 15 '47 130w

"The present edition is recommended for wide purchase, even though the translation by Basil Creighton does not convey the full flavor and the beautiful language of the original." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 72:468 Mr 15 '47 380w

"The publication of a new edition of 'Steppenwolf,' one of Hesse's most important earlier books, gives us opportunity to become better acquainted with this elusive, speculative and highly contemporary European writer." G. N. Shuster

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 Mr 16 '47 1300w

"Despite its analysis of the neurosis of our time, and despite the fact that Hesse is deserving of a wide audience, 'Steppenwolf' is not likely to become very widely read. Although it is written in a noble, lofty and lucid style (and ably translated), the book may strike the average reader as too 'European,' too mystical and possibly too shocking in its brutal honesty. 'Steppenwolf' will most likely remain fare for the knowing few." Claude Hill

+ N Y Times p5 Mr 16 '47 850w

San Francisco Chronicle p13 Jl 27 '47 200w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman

Sat R of Lit 30:30 Mr 29 '47 360w

Time 49:104 Mr 17 '47 440w

HETENYI, MIKLOS IMRE. Beams on elastic foundation; theory with applications in the fields of civil and mechanical engineering. 255p $4.50 Univ. of Mich.

624.21 Girders. Strains and stresses 46-27251

"This book presents the analytical techniques that have been developed—in considerable part by the author—to treat problems of beams on elastic foundations. Illustrations of the variety of technical problems to which the analysis is suited are presented, together with forty pages of numerical tables of special functions. The first nine chapters deal with beams on foundations whose reaction is purely localized. . . A chapter summarizes cases of finite beams under a variety of loading and end conditions. Following chapters discuss beams of variable rigidity or foundation modulus; combinations of transverse and axial loading, leading to a treatment of stability problems; torsion of bars; and circular arches. The final chapter summarizes the available analyses applying to foundations whose reaction is either partially or wholly continuous. The large number of examples of applications throughout the book includes railroad tracks, cylindrical tubes and pressure vessels, commutator bars, conical and spherical shells, interconnected girders, and grillage beams." U S Quarterly Bkl

"Of interest to production aircraft and other engineers." L. A. Eales

+ Library J 72:390 Mr 1 '47 60w

"The large class of readers to whom the book will be of interest is indicated by the range of applications presented. The only noteworthy defect in the make-up appears to be the lack of an index."

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:347 D '46 240w

HEUSER, MRS BEATRICE L. Times Square. 288p $2.50 Curl

A story of the Broadway theatrical world in the 1920s. It is the story of Linda Browne and Stephen Royall, of their love, their work together, their eventual achievement of fame and happiness.

Kirkus 15:9 Ja 1 '47 160w

"Rhinestone Gulch, as any confirmed novel-reader knows, is littered with the bones of writers who have tried to explore, and explain, its frenetic heartbeat. . . . When Miss Heuser takes us to a chorus-girl's lunch (at the Automat) we believe every word of the bright, hard argot; when she decks Linda in the sequins of her first big dancing part, we pick up the tempo of her jumping nerves as she waits to whirl into the merciless circle of the spotlight. It's a real pity that the author has tied it up in a package as tawdry as the Gulch itself—and as sentimental as an early-Jolson mammy song." C. V. Terry

+ — N Y Times p18 Mr 9 '47 500w

San Francisco Chronicle p12 Mr 16 '47 100w

HEWLETT, JOHN HENRY. Like moonlight on snow; the life of Simon Iturri Patiño. 292p il $3.50 McBride

B or 92 Patiño, Simon Iturri. Tin 47-1568
Biography of the little Bolivian peasant, of part Spanish, part Indian, blood, who became the famous, and notorious, "king of tin."

Reviewed by David Karno

Chicago Sun Book Week p17 F 9 '47 370w

"The present work is an attempt to penetrate the fog and give us the true story of this man's rise to wealth and power, his place in Bolivia and his and Bolivia's place in the world. Unfortunately the author has not worked hard enough on what would in any case be an extremely difficult job. Apocryphal legends, sometimes labeled as such, too often take the place of the facts." B. D. Wolfe

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p29 Mr 23 '47 900w

"Mr. Hewlett indicates that the story of Patiño is necessarily incomplete because no one has access to the full facts of the Bolivian's business or private life. But he does not indicate what sources he used in writing the biography, and consequently the book somewhat lacks conviction." Ruth Teiser

San Francisco Chronicle p13 Mr 2 '47 400w

Springf'd Union p11 Ag 20 '47 140w

HEWLETT, JOHN HENRY. Wild grape. (Whittlesby house publication) 364p $3 McGraw

47-31233

Story of life in a Southern village. The chief character is little Deel, a "white Negro," child of a Negro mother and a white man. Deel, because of her fair skin and golden hair and eyes, is an outcast from both races and her childhood is spent in semi-obscurity with her mother and fiercely protective grandparents. Finally with the help of a Catholic doctor (who has come into conflict with the Ku Klux) Deel escapes to the North and the possibility of "passing."

Kirkus 15:322 Je 15 '47 170w

"Quieter, less violent than other books about racial prejudices, and presenting the problem from a different angle. Weak plot with dubious solution, yet novel points up another aspect of racial prejudices." E. P. Nichols

+ — Library J 72:1107 Ag '47 70w

"The book is a strange combination of long-winded fantasy and exaggerated melodrama. Some of the fantasy is warm and appealing, but the melodrama verges on farce, so the balance is upset repeatedly. Virtually every white character in the book is caricatured, and too often the secondary Negro characters give the appearance of cartoon figures. Yet it is a serious book, not a comedy by any means, and occasionally the drama reaches a good emotional pitch. It simply lacks balance, and thereby it loses the impact of its essentially valid dramatic situations." Hal Borland

— + N Y Times p32 O 5 '47 360w

"'Wild Grape' is no more than a fair novel. Mr. Hewlett often writes downright badly. . . . There is no question, however, that the author's heart is in the right place, that the nastinesses you encounter in his novel are characteristic of the place and time, that he clarifies often the ingrained attitude of far too many Southerners where the Negro is concerned. Maybe I'm wrong, but it's my feeling that what Mr. Hewlett needs is an editor." J. H. Jackson

— + San Francisco Chronicle p18 S 24 '47 700w

HEYER, GEORGETTE (MRS G. R. ROUGIER). Reluctant widow. 279p $2.75 Putnam

47-15519

The adventures of an impoverished girl of good family in Regency England. Thru a mistake Elinor finds herself married and widowed in a single night, but the mistake was a lucky one.

Booklist 43:205 Mr 1 '47

"Pleasant, preposterous period piece. . . . It is a novel of pure escape, based on the perennially 'successful' Cinderella theme. . . . All this strains the reader's credulity time and again. But if you want to read to avoid a chilling trip to the neighborhood movie—maybe this is your meat." Ricker Van Metre

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p11 Mr 2 '47 240w

Kirkus 15:11 Ja 1 '47 150w

"A good romantic novel. Recommended." M. P. McKay

+ Library J 72:319 F 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p25 F 23 '47 160w

N Y Times p39 Mr 16 '47 140w

"The plot is excellent, and Miss Heyer's treatment of the romantic interest is strictly in the Jeffery Farnol tradition."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Mr 23 '47 120w

HEYWOOD, ROBERT B., ed. Works of the mind, by Mortimer J. Adler [and others] ed. for the Committee on social thought; with a pref. by John U. Nef. 246p $4 Univ. of Chicago press

155 Creation (literary, artistic, etc.)

47-11992

The text of twelve lectures delivered at the University of Chicago in 1946 by twelve eminent scholars, artists, and administrators. Contents: The concept of work, by Y. R. Simon; The artist, by Marc Chagall; The sculptor, by Alfeo Faggi; The architect, by F. L. Wright; The musician, by Arnold Schoenberg; The statesman, by Heinrich Brüning; The legislator, by J. W. Fulbright; The administrator, by R. M. Hutchins; The scientist, by S. Chandrasekhar; The mathematician, by John von Neumann; The historian, by C. H. McIlwain; The philosopher, by M. J. Adler.

Reviewed by Bess Sondel

Chicago Sun Book Week p9A D 3 '47 350w

"As in the case of so many products of the St. Johns-Chicago school, the value of some parts much exceeds the value of the whole. The whole is a stunt, the circus character of which is hidden by the fancy dialectics of

HEYWOOD, ROBERT B.—Continued
 Profs. Yves R. Simon and Mortimer J. Adler in the first and last lectures of the series. Several of the individual acts, however, are well worth the price of admission." James Burnham
 N Y Times p6 N 30 '47 800w
 School & Society 66:366 N 8 '47 10w

HIBBERT, ELEANOR (JEAN PLAIDY, pseud). Beyond the Blue mountains. 380p $3 Appleton-Century

47-11599

A long story of three generations of English women in England and pioneer Australia, and the men who loved them.

"Richly peopled with lifelike and colorful characters, the story rolls on and on from one dilemma to the next, not quite to the point of reader exhaustion."

Kirkus 15:442 Ag 15 '47 130w

"Author deals with a wealth of material which though second hand, deserves better treatment. Complete waste of time and effort. Not recommended." E. H. Kennedy

— Library J 72:1375 O 1 '47 70w

"This novel sings of illegitimate ladies and philandering men, and a longwinded, blowsy song it is. . . From Miss Plaidy's book several morals can be drawn, but the chief of these seems to be: follow your heart and emigrate." B. V. W.

N Y Times p24 D 7 '47 550w

HICKEY, JOHN HOSFORD, and BEACH, PRISCILLA ALDEN. Know your dog. 337p il $3 Harper

636.7 Dogs

Ag47-30

Comprehensive book telling how to select, train, and care for dogs. Part one gives the history and development of more than 100 breeds of dogs. Part two discusses the selection and care of a puppy. Part three deals with feeding and general care, and part four explains the origin of the dog and compares the classification of dogs in various countries. Glossary. Bibliography. Index.

"Minor editorial inaccuracies."

Booklist 44:179 Ja 15 '48

Kirkus 15:383 Jl 15 '47 80w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 73:41 Ja 1 '48 30w

"The book is exceptionally well arranged and indexed and the authors never go 'cute,' as writers about dogs often do."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 D 21 '47 60w

Wis Lib Bul 43:149 N '47

HICKOK, ELIZA MERRILL. Quiz kids. 203p il $2.50 Houghton

791.4 Quiz kids (radio program) 47-30153

Story of the origin and development of the Quiz Kid radio program with anecdotes of the children who have been on the program, their travels, parties and good times. The author began as research worker and is now assistant program director, "doubling" as nurse, courier and public relations expert.

Booklist 43:218 Mr 15 '47

"There isn't a dull chapter in the book. I can't think of anyone who wouldn't find it extremely interesting." Wendell Johnson

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Ap 27 '47 550w

"A very human story of some inhuman intelligences in short pants, this has many moments of comedy as well as curiosity appeal."

+ Kirkus 14:631 D 15 '46 160w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20 Ap 6 '47 230w

Reviewed by Nancy Ladd

N Y Times p45 Ap 13 '47 410w

School & Society 65:367 My 17 '47 20w

Wis Lib Bul 43:85 Ap '47

HICKS, JOSEPH SKEAN. Low-pressure laminating of plastics; assisted by R. J. Francis. 162p il $4.50 Reinhold

668.4 Plastic materials

47-4905

"First usable text for the beginner interested in the field of low pressure and contact pressure laminating of plastics. Procedure necessary to fabricate a laminate and pitfalls to avoid. Numerous references, sources of materials with complete addresses are listed directly under subject discussed. Includes some patents, cost estimating and properties of various materials. Illustrated." Library J

"The authors evidently learned the hard way of experimentation and pioneering and have collected much valuable information which they are passing on to the readers. This book should serve as an ideal text for students just beginning in the industry, as well as for engineers and manufacturers desiring to acquaint themselves with this new field. . . The information under 'Looking to the Future' in the last chapter is both informative and stimulating." Egmont Arens

+ Chem & Eng N 25:2228 Ag 4 '47 320w

Chem Eng 54:278 S '47 100w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:891 Je 1 '47 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:35 Ap '47

HIERONYMUS BOSCH. See Bosch, H.

HIGHET, HELEN (MACINNES). See MacInnes, H.

HILDEBRANDT, FRANZ. Melanchthon: alien or ally? 125p $2.50 Macmillan

270.6 Melanchthon, Philip

[A46-3804]

"This analysis of the 'silver' of Melanchthon against the 'gold' of Luther is very much a specialist study for theologians and historians. It is divided into chapters on Melanchthon's various concessions—to tradition, reason, law, power, opposition—made in his struggle for Lutheranism; for this friend of Luther's, who survived him, was 'a mediator by nature.' The book consists of quotations in mixed English (translated from German), Latin and Greek from Melanchthon, with comments on his opinions. A parallel is drawn between his compromise with the State and that of the Church under Hitler." Spec

"Despite omissions the work offers a highly illuminating and suggestive treatment." R. H. Bainton

+ Am Hist R 52:773 Jl '47 550w

Spec 177:376 O 11 '46 140w

"It is one of the merits of Dr. Hildebrandt's work that, without detriment to the integrity of his analysis, he writes of 1546 with the events of the last thirteen years ever present before him; he studies the dilemma Melanchthon had to face with the knowledge that it was forced anew on Germany in our own time, the outcome of four centuries 'concessions to power.'"

Times [London] Lit Sup p646 D 28 '46 600w

HILL, MARTIN. See Hill, W. M.

HILL, RUSSELL. Struggle for Germany. 260p $3 Harper

940.5343 Germany—History—Allied occupation, 1945- . World war, 1939-1945—Peace 47-30601

The inside picture of Germany today as it appears to an American newspaper correspondent. Mr Hill has had six years experience in Europe, first as a war correspondent in several localities, and then as Berlin correspondent of the New York Herald Tribune from July, 1945, to June, 1946. Index.

Booklist 44:31 S 15 '47

Reviewed by David Karno

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ag 31 '47
500w

"Russell Hill plows no new ground on Germany, but his furrows are straight. And if his seeds should grow to harvest, they would help to establish the kind of Germany for which the war was fought. . . . He presents a balanced, but conventional picture of the problems which have followed in the wake of victory."

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 S 4 '47
270w

"Not easy reading, but every page is packed with challenge for thoughtful internationalists."

Kirkus 15:328 Je 15 '47 150w

"Valuable, thought-provoking book by journalist who has been on the scene throughout the occupation." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 72:1103 Ag '47 140w

Reviewed by Therese Pol

New Repub 117:26 O 13 '47 300w

"The book is not another book about a correspondent's 'experiences.' It is a soberly told account of the world's great problem child—Germany. . . . This reviewer personally cannot go along with some of Mr. Hill's views and conclusions about Germany, though they probably represent majority opinion in this country. But he has been fascinated, as all who read this book will be, by the wealth of information about one of the chief problems of our time. . . . Mr. Hill's views are certainly open to argument. But his information on Germany is fascinating and extremely valuable to all Americans." W. L. Shirer

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3
Ag 24 '47 1600w

Reviewed by E. W. Fox

N Y Times p7 S 14 '47 850w

New Yorker 23:87 S 6 '47 120w

"While Russell Hill is critical of much that we have done in Germany, he is no sentimentalist, and not for a moment has he been taken in by the Germans. If you want to know how the defeated and devastated Germany is living and feeling and thinking today, read his book." A. W. Dulles

+ Sat R of Lit 30:13 S 6 '47 360w

Reviewed by Donald Derby

Spring'd Republican p18A O 12 '47
650w

"Much of his general argument has necessarily been overtaken by events, but not a little remains that is still instructive, while the fairness and balance of his comments throughout make a very good impression. On the search for agreement on the level of German industry, for instance, on the inconsistencies displayed in the various zones—and in each individual zone—in application of the policy of denazification, and on the subject of food as 'politics' in Germany Mr. Hill is a candid and illuminating witness."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p263 My 31
'47 420w

Wis Lib Bul 43:152 N '47

HILL, WILLIAM MARTIN. Economic and financial organization of the League of nations; a survey of twenty-five years' experience. (Carnegie endowment for int. peace. Division of int. law. Studies in the adm. of int. law and organization) 168p $2 Carnegie endowment

341.1 League of nations. Economic and financial organization

"This volume is the most recent and probably the most complete summary of the work of the economic and financial organization of the League of Nations. Opening with a brief review of the place of the organization in the League structure, it then outlines the background of international cooperation in the field prior to the League. There follows an analysis of what the League did, first during the financial and economic reconstruction in the nineteen-twenties, subsequently during the depression of the nineteen-thirties, and the nature of its activities during the brief period before World War II got under way. There is also an examination of the structure of the Economic, Financial, and Transit Department and a record of its activities, 1939-45, while the headquarters were located at Princeton." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Index.

Reviewed by R. C. Lawson

Am Pol Sci R 40:1225 D '46 550w

Reviewed by D. M. Levitan

Columbia Law R 47:165 Ja '47 600w

Foreign Affairs 25:337 Ja '47 20w

"Limitations of space have excluded many details, but these can better be studied in the original documents. The book is the most complete available treatment of its subject, and should be particularly useful as a background for an understanding of the economic and financial problems and organization of the United Nations."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:301 D '46 200w

HILL, WILLIAM MARTIN. Immunities and privileges of international officials; the experience of the League of nations. 281p $2.50 Carnegie endowment

341.1 League of nations—Privileges and immunities. International officials and employees

"Statement of the special regulations governing officials of the League during the lifetime of that body, by a former member of the administration. Many of the rulings are analyzed. Included are annexes containing selected documents on the same topic." (Current Hist) Index.

"This book provides us with an excellent background for study of the matter as it develops in the future." C. M. Frasure

+ Am Pol Sci R 41:1249 D '47 380w

Current Hist 13:228 O '47 40w

HILLYER, ROBERT SILLIMAN. Poems for music, 1917-1947. 83p $2.50 Knopf 811

47-5283

Seventy purely lyric poems written since 1917, and selected by the author as those he most wants to keep.

Reviewed by Peter Viereck

Atlantic 180:130 O '47 800w

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 S 21 '47
50w

"Robert Hillyer has something to say and he says it with disarming simplicity, a skilled, adroit simplicity, achieved only by long acquaintance with a medium and the mastery of it. The tireless search for the right, not necessarily the strange, but certainly the right, word; the painstaking struggle of the artist for the best combination of sounds; in fact, the obvious submergence of self in work, all indicate the genuine gift. Only the genuine can stand the test." Pearl Strachan

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 O 11 '47
500w

Kirkus 15:461 Ag 15 '47 80w

Reviewed by Gerald MacDonald

Library J 72:1687 D 1 '47 70w

"Robert Hillyer has always held the Elizabethan point of view that poetry and music are inseparable. . . . His traditional outlook puts him in the main stream of lyric poets from earliest English poets to the present. Campion would have found much to like in 'Poems for Music,' and so would Robert Bridges, the purity of language, and the clarity of music would be familiar to both and worth their praise." John Holmes

+ N Y Times p4 S 14 '47 800w

Reviewed by Alfred Kay

San Francisco Chronicle p25 S 28 '47
110w

"The reviewer admires the terse grace and disciplined elegance of many of the seventy poems which Mr. Hillyer has selected from the work of half a lifetime. There is a great deal in the little book which is skilful, unpretentious, and poignant." Leonard Bacon

+ Sat R of Lit 30:23 S 20 '47 400w

HILTON, JAMES. Nothing so strange. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 308p $2.75 Little 47-31200

"The story told has its beginning in 1936 in a well-set-up prewar London house, and its ending on an emergency landing field in the California desert on the day the atom bomb was dropped on Hiroshima. And in the meantime, consonant with the mobility of its time and spirit, its moves from London to a laboratory in Vienna, to Prague, to an F. B. I. office in New York City, to Washington, to Oak Ridge, Tenn., and to Hollywood." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

Booklist 44:68 O 15 '47

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon

Chicago Sun Book Week p8 O 19 '47
500w

Reviewed by M. W. Stoer

Christian Science Monitor p16 O 20 '47
650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 S '47

"A good story even if the tricks are somewhat too evident. It has real value in that it recalls to the public mind what nazl methods were like, and, above all, it brings into full view the dilemma which faces the true scientist to-day." C. H. Bishop

+ Commonweal 47:233 D 12 '47 260w

"Good reading—though lacking in any particular emotional impact on the reader."

+ Kirkus 15:473 S 1 '47 260w

"The plot is expertly handled by one skilled in the techniques of storytelling." E. P. Nichols

+ Library J 72:1374 O 1 '47 100w

"So warmly and artfully has Mr. Hilton built his story, so skilfully has he made use of interesting character and tense suspense, and so infectious is his own dedication to the idea that vitalizes his novel, that 'Nothing So Strange,' in spite of its serious moral and intellectual intent, has all the dynamic interest of one of the better imagined, better written mystery stories." F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4
O 19 '47 1250w

"Mark Bradley is rather an implacable character for Hilton—whose heroes have been largely vulnerable, unassuming and conventionally ethical. And yet the novel that surrounds him is an intelligent, sensitive, quiet approach to the timeliest and most pressing of contemporary themes. It is none the less impressive for its deftness, none the less appealing for its seriousness. It's good Hilton and good sense." M. M.

+ N Y Times p4 O 19 '47 700w

"Smoothly written, but very, very flimsy."

+ New Yorker 23:124 O 18 '47 140w

Reviewed by Guy Patrick

San Francisco Chronicle p13 O 26 '47
700w

"One should do Mr. Hilton the credit of supposing that he had hoped, when embarking upon this novel, to say something pertinent about our contemporary anxieties. Upon this supposition, he deserves a round of tempered applause. Had he treated his readers like adults, the applause might have been quite rousing." George Dangerfield

Sat R of Lit 30:16 D 13 '47 600w

"An impelling story developed largely through conversation yet somehow lacking the charm of 'Random Harvest' and 'So Well Remembered.' Maybe it will seem more satisfying as a movie." D. B. B.

+ Springfield Republican p10B N 16 '47
240w

Time 50:104 O 27 '47 300w

Wis Lib Bul 43:153 N '47

HILTON, JOHN W. Sonora sketch book. 333p il $5 Macmillan

917.21 Sonora, Mexico—Description and travel 47-2721

A mixture of memories, conversations, and sketches portraying life in the state of Sonora, in northwestern Mexico, adjoining Arizona, where the author spent much time for about eight years.

"Mr. Hilton is neither a brilliant writer nor an accomplished artist, but his anecdotal stories have an intimate fireside quality, and his tight little drawings neatly limn characters and settings. . . . Although he cannot be included in the writing fraternity of more worldly and less jaws-agape excursionists such as Henry James, Richard Halliburton, and Margaret Halsey, Mr. Hilton has his say for adventure as he finds it over in his corner of the country. In addition to finding them exhilarating, he has succeeded in sharing some of his light-hearted memories." W. C. Estler

+ Atlantic 179:158 My '47 550w

Booklist 43:13 S 1 '47

Reviewed by R. A. Florsheim

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Je 22 '47
320w

Christian Century 64:625 My 14 '47
80w

"Hilton writes well in anecdote and narrative, he shares the richness of the successive experiences. Episodic, with some vignettes apart from the pattern of the whole—but the final impression is of richly colored panorama, lovingly set forth."

+ Kirkus 15:52 Ja 15 '47 170w

"Proves again that artists make excellent writers. . . . In short, a delight." E. L. Lewis

+ Library J 72:458 My 15 '47 70w

"If traffic were only a little less hazardous, the appearance of 'Sonora Sketch Book' would call for dancing in the streets. . . . If you have never visited Mexico this book will whet your desire and define the spirit in which the adventure will yield its deepest enjoyment. If you have been herded through its cities in conventional tourist fashion, you will have an inkling of how much you missed." Lisle Bell

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12
Ap 20 '47 270w

Reviewed by Milton Bracker

N Y Times p21 Je 29 '47 400w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Mr 25 '47
750w

"Here at last is a book about Mexico entirely devoid of either patronizing condescension or starry-eyed whimsy. The book, moreover, is well titled for it is just that—a book of delightful little sketches." I. T. Sanderson

+ Sat R of Lit 30:27 J1 5 '47 110w

HIMES, CHESTER B. Lonely crusade. 398p $3
Knopf

47-30774

"A bitter story about a thoughtful young Negro who becomes a union organizer at a West Coast airplane factory during the recent war. Unlike most novels that explore the difficulties of the black man, this one does not stack the cards too obviously against the hero; the union members cultivate him for political purposes, and his employer is friendly to him in the hope of using him against the Communists. The tragedy of this particular man is a psychological one—a growing despair over being black, which hamstrings him in every human relationship." New Yorker

"Mr. Himes's story, for all its hard realism and able writing, reads like a melodrama, with the Communist Party the real villain and the deputy sheriffs the actual murderers. His story also suffers from a form of elephantiasis. He tries to embrace too much and his themes cross and get mixed up, so that in the end Lee Gordon's tragedy could just as well have been that of a white man." Stoyan Christowe

+ Atlantic 180:138 O '47 650w

"The communists might not care for this book, for Mr. Himes has set them off in gin-mills where the usual intrigue that goes on among small-fry revolutionists crops up repeatedly in the life of Mr. Gordon. What constitutes the 'lonely crusade' in Mr. Gordon's fiddling around with the communists is not apparent, for his morality is as difficult to define as theirs. . . . There is some talk about Jewish-Negro relations, too. The point that Mr. Himes drives home quite well is that the majority of Negroes who talk about the problem tend to give vent to expressions that by sound and fury, are anti-Semitic. A closer reading of this book might suggest that Negroes are fed up on the prattle about the unity of all minority groups." George Streator

— + Commonweal 46:604 O 3 '47 850w

"Although the book is interesting, and the characters well done, here are far too many of them, and the numerous counterplots could easily assume epic proportions."

— + Kirkus 15:372 J1 15 '47 170w

"Much too extended and repetitious. The drama is not so much tragically inevitable as tragically predictable. For the most part the writing is inept," John Farrelly

— New Repub 117:30 O 6 '47 550w

"Chester Himes's talent, apparent to many in 'If He Hollers Let Him Go,' has produced an even more provocative book this time." Arna Bontemps

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 S 7 '47 650w

"The material Mr. Himes is working with here is similar to that he used in an earlier novel, 'If He Hollers,' although the present volume is more complex, broader in scope. Even so, it is rather special, limited field. Mr. Himes can write with power and effectiveness (when he keeps his philosophical dialogue to a minimum), and it would be interesting to see what he could do with other aspects of Negro life in America and with a protagonist less psychopathic than Lee Gordon." N. K. Burger

N Y Times p20 S 14 '47 470w

"Mr. Himes considers this problem intelligently and convincingly; regrettably, though, he seems to think an ugly narrative is necessarily a powerful one."

+ — New Yorker 23:120 S 13 '47 130w

Reviewed by E. L. McKittrick

Sat R of Lit 30:25 O 25 '47 550w

HINDUS, MAURICE GERSHON. Bright passage. 370p il $3 Doubleday

940.53144437 Reconstruction (1939-)—Czechoslovakia, Czechoslovakia 47-2572

"A political travelogue dealing with postwar Czechoslovakia. Mr. Hindus is enthusiastic about the Czech Catholic-Communist coalition, which he reports is working out fine, and he believes that with such measures as the nationalization of industry the Czechs are achieving a revolution by evolution that will result in a more or less conservative Socialism. He grows stern only when he warns the Western powers not to attempt to wean the country away from its Russian alliance. If the Czechs had to choose between the East and the West, he says, they would unhesitatingly go with the U.S.S.R., for they would consider that their sole chance of surviving as a nation." (New Yorker) No index.

Reviewed by Josef Hanč

Ann Am Acad 253:215 S '47 350w

Booklist 43:270 My 1 '47

Reviewed by W. F. Swindler

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Ap 6 '47 600w

Reviewed by Henry Sowerby

Christian Science Monitor p18 Ap 16 '47 600w

Foreign Affairs 25:704 J1 '47 30w

"Hindus gives us back our faith in a fascinating, convincing and newsworthy appraisal of the country, its leaders, its people, its way of life—and its challenging and constructive compromise with those elements that its geographical position in Europe entail. There is a satisfying balance between straight factual record, opinion and that sense of color and drama and human interest which is characteristic of Hindus' earlier books on Russia."

+ Kirkus 15:47 Ja 15 '47 220w

"Recommended," W. A. Kalenich

+ Library J 72:458 Mr 15 '47 70w

"The writing is as genuine as the Czech soil itself. The book is to be recommended to all who desire to understand Czechoslovakia, its precarious position between East and West, its people, and its new republic." M. W. Fodor

+ Nation 164:488 Ap 26 '47 800w

"The Bright Passage is the first postwar report on what has been happening at that crossroads between Russian and Western Europe. It is a book that every American, anxious for the survival of democracy in Europe and befogged as much by the omissions as by the commissions of our press, should read carefully. That is not an unpleasant task, because Hindus has caught the color and character of the Czech people and the story he has to tell is exciting." William Walton

+ New Repub 116:32 Ap 7 '47 1250w

Reviewed by William Walton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Mr 30 '47 1300w

"This book is a paean to the Czechs, written in Hindus' absorbing style. . . It seems to this reviewer, however, that in spite of all the admiration the Czechs deserve, a more critical appraisal of some features of their policy would have been in order." Emil Lengyel

N Y Times p10 Ap 27 '47 800w

+ New Yorker 23:106 Ap 5 '47 130w

Reviewed by A. D. Doughty

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ap 28 '47 800w

"Maurice Hindus's exciting new book can be read as a first-hand report on Czechoslovakia's post-war revival, its leaders, and its people. As such it is colorful, well documented, and important; the book can—and should—be read as a significant approach to the most intense questions of our times." R. E. Lauterbach

+ Sat R of Lit 30:12 Ap 5 '47 950w

HINKLEY, LAURA L. Ladies of literature. 374p $3.50 Hastings house

928.2 Women as authors 47-2277

Biographical and critical studies of six English women authors: Fanny Burney; Jane Austen; Charlotte and Emily Brontë; Elizabeth Barrett Browning; and George Eliot. "Throughout the book, there are shrewd and suggestive comparisons of one or another of these ladies with the rest; and, at the close, there is an interesting series of comparisons—of the length of their lives, their respective degree of good looks, their environments, their families, their love affairs (if any), and so forth." (Christian Science Monitor)

Booklist 43:308 Je 1 '47

Reviewed by Robert Halsband

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Je 29 '47 350w

"Miss Hinkley writes with sympathy and understanding; and if, also, at times, with something like sentimentality, that tone has its appropriateness. It requires no persuasion of hers to make us read the best of Miss Burney, all of Miss Austen and of Emily Brontë, and parts of Charlotte Brontë. Probably she will not persuade many readers to turn again to 'Aurora Leigh' or to 'Daniel Deronda'; in most libraries, Mrs. Browning and George Eliot gather dust upon high, unsought shelves. But she may suggest second thoughts and revised judgments to some of her readers; and, in any case, she carries conviction when she reveals the essential nobility of these two, as of the others in this small, select company." S. C. C.

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Ap 30 '47 440w

"Like Mrs. Stebbins' Victorian Album (1946) this is not a book all libraries will need, but also like that, it is a pleasant and rewarding book for the general reader." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 71:1805 D 15 '46 120w

"Miss Hinkley is at her best when she appraises the contributions of her literary ladies in the light of their own world, though one is startled by such expressions as 'like so many zombies,' 'two-timing,' 'how come,' 'it floored him.' She is at her worst when she treats the individual works, for the most part, with a synopsis as the point of departure." Frances Winwar

HINKLEY, LAURA L.—Continued

+ — N Y Times p18 Ap 20 '47 800w
San Francisco Chronicle p23 My 11 '47 60w
Wis Lib Bul 43:81 My '47

HINKSON, PAMELA. Irish gold. 326p $3.50
Knopf

914.15 Country life—Ireland. Ireland—Description and travel 47-1069

A study of the Irish countryside and the Irish people, written by the only daughter of the Irish poet, Katharine Tynan Hinkson. Altho she was born in London, Miss Hinkson spent most of her childhood at the family home in County Mayo. "She makes her reader feel the charm of Irish country life as seen from the vantage room of the Big House; the sociability of turf smoke rising out of cottage chimneys in the early morning." (N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R)

Booklist 43:221 Mr 15 '47

"It may be said that this book is written by an epicure with a palate sensitive to the line and color, to the sounds and scents that bring to life the Irish background of an event, a character, a bit of whimsey or folklore." Margaret Meagher

+ Cath World 165:91 Ap '47 400w

"'Irish Gold' is a beautiful, reflective book or a silly, romantic one, depending upon where you sit." L. K.

Chicago Sun Book Week p8 Ag 3 '47 230w

"This book 'follows a wandering road.' It is a pleasant road, a companionable road; and, as one journeys along it, he will enjoy the azure skies, the flight of birds, the understanding dogs and the horses—isn't Ireland famous for its horses?—stepping lightly through the countryside with riders astride their backs... The book has an easy-going charm, and it will help the reader to understand what has been called the youngest and yet the oldest of European states." W. W. Cunningham

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 F 13 '47 430w

Reviewed by F. D. Cohalan

Commonweal 46:100 My 9 '47 350w

"Altogether charming and to be recommended unhesitatingly to readers who like travel and description." M. H. Zipprich

+ Library J 72:223 F 1 '47 70w

"A book which, rambling and awkward, is yet a nostalgic expression of Irish country-house life much more personal than Somerville and Ross, and going deeper. It sounds a note which has not been heard in modern Anglo-Irish fiction, because the writers of the best of that fiction have not known the life of the Big House. . . In spite of its faults this is a warm, rich book which will bring hours of deep satisfaction to those able to respond to its insight into place and character. The winsomeness of a race with little use for common sense made them believe that perhaps after all the longest way round was the shortest way home. And perhaps they were right." Horace Reynolds

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 F 9 '47 800w

Reviewed by P. J. Barnicle

N Y Times p24 Ap 13 '47 700w

"By every consideration, 'Irish Gold' is a delightful book, and praise is due the author's publishers for inviting her to write 'anything you like about Ireland.'" Edith James

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 F 23 '47 350w

HINMAN, CHAUNCEY WEED. Practical designs for drilling, milling, and tapping tools. 2d ed 416p $4.50 McGraw

621.952 Drilling and boring machinery. Milling machinery 46-6939

"An illustrated reference book for designing, drafting, and using modern types of drilling, milling, and tapping tools." (Subtitle)

This second edition contains much additional material and a list of visual aids. For first edition see Book Review Digest 1939.

Booklist 43:188 F 15 '47

"Not only will beginners obtain from it the essentials of such tools, but experienced tool designers should get from it many new ideas. This is the second edition of the book, and it brings in some of the new methods devised under the urgency of production for World War II." James Stokley

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p28 F 23 '47 70w

"The second edition of this work is greatly improved over the first edition. The increase in the number of pages (245) only partly indicates the amount of new material that has been added, for the type has been re-set so that the average page contains about twenty per cent more material. Some of the original text has been revised, and a large amount of new textual and illustrative matter has been incorporated. . . So many tools are illustrated and so much information is given on details of operation that the book should be useful also to persons whose interest in the subject is selection or operation of drilling, milling and tapping tools rather than their design."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 32:11 Ja '47

HINSDALE, HARRIET. Robert Louis Stevenson; a play. 165p $3 Caxton printers

812 Stevenson, Robert Louis—Drama

47-2990

A three-act play, based on the life of Robert Louis Stevenson. The first act is staged in England in 1886 & 1887; the second in New York; and the third in Samoa in the 1890's.

"Actually makes a contribution to Stevenson lore. Recommended for drama collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 72:323 F 15 '47 20w

Springf'd Union p11 Jl 11 '47 240w

HINSHAW, DAVID. Experiment in friendship. 147p il $2.50 Putnam

940.54779471 World war, 1939-1945—Civilian relief. Friends, Society of, Finland 47-2932

In the summer of 1946 the author went to Finland, at his own expense, to inspect the work of the American Friends service committee there. His book throws light on the character of the Finns and their country, as well as on the work of the American Quakers.

Booklist 43:306 Je 1 '47

Christian Science Monitor p19 Je 7 '47 650w

"An Experiment in Friendship is a plain, straightforward and unadorned epic of an heroic Christianity in action." W. P. Sears

+ Churchman 161:19 O 1 '47 120w

Kirkus 15:55 Ja 15 '47 170w

"Some readers who have been inclined to serve in relief work may find it a helpful vocational guide and almost everyone will be heartened by the physical and moral reconstruction of a homeless people as it is here reported." G. D. McDonald

+ Library J 72:458 Mr 15 '47 90w

"A case-history of permanent value."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 My 4 '47 160w

Reviewed by D. C. Fisher

+ N Y Times p18 Jl 27 '47 800w

"A document of social importance." Harry Hansen

+ Survey G 36:254 Ap '47 1900w

HINSHELWOOD, CYRIL NORMAN. Chemical kinetics of the bacterial cell. 284p il $6.75 Oxford

589.95 Bacteriology

Med47-982

"Here is a comprehensive and able exploration of the possibilities of applying the knowledge and laws of chemistry, particularly physical chemistry, to the analysis of the life processes of bacteria. The problem is first discussed from a generalized viewpoint, then specific aspects such as the growth cycle, the effects of drugs, adaptation to drugs, variation and selection, and cell division, are treated specifically. The book is written chiefly for readers who are familiar with mathematical and chemical terminology." N Y New Tech Bks

"Technically the book is well printed and free from obvious uncorrected errors. Altogether, this book effectively reconciles available, but often superficially unrelated data on the basis of simple theoretical considerations. A more extensive discussion relating stereochemical configuration and energetics as well as discussion of the significance of the logistic would have been appreciated by this reviewer. The evidence supporting some of the postulated mechanisms is sometimes admittedly scanty. And, even if some of the phenomena discussed can be mathematically described in terms of the assumptions made further experimentation is, as the author indicates, necessary for complete confirmation. Nevertheless, it represents a real contribution to an understanding of living matter." R. M. Ferry

+ — Am Chem Soc J 69:2251 S '47 1050w
N Y New Tech Bks 32:44 J1 '47

HIRSHBERG, HERBERT SIMON, and MELINAT, CARL HERMAN. Subject guide to United States government publications. 228p $5 A.L.A.

015.73 U.S.—Government publications—Bibliography 47-4518

"This Guide represents a selection of those books and pamphlets, most of them published during the past twenty years, believed to be most generally useful in libraries. There has been no attempt to include all publications on a particular subject. The emphasis is on serials, directories, bibliographies, and handbooks which have great potential reference use."—Preface. Short annotations for titles that are not self-explanatory. Adequate cross references. The compilation provides a simplified, practical approach to the complexity of government documents." Booklist

"To the graduate student and to the specialist engaged in exhaustive research, the Guide will seem fragmentary and inadequate, except as a place in which to look for first clues. To the general student-body in school and college and to the many interested organizations of the general public, as well as to the reference librarians who assist them, it will be like a streamlined train for time-saving." A. J. Lien

+ — Am Pol Sci R 41:1031 O '47 260w
Booklist 44:3 S 1 '47

"Unfortunately, there are a number of instances where necessary revisions to September 1946 have not been made or pertinent notes have been omitted. . . However, the compilers have made serious efforts to prepare a useful guide. It unlocks a wealth of information found in Federal Government publications, especially for the selective depository libraries and the small and medium-sized public and college libraries. Although a certain percentage of the Guide will undoubtedly go out of date fairly soon, the fact remains that it will be indicative for some time of agencies which have been, and will continue to be, interested in the subject matter included for each agency." J. K. Wilcox

+ — Library J 73:52 Ja 1 '48 900w
School & Society 66:95 Ag 2 '47 20w

HISCOX, GARDNER DEXTER, ed. Twentieth century book of formulas, processes and trade secrets; a valuable reference book for the home, factory, office, laboratory and the workshop; 1945 rev. and enl. ed. by T. O'Connor Sloane. 867p $4 Henley

603 Receipts. Industrial arts 45-11187

"About 10,000 formulas are grouped by broad subjects, alphabetically arranged, such as, Adhesives, Alloys, Beverages, Celluloid, Ceramics, Cleaning Preparations and Methods, Cosmetics, Dyes, Enameling, Essences and Extracts, Glass, Hair Preparations, Inks, Insecticides, Leather, Metals, Paints, Photography, Plating, Polishes, Rubber, Soaps, Varnishes, Waterproofing, Wines and Liquors, and Wood. An index by specific headings is provided to enable the reader to find formulas which are not easily located under the general subject. Supplementary information includes a glossary of chemicals and a discussion of useful workshop and laboratory methods. This is the latest 'revision' of the book which was originally published in 1907." Subscription Bks Bul

"A page-by-page comparison of the 1907 edition with the current volume clearly shows that the revisions consist largely of omissions of obsolete cross references to make room for the insertion of a formula or a recipe. Except for these minor changes and a few interlarded pages numbered A, B, C, D, to give them sequence, it seems apparent that the same plates have been used to print the 1945 edition that were used in the 1907 edition. These changes have been scattered through the various editions down through the years. . . Since practically everything that was in the original 1907 edition is still in the current volume, there are many out-of-date formulas in the book and the chemical terminology is often outmoded. The inclusion of such material might be justified, however, inasmuch as many of the old formulas are still useful. . . In spite of the defects the book does contain much information of value to the user who knows how to select his materials and methods and when to reject obsolete processes. The section of Photography may make the book worth its costs to those who do not already own the 1944 edition. The 1945 edition is recommended with these reservations."

+ — Subscription Bks Bul 17:32 J1 '46 500w

HITCHENS, MRS DOLORES (BIRK) (DOLAN BIRKLEY, NOEL BURKE, D. B. OLSEN, pseud.). Gallows for the groom. 224p $2 Doubleday

47-2097

Detective story.

Kirkus 15:45 Ja 15 '47 50w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p21
Mr 9 '47 140w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p24 Mr 9 '47 180w

"Considering what he's up against in this curious setting, Mr. Pennyfeather does a laudable job of figuring everything out. Neatly planned, but sort of arch."

+ — New Yorker 23:104 Mr 8 '47 90w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Mr 23 '47
60w

"Average."

Sat R of Lit 30:34 Mr 29 '47 40w

HITCHENS, MRS DOLORES (BIRK) (DOLAN BIRKLEY, NOEL BURKE, D. B. OLSEN, pseud.). Widows ought to weep. 209p $2.50 Ziff-Davis

47-4011

Detective story.

"It is as pretty a puzzle as Puckett could wish for, and he solves it without any encouragement from the police." Isaac Anderson

+ — N Y Times p20 Je 29 '47 140w

Sat R of Lit 30:28 J1 12 '47 50w

HOAGLAND, CLAYTON. Pleasures of sketching outdoors. 164p $3.95 Viking

741.7 Drawing—Instruction 47-30353

"Encouragement for the amateur artist, or the complete neophyte, emphasizing the rewards of a hobby. Predicating the desire to draw as natural, normal, the author, an editorial writer and book reviewer on the New York Sun, gives an informal course in sketch-

HOAGLAND, CLAYTON—Continued
ing, taking the reader from indoor practicing to landscape drawing." Kirkus

Booklist 43:355 J1 15 '47

"Not exhaustive, this nonetheless covers the principles and problems of outdoor sketching, inexpensive and simple ways of equipment, perspective and pictorial composition, training the eye, improvement of style, etc. Fundamentals are illustrated by pertinent pictures, reproductions, and the whole is a lucid approach to a personally satisfactory hobby."

+ Kirkus 15:186 Mr 15 '47 150w

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 72:1036 J1 '47 50w

"First of all, this how-to-do book makes good sense. The author does not claim to make an artist of anyone. He does not expect you to read the book, follow all directions carefully and be able to draw even badly. . . . He admits that artistic talent is inborn, but believes that the eye can be trained to see design and pattern in outdoor scenery, and that no hand holding a pencil can be more skillful in drawing than the eye which guides it."

Edith James

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Je 15 '47 110w

HOAGLAND, MRS KATHLEEN, ed. 1000 years of Irish poetry; the Gaelic and Anglo-Irish poets from pagan times to the present; with an introduction. 830p $5 Devin-Adair

821.08 Irish poetry—Collections. Irish poetry—Translations into English 47-30185

"A panorama of Irish poetry as a literature, showing the many facets of the Irish poetic genius: lyrics, elegies, songs, street ballads, satires, patriotic hymns, dramatic epics, nature and contemplative poetry, odes and sonnets, and older forms from the Gaelic not so common to English verse." (Publisher's note) Notes on the poets, the translators, and the great books. Glossary of Irish words, Indexes.

Booklist 43:239 Ap 1 '47

Reviewed by Padraic Colum

Cath World 165:87 Ap '47 850w

"'1,000 Years of Irish Poetry' is one of those rare books that, because of its unity of spirit and its comprehensiveness, promises to be an inexhaustible and ever-increasing source of pleasure to the reader whose good luck it is to explore its pages."

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Mr 9 '47 240w

"A most comprehensive anthology covering a thousand years of Irish poetry, a collection in which the haunting spirit of the Green Isle is found next to the ballads of the music-hall paddy. Mrs. Hoagland has written an explicit and revealing introduction, and, where she, as a true daughter of Ireland, could have exploited the Gaelic cause, she writes with impassioned dignity. . . . Kathleen Hoagland has done a good service in bringing early Gaelic poems to our attention. They point the way not only to an uncluttered faith in God, but in man and nature as well, and it is done without any haranguing." Elizabeth Johnson

Commonweal 46:39 Ap 25 '47 1850w

Library J 72:890 Je 1 '47 150w

Reviewed by Horace Reynolds

N Y Times p24 Ap 13 '47 650w

"The effect is of too much Irish sweetness and sentiment and not enough healthy Irish coarseness, wit, power, realism, and audacity."

New Yorker 23:119 Mr 15 '47 140w

Reviewed by George Snell

San Francisco Chronicle p14 J1 27 '47 20w

"'1,000 Years of Irish Poetry' is the first comprehensive collection of Gaelic and Anglo-Irish poets—a major contribution to world literature. . . . Glocca Morra whimsy and maudlin sentimentalism have no place in this book. There is nothing synthetic about its Irishry. The poems have the unity of racial tradition, nostalgic with the glory that was Cashel and the grandeur that was Tara."

A. F. Wolfe

+ Sat R of Lit 30:46 Ap 12 '47 750w

HOARE, SIR SAMUEL. See Templewood, S. J. G. H. 1st viscount

HOBAN, CHARLES FRANCIS. Movies that teach. 189p $2.50 Dryden

371.33523 Moving pictures in education 47-2042

"Analyzes the question of what educational institutions can learn from the experience of the Armed Forces with motion pictures, based on the author's service in World War II." (School & Society) Index. List of charts. List of tables.

School & Society 65:197 Mr 15 '47 30w

Reviewed by S. M. Corey

School R 55:198 Ap '47 1250w

HOBERECHT, EARNEST. Tokyo romance. 212p $2.50 Didier pubs.

"This is the international, obstructed romance of correspondent Kent Wood for the Japanese actress, Tamiko, and the troubles attendant on such 'fraternization.'" Kirkus

Reviewed by J. G. Dowling

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 S 14 '47 370w

"This is no literary event but has interest in its picture of American-Japanese relations."

Kirkus 15:371 J1 15 '47 90w

"Even though Life, Time and Collier's report 300,000 copies of this book sold in Japan, it is still just a simple, sentimental love story. . . . It is not well written. . . . Recommended for all libraries." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 72:1107 Ag '47 70w

"The story ought to make the Japanese think very highly of American war correspondents, but what it will make them think of our fiction writers one would rather not consider."

New Yorker 23:121 S 13 '47 190w

HOBHOUSE, CHRISTOPHER. Oxford; as it was and as it is today. 2d ed 120p pl $3.50 Oxford

942.57 Oxford, England. Oxford. University 47-869

A slightly revised edition of a book which first came out in 1939 (Book Review Digest 1939). "Its development is chronological, carried out through a series of walks; the first, medieval Oxford as it was and as it is; the second, renaissance Oxford; the third, Oxford in the Reformation, and then classical, nineteenth-century and modern Oxford, with a glimpse into the future." (Weekly Book Review) Index.

Booklist 43:135 Ja 1 '47

"A great number of photographs uncommonly well chosen and clearly reproduced create a lively impression of actually being on the spot, while the narrative, although not in conversation, has so easy a flow, and is so full of the sort of information an outsider loves to get, that the reader's general impression is of being taken along through the famous city in the company of one who knows all about it."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 D 22 '46 200w

HOBSON, MRS LAURA (ZAMETKIN). Gentleman's agreement. 275p $2.75 Simon & Schuster

47-30138

A young American journalist is given the assignment of writing a series of articles on anti-Semitism. In order to gather material he poses as a Jew for a few weeks, and his discoveries and the difficulties he ran into make up the novel.

Booklist 43:205 Mr 1 '47

Cath World 165:285 Je '47 250w

"Unfortunately the story is not as good as the sermon. The English is tense, stylized, overwritten. Every situation is overcharged. When the reporter first gets the assignment he worries himself close to a nervous breakdown for fear he won't be able to do it. In spite of stilted writing, the sharpness of the hurt of anti-Semitism stands out and remains." E. R. Embree

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Mr 2 '47 400w

"'Gentleman's Agreement,' concise and swift-moving, issues a powerful plea for tolerance and moderation between Jew and Gentile. The form of Miss Hobson's work permits her to break away from the customary recitation of real and fancied wrongs of the Hebrew and weave a plot that provides impact and flow. . . No ordinary novel is likely to solve the so-called Jewish problem. But 'Gentleman's Agreement' handles the issue with wisdom and contributes its mite toward combating the prevalent intolerance." H. S. Hayward

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Mr 21 '47 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '47

"Courageous, convincing and highly enjoyable as well. Recommended for all libraries." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 72:320 F 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by Joan Griffiths
— Nation 164:521 My 3 '47 500w

Reviewed by Budd Schulberg
New Repub 116:36 Mr 17 '47 850w

"Most of the reviews and nearly all the talk of this novel by Laura Hobson will treat it as a book about anti-Semitism. That is too bad, for first of all it is a good job of story telling. Mrs. Hobson had to choose her characters by types—that is inevitable in a propaganda novel—but, having picked them and named them, she put something much more human than synthetic sawdust inside their skins and pumped in real blood. The theme of the tale is anti-Semitism, there's no question about that, but it would have been a first-rate story about people no matter what the theme." Rex Stout

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Mr 9 '47 700w

"Mrs. Hobson manages it all with brilliance and dispatch: a taut description of a contretemps in a night club; a slick evasion of fundamentals at a Connecticut week-end, which the author identifies far too precisely for comfort. . . In the end, of course, the series is a slam-bang success and the hero's fiancée redeems herself—in a way that seemed particularly unfortunate to this reviewer. But this denouement, like the whole book, is something that each reader should sample for himself. 'Gentleman's Agreement' is honest—even when its plot is most flagrantly thimble-rigged." William Du Bois

+ — N Y Times p5 Mr 2 '47 600w

"Taste has little part in Mrs. Hobson's literary equipment and her novel presents only a very slick treatment of a subject that deserves a great deal more than slickness."

— New Yorker 23:94 Mr 1 '47 120w

Reviewed by Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p10 Mr 16 '47 120w

"To tell how Mrs. Hobson solves the problem . . . would be unfair to the story. But she does solve it excitingly and originally. I hope a lot of people read her book and ponder it deeply. It should make Americans think." Struthers Burt

+ Sat R of Lit 30:14 Mr 1 '47 850w

Reviewed by J. R. Parker
Survey G 36:312 My '47 550w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen
Survey G 36:449 Ag '47 420w

HOCKING, WILLIAM ERNEST. Freedom of the press. See Commission on freedom of the press

HOCKING, WILLIAM ERNEST, and others. Preface to philosophy. See Preface to philosophy

HODGES, C. WALTER. Sky high; the story of a house that flew [Eng title: The flying house]. 112p il $2.50 Coward-McCann 47-11928

While their father was away building a railroad in a distant country Nicky and Linda went to stay with Uncle Ben and Aunt Daisy. But right away Uncle Ben made a mistake in one of his experiments and the house blew up into the sky and went sailing away carrying them all into a series of hilarious, fantastic adventures.

Booklist 44:189 Ja 15 '48

Reviewed by A. C. Moore

Horn Bk 23:436 N '47 50w

"At times, humor seems a little strained. Buy sparingly." M. J. Meade

Library J 72:1543 N 1 '47 60w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 N 23 '47 360w

"This book has plenty of excitement and some free-wheeling adventures which seem to be thought up on the spur of the moment, as might happen in telling a story to children. However, the author sometimes seems to be talking down to or talking at his audience. The illustrations are clear and simple, with enough fantasy to carry the story." M. F.

+ — N Y Times p5 N 16 '47 140w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét

New Yorker 23:149 D 6 '47 60w

"A story that both boys and girls will enjoy."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:44 N 15 '47 90w

HODGINS, ERIC. Mr. Blandings builds his dream house; il. by William Steig. 237p $2.75 Simon & Schuster

47-30016

After fifteen years of marriage, during which they lived in New York, the Blandings decided they must have a country retreat. Mr. Blandings was a successful advertising man, but when it came to buying a house in the country he was as a lamb led to the slaughter. After sinking over $56,000 in his venture, the only pleasure he took in it was a recurrent dream that it had gone up in flames.

Reviewed by R. M. Gay

Atlantic 179:138 F '47 300w

Booklist 43:155 Ja 15 '47

Bookmark 8:15 Mr '47

"There's no bitterness. It's not a diatribe against the building trades or a sneer at the Blandings. Even the illusion that leads them floundering ever deeper into the Slough of Despond is, one feels, honorable and even glorious. After all, building a house can be one of the great affirmative acts of life and the Blandings, like Ulysses, who also built a house with a wide prospect, are of heroic mold. William Steig, the delineator of the frustrate, the wistful and the aspiring, has contributed approximately 40 inimitable drawings." Bergen Evans

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Ja 5 '47 400w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 64:433 Ap 2 '47 650w

"Anyone thinking of buying a home in the country (and who isn't?) should read this book for its practical lessons in real estate values. . . It is comforting to know that not all country home-buyers experience the full-blown upheavals into which the Blandings plunged, until the banker, the architect, the realty agent, the Hackett owner, and the legal counsel all seemed to Mr. Blandings like vul-

HODGINS, ERIC—Continued

tures picking him clean of his life savings. Yet the theme of unforeseen costs is sufficiently familiar to everyone to evoke nods of sympathy and smiles of understanding, especially when Mr. Blandings, in a fitting climax, faced a damage suit for intimating that one of his earlier architects had shown poor taste." W. C. Harvey

Christian Science Monitor p14 Ja 3 '47
420w

Cleveland Open Shelf p5 Mr '47

Commonweal 45:574 Mr 21 '47 70w

Eng N 138:96 Ap 3 '47 300w

Kirkus 14:563 N 1 '46 270w

Reviewed by Alistair Cooke

New Repub 116:39 Ja 27 '47 750w

Reviewed by Richardson Wright

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6
D 29 '46 1100w

"The distinction of the story is Mr. Hodgins' scornful analysis of Mr. Blandings' successive states of mind... In a series of sardonic drawings, William Steig has admirably caught Mr. Blandings in all his moods from rhapsodic to desperate, angry and horrified." Brooks Atkinson

N Y Times p5 D 29 '46 1300w

"The details of Mr. Blandings' skinning by real-estate men, architects, contractors, and plumbers should provide the reader with a lot of sadistic satisfaction, if it isn't too uncomfortably reminiscent."

New Yorker 22:94 Ja 18 '47 90w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 7 '47
800w

"One of the minor difficulties about trying to review a book of this sort is that it just can't be done. The humor lies in the warp and woof of the thing and can't be lifted out in neat little excerpts or indicated by a series of anecdotes. The Blandings are people you will want to know and the way to get acquainted with them is to meet on their own ground at Surrogate Acres. Don't miss the battle of the Blandings vs. the Bald Mountaineers." G. G. Bates

+ Sat R of Lit 30:17 Ja 4 '47 850w

Time 49:92 Ja 6 '47 330w

Wis Lib Bul 43:38 F '47

HOEBRECKX, OMER STANISLAUS. Management handbook for collective bargaining. 208p pa $2 Commerce clearing house

331.11 Labor contract, Collective bargaining
47-30274

"Techniques are recommended for management to use in the actual process of collective bargaining after a union has been recognized. Solely from the management point of view and for management use; references to labor and unions are frequently derogatory but both groups may profit by studying the tactics suggested in opposition to their demands." Booklist

Booklist 43:284 My 15 '47

"Though the book falls short of being what one expects from the title word 'handbook,' it is recommended as a reference source of sample contract clauses." R. T. Mann
Management R 36:355 Je '47 360w

HOEL, PAUL GERHARD. Introduction to mathematical statistics. 258p $3.50 Wiley

311.23 Mathematical statistics 47-1097

"Basic textbook for students with an elementary calculus background providing an introduction to the theory and applications of modern statistical methods. Includes such topics as sampling inspection, non-parametric methods, two types of errors and sequential analysis. Basic theorems are explained and proven." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:79 Ja 1 '47 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:18 Ja '47

HOELSCHER, RANDOLPH PHILIP, and others. Industrial production illustration for students, draftsmen, and illustrators. 2d ed 243p il $4.50 McGraw

744.4 Art, Commercial, Mechanical drawing 47-1150

"Engineering drawing in perspective. This edition presents added material on subjects of usage, aircraft illustration, perspective, measuring point system, shading, and special equipment used in making production illustrations. Revised and brought up to date, with a chapter on equipment used in making pictorial drawings added." (Booklist) For first edition see Book Review Digest 1943. Index.

Booklist 43:226 Mr 15 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1627 N 15 '46 70w

HOFF, RHODA. Full circle. 245p $2.75 Dodd

47-2367

Character study of a spoiled New York beauty, Victoria Claus. The story begins in 1901 with Victoria's wedding day, and comes full circle when Victoria's daughter attempts to grasp happiness in the same manner as her mother had done.

"Miss Hoff, for all her callow philosophizing, spins out her story smoothly with a facile style and technique, and creates some credible routine characters. But the book has a flat monotone, mostly because the material—the garrulous dialogue, especially—is never focused or highlighted. Nor does the period background blend with the action." Robert Halsband

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p11 J1 20 '47
250w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22
Ap 6 '47 140w

"Miss Hoff's tale is a pale, light brew guaranteed to go down easily with no disturbing after-effects." Andrea Parke

N Y Times p14 Ap 6 '47 230w

HOFFENSTEIN, SAMUEL. Pencil in the air [poems]. 224p $2.50 Doubleday

811

47-11075

Humorous verse collected from the work of the author of Poems in Praise of Practically Nothing, and Year in, You're out (Book Review Digest 1928 and 1930). Some of the poems have appeared in The New Yorker, the New York Herald Tribune, and Harper's Magazine.

Booklist 44:102 N 15 '47

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy

Chicago Sun Book Week N 17 '47 700w

Kirkus 15:453 Ag 15 '47 60w

Reviewed by Thomas Sugrue

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12
O 19 '47 700w

Reviewed by F. P. Adams

N Y Times p14 O 19 '47 600w

"His new poems have all the old technical mastery and other characteristics—the surprise attack, the epigrammatic grimace, the seemingly inadvertent poetic doubletake... But the pieces aren't all light; the author included some very sober, and excellent, verse on matters that bother poets and other people these days, along with some mournful and quite lovely lyrics."

+ New Yorker 23:128 O 18 '47 120w

"Some of the poems in this collection have appeared in magazines, some are printed here for the first time. All are first-rate Hoffenstein and will make the reader wish that the author might have found some way to write less for the screen and more for the audience he created with his first book." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 31 '47
800w

Reviewed by David McCord
Sat R of Lit 31:28 Ja 3 '48 700w

HOFFMAN, ARNOLD DAVID. Free gold; the story of Canadian mining; with il. by Irwin D. Hoffman. 420p $5 Rinehart 622.3421 Gold mines and mining 47-4085
An account of mines and mining in Canada. Since the author is avowedly chiefly interested in "the human side of mining" the book is full of anecdotes and life stories of the men who have dominated the scene in one camp or another. Glossary. Index.

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '47

Current Hist 13:357 D '47 60w

+ Kirkus 15:231 Ap 15 '47 120w

"Required book for mining and engineering libraries. Not so important for public libraries. Limited appeal for general reader." L. R. Etzkorn

+ Library J 72:805 My 15 '47 110w

"A most valuable and readable book." Stewart Holbrook

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3
Je 22 '47 550w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:31 Ap '47

"No book has ever told so much about civilian life in the North as 'Arctic Village' by Robert Marshall. 'Free Gold' is a book, quite different, not nearly so well written, but equally fascinating. It is a book that tells the truth—and tells it simply and humbly." Peter Freuchen

+ N Y Times p24 Ag 3 '47 550w

"The exciting adventure yarn comes complete with a vast amount of information about gold-mining Canadian style, from the first strike until the investors enter the picture. The excellent glossary and index, along with the fact-packed text, make it a book to be read for fun and kept for reference." Eugene MacHamus

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ag 3 '47
110w

HOFFMAN, RUTH (MRS DOUGLAS C. M. BROOKS), and HOFFMAN, HELEN. We lead a double life; with il. by the authors. 264p $3 Lippincott

B or 92 47-11225

The twin authors of We Married an Englishman (Book Review Digest 1938) go exploring again, this time in their own early lives. They describe their childhood in St Paul, Minnesota; their going to Minneapolis Institute; their European trip to study painting; and their New York jobs.

Booklist 44:89 N 1 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '47

"In itself entertaining, vivid, uninhibited, with an extra touch of amusement in the complication of being or dealing with twins." M. C. Manley

+ Library J 72:1266 S 15 '47 70w

"Beneath the fun, 'We Lead a Double Life' is a record of hard work, ingenuity and persistence, combined with some good luck, perhaps especially the good luck of good looks and sufficient abilities." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10
N 23 '47 550w

"The authors describe their family with sympathetic feeling—from father, who tried in vain to make a living out of owning and racing his harness horses, to sister Susan, of whom the twins were so fond that they divided her in half with an imaginary line, so that each one would own an equal share. The writing comes off in the style of a sketchbook, not too substantial, perhaps, but impressionistic and flavorful. The illustrations by the versatile twins enhance the gayety and charm of their tale." Lucy Freeman

+ N Y Times p20 N 2 '47 400w

HOFFMANN, BANESH. Strange story of the quantum; an account for the general reader of the growth of the ideas underlying our present atomic knowledge. 239p $3 Harper 530.1 Quantum theory. Atoms. Nuclear physics 47-3975

"An account of the struggle in physics to explain certain phenomena is told in layman's language. The story of the quantum and the role it played in creating a new physics and a new world is interestingly related. Hoffmann endeavors to explain to the general reader the theories and the reasoning by which the scientist seeks to comprehend the atom, its structure and its potentialities. There is more to come in this search of the secret of the atom, but here is a story, simply and well told, of work done prior to the war." Library J

"The informal and pleasant style of writing facilitates concentration on the subject matter, of which the discussions are regularly accurate, illuminating, and provocative. . . . The result is a volume which can be read with enjoyment by those familiar with the field and with profit and enjoyment by those who are not." Paul Bender

+ Chem & Eng N 25:3029 O 13 '47 220w

Kirkus 15:207 Ap 1 '47 170w

Reviewed by W. A. Kalenich

+ Library J 72:885 Je 1 '47 80w

HOFFMANN, ELEANOR. Lion of Barbary; il. by Jack Coggins. 217p $2 Holiday 47-30015

Adventure story for grades seven to nine. The hero is a sixteen-year-old English Puritan, who goes to the rescue of an English girl captured by Barbary pirates. Seventeenth century Moorish Africa furnishes part of the background.

Booklist 43:157 Ja 15 '47

Horn Bk 23:114 Mr '47 120w

"An exciting, full story with unhackneyed adventures and the fine flavor of appreciation of differences in tastes, standards and customs. . . . Unusual insight into a complex, fierce, sophisticated culture."

+ Kirkus 14:543 N 1 '46 90w

"Atmosphere more convincing than story." Eileen Riols

Library J 72:168 Ja 15 '47 90w

"The plot is episodic and hinges more upon John's good luck with friends than upon his own daring. There is little sense of the grimness of the seventeenth century but there are liveliness in the travels and authenticity in the color, costumes and peoples of North Africa." M. C. Scoggins

N Y Times p27 D 15 '46 180w

Sat R of Lit 30:43 Mr 8 '47 50w

Reviewed by R. H. Viguers

Sat R of Lit 30:34 Jl 12 '47 230w

HOFFMANN, ELEANOR. Princess of the Channel isles; il. by Hans Kreis. 144p $2.25 Nelson

47-30419

Story of a prize cow from the Island of Jersey. Princess is sent to the United States and a friendship develops among a group of children from Jersey, England, and America, because of their concern about her. Grades four to six.

Booklist 44:33 S 15 '47

Reviewed by Martha King

Chicago Sun Book Week P17a D 3 '47
40w

HOFFMANN, ELEANOR—Continued

"The children, of whom there are six altogether, are well drawn and their love for their pets reveals much about the care of young Jersey cattle and their importance in the dairy world. There is fun and adventure in the story, too." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 23:362 S '47 100w

"An unusual pet story, and lots of information about cows."
+ Kirkus 15:395 Ag 1 '47 100w

"Rather slow-moving, undistinguished book. It is completely unsentimental, however, and that is distinctly in its favor." M. B. Snow
— + Library J 72:1193 S 1 '47 70w

"Well-written and informative story." R. A. Gordon
+ N Y Times p42 O 19 '47 130w

HOGAN, INEZ (MRS RANDOLPH BOWERS).
About Nono, the baby elephant; il. by [the author]. (Read-to-me bks) 44p $1 Dutton 47-4821

The first of a new series by the creator of Nicodemus and the animal twins. It is a read aloud story for ages three to six, with one song included, and is about a baby elephant who had to be shown what "no, no" means—with force.

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p12 O 28 '47 180w

Commonweal 47:150 N 21 '47 70w
Kirkus 15:364 J1 15 '47 140w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 S 28 '47 280w

"Readers from 3 to 6 may feel that they themselves are above reproach but they will respond sympathetically to this simple story. It is told in a conversational style and illustrated by the author with expressive black and white drawings. Miss Hogan also introduces a catchy tune at the beginning and end, offering the highly desirable combination of song and story." Lillian Gerard

+ N Y Times p20 Ag 17 '47 200w

HOGAN, INEZ (MRS RANDOLPH BOWERS).
Nappy has a new friend [il. by the author]. [47p] $1 Dutton 47-1877

Nappy's new friend was a little colored boy who liked to do the same sort of things that Nappy did. Together with the new friend's little sisters who could dance, and three little Chinese boys who did tumbling acts, the children put on a very successful show. For ages five to eight.

Reviewed by D. M. MacDonald
Library J 72:392 N 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Ap 6 '47 200w

"A new book by Inez Hogan means another top-rate story for 5 to 9-year olds. . . To the adult reader the story has an obvious purpose, to demonstrate that all children have the same interests and all have something to contribute. Young listeners absorb this meaning unconsciously." Lois Palmer

+ N Y Times p35 F 23 '47 180w

HOGAN, WILLIAM RANSOM. The Texas republic; a social and economic history. 338p il $3 Univ. of Okla. press 976.4 Texas 46-8214

"The life and times in Texas during the period 1836-1846 when it was a free and independent republic. Historical facts are treated only incidentally, but the portrayal of the people, how they lived, what they ate, how they played, and their economic status is given fully and completely. The author has used source material extensively and quoted freely from contemporary letters and journals." Booklist

"Within the realm specified by his subtitle—social and economic history—the author has skillfully achieved his purpose. . . Writing on subjects of such wide interest, the author necessarily drew his materials from a very extensive bibliography. The thirty pages listing his sources and other materials at the book's end thus constitute one of the best and most convenient, general bibliographies of Texan history. The entire book is of such quality that one cannot resist the hope Dr. Hogan will follow it with a companion volume devoted to the political, military, diplomatic, and financial history of independent Texas." J. D. Hill
+ Am Hist R 52:748 J1 '47 550w

Reviewed by J. L. Waller
Ann Am Acad 253:218 S '47 320w
Booklist 43:153 Ja 15 '47

"William Ransom Hogan has chosen to do what no one else ever did—an informal, zestful social study of the Texas Republic that lasted from 1836 to 1846, before Texas joined the Union. In so doing, he has scored a ten-strike—a sound, magnificently documented piece of original research, written in a fine style that makes the reader forget that the author is a professor." H. T. Kane

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p4 F 23 '47 700w

Reviewed by Horace Reynolds
Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 25 '47 450w

Reviewed by Stanley Walker
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 F 23 '47 800w

"There have been numerous histories of Texas published, mostly emphasizing what happened in a military way under the short list of interesting Presidents of the Republic and what happened in a political way under the long list of usually dull and half-civilized Governors. This is the first adequate social history of Texas to appear, and William Ransom Hogan has certainly justified its appearance." J. F. Dobie

+ N Y Times p8 Ja 12 '47 800w

Springf'd Union p2 Mr 31 '47 150w
U S Quarterly Bkl 3:59 Mr '47 240w

HOGARTH, WILLIAM. Marriage a la mode, and other engravings. [90p] il $5 Lear 769.2 Engravings 47-5323

Forty-four plates reproduced from the original steel engravings, complete with the sermonizing texts which originally accompanied each plate. Includes some of Hogarth's other engravings, besides those in the Marriage a la Mode series: Industry and Idleness; The Rake's Progress; and Beer Street and Gin Lane.

"[The] engravings [are] reduced in size but done with really painstaking care."
+ New Yorker 23:118 My 17 '47 120w

"The reproductions are not on coated stock, and seem rather soft. During last winter's superb Hogarth-Constable-Turner exhibition in America, nearly all the critics preferred Hogarth the print-maker to Hogarth the painter, and only Dr. Edgar Wind of Smith College raised his voice in praise of 'that most insinuating gift of Hogarth, his genius as a colorist.' He must have been right: it is surprising how much one misses color in the Marriage a la Mode engravings after having seen recently the oil paintings for the series." J. T. Soby
Sat R of Lit 30:26 Je 28 '47 170w

HOGNER, DOROTHY (CHILDS) (MRS NILS HOGNER). Blue swamp; pictures by Nils Hogner. 47p $2.50 Oxford 47-2543

Pictures and story describe the adventures of some of the smaller animals who go to the rescue of a bird lured away by the Will-o-the-wisp. For ages six to nine.

"The text is intended for six and seven year olds, but the vocabulary and the format would make it difficult for beginning readers, so we are listing it for reading aloud."

Kirkus 15:238 My 1 '47 80w

"The idea is good—that the worst fear is caused by the unknown—but the concept of the Will-O-the-Wisp is too sophisticated for children and is never explained. Literary quality good except for verses of the baby talk variety." Jean Webster

+ — Library J 72:894 Je 1 '47 70w

"The title and the pretty full-spread water-color jacket predispose a reader toward Dorothy Childs Hogner's newest animal story. But closer inspection reveals 'Blue Swamp' to be a thin narrative. . . That fear of the unknown is often groundless may be a good lesson for the storyteller to teach, but the end of the narrative, which leaves the Will-o-the-Wisp neither identified nor dispelled, seems inconclusive even to a 6-year-old." S. C. Gross

+ — N Y Times p25 Je 29 '47 100w

"An outstanding book. A minor discordant note is her choice of names for some of the animal folk.—Tweety Yellow Bird and Chippy Whippy for instance."

+ — Wis Lib Bul 43:84 My '47

HOKE, MRS HELEN L. (HELEN STERLING, pseud). Horse that takes the milk around; pictures by Marjorie Hartwell. [28p] $1.50 Watts, F.

47-1332

Colored illustrations and rhymed text describe the morning trip thru the village of the milkman and his horse. Ages four to seven.

Booklist 43:228 Mr 15 '47

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p4 S 9 '47 150w

"The verse has a good lilt and sense of rhyme, but there's some pretty lame scansion. This probably won't bother the young fry who will like the idea of knowing some of the things that go on while they sleep."

Kirkus 14:419 S 1 '46 160w

"Rhymes are lacking in inspiration and seem out of place in the profusion of color. . . For libraries that can afford it just for the pictures." F. W. Butler

Library J 71:1718 D 1 '46 70w

HOKE, MRS HELEN L. (HELEN STERLING, pseud). Too many kittens; il. by Harry Lees. [36p] $2 McKay

47-2979

Picture-story about Susie, who loved kittens, and whose mother made her promise to give away five little charmers when the regular boarders came for the summer. Susie's conspiracy with the boarders made a very happy summer for all of them.

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 My 25 '47 50w

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p12 N 11 '47 70w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 S '47

— Kirkus 15:98 F 15 '47 170w

"The pictures in color have the busy look and bushy fur of active kittens; each kit is different and they scamper all over the large pages." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ap 20 '47 190w

"A highly pleasing summertime story for youngsters under 9." S. C. Gross

+ N Y Times p25 J1 13 '47 150w

HOLBERG, MRS RUTH (LANGLAND). At the sign of the Golden Anchor; il. by Jane Castle. 210p $2.25 Doubleday

47-5699

A New England coast town in the last days of the War of 1812 is the scene of this adventure story for girls of eight to twelve. The gay, tomboyish nine-year-old daughter of the village innkeeper is the heroine.

Booklist 44:75 O 15 '47

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

Christian Science Monitor p12 D 9 '47 190w

"Mrs. Holberg is thoroughly at home in the region and her descriptions are realistic and convincing, while her story brings a vivid sense of the time and the hardships arising from the embargo in New England." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:364 S '47 80w

"Ruth Holberg proved in The Wonderful Voyage her gift for the detail that lower teen readers enjoy, and she created a background of picturesqueness and charm. Varied incidents, little escapades and very human children with rivalries, small jealousies and big loyalties."

+ Kirkus 15:366 J1 15 '47 120w

"Characterization is good and action very believable. An excellent picture of colonial life as well as a good story." Elizabeth Johnson

+ Library J 72:1198 S 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 S 21 '47 600w

"The story is more concerned with customs and costumes than with plot, being composed of a series of loosely strung incidents, but girls of 8 to 11 will enjoy the homely, intimate sense of the period." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p27 Ag 24 '47 140w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét

New Yorker 23:152 D 6 '47 70w

Sat R of Lit 30:46 N 15 '47 60w

Wis Lib Bul 43:133 O '47

HOLBORN, HAJO. American military government; its organization and policies. 243p $3.50 Infantry journal

940.5338 Allied military government, U.S.—
Foreign relations, World war, 1939-1945—
Occupied territories 47-3001

"A comprehensive presentation of American military government during and since World War II. Indexed." School & Society

"That there were shortcomings Professor Holborn is willing to admit. But they are, he intimates, understandable when one considers the increasing complications of military government in central Europe. In this respect, the difficulty of coordinating the occupation policies of the Great Powers is of major significance. . . The student of military government operations will doubtless find special interest in the one hundred and thirty pages of documents which Professor Holborn has appended to his text." G. A. Craig

Pol Sci Q 62:452 S '47 850w

School & Society 65:367 My 17 '47 20w

HOLBROOK, STEWART HALL. Story of American railroads. 468p il maps $4.50 Crown
385 Railroads—U.S. 47-6799

A popularly written history of American railroads which stresses the men who built and ran them. Contains a "railroad almanac," a bibliography, and an index.

"This is one time when even a reviewer may venture into prophecy and my forecast is this: No better book about the railroads will ever be written." Emmett Dedmon

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p8 N 9 '47 380w

"This is a freight train of a book, as it should be. The thirty-nine chapters of 'The Story of American Railroads' are as variegated as a haul of cars that range from golden reefers to dun flats, and all carry solid goods—prime facts of the biggest industrial job ever heard of around the earth. The whole system of railroads in this land is an incomparable human epic. Stewart Holbrook tells it wonderfully well." James Stevens

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 N 16 '47 900w

HOLBROOK, S. H.—Continued

"Mr. Holbrook writes well, not only about the men who dreamed, planned, located and built our railroads, but also about the men who ran them. . . In his last chapters Mr. Holbrook deals with some of the fascinating edges of the railroad subject. . . In general, he has most ably and interestingly set forth the facts of American railroad history." Horace Reynolds
+ N Y Times p11 D 21 '47 650w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 N 26 '47 950w

Social Studies 39:48 Ja '48 10w

HOLDING, MRS. ELISABETH (SANXAY).

Blank wall. 231p $2.50 Simon & Schuster 47-5834

A novel of suspense in which "a suburban matron, harassed by wartime domestic problems—her husband is overseas—finds herself implicated in the murder of her young daughter's extremely unattractive beau." (New Yorker)

"In 'The Blank Wall' Mrs. Holding adds another admirable portrait of her gallery. As a portrait it is equal to [her] others, but its setting is less felicitous. 'The Blank Wall' is intrinsically as absurd as a nightmare but it has at the same time the horrid compulsion of a nightmare. . . I think [it] would have been a better book if it had not darted so wildly from external probabilities." James Sandoe
+ — Chicago Sun Book Week N 7 '47 360w

Kirkus 15:178 Mr 15 '47 120w

"The Blank Wall is helped immeasurably to produce its chilling suspense by the fact that its violent action takes place in an every-day setting and involves ordinary people." E. H.

+ New Repub 117:28 N 3 '47 30w

"Mrs. Holding's mystery critters are so freshly drawn as to startle the crime addict, hagridden by mystery types and miscellaneous trash. And that goes even for her lowdowns, especially for Donnelly, a new kind of black-mailer." Will Cuppy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p29 N 9 '47 180w

"Mrs. Holding combines convincing dialogue with shrewd timing to make a novel of surprise and suspense." Lawrence Dodd

+ N Y Times p18 N 16 '47 170w

"A suspense story with a rare and desirable down-to-earth quality. Highly recommended."

+ New Yorker 23:135 N 8 '47 90w

"Distinguished."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:44 N 8 '47 50w

HOLDING, MRS. ELISABETH (SANXAY). Miss Kelly; il. by Margaret S. Johnson. 125p $2 Morrow

Cats—Legends and stories 47-30838

Miss Kelly was a cat, young, gentle and intelligent, and furthermore she could understand and talk Human, altho her wise mother had cautioned her against that. An escaped circus tiger with the idea of killing as many humans as possible changed matters, and Miss Kelly found herself with an important job on her hands. For grades two to five.

Booklist 44:21 S 1 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p6a N 19 '47 150w

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

Christian Science Monitor p12 N 11 '47 240w

"Imaginative and humorous story with sympathetic drawings." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:362 S '47 80w

"A good family story. All children who like animals will enter this engaging secret world with delight."

+ Kirkus 15:467 S 1 '47 100w

Reviewed by E. E. Frank

Library J 72:1473 O 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 S 28 '47 700w

"Children of the middle years will secretly feel that it is not at all impossible, while their parents may regard their own 'fireside sphinxes' with thoughtful inquiry." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p37 S 21 '47 200w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét

New Yorker 23:152 D 6 '47 60w

Reviewed by J. H. Cole

San Francisco Chronicle p7 N 30 '47 220w

"The story is well plotted and well written. It will probably appeal to children and to their elders in equal measure. Miss Johnson has made some very effective drawings of Miss Kelly and the tiger which are unusually well reproduced."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:36 O 18 '47 150w

Springf'd Republican p8B D 21 '47 90w

Wis Lib Bul 43:155 N '47

HOLE, CHRISTINA. Witchcraft in England; il. by Mervyn Peake. 168p $3 Scribner

133.4 Witchcraft 47-3917

Scholarly survey of the history of witchcraft in the British Isles from the Middle Ages to the end of the nineteenth century. Illustrated. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:62 O 15 '47

"An item of value for collections of folklore, comparative religion and British history." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 72:806 My 15 '47 100w

"Miss Hole has a very sane attitude toward the horrors and wonders she relates in the most matter-of-fact way possible. Wherever she can, she explains them. . . Not the least of the virtues of Miss Hole's fascinating book is its admirable bibliography and index." Anne Fremantle

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 J1 6 '47 900w

Reviewed by H. E. Wedeck

N Y Times p3 J1 27 '47 410w

"Simply written but obviously the work of a scholar."

+ New Yorker 23:79 My 31 '47 120w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Je 22 '47 110w

Time 49:109 Je 2 '47 1100w

HOLISHER, DESIDER. House of God. 232p il $3 Crown

277.3 U.S.—Religion. Churches. Synagogs 46-8359

Photographs of churches of many denominations in the United States, showing exterior and some interior views. Descriptive text is contained in the captions. Index.

Booklist 43:163 F 1 '47

Bookmark 8:7 My '47

"The method is to reproduce large, handsome photographs of exteriors, together with interiors when these are of special interest, and then accompany many of these with photographs of services in progress. The geographical range is so wide that turning the pages is fairly certain to bring to light a familiar building."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p19 Ap 27 '47 170w

HOLLAND, CLAUDIA. Primrose path. 250p $2.50 Rinehart

47-4556

Novel of life in Virginia in wartime. The events cover six days, during which the northern wife of a southerner learns to know and love the gallant people around her, and proves it by throwing a real party.

"A most charming conversation piece, quite literally." O. C.

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ag 17 '47 230w

Kirkus 15:265 My 15 '47 120w

"Author knows her South and paints a deft humorous picture of its charming hospitality and appealing makeshifts. Recommended for its effervescent quality as highly entertaining summer reading." R. P. Tubby
+ Library J 72:1034 J1 '47 60w

"A delightful book." Rose Feld
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ag 3 '47 430w

"Claudia Holland, who knows her Virginia speech and behavior patterns intimately, has in this book set down an amazing slice of U. S. A. in wartime." H. B. Parker
+ N Y Times p18 Ag 10 '47 410w

HOLLAND, MRS HENRIETTA FORT. My own Manhattan; il. by Malman. 206p $2.50 Washburn

47-578

Collection of brief sketches of life in New York, which bring out some contrasts between New York and Boston. Many of the sketches have appeared in The New Yorker, the Atlantic Monthly, and Promenade.

Reviewed by Alice Kogan
Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ja 19 '47 320w

"Passably pleasant, but a little bland for this type of thing."

Kirkus 14:565 N 1 '46 100w

"The word for this book—if it weren't such a damning description—would be 'delightful.' Malman is responsible for the illustrations and for the laughter for which they, in turn, are responsible." Lucy Greenbaum
+ N Y Times p21 Ja 5 '47 330w

"The sketches are all light, amusing, and deftly written." E. J.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 D 8 '46 120w

HOLLEY, MRS HELEN (MULLEN). Dead run. 256p $2 Curl

47-31460

Detective story.

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p40 O 19 '47 160w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p27 O 19 '47 30w

HOLLISTER, PAUL M. (PAUL, pseud). Fine tooth comb. 378p $2.75 Doubleday

47-4404

"Young Bostonian, Harvard graduate living in New York's Greenwich Village; 4F in 1941 'all there was left to acquire was a liberal dose of sex experience, the girl on the pedestal and a job.' Pursuit of these provides the scanty plot. Major interests are comradeship with a lifelong artist friend invalidated home from Guadalcanal and a group of men of varying cultural backgrounds, centering about McGinty's alehouse and Cooper Union lecture hall." Library J

"For this sort of book there is no excuse. Why does youth think that the public is interested in having his pursuit of a skirt laid out for meticulous inspection? . . . This is both dull and in bad taste."

— Kirkus 15:199 Ap 1 '47 90w

"Intellectual give and take of intriguing nature, good writing, sustained interest." Jesse Cross

+ Library J 72:888 Je 1 '47 80w

"The language of Fine Tooth Comb derives from the classless, raceless jargon of the American urban population, the shorthand of exacerbated nerves and discontinuous minds. . . . Isolated examples of this style might seem to possess a hectic liveliness, or could at least be dismissed as occasional misfortunes, but 378 pages of it become inert and exhausting. Its range, moreover, is too restricted for the subject. Flippant without irony, it is only capable of an attitude of tough benevolence toward the characters." John Farrelly

— New Repub 117:27 J1 7 '47 340w

"The novel is interesting chiefly for its metropolitan background. The author has successfully caught the glittering surfaces and somber shadows of Manhattan. . . . It is less impressive for its accomplishments than for the signs here and there of better things to come." Stephen Stepanchev

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 J1 13 '47 400w

"A very talented bad novel." Donald Barr
— N Y Times p20 Je 8 '47 100w

San Francisco Chronicle p8 J1 6 '47 350w

"At one point, a character tells him, 'Words, words, you talk too much.' Most readers will wholeheartedly agree. The flood of words is unending and unorganized, drowning such points of interest as do turn up, apparently by the laws of chance. . . . The blurb, which is almost as embarrassing as the book, foresees that twenty years from now 'Fine Tooth Comb' will be a classic. The fact is, it's a classic right now. A classic example of the sort of autobiographical novel that a lot of people who later turn out to be good writers have to get out of their systems. Preferably without the public's participation." Jack Iams
— Sat R of Lit 30:16 Je 14 '47 430w

HOLLOMON, JOHN H., and JAFFE, LEONARD DAVID. Ferrous metallurgical design; design principles for fully hardened steel. 346p il $5 Wiley

669.1 Steel—Metallurgy 47-3866

"Metallurgical design' here means contriving a composition and heat treatment that will produce the desired properties in a medium-alloy steel part. Chapters on phase transformation, heat flow, and mechanical behavior in steel present and organize the principles (so far as they are developed to date) which govern metallurgical design. Chapters on mechanical properties, quenching, hardenability, quench-cracking, and temperability discuss and present the data by which the principles are applied. Two final chapters recommend a concrete procedure for using the principles and data, and give an example of its application to a specific problem." (Chem Eng) Bibliography. Index.

Chem Eng 54:270 J1 '47 140w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:814 My 15 '47 20w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:38 Ap '47

U S Quarterly Bk1 3:317 S '47 210w

HOLLOS, CLARA. Story of your coat; pictures by Herbert Kruckman. [47p] $1.50 Int. pubs. 677 Clothing and dress—Juvenile literature. Textile industry—Juvenile literature

47-30045

Picture-story book for children, describing the steps in the making of a wool coat, from the shearing of the sheep in Australia, to the purchase of the coat in a large department store.

Booklist 43:174 F 1 '47

"An attractive book for schools, libraries and home reading."

+ Kirkus 14:492 O 1 '46 90w

"Though not as attractive as Petersham's Story of Wool, this is modern and will be useful with eight- to ten-year-olds." E. W. Turpin

Library J 71:1808 D 15 '46 70w

"I am quite sure that as a child I never did think of a coat as something made by a great many people working practically at once. It is this typical unification of effort, this characteristic mass production, worked out in graphic fashion, both in pictures and text, that gives the book a quality of its own." M. L. Becker
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 D 29 '46 400w

"In trying to reach too widespread an age group, the author has marred an excellent idea for 8-to-10-year-olds by writing down for the 6-year-old." R. A. Gordon

N Y Times p26 F 9 '47 110w

HOLM, JOHN CECIL. McGarrity and the pigeons; ill. by Robert Frankenberg. 239p $2.75 Rinehart

47-4755

McGarrity drove one of those hansom cabs up around Central Park, and Samson, his horse, could talk to the pigeons. The story is about the part McGarrity and Samson played in the lives of some of New York's pigeons.

Reviewed by C. W. Roberts

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Ag 3 '47
200w

"A modest, mild, and not too meaningful byplay in whimsy."

Kirkus 15:290 Je 1 '47 190w

"If you have never become too adult for the Wind in the Willows type of book where animals talk the human language but otherwise behave more rationally, this is your story. Delightful nonsense." M. H. Zipprich

+ Library J 72:1034 J1 '47 70w

"If you are looking for a lightly humorous variation on the boy-meets-girl theme in feathered circles, this is your dish." Barbara Bond

N Y Times p21 S 7 '47 140w

San Francisco Chronicle p24 O 19 '47
90w

"This underprivileged little plot is ill-housed, ill-clothed, and ill-fed. Here and there a breath of tenderness gives these pale characters a moment of life. But for pages and pages it just dawdles along, going no place, with all the invention of a grammar-school morality play in which the children are dressed in cheese-cloth and presented as the Spirit of the Early Crocus." Lee Rogow

— + Sat R of Lit 30:14 Ag 2 '47 500w

HOLMAN, HUGH. Another man's poison. 214p $2.50 Mill

47-19152

Detective story.

Kirkus 15:15 Ja 1 '47 60w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20
Ap 20 '47 100w

"Agreeable."

Sat R of Lit 30:68 Ap 12 '47 50w

HOLMES, HARRY NICHOLLS. Introductory college chemistry. 4th ed 590p il $3.75 Macmillan

540 Chemistry

46-3397

"An established textbook of general chemistry. Although it is designed for college students, the treatment is not too difficult for high school students who have a serious interest in chemistry. It is suitable also for general readers, and for simple reference use. Compared to the third edition (1939) there has been considerable rearrangement of the material, and new material has been added on recent developments, particularly synthetic materials." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 43:135 Ja 1 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:762 My 15 '46 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:21 Ap '46

HOLMES, JOHN HAYNES. Affirmation of immortality. 75p $1.50 Macmillan

237.2 Immortality

47-1687

"Ingersoll lecture on immortality, delivered at Harvard in 1946. The concept of immortality, says Dr. Holmes, is consistent with the nature both of man and of the universe, not a revealed truth so improbable that it must be imposed by authority in defiance of reason and evidence." Christian Century

Christian Century 64:528 Ap 23 '47 60w

Reviewed by J. S. Bixler

Crozer Q 24:282 J1 '47 200w

Reviewed by Vergilius Ferm

Ethics 57:308 J1 '47 100w

"Orthodox Christians will not be entirely satisfied with this book, but that would be because of what Dr. Holmes does not say, rather than what he says. With what he does have to say few believing Christians and Jews would quarrel; indeed, they should welcome this well phrased apology for an important article of their faith."

+ — Kirkus 15:61 F 1 '47 170w

Reviewed by G. W. Wakefield

Library J 72:385 Mr 1 '47 140w

"It is a message of the spirit, of special value to the unchurched spiritual." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24
My 4 '47 340w

Reviewed by F. M. Eliot

Survey G 36:304 My '47 500w

HOLMES, OLIVER WENDELL, 1841-1935. Touched with fire; Civil war letters and diary; ed. by Mark DeWolfe Howe. 158p il $3 Harvard univ. press

B or 92 U.S.—History—Civil war—Personal narratives A47-364

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

"Here controversy about accuracy of portrayal of the man, as in biography or the drama, is impossible. These are the genuine beginnings. Garb, title, and topic may be strange, but this is the youth who became Mr. Justice Holmes." R. S. Wilkins

+ Atlantic 179:139 F '47 360w

Columbia Law R 47:341 Mr '47 110w

"The Letters and Diary are not only interesting because of their description of a gallant officer's experiences, but they are important because of the light they cast on the education and character of the man. In editing this book, Mr. Howe has supplied exactly what the reader wants—enough accurate information with respect to the personalities and events in the war to which reference is made so that the reader can better understand the letters and diary. The editor has quite properly left the reader to arrive at his own conclusions. We shall, however, look forward to Mr. Howe's interpretation of these writings when his definitive biography of the Justice is published." H. H. Bundy

+ Harvard Law R 60:665 Ap '47 900w

Manchester Guardian p3 J1 1 '47 160w

"On the whole these letters are dull. They no doubt have a value for historians and for students of the Justice's career and the Civil War's military history; and for long-time Bostonians. But the reader who is not a specialist will resent having to plow through so much that is insignificant to find so little that is interesting." D. T. Bazelon

Nation 164:577 My 17 '47 800w

Reviewed by R. A. Brown

Social Educ 11:332 N '47 250w

Reviewed by D. W. Brogan

Spec 179:308 S 5 '47 900w

Times [London] Lit Sup p410 Ag 16
'47 360w

"This collection of his Civil War letters, together with fragments of two diaries, makes a notable contribution to an understanding of Holmes' formative years. . . The real merit of this small volume is suggested by the title. It records primarily the impact of war on Holmes, and not of Holmes on the war. These letters should interest all who admire and wish to understand the character of the late Justice."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:39 Mr '47 270w

Wis Lib Bul 43:36 F '47

HOLSTIUS, EDWARD NILS. Angel's flight. 305p $2.50 Doubleday

47-3016

Life story of one Garnett MacRory, a handsome, self-made Irishman, who made his fortune in oil and bootlegging in America, and spent much of it in Europe before he died in the war.

Reviewed by William Lipscomb
Chicago Sun Book Week p7 J1 6 '47
360w

Kirkus 15:78 F 1 '47 170w

"Mildly recommended time-killer." E. F. Walbridge

Library J 72:528 Ap 1 '47 80w

Reviewed by Paul Bloomfield

Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 25 '47 50w

"In creating the figure of Irish-born Garnett MacRory, Edward Holstius has exercised more than is needed of everything but moderation... Around this dynamic favorite of fortune Mr. Holstius has built a novel of commensurate proportions—lavish in invention, panoramic in scope, plunging the reader into Australian dives, Hollywood studios, London drawing rooms." Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22
Ap 20 '47 240w

"For the most part Mr. Holstius tells a straightforward tale, with plenty of action and a variety of characters. But Garnett is disappointing, nor can all the author's assurances of how remarkable he is compensate for a lack of imaginative realization."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p209 My 3
'47 360w

HOLT, ELIZABETH BASYE (GILMORE), ed.
Literary sources of art history; an anthology of texts from Theophilus to Goethe. 555p il $6 Princeton univ. press

709 Art—History—Sources 47-31121

An anthology in English of key texts on art, covering the period from the tenth century to the end of the eighteenth. "In the book, you will find curious, recondite information on such matters as Michelangelo's poems, the form of contracts for religious paintings during the Renaissance, and medieval rules for the construction of arches. Illustrated." (New Yorker)

Booklist 44:129 D 1 '47

Reviewed by R. A. Florsheim

Chicago Sun Book Week p16a D 3 '47
310w

"All art historians recognize the incalculable value for their subject of literary source material. For this material not only vividly reveals the personalities and ideas of artists; it illumines the culture in which they created. While the most famous sources are well known, many have been heretofore difficult of access, many more unavailable in English. These serious handicaps to the study and appreciation of art are in great part eliminated by Mrs. Holt's masterful volume which offers to the student of art history the largest and most fascinating collection of literary sources yet published."

+ Commonweal 47:377 Ja 23 '48 800w

"Highly recommended." A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 72:1689 D 1 '47 100w

"The subtitle of this book indicates that it is a reference work addressed primarily to the scholarly reader, but the material it touches on... is frequently so fascinating that any serious amateur could hardly fail to be interested, too."

+ New Yorker 23:128 O 18 '47 130w

"The publishers modestly describe the volume as intended for laymen and student; rather than scholars, whereas actually I think it will be of the greatest use to everyone interested in the visual arts. To those, like myself, who read comfortably only one language, in addition to their own, the book is a godsend, not only for the instruction it provides, but for the surprises and lasting pleasure." J. T. Soby

+ Sat R of Lit 30:41 N 1 '47 120w

HOLT, GAVIN, pseud. See Rodda, C.

HOLT, STEPHEN. Prairie colt; il. by Wesley Dennis, 178p $2.25 Longmans

Horses—Legends and stories 47-30445

Leif Olson, a Canadian boy, trains two horses for racing at the Alberta Stockman's fair. One race was lost thru trickery, but the second of Leif's horses won an important race.

Reviewed by Martha King

Chicago Sun Book Week p17a D 3 '47
30w

"The author is not only wise in horse lore but knows intimately the Canadian country of which he writes. Drawings by Wesley Dennis are as true as the well-written story." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:442 N '47 100w

Kirkus 15:367 J1 15 '47 170w

"This is an especially good story with a fine characterization of a horse 'hero.'"

+ Sat R of Lit 30:55 N 15 '47 50w

Wis Lib Bul 43:135 O '47

HOLTOM, DANIEL CLARENCE. Modern Japan and Shinto nationalism; a study of present-day trends in Japanese religions. rev ed 226p $2.75 Univ. of Chicago press

299.56 Shinto. Japan—Nationality. Japan—Religion 47-31095

"Dr. Holtom is the top authority on this subject. When the first edition of his book was published in 1943 [Book Review Digest 1943] it became at once the standard work in its field. But the last word could not be spoken then, for great changes were impending which have now occurred. The revised edition adds chapters which bring the record down to date by discussing what happened after V-J Day—the disestablishment of state Shinto, the secularization of the Japanese social and political structure, the emperor's stepping down from the throne of his divinity." (Christian Century) Index.

Booklist 44:35 S 15 '47

Reviewed by F. S. Marquardt

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 S 14 '47
140w

Christian Century 64:1112 S 17 '47 170w

"This book won instant acclaim, when it first appeared, for its penetrating study of Shinto as the nurse and guardian of the national ethos. The new chapters are bound to cause more controversy, for history has still to validate their optimism. Mr. Holtom has already shown us that the roots of Shinto reach back much further than the recent militarist phase of Japanese history. He has not convincingly demonstrated that its evil potentialities have ended with that phase." Robert Peel
Christian Science Monitor p18 S 11 '47
420w

HOOPER, RUPERT JERROLD. Guide to boat-handling. 64p il $2 Delkin

797.125 Boats and boating 46-22676

"The purpose of this book is to help the new boatowner to learn the bare essentials of good boat-handling. It is written in the briefest possible form for quick reference." Foreword

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1715 D 1 '46 40w

"The small size and general inclusiveness of this little book make it almost a necessary part of the equipment of a motor-boat. A nervous new skipper, for example, can in three minutes find and read all the necessary information about how to bring his boat into a dock under any set of conditions." S. N.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 My 18
'47 200w

HOOPLE, ROSS EARLE, and others. Preface to philosophy; book of readings. 513p $3 Macmillan

108.2 Philosophy 46-6032

A book of readings in philosophy designed to accompany Preface to Philosophy: Text-book (Book Review Digest June, 1947). "Draws material from eighty-three people, including political rulers (Roosevelt, Hitler), fliers, journalists, poets, physicists, dramatists, ministers, radio-commentators, etc., besides some of the regulars in religious and ethical philosophy. These selections are conveniently grouped in accordance with the five-part scheme of the text. Short, helpful biographies of the above persons are appended." (J Philos) Index.

HOOPLE, ROSS EARLE—Continued

Reviewed by A. R. Turquette
Ethics 57:152 Ja '47 110w

Reviewed by V. C. Aldrich
J Philos 44:82 Ja 30 '47 650w

HOPF, CONSTANTIN. Martin Bucer and the English reformation. 290p il $7.50 Salloch

B or 92 Bucer, Martin. Reformation—England A47-1401

"The author deals with Bucer's life and work in England; his contacts with Cranmer; his relation with the Prayer-Book-in-the-making; his part in theological, ecclesiological and sociological discussions; his De Regno Christi; his attitude towards the Puritans; his controversies with Gardiner; and, finally, the influence of Bucer's Commentary on the Psalter upon the English versions of the Bible. Here Dr. Hopf claims to have made 'a small new contribution and discovery as to the relation of Bucer's Psalter to that of "Matthew's Bible", and another discovery of a Primer with Bucer's Psalms.' Many of the documents used in this work are given in the Latin originals, and some of the material is new." Churchman

"This book is for scholars only; but for them it must be marked as an important contribution to Reformation literature, and in particular to the question of Bucer's influence on the character of the Book of Common Prayer and of the Reformation settlement." F. J. Moore
+ Churchman 161:16 Ag '47 190w

"Mr. Hopf's book is detailed and thorough; and though it does not establish any startlingly new conclusions it confirms accepted views by its extensive exploration of manuscript and printed sources, accompanied by a serviceable bibliography."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p144 Mr 29 '47 1900w

HOPKINS, EDWIN. Inventors' magna charta; with 351 clauses. 268p pa $3 The author, 255 W. 43d st, N.Y. 18

608 Inventions. Patent laws and legislation

"If all the changes in the United States patent system that are advocated in this book were adopted, the lot of the independent inventor would be very much improved. However, there is probably no chance that the Government will adopt such suggestions as awarding substantial annual prizes to independent inventors or extending the term of a patent to fifty years. The book contains many ideas of the same nature. Nevertheless it should be interesting to anyone concerned with inventions, patents, or the current controversy over revision of the United States patent laws." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"On the whole the reviewer found that although many of the suggestions are interesting and some have merit, the author has failed to make a logical and convincing case for his suggestions." C. C. Monrad

Chem & Eng N 24:2704 O 10 '46 300w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:65 O '46

HOPKINS, MARY ALDEN (MRS E. H. JES-SUP). Hannah More and her circle. 274p il $3.50 Longmans

B or 92 More, Hannah 47-30078

"A leisurely conversation piece about an eighteenth-century writer whose works—poetic, dramatic, and religious—were exceedingly popular in their day but are now forgotten. Her close friendships with David Garrick, John Wesley, Dr. Johnson, and Macaulay, however, attest to a strong and attractive personality." (New Yorker) Index.

"The story of Hannah More's life is interesting, and Miss Hopkins has told it well. There is not a dull page in the book. She seems, however, to have been more concerned with spirited narration than with minute accuracy. She objects, rightly, to Hannah More's earliest biographers that they all but ignore the heroine's literary work. Yet she herself fails to provide a complete list of publications and exact titles. For such information the reader must look elsewhere. A more serious fault is lack of historical perspective. No treatment is going to reanimate Hannah's plays, poems, and her one novel; but the author is entitled at least to such benefit as they would acquire from historical criticism." C. A. Moore

Am Hist R 52:778 J1 '47 320w

Booklist 43:184 F 15 '47

Bookmark 8:14 My '47

"Miss Hopkins brings Hannah More and her circle to life charmingly after years of forgetfulness. Her subject was in no sense a genius, but she had a faculty of making friends of the best writers of eighteenth century England." B. L. Conway

+ Cath World 165:281 Je '47 300w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Chicago Sun Book Week p11 F 9 '47 300w

Reviewed by Cecelia Gaul

Christian Century 64:712 Je 4 '47 600w

"Perhaps the most refreshing and informative portion of the volume is the account of the beginning of the Sunday School movement in Britain, of which Mistress More was the spearhead, working with liberal members of the Church of England. . . . The work of Mistress More in this and other social fields, as Miss Hopkins presents it, not only casts new light on the character of this unusual woman of Johnson's circle, but provides a fascinating glimpse of a little-known aspect of her time." Millicent Taylor

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 F 18 '47 650w

"Somehow [Hannah More] never comes to life as a human being, nor does one get any sense of the life that went on around her."

— Kirkus 14:476 S 15 '46 120w

"It is easy to read and to enjoy but still just falls short of being the perfect biography. Recommended for all libraries." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 72:153 Ja 15 '47 80w

"Miss Hopkins's conscientious and pleasant biography is only at moments Stracheyesque, but it does strike a nice balance between genuine affection for a 'good woman' and amused wonder at the limitations which seem so much more obvious to us than they did to her contemporaries. . . . If Miss Hopkins's book has a serious fault, it is that the author is in some ways almost too modest. She can on occasion turn a very neat phrase, and it seems a pity that she is less anxious to cultivate this talent than to aim at a sometimes academic sobriety." J. W. Krutch

+ Nation 164:486 Ap 26 '47 1250w

"A full-length portrait of this fascinating woman, able, witty, in many ways remarkable, who played a vivid if minor role in the life of eighteenth-century England and was intimately associated with some of its most notable figures. . . . Miss Hopkins's picture of Hannah More is also a lively picture of eighteenth-century life. Its characters are understood as individuals, but freshly set against the social background in an agreeable comedy of manners. An entertaining book, it carries its solid research lightly." C. G. Stillman

+ N Y Herald Tribune Weekly Bk R p6 F 2 '47 1150w

"Miss Hopkins tells the complicated story of a complicated personality clearly and unpretentiously. She has done interested readers the courtesy of providing them with an index, and her reference notes testify to the extent of the research that has occupied her so long and so happily." Winifred Halsted

+ N Y Times p18 Ap 20 '47 750w

"An unpretentious book that humorously and skillfully evokes a dead age."

+ New Yorker 22:79 F 1 '47 110w

Reviewed by R. L. Schuyler

Pol Sci Q 62:478 S '47 230w

"Miss Hopkins not only makes Hannah's bright eyes flash and her quick tongue snap in this biography, but brings Hannah's 18th century world and its point of view directly to the reader." Jane Voiles

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 Mr 23 '47
280w

Springf'd Republican p10B S 28 '47
240w

Wis Lib Bul 43:37 F '47

Reviewed by M. E. Chase

Yale R n s 36:744 summer '47 850w

HOPKINSON, HENRY THOMAS. Mist in the Tagus. 249p $2.50 Little

47-3206

A young English typist goes to Portugal for a brief holiday. There she falls in with a strange group of sophisticates, among them two young German expatriates, Robert, a normal enough youth, and Leo, a poet. The time is just before the coming of war.

Canadian Forum 27:71 Je '47 30w

"A tale that might have had more impact if it had had more substance, both in characters and atmosphere."

Kirkus 15:196 Ap 1 '47 90w

Reviewed by E. S. Brown

Library J 72:808 My 15 '47 110w

Reviewed by Harold Brighouse

Manchester Guardian p3 N 15 '46
120w

"This is a much better book than I can suggest in a short account. Hopkinson's talents are of a delightful but subtle order, and in this novel he employs them to combine the atmosphere of a place and an experience, so that the beauty and mystery of the village are a part of the nostalgia of the young girl's holiday." John Farrelly

+ New Repub 116:30 Je 9 '47 150w

"It is a book which suggests to me at least five years of nostalgic application, yet the result is clear and crisp. I don't know whether it is possible for a novel to be too carefully and well-written. If it is possible, then Mist in the Tagus is a case in point. It belongs to a period. It suggests the late Twenties, and it strongly suggests Mary Butts. That it is set in Portugal seems a little wrong at first. One had thought these love-affairs always took place either on the Riviera or in Brittany, occasionally in Cornwall." Rayner Heppenstall

New Statesman & Nation 32:385 N 23
'46 130w

"'Mist in the Tagus' may be your literary dish—and it may not. It is sensitively written, with a sort of brilliant corruptness that reminds one of Hemingway's early 'The Sun Also Rises'. Scene after highly personalized scene—for it is through Caroline's eyes that we view Marinha and her new-found friends—is spectacular both in contour, color and in physical and psychological detail. Tom Hopkinson, an English journalist living in London, shows himself in 'Mist in the Tagus' an artist of ability at work with fine but putrescent material." F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10
My 25 '47 1100w

"'Mist in the Tagus' can be read and re-read because, like all good literature, it is open to many interpretations. Primarily it is a story of selfless love among people each of whom is struggling to escape from a trap—which is to say that it is about what concerns everybody, one way or another, today." James Stern

+ N Y Times p3 My 25 '47 950w

"A vivid, thoughtful story."

+ New Yorker 23:124 Je 7 '47 120w

Reviewed by Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p10 Je 29 '47
150w

Springf'd Republican p8B D 21 '47 90w

"One may seek in vain in this book for the faithful delineation of character or for any acutely observed trait of emotion or conduct. In its place we find only the analysis of the synthetic, which by definition must lack interest or value."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p575 N 23
'46 360w

HOPPE, CHARLES. Sons of the African veld. 190p il $2 McBride

47-2095

Mystery story for readers from twelve to sixteen. In it an American boy and his two friends, sons of Zulu chieftains, help to solve the mystery about an African witch doctor and a half-breed trader.

"An interesting and well-written story." Jane Cobb

+ Atlantic 179:130 Je '47 70w

"An exciting story which will be popular with the older boys who want high adventures in strange surroundings. Footnotes give meanings of the numerous Zulu words. Story has a good background of the wild animals and primitive way of living of the Zulu tribes." A. M. Wetherell

+ Library J 72:645 Ap 15 '47 70w

HORAN, MRS KENNETH (O'DONNELL). Mama took up travel; il. by Susanne Suba. 216p $2 Doubleday

817

47-1352

When Papa's bill to establish Rural Free Delivery failed to pass, the family decided to take a European trip, so that Papa could tell his constituents about the wonders of other lands. So the exhausting trip, engineered by Mama, took place. The author of other books of family memoirs: Papa Went to Congress, and Oh, Promise Me, describes the Inghams' progress thru Europe.

Booklist 43:223 Mr 15 '47

"Kenneth Horan has produced an antique that surpasses any in the shops. Her book is genuine as literature and is genuine as history in the larger and broader sense of that word. On top of that it is great fun." Kenneth Rockwell

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 F 9 '47
700w

Kirkus 14:607 D 1 '46 110w

"Obviously Mrs. Horan has never made a pretense of writing history and has the right to indulge herself in any extravaganza she can get away with. Perhaps she is amusing herself by trying to see what the reading public will swallow in the name of family reminiscences or whatever. But the proof of the product is in the reading. By this fourth book, the spontaneity of the Inghams has run down. Even without the anachronisms of the episodes scrambled together in this grand tour, 'Mama Took Up Travel' would have been an overstrained and tediously silly book." Mary Ross

— N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20
F 9 '47 800w

Reviewed by Lucy Greenbaum

N Y Times p12 F 16 '47 450w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p21 Jl 13 '47
200w

Wis Lib Bul 43:52 Mr '47

HORKHEIMER, MAX. Eclipse of reason. 187p $2.75 Oxford

149.7 Reason. Civilization 47-3414

"This book analyzes the disintegration of the basic concepts of Western civilization and the profound changes that human nature undergoes in modern society. The discussion gravitates towards the idea of reason as the core of Western philosophy, guiding all conscious human actions that are in accord with the idea of progress." Publisher's note

"Though the analysis is acute, and stimulating to further thought, there are some major defects. It is for instance sometimes difficult to believe that the writer does not mix his theories of knowledge with his moral reflections on the ways of man. . . . The book is written by an angry man, which in itself is no charge against it, for many men are angry, and with justice. But this book, by inversion a defence of reason, has a thesis mainly dictated by emotions, by its hates." Jessie Macpherson

HORKHEIMER, MAX—Continued
+ — Canadian Forum 27:237 Ja '48 700w

Reviewed by Edward Littlejohn
Commonweal 46:172 My 30 '47 900w

Reviewed by Glenn Negley
Ethics 58:75 O '47 1350w

"A suggestive and valuable book."
+ New Statesman & Nation 34:277 O 4 '47 210w

"Searching and illuminating inquiry."
Frances Witherspoon
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 My 18 '47 700w

School & Society 66:144 Ag 23 '47 30w
Springf'd Union p14 Jl 17 '47 120w

HORN, STANLEY FITZGERALD. Gallant rebel; the fabulous cruise of the C.S.S. Shenandoah. 292p il $2.75 Rutgers univ. press

973.75 Shenandoah (Confederate cruiser). U.S.—History—Civil war—Naval operations

"Historical-novelistic account of depredations of the Confederate cruiser, Shenandoah, successor to the famous Alabama, which preyed on Federal merchant marine and New England whaling fleets, and on Nov. 7, 1865, sailed into Liverpool to surrender to the British government." (Library J) Bibliography.

Booklist 44:103 N 15 '47

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Chicago Sun Book Week p6 S 21 '47 140w

Current Hist 13:356 D '47 60w

"This is tops as a true adventure yarn, and is history packed with a wallop for everyone with a feeling for the sea or maritime excitement."
+ Kirkus 15:420 Ag 1 '47 120w

"The material is of considerable interest, and could dispense with so much Grade-B dialogue and sq many paired adjectives. For readers who enjoy hopped-up history and can take a stereotyped style in their stride for the sake of a good story." E. F. Walbridge
Library J 72:1190 S 1 '47 130w

"This is the stuff adventure sagas are made of. Stanley F. Horn proves to be not the man to make use of it. He is a sound amateur of Civil War history with several published books to prove it, and no one writes more interestingly about the forest industries than he does in every issue of his 'Southern Lumberman'; but his narrative of the 'Shenandoah' is pedestrian and flat." E. B. Davis

— N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p35 O 26 '47 700w

"Mr. Horn has chosen to piece together an uncritical narrative of this cruise. . . The author exhibits a fondness for every scrap of eighty-year-old dialogue he can find. . . A comparison of Mr. Horn's book with the log-book of the Shenandoah, which is in the possession of the North Carolina Historical Commission at Raleigh, suggests that he has not used it, the basic authority for proceedings on the ship." W. B. Hamilton

N Y Times p24 Ag 17 '47 650w

"The book is based on fact but dressed up here and there with patently fictional embellishments, the style is that of a book for boys, and, considering the subject, it's quite suitable."

+ New Yorker 23:127 O 18 '47 130w

HOROWITZ, MRS CAROLINE. Treasury of play ideas for tiny tots. 93p il $1 Hart

790 Amusements. Handicraft 47-30206

"The section on play activities for children two to six, which was included in A child's treasury of things-to-do [Book Review Digest 1945] has been expanded with some new material added and brought out in a separate volume." Booklist

Booklist 43:243 Ap 1 '47

"The book is so well illustrated and directions for making toys are so clearly and simply stated that an elementary school child could use it. It will be stimulating for those interested in using waste materials for play experiences." E. M. Sunderlin

+ J Home Econ 39:522 O '47 170w

Kirkus 15:131 Mr 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Johnson

Library J 72:467 Mr 15 '47 40w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Jl 13 '47 180w

HORR, ALFRED REUEL. Log of the schooner Bowdoin; introd. and interpolations by Donald B. MacMillan; photographs and ornithology by Alfred M. Bailey; with contributions by other members of the crew. 140p il $2.50 World pub.

917.19 Bowdoin (schooner). Arctic regions 47-4793

An account of a vacation spent by a crew of landlubbers on a month's schooner trip to Labrador. It is "a casual memory book of that thirty-five-day cruise from Boothbay Harbor, Me., to northern Labrador. Mainly, it consists of an informal log kept by A. R. Horr, vice president of the Cleveland Trust Company; a photographic album and ornithological observations by the director of the Colorado Museum of Natural History." (N Y Times)

Booklist 44:88 N 1 '47

"This literary aftermath of the cruise, a joshing account of the hard work, the adventures and mishaps, the education of landlubbers, scarcely unfurls a new Conrad, but the good fun that was had by all hands is on every page." Austin Stevens

+ N Y Times p18 Jl 20 '47 190w

HOSFORD, MRS DOROTHY (GRANT). By his own might; the battles of Beowulf; drawings by Laszlo Matulay. 69p $2 Holt

398.2 Beowulf '47-3324

An adaptation of the story of Beowulf, suitable for grades six to eight. "This adaptation of the epic follows the original closely. A few passages, not directly connected with the main story, have been omitted; but nothing has been added, either in the way of incident or description. The author has tried to tell the story in simple and direct language and to preserve, in so far as possible, the atmosphere and quality of the epic." (p.66)

Booklist 43:312 Je 1 '47

"An inspired re-telling of the age-old tale of the mighty Beowulf."

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p10 My 25 '47 90w

"This well-designed, small book with its distinctive black and white decorative illustrations by Laszlo Matulay should be given a place in every home and public library as the best version of Beowulf available for children and young people." A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk 23:255 Jl '47 180w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 23:263 Jl '47 80w

"Mrs. Hosford has realized and made plain the original author's sense of the importance of his subject, as well as the sense of style—and at the same time she has made a virtue of the simplicity of the plot. . . Mrs. Hosford respects her hero. She does not make of him a Superman. 'By his own might' are Beowulf's good and noble deeds accomplished, and Mrs. Hosford makes these deeds important in the right way and for the right reasons." Helen Armstrong

+ Horn Bk 23:367 S '47 1550w

"There is a fair degree of accuracy in the accounts of the important battles and their outcome; there is scholarship of specific interest; but there is no hint of the rhythms, the surge, the vitality that has kept the poem alive."

Kirkus 15:168 Mr 15 '47 80w

"An outstanding retelling. . . The language is simple and clear and yet loses none of the atmosphere of the original. Very attractive make-up, both from the point of view of the print and the illustrations. Excellent for reading aloud. Especially recommended for those boys and girls who are at the hero worship stage." C. W. Field

+ Library J 72:818 My 15 '47 60w

"When the children who thrill to this story now come upon Beowulf in college, it will be not only as a college text but as an old friend. They will have a clear idea what Grendel and his mother looked like—a monstrous blend of beast, man and demon remarkably realized in these drawings." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 My 11 '47 400w

"In this adaptation for younger children the stories are retold in a stirring and dignified style, with just enough skillful deletion to satisfy the youthful reader's desire to get on with the story." Elizabeth Hodges

+ N Y Times p32 Je 8 '47 190w

San Francisco Chronicle p8 N 16 '47 110w

"At a time when the manufacturing cost of books is a very serious problem this new rendering of the Anglo-Saxon epic has managed to achieve dignity and atmosphere at a comparatively low cost. The drawings are in keeping with the text, the effect being that of an old manuscript."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:28 Je 14 '47 250w

Springf'd Union p15 S 24 '47 130w

Wis Lib Bul 43:121 Jl '47

HOSPERS, JOHN. Meaning and truth in the arts. 252p $4 Univ. of N.C. press

701.1 Art—Philosophy, Esthetics 47-2307

"The purpose of this study is to investigate certain questions which are of great import to those who are interested in the arts and esthetic theory. Redefining and clarifying the terms 'meaning,' 'reality,' and 'truth' in relation to fine art, Dr. Hospers compares their usage in logic and metaphysics as well. Representations in music, painting, and literature are seen as symbols, and necessary distinctions are made among those which are conventional or arbitrary, natural, and semi-conventional." (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Index.

"This is a useful and sensible introduction to the semantical problems of art and esthetics. It can be recommended on several scores. It is plainly and directly written, and, although 'analytical,' it avoids the jargon of the schools. . . If his analyses are not always definitive or exhaustive, they are usually stated with sufficient clarity so that we can determine what he has left unsaid. This is a considerable merit in a field which has not always succeeded in giving precision to its basic ideas." H. D. Aiken

+ J Philos 44:578 O 9 '47 2450w

"Sometimes Mr. Hospers sacrifices profundity to clarity, and at some points he does not seem to have sufficiently recognized the complexity of the phenomena he is describing. But in general the study, originally a doctoral dissertation, is sensible, and equally commendable for its clarity and avoidance of clichés."

+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 3:133 Je '47 240w

HOUGEN, OLAF ANDREAS, and WATSON, KENNETH MERLE. Chemical process principles: pt2, Thermodynamics; pt3, Kinetics and catalysis. [368; 303p] il pt2 $5; pt3, $4.50 Wiley

660 Chemistry, Technical (43-17574)

"Volume one of this work was published in 1943 [Book Review Digest 1943] and the present volumes complete the set. . . It is designed to serve as a college text; providing 'intensive quantitative training in the practical applications of the principles of physical chemistry to the solution of complicated industrial problems." . . . Volume I deals with problems relating to vapor pressure, critical constants and heats of vaporization. Volume II is concerned with the fundamental principles of thermodynamics and their application to problems involving the expansion and compression of fluids, power generation and refrigeration. Volume III discusses the solution of problems relating to the kinetic properties of industrial reactions, including homogeneous and catalytic reactions." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:891 Je 1 '47 70w (Review of pt2)

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1039 Jl '47 40w (Review of pt3)

N Y New Tech Bks 32:46 Jl '47

HOUGH, FRANK OLNEY. The island war; the United States Marine corps in the Pacific. 413p il maps $5 Lippincott

940.542 U.S. Marine corps. U.S.—Pacific ocean 47-30220

"Detailed account of the tactical operations used by Marine units to take Guadalcanal, Bougainville, Tarawa, Kwajalein, Saipan, Peleliu, Iwo Jima, Okinawa, and other islands in the march toward Japan. In effect, a military history for the layman, with essential factual data based on official American and Japanese documents, with enough references to some of the individuals involved to maintain human interest. . . Since the Marines were the assault troops, this is their story; related actions of the Army, Navy and Air Forces are outlined when necessary to round out the picture, but are not given in detail." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 43:252 Ap 15 '47

Reviewed by Herman Kogan

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Jl 6 '47 90w

"A contribution out of the ordinary, and one that is likely to stand up for a long time, in spite of its short-time perspective—a handicap the author candidly admits." E. B. Orr

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Ap 4 '47 380w

Current Hist 12:584 Je '47 20w

"Told with an economy of words which keeps interest high and yet presents a clear picture of the entire series of actions." J. W. Rogers

+ Library J 72:458 Mr 15 '47 140w

"A compact and readable volume, a far cry from the generally uncritical accounts of these same campaigns which appeared during hostilities. . . Major Hough has focused each campaign through the broad military aspects that distinguish it tactically from other operations, thus avoiding needless repetition of minor detail and giving his book the quality of being thought out, rather than merely assembled. It is a tactician's history, with a deliberate lack of emphasis on individuals, and almost as good an analysis of Japanese, as of American, strategy." David Dempsey

+ New Repub 116:32 Ap 21 '47 550w

"Not an 'official' history, but it is a full story of the marines' war, told by a marine and told in the first instance, I think, for marines, for their relatives, their friends and those who understand them. It is very well told, with a dry, professional flavor. It omits the 'Joe Blow' stories, but not the rare touches of wry humor." Walter Millis

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Ap 6 '47 1100w

"Major Hough does not intrude his own experiences. Though his book suffers from overstatement in many instances, he apparently sawed the capital 'I' off his typewriter before he began writing." Foster Hailey

N Y Times p5 Ap 27 '47 650w

Reviewed by Curtis Floyd

San Francisco Chronicle p24 My 25 '47 230w

HOUGH, F. O.—Continued

"This book is the most complete and authoritative report yet available on the Marine Corps operations in the Pacific Ocean." Donald Armstrong

+ Sat R of Lit 30:29 My 24 '47 400w

Wis Lib Bul 43:152 N '47

Reviewed by T. C. Mendenhall

Yale R n s 37:153 autumn '47 210w

HOUGH, HENRY BEETLE. Long anchorage; a New Bedford story. 309p $3 Appleton-Century

47-30298

The setting is mainly New Bedford, beginning in 1847, while the whaling industry was still flourishing, but the textile industry was rearing its not-too-welcome head. Russell Ashmead, non-conforming member of one of New Bedford's first families is the central figure, and his life is traced down to 1922.

Booklist 43:309 Je 1 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '47

"Good Americana this, a substantial slice of New England in the process of growth, regional values as New Bedford celebrates its 100th anniversary of 'city' status, and a good tale withal."

+ Kirkus 15:196 Ap 1 '47 170w

"The characters, dialogue, happenings all seem stilted, contrived, managed to a degree which makes the story of local rather than general interest." H. A. Wooster

Library J 72:809 My 15 '47 80w

"Mr. Hough is at his best in the early scenes, and his glimpses of the development of the cotton industry are notable but the narrative is not as sustained in plot as one could desire." George Conrad

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 S 7 '47 280w

N Y Times p12 Jl 20 '47 550w

Wis Lib Bul 43:153 N '47

HOULT, NORAH. There were no windows. 212p $2.75 Didier pubs.

47-30221

Character study of a pitifully broken old woman, who had once been quite a figure in Victorian England. While the German planes rained destruction over London Claire Temple lived on in her once fashionable home, with only an Irish cook and a dreary companion for company. Her memory was failing, but kaleidoscopic bits remained, and so she went on from day to day, now remembering things long gone by, now quarreling with the cook, but always terrified by the idea of being thought mad.

Booklist 43:255 Ap 15 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p17 F 9 '47 180w

"Despite the clarity with which it shows her pitiable present, this remarkable portrait of an old woman is appealing. The story, moreover, has a suspense that makes the book hard to lay down. Without deviating from plain and sometimes sordid realities, Miss Hoult shows the sweep of tragedy that is backdrop for the life of a small person who has failed to realize his or her potentialities. . . . It seems to me fiction of a high order." Mary Ross

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 F 2 '47 650w

"As character study—and the novel has no ambitious frame of action correlated with theme—the writing is competent and sensitive. The author reveals an extraneous devotion to the facts and personages of the Georgian period that sometimes mars the credibility of her main character, Mrs. Temple is apt at times to string out so many appealing quotations from the literature of the period that the reader may have the feeling he has opened to a page in Bartlett's. Otherwise, the musty mood and the fin de siècle tone are well sustained." Frederick Brantley

+ — N Y Times p10 F 2 '47 700w

"A remarkably skillful tour de force, but the question arises whether Miss Hoult is not wasting her time by studying meticulously and at such length so static a situation."

New Yorker 22:77 F 1 '47 140w

"Miss Hoult manages her story with astonishing skill. There are moments when disgust will take hold of the reader; there should be some such moments in this sort of story. But there are very few dull moments. Miss Hoult has achieved a tour de force of no mean proportion. A lot of readers will be horrified, but my guess is that they'll be led along irresistibly by Miss Hoult's fine talent for suspense." J. H. Jackson

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ja 22 '47 600w

"Norah Hoult's earlier novels have contained some of the most realistic and at the same time poetic writing that have come out of Ireland. 'There Were No Windows' enhances her reputation as a novelist. For those who have the courage to read it, it is one of today's most brilliant novels." Harrison Smith

+ Sat R of Lit 30:28 F 8 '47 500w

Springf'd Union p3 My 14 '47 130w

HOWARD, SIR ALBERT. Soil and health; a study of organic agriculture [Eng title: Farming and gardening for health or disease]. 307p il $4 Devin-Adair

631.46 Soils. Fertilizers and manures. Compost Agr47-140

"The purpose of this book is threefold: to emphasize the importance of solar energy and the vegetable kingdom in human affairs; to record my own observations and reflections, which have accumulated during some forty-five years, on the occurrence and prevention of disease; to establish the thesis that most of this disease can be traced to an impoverished soil." (Pref) The author has spent most of his life studying the various crops of England, Europe, the West Indies, Asia and Africa, as a trained soil scientist and bacteriologist. Index.

Reviewed by C. R. Everitt

Atlantic 179:152 Ap '47 100w

"The connection between healthy soil and immunity to disease has been upheld before by, among others, Drs. McCarrison and Wrench in England, but it is doubtful if anyone can equal the evidence that Sir Albert has accumulated. The average person is in no position to judge. He can only observe that Sir Albert Howard has challenged the whole basis of modern pathology with its intense specialization on the specific ill." Emerson Hynes

Commonweal 45:567 Mr 21 '47 700w

"A fascinating basic book on the relationship of biodynamic cultivation of the soil to health in plants, animals and humans."

+ Commonweal 46:69 My 2 '47 30w

"If Sir Albert Howard and his friends would be content to urge the importance of maintaining the humus content of the soil and of increasing it whenever possible, they would have the support of every modern farmer and agricultural chemist. But when they go further to assert that the artificial fertilisers, so called, are injurious to the soil . . . why then they are suggesting, in effect, that all the knowledge of the feeding of crops and stock made available to us by a succession of great men, from Lawes and Liebig a hundred years ago right up to the present day, has been founded in error. This is a serious charge, which calls for far more evidence than they have adduced so far if it is to be sustained." C. S. Orwin

— Manchester Guardian p3 D 27 '45 300w

"It is not good enough just to write off Sir Albert and his supporters as cranks. The evidence that they can produce, together with the not very noticeable success with which orthodox science is meeting the rising toll of disease in the plant and animal worlds, makes it highly desirable that comprehensive tests of the claims put forward in this book should officially be made. It is noteworthy, in passing, that the believers in the efficacy of organic manuring seem more eager for such a show-down than the more orthodox scientists and the purveyors of artificial fertilisers." L. F. Easterbrook

New Statesman & Nation 30:285 O 27 '45 380w

"This is an important book by a man who has few peers in agriculture and possesses a profound knowledge of the soil which is the foundation of our existence. It is to some extent a controversial book and as such an important sign of the renewed, living and growing interest in agriculture. . . . Every page of this book is filled with practical knowledge and stimulating ideas and speculations. It admits a blast of fresh air in the whole field of agriculture in a world which suffers from hunger, both in quantity and quality of food." Louis Bromfield

+ N Y Times p22 Ja 19 '47 1050w

Reviewed by E. J. Russell

Spec 175:292 S 28 '45 900w

Springfd Union p3 Mr 18 '47 90w

"Sir Albert Howard has much to say that is of importance, perhaps of very great importance. He has a case to present which is worthy of the closest attention. Unfortunately he does much to spoil his own case. . . . This is a question of manner rather than of matter. His is an uncompromising and polemical nature; and although he claims with justice to be a scientist he does not allow enough of that balanced and dispassionate attitude to facts which is the mark of the true scientist to appear in his writings."

Times [London] Lit Sup p568 D 1 '45 1900w

Wis Lib Bul 43:51 Mr '47

HOWARD, BEVERLY E., and STROHMEIER, WILLIAM DENGLER. You can learn to fly. 335p il $3.75 Prentice-Hall

629.13252 Airplanes—Piloting 47-2824

"This book has been written for the average person interested not only in learning to fly but in owning and using his own personal airplane for faster business trips or more pleasant vacation jaunts. Written in clear, concise, non-technical terms, it is more than a textbook on learning to fly. It is just the book for the person who has only a vague knowledge of things aeronautical but a keen desire to learn to fly and to own a plane." (Foreword) Index.

Booklist 43:342 Jl 1 '47

"Written in clear non-technical style by experienced pilots for those interested not only in flying but who also desire to own and operate their own plane for business and pleasure." L. A. Eales

+ Library J 72:814 My 15 '47 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:43 Jl '47

Reviewed by H. M. Davis

Springfd Republican p10B N 16 '47 110w

HOWARD, CLIVE, and WHITLEY, JOE. One damned island after another [the saga of the Seventh] prepared by HQ, AAF, AFIPR, Personnel narratives division, Norman S. Weiser, director. 403p il $3.50 Univ. of N.C. press

940.544 U.S. Army air forces. 7th air force 47-30014

A history of the Seventh air force of the United States army, from Pearl Harbor to the bombing of Tokyo, told as the actual experiences of the men who flew and maintained the planes. Illustrated with photographs. Maps on end papers. Index.

Booklist 43:153 Ja 15 '47

"It is full of stories that deserve telling—stories told here with names of men and places, often in the actual words of participants. It is especially rich and sound in its attention to the work of mechanics and service personnel, men whose achievements were less glamorous than those of pilots and gunners, but equally essential and equally heroic—and too often neglected in earlier accounts. This book has the real eloquence of the actual." J. T.

Frederick

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p6 D 15 '46 360w

Current Hist 12:152 F '47 50w

Kirkus 14:566 N 1 '46 90w

"'One Damned Island After Another' is perhaps the first official history to be so revealing of the everyday soldier, permitting him to express his feelings without curb. If it isn't entirely about top-rank heroes, neither is it caustic, critical or sensational. Without being in any way offensive to the War Department and, also, without being reined in by censorship, it does present the soldiers' viewpoint and opinion on everything from Japanese to goony birds, combat to sitting for months on an isolated atoll." P. J. Searles

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 D 15 '46 600w

"In spots, some parade-style writing has crept into an informal review, and although the authors have succeeded admirably in keeping out the chill military hand that produces 'authorized' accounts of the war, perforce they relied on official versions of some occurrences. This narrative is a belated medal to the so-called average AAF man. If it can't be worn in the lapel it has in its way a non-tarnishing glitter. The citation about the men in 'One Damned Island' says simply they did their job." A. S.

+ N Y Times p40 F 9 '47 500w

"It is fully documented with photographs and should be a must for veterans of the outfit."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 F 2 '47 100w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:60 Mr '47 240w

HOWARD, ELIZABETH. Summer under sail. 213p $2 Morrow

47-19423

Novel for older girls. It is the story of Clarissa Meade who lived in Cleveland in 1852, and whose grandfather was the captain of a Great Lakes sailing ship. During a summer spent on the ship she experiences both adventure and romance.

Booklist 43:274 My 1 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p8 My 25 '47 50w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 S '47

"A refreshingly lively period story of the 1850's. . . . Ships and love interest and a healthy point of view, in a story set in a charming atmosphere."

+ Kirkus 15:68 F 1 '47 120w

"Good period story with excellent background of the Great Lakes." M. A. Herr

+ Library J 72:645 Ap 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Je 29 '47 340w

"Mrs. Howard, who knows her early Middle West, as readers of 'Dorinda' and 'Sabina' will remember, neatly contrasts the niceties of social life with the bustling days of early shipping. This is one of her most substantial novels, a fresh and amusing one for older girls." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p33 Ap 27 '47 180w

"Humor, convincing background, and attractive, interesting characters make this an unusually good story."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:37 Ap 19 '47 90w

Wis Lib Bul 43:71 Ap '47

HOWARD, FRANK ATHERTON. Buna rubber; the birth of an industry. 307p $3.75 Van Nostrand

338.47678 Rubber industry. Rubber, Artificial 47-3221

Account of the rise and development of the synthetic rubber industry. The appendix contains reports, agreements, and other documents. Index.

Booklist 43:325 Je 15 '47

HOWARD, F. A.—Continued

"The whole presentation is factual and unbiased. This is a great tribute to the author, who was one of the main figures in bringing a synthetic rubber industry to this country and who was embroiled in the controversial period. One weakness of the book is the fact that it leaves the reader with the impression that the I.G. Buna-S and the U. S. Buna-S (GR-S) are the same. While the two processes are in general similar, there are significant differences which were important to this country during the emergency." E. R. Gilliland

+ — Chem & Eng N 25:2525 S 1 '47 500w
Reviewed by S. D. Kirkpatrick
Chem Eng 54:257 N '47 500w

"Howard's book gives valuable, and digestible, technical information on synthetic rubber. But, because its 'objectivity' is open to question," it should not be taken without an antidote." Darel McConkey

+ — Chicago Sun Book Week p3 J1 6 '47 480w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:814 My 15 '47 80w
N Y New Tech Bks 32:39 Ap '47
Springf'd Republican p10B S 28 '47 150w
U S Quarterly Bkl 3:265 S '47 300w

HOWARD, JAMES HARRY. Revised lapidary handbook. 220p il $3 The author, 504 Crescent av, Greenville, S.C.

736.2 Gems 47-2201

"Designed to provide practical instruction in all kinds of gem cutting for the beginner and the advanced amateur." (Subtitle) There is no statement of the changes in this edition, but at least two chapters are added: Advanced facet cutting, by G. G. Waite, and Cutting gems by hand, by C. C. Curtis and J. H. Howard. Many illustrations; bibliography and sources of equipment and supplies appended. Originally published in 1935 as Handbook for the amateur lapidary." Booklist

Booklist 43:55 O 15 '46

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 71:1129 S 1 '46 60w

HOWARD, JANET. Counting Katie; il. by deForest Cotton. [40p] $1 Lothrop

47-216

Picture story book about a little girl who counted everything from members of her family to dolls. It came in very handy when she planned her own birthday party. For age five to seven.

Cath World 164:382 Ja '47 20w

"Not an important book but may stimulate number consciousness." F. W. Butler
Library J 72:166 Ja 15 '47 70w

HOWE, CONSTANCE BERESFORD. See Beresford-Howe, C.

HOWE, MARK ANTONY DE WOLFE, ed. The articulate sisters. 249p il $3.50 Harvard univ. press

917.3 U.S.—Social life and customs 47-1143

"Josiah Quincy, president of Harvard University a little more than a century ago, had five lively daughters. They were pretty, witty, popular, and they were indefatigable letter writers and inveterate diarists: 'The Articulate Sisters,' M. A. De Wolfe Howe calls them, as the title of [the] book he has made of passages from their journals and letters. The Quincy home was a Federalist stronghold, and the earliest of the passages quoted by Howe—from diaries of Susan Quincy in the second decade of the 19th century—give intimate glimpses of John Adams, John Quincy Adams and other Federalist leaders. . . Other portions of the journals give especially full details of travel in the period—a carriage journey to Saratoga Springs, a voyage to Cuba." Chicago Sun Book Week

Reviewed by Fulmer Mood
+ Am Hist R 52:803 J1 '47 400w
Booklist 43:253 Ap 15 '47

"Howe has given these letters and journals appropriately informal editing, surrounding the generous quotations with adequate explanatory matter and pleasant personal comment. The book offers good entertainment and no little genuine illumination of the America of a century and more ago." J. T. Frederick
+ Chicago Sun Book Week p4 F 2 '47 290w

Christian Science Monitor p16 Mr 15 '47 950w

"These were the days when young ladies of social prestige kept journals, sewed and embroidered, sketched, went about to parties, and made innumerable formal calls. At times the accounts of the articulate sisters grow tiresome; at others, the reader may wish that the book were longer. . . The Articulate Sisters is skillfully edited and well illustrated." Claire McGlinchey

+ New Eng Q 20:426 S '47 700w

"The book contains delightful material. The historian, the student of manners and morals, the lover of biography and fiction, will find it, to quote its young authors, amusing, pleasing, and agreeable—and something more." H. F. Whicher

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 Ap 27 '47 950w

"To the historically minded, the prime interest of the collection is the background of the slow but steady evolution of social mores from the courtly tidewater Federalism of Washington and Adams to the startled recognition and final acceptance of the rowdy frontier egalitarianism of Andrew Jackson. . . We should be thankful for the growing number of well managed University Presses which give to the world these marginalia of history which can seldom and with difficulty find a place in the lists of the commercial publishers sailing on the full tide of mass production and high pressure publicity." Ferris Greenslet
+ N Y Times p6 F 2 '47 1450w

Reviewed by D. W. Brogan
+ Spec 179:438 O 3 '47 650w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:148 Je '47 200w

HOWE, MARK ANTONY DE WOLFE. Boston landmarks; with photographs by Samuel Chamberlain and reproductions of old prints. 133p $2.50 Hastings house

917.4461 Boston—Description 47-1111

Descriptions of twelve famous Boston landmarks, and some neighboring points of interest, illustrated with many photographs, and some lithographs and prints. Contents: Discovery and justice in Louisburg square; The House of many names; Old State house; Cradle of Liberty: Faneuil Hall; King's Chapel; Oldest North: Christ church; An old New North; St. Stephen's; From church to library; West End church; Charles Street meeting-house; Granary and Park Street; Burial ground and church; Frog pond and Common; Washington mounted; Public garden; The Hill. Index.

"An utterly captivating small book."

+ Kirkus 15:96 F 1 '47 80w

"I have spoken of this picture book as selectively delightful, for there is no Baedekerized comprehensiveness about it. Twelve landmarks are sufficient to give validity to the ancient truth spoken in jest that Boston is not a city but a state of mind; and these twelve, selected not without prescience from the welter of the present, do give one a conception of what the Founding Fathers meant the city to be. . . Mr. Chamberlain, Mr. Howe's collaborator, photographs with a faultless eye. His pictures have the wide focus which befits the out-of-doors, and are quite innocent of the photographic self-consciousness which is forever seeking to simulate an artist's drawing, exaggerating every shadow and seeking to endow the camera with a personality that is not its by nature. His pictures tell the whole story quietly and persuasively, and they are beautifully responsive to the time of day, dawn, noon or dusk." Ellery Sedgwick

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4
Mr 16 '47 600w

"While [the text] is entertainingly written and historically valuable, the 93 reproductions of modern photographs by Samuel Chamberlain and old prints are so clear and artistic as to fairly overshadow the text. . . This is a book to have and to hold for those visitors and residents who cherish the Boston scene as hallowed and unique." D. B. B.
+ Springfield Union p5 Je 17 '47 150w

HOWE, WINIFRED EVA. History of the Metropolitan museum of art. v2, 1905-1941. Problems and principles in a period of expansion; pub. for the Metropolitan museum of art. 268p il $3 Columbia univ. press 708.1 New York (city). Metropolitan museum of art

The first volume of this history appeared in 1913 and covered the period to 1912. The present volume goes back of the 1905 to 1912 period, and brings the history to 1941. Includes lists of benefactors, officers and trustees, the staff, and an index.

N Y Times p18 Ag 3 '47 230w
Times [London] Lit Sup p208 My 3 '47
700w

HOWLAND, LLEWELLYN. Southwest and by west of Cape Cod. 229p il $3 Harvard univ. press

917.4485 Buzzards Bay, Massachusetts
47-5293

"The account of the author's years from boyhood to manhood. During this period, part of his time was spent with an older relative, known as 'The Skipper.' Under the Skipper's tutelage, he learned many things, among which loomed high ideals and principles of living. The scene is on and around Buzzard's Bay, Massachusetts, with land headquarters at the Skipper's home, 'The Cottage,' in New Bedford. Many interesting yarns are told to the young man by the men and women who are natives of this area." Christian Science Monitor

"Mr. Howland's prose is tasty enough to make the mouth water, as in his memorable description of a Clambake (it ought to be memorized by those on the coast) or in his stories of Journey Cakes and Thumbing. . . He can make you feel the ruthless cruelty of the sea and ice as in 'Sim,' the most powerful story in the volume; make you share the glory that was Trafalgar; make you appreciate the skill and beauty of the terns as in 'Wind and Wings,' and remember the timeless delight of an old-fashioned Christmas as in 'Holly Days.' One emerges from this book with the realization that the 'right way' is not only the safest but the most rewarding." Edward Weeks
+ Atlantic 180:118 S '47 420w

Booklist 44:13 S 1 '47

"This is a delightful book." J. L. D.
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 S 6 '47
230w

"Recommended for the 'cut o' the jib and its trim.'" H. A. Wooster
+ Library J 72:1030 J1 '47 100w

"Mr. Howland has written a notable book, distinguished alike for its contents and for its style: vanishing ways of New England life described in English that is a pleasure to read." H. C. Kittredge

+ New Eng Q 20:417 S '47 650w
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 N
2 '47 180w

"Many a person who knew Cape Cod as it was twenty, thirty, fifty years ago has dreamed, I fancy, of writing a book about that fascinating community. But of those many, only a few have actually done it; and of those few, not many have done it well. Now along comes Llewellyn Howland with a fine, sentimental, flavorful book." M. C. Hastings
+ N Y Times p12 S 7 '47 600w

Reviewed by Gertrude Lawrence
Sat R of Lit 30:26 Ag 16 '47 320w

HUBBARD, CHARLES DANIEL. An old New England village; the people, the ways, the atmosphere of the olden days; drawings and hand lettering by the author. 107p $3.50 Falmouth

917.4 New England—Social life and customs 47-11649

"Completely regional, this [is a] record of the loveliness of Guilford, Conn. . . Labor of love, seven years in the making, with 10,000 words lettered by hand; pictures also were drawn by the 70-year old illustrator-author-letterer, former illustrator for old Youth's Companion. He has sketched fireside and doorway, kitchen-table and pantry-shelf, county fair and covered bridge, barnyard and parlor. Quotations from New England poets threaded onto author's pleasant prose." Library J

"Charles D. Hubbard has been successful with both pencil and text in capturing and preserving the atmosphere that prevailed in many New England villages during Colonial times. . . 'An Old New England Village' is the work of an artist who knows his subject well and one who has the ability to put it on paper with a feeling which should please not only New Englanders themselves, but those who get their first 'look' at New England through the book's pages." L. F. M.

+ Christian Science Monitor p20 D 6 '47
420w

"Hand lettering, handsome though it is, militates against straight reading. Attractive volume for the leisure moments of any citizen of this country, and especially nice for the nostalgic New Englander." A. S. Plaut
+ — Library J 72:1689 D 1 '47 100w

HUBBARD, MARGARET ANN. Flight of the swan [il. by Virginia Broderick]. 310p $3 Bruce pub.

Andersen, Hans Christian—Fiction 47-174

"Hans Christian Andersen said, 'My life was a fairy-tale,' and in her novel of the King of Fairy Tales, Miss Hubbard has told the story much as Andersen, in his lifelong love and trust of God, saw it. She has at the same time recorded with a gentle objectivity those tragic and foolish weaknesses which made him fabulous in the reserved and conventional Danish society of his day." N Y Times

Booklist 43:191 F 15 '47

"'Flight of the Swan' is presented as a novel, but it is actually fictionized biography and its simplified and somewhat superficial nature verges at times on the sentimental. Nevertheless, its subject is a fascinating one, and the paradoxical life it portrays should prove interesting to adults as well as to the teen-agers who will probably form its largest audience." Dorothy Sparks

+ — Chicago Sun Book Week p2 D 29 '46
400w

"All who loved Andersen's tales in their childhood will doubly enjoy this tale of his loves, desires, triumphs, and disappointments. An absorbing picture of the drive that activates genius. Recommended for all adults and older teen-agers." G. E. Cartmell
+ Library J 72:87 Ja 1 '47 100w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10
D 22 '46 320w

"The story goes simply, with incident and continuity in its own terms, and Miss Hubbard has real enthusiasm for her hero. There are some discordant notes, such as Jenny Lind's rejecting of Andersen, in the novel, by showing him his homeliness in a mirror. The great storm and stress of Andersen as living man and artist is quieted, too, by the novel's centrifugal love story. But perhaps the result is to evoke the Andersen we know best—the gentle and lovable teller of children's tales." M. F. Greene

+ — N Y Times p11 D 22 '46 450w
Wis Lib Bul 43:118 J1 '47

HUDSON, CLAUDE SILBERT. Collected papers; v. 1, ed. by Raymond M. Hamm and Nelson K. Richtmyer. 898p il $15 Academic press

540.8 Chemistry

"Dr. Hudson, whose sixty-fifth birthday is commemorated by this collection of papers written by himself and his associates, is at present Professor of Chemistry at the National Institute of Health. His lifelong interest in the chemistry of rare sugars and carbohydrate derivatives, is reflected in the 118 papers included in this volume. A second volume containing an additional 129 papers is planned. The papers, most of which have appeared previously in chemical periodicals, are grouped by broad subject into five sections entitled as follows: The forms of milk sugar, Enzymes; Preparation of sugars; Rules of isorotation; Lactone, phenylhydrazide, amide, and benzimidazole rules. A seventeen-page autobiographical sketch appears as a foreword to the present volume." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by J. K. Dale

Chem & Eng N 25:461 F 17 '47 370w
N Y New Tech Bks 32:28 Ap '47

HUESTON, ETHEL (POWELSON) (MRS E. J. BEST). Heaven and vice versa. 242p $2.75 Bobbs

47-30602

Two young girls and their widowed mother, living in rural New Jersey, decide to rent rooms for the summer. The arrival of the mother's sister complicates the situation considerably.

"Recommended for women who want to wile away an afternoon." M. A. Johnson
+ Library J 72:1107 Ag '47 70w

"This moderate-size tempest in a tea cup is enlivened by several romances of various vintages." Barbara Bond

+ N Y Times p24 O 5 '47 180w
Wis Lib Bul 43:142 O '47

HUGGETT, ALBERT JOHN, and MILLARD, CECIL VERNON. Growth and learning in the elementary school. 414p il $3 Heath

372 Child study. Education of children. Learning, Psychology of 47-870

"The book is designed to afford the teacher an understanding of the growth and development of children, of the new conceptions of the goals of elementary education, and of recent pertinent research on curriculum problems and to afford a review of methodology helpful in establishing an effective relationship between the child and his curriculum." (EJ School J) Chapter bibliographies. Index.

"Although never guilty of oversimplification for the sake of clarity, the book does avoid getting into water whose depth might repel the average teacher. Hence it will appeal to many persons who have hitherto been reluctant to undertake a reading program of professional literature. . . A few more illustrations would not be amiss, and many teachers will perhaps find some of the figures and tables a bit formidable, but, in view of the general excellence of the book, these are small faults. Brief selected references are appended to each chapter. The indexing is adequate." R. L. Henderson

+ EJ School J 47:532 My '47 800w

School & Society 65:152 F 22 '47 10w

HUGGINS, ROY. Too late for tears. 214p $2.50 Morrow

47-30603

Mystery story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ag 31 '47
50w

Kirkus 15:178 Mr 15 '47 50w

"Too Late for Tears" is not offered as a screwball item, but what's to prevent your taking it as a lark if you feel so disposed? In our opinion it is to laugh." Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12
S 14 '47 120w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p12 Ag 31 '47 110w

"Nice portrait of a casually vicious woman, told with economic realism and taut melodrama." Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ag 24 '47
60w

"Hard-boiled chiller."

Sat R of Lit 30:24 Ag 23 '47 40w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p9B N 9 '47 120w

HUGHES, ARTHUR MONTAGUE D'URBAN. Nascent mind of Shelley. 272p $5 Oxford

B or 92 Shelley, Percy Bysshe [A47-5768]

"This book has been written in order to demonstrate the high degree of continuity in Shelley's main ideas and the relevance to his poetry of their worth and weight. For this purpose [the author has] given a full account of the earliest writings in prose and verse to the year 1814 and focused the argument on the philosophical poem of Queen Mab. . . And since in him the boy or man was extraordinarily close to the artist and the seeker for truth, it seemed necessary to tell the story of his life to the spring of 1813, when the poem was sent to the press and a period of his personal evolution distinctly ends." (Pref) Index. Bibliographical note.

"Professor Hughes is a helpful if rather jerky guide; but he has little fresh light to throw on the essential experiences which Shelley was trying in his philosophy to explain." H. H.

+ — Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 28 '47
360w

"Prof. Hughes's book is in the main another study of Shelley's metaphysics, religion, ethics and politics. . . The book makes jerky reading; the car moves on through air-pockets of awkward rhetoric; around its way innumerable influences roll and countless sources are diffused, 'an ever-varying glory.' The journey is uncomfortable but rewarding." Humphry House

+ — New Statesman & Nation 34:74 Jl 26
'47 800w

Reviewed by John Heath-Stubbs

Spec 178:402 Ap 11 '47 750w

Times [London] Lit Sup p195 Ap 26
'47 2000w

HUGHES, BABETTE (PLECHNER) (MRS GLENN HUGHES). Last night when we were young. 251p $2.50 Rinehart

818

47-1169

The author describes her marriage, while she was a sixteen-year-old freshman at the University of Washington. Her husband was her drama professor. Most of the book deals with her attempts to assume a maturity which she did not feel.

"Her account challenges the classic reporters of the Jazz Age, for the girls' adventures are about as intoxicating as Coca-Cola, and her frisky gamboling toward maturity will hardly remind her contemporaries of their lost youth in the mad '20s. But her naivete is quite charming, and her running commentary on life almost Shavian. And she grew up into a pretty nice girl, too." O. C.

+ — Chicago Sun Book Week p8 Ja 26 '47
90w

"Very light, very gay, and most beguiling — this should find an audience."

+ Kirkus 14:558 N 1 '46 170w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p25
Ap 6 '47 240w

"Very refreshing book."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 F 16 '47
50w

HUGHES, CLEDWYN. He dared not look behind. 159p $2 Wyn

47-18442

A psychological novel. It is the story of an obsession which possessed a man so strongly that it impelled him to murder his wife.

"The tale, which might possibly have been an effective short story, has been stretched mercilessly until it is full of holes which the murderer's terror is not substantial enough to fill." James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p9 Mr 2 '47 80w

Kirkus 14:629 D 15 '46 90w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 Mr 30 '47 110w

"Written in a limp, Welsh-English prose, this weird spook sonata is twice as effective because of its rigorous underplaying—though Mr. Hughes, for all his nimble style, must constantly skirt the line that separates the truly horrific from the merely grotesque. Perhaps the best-written scene of all is the actual murder—which takes place in the dentist's chair and will rowl the reader's nerves as mercilessly as the dentist's own drill." C. V. T.

N Y Times p41 Mr 2 '47 170w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p13 Mr 16 '47 80w

"Murder method clever; writing good; but idea was better and less ludicrously handled in 'Beast with Five Fingers' and 'Monkey's Paw.' Tolerable."

Sat R of Lit 30:30 Mr 15 '47 40w

HUGHES, MRS DOROTHY BELLE (FLANAGAN). In a lonely place. 217p $2.50 Duell

47-31459

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week O 31 '47 140w

Kirkus 15:588 O 15 '47 80w

New Repub 117:29 D 22 '47 100w

"Show us a better writer than Dorothy B. Hughes when it comes to scattering mysterious horror, terror and general shakes among the devoted and willing customers. This time she'll upset you more than ever. . . Call it a suspense novel, a case history or a special Hughes mixture, the story hits a new high for sensational matter handled with the proper touch." Will Cuppy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 N 2 '47 220w

"Dorothy Hughes has often demonstrated her ability to depict mounting fear and suspense. This time it is the law that is the relentless pursuer, and there is no escape for the pursued." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p63 N 9 '47 270w

"One of Mrs. Hughes' better jobs."

+ New Yorker 23:135 N 8 '47 90w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p22 N 2 '47 200w

"Done without clinical trappings, this is excellently written and chilling study of periodic blood-lust. You may even pity the guy. For strong nerves."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:45 N 1 '47 50w

HUGHES, EMMET JOHN. Report from Spain. 323p $3 Holt

946.082 Spain—Politics and government. Fascism—Spain 47-4202

"An analysis of the Spanish dictatorship, including a censorious history of the Falange movement and a sympathetic but no less critical study of the Catholic Church and the unhappy role it has played under Franco. The author was in the American Embassy in Madrid during the war, and he claims that the Spanish resistance is not nearly as organized or as powerful as some hopeful foreigners think. He ends with a logical and stinging indictment of what he contends is our government's senseless and even dangerous policy toward Spain." (New Yorker) Index.

Booklist 43:357 J1 15 '47

"A brief review can not do justice to the thorough, logical, vivid and informative nature of this book which gives one a very real insight into the nature of the Spanish issue, the data on which a solution of the present impasse must be based, as well as concrete proposals for such a solution." G. M. A. Grube

+ Canadian Forum 27:116 Ag '47 650w

"This is not the book desired by those of us who are looking for light on Spain, those of us who have no love for Franco or his totalitarian rule. . . As reflected in these pages Mr. Hughes seems to be highly emotional and irresponsible. It is from another type of author we must await a report on Spain."

Cath World 165:477 Ag '47 200w

Reviewed by F. S. Marquardt

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Ag 10 '47 410w

"Mr. Hughes, who, during the war years was press attaché of the American Embassy in Madrid, confines his study to the political arena, leaving the economic and other phases of the situation untouched. But he brings to his subject a depth of insight and a freedom from bias that make his work a real contribution to this vital subject." Henry Sowerby

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 J1 16 '47 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 J1 '47

"It is where Mr. Hughes steps out of his rôle of forthright historian and assumes that of agitator, that I find most difficulty in following him. He has an arsenal of facts; he wants to avoid another civil war; his objective is the well-being of the whole Spanish people. Yet in view of the larger situation I find it difficult to believe that this is exactly the moment for intervention in Spain." Edward Skillin

+ Commonweal 46:268 Je 27 '47 600w

Foreign Affairs 26:227 O '47 50w

"A sound, informed appraisal, economic, military and political, of the Franco regime—especially during the war years. . . Required reading for an understanding of inside Spain today."

+ Kirkus 15:212 Ap 1 '47 170w

Reviewed by W. A. Kalenich

Library J 72:958 Je 15 '47 80w

"I do not know [Hughes'] work as a Luce reporter, but it should be excellent, for he is clearly a man of courage, integrity, industry, intelligence and clarity of vision. He is the best kind of objective journalist, because his objectivity never becomes pallid neutrality, but is always guided by a frank concern for moral values. Because of his Catholic background and his apparently happy relations with our wartime Ambassador to Spain, Carlton J. H. Hayes, his cold and devastating indictment of the Franco regime is as unexpected and impressive as was that of the British Ambassador, Sir Samuel Hoare, and even more convincing because Hughes writes so well." Richard Watts

+ New Repub 116:27 Je 23 '47 1250w

"Those who are concerned with Spain's fate and our share of responsibility therefor should find this the book they have been awaiting. As press attaché of our embassy and observer for our military intelligence in Madrid, Emmet Hughes was in a position to get accurate first-hand information on the Franco regime and the effect upon it of each of our diplomatic and military moves." B. D. Wolfe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 Je 29 '47 1150w

"The picture that emerges is frightening, but we ought to be frightened, and one can only hope that the right people read Hughes' book. . . It must be said that the going is often heavy, and detailed analyses of falangism, Catholic Action and the behavior of Franco during World War II, however valuable to students of contemporary history, aren't calculated to hold the ordinary reader. A more nearly chronological account would have made reading easier. Yet the task which Hughes set himself precluded a light, entertaining or sensational approach. Instead, we have a solid, serious, honest and useful book." H. L. Matthews

HUGHES, EMMET J.—Continued

+ — N Y Times p5 Je 22 '47 1000w

New Yorker 23:79 Je 21 '47 110w

"Here, at last, is a definitive, authoritative, and detailed study of Generalissimo Francisco Franco's regime from the end of the Spanish Civil War until today, eight years later, when it is apparently at a new peak in its power. The testimony and the verdict of 'Report from Spain' constitute one of the most resounding and devastating indictments of the regime that has yet been written by a serious and well-informed student of modern Spanish history." Robert Okin

+ Sat R of Lit 30:13 Je 21 '47 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p670 D 27 '47 1100w

"There is a good deal of factual information, and some rather careful analysis as well, in this book but the treatment, on the whole, is that of personal judgment by a quite provocative and also provoking writer. Although he, along with others, has not thought out a number of practical, but for that matter nonetheless compelling problems involved in the situation, his emotional desire to destroy all brands of Fascism including the Spanish, and presumably the Russian, is strikingly evident."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:286 S '47 240w

HUGHES, LANGSTON. Fields of wonder. 115p $2.50 Knopf

811

47-2075

Collection of lyric poems by a well-known American Negro poet.

Reviewed by Pearl Strachan

Christian Science Monitor p11 My 10 '47 550w

"A new volume of poems in which there is a slight, fragile, nostalgic charm. . . . Those interested in the development of Negro poetry will read this as a part of the Negro contribution, but scarcely for itself."

Kirkus 15:187 Mr 15 '47 80w

"Some of the short nature pieces remind one of Sandburg; others have the artless, child-like quality found in Vachel Lindsay. . . . But in still others the very simplicity seems shallow, or forced and contrived. The fault may rest not so much with the individual poems, but on the fact that their range of theme is too narrow, their lyric patterns too alike, to make an effective book collection." Ruth Lechlitner

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Ag 31 '47 230w

"For all its variety of subject matter, the collection seems monotonous in treatment. In spite of a certain individuality in Mr. Hughes' approach, there are such strong echoes of other poets that the names of Emily Dickinson, Stephen Crane, and a whisper of E. A. Robinson and Ernest Dowson (there are even two Pierrots and a Pierrette) keep coming to mind. . . . This matter of influences or resemblances is, of course, unavoidable and no censure of Mr. Hughes' work. His poems have their own qualities of delicate lyricism and honesty of vision, and undoubtedly many of them will appeal to the great audience now crying for verse that appeals to their emotions without being stereotypes of the Victorian models." Hubert Creekmore

+ — N Y Times p10 My 4 '47 390w

Reviewed by Arna Bontemps

Sat R of Lit 30:13 Mr 22 '47 950w

Theatre Arts 31:74 Je '47 160w

HUGHES, MRS MARY VIVIAN (THOMAS).
A London family, 1870-1900. 594p il $5 Oxford B or 92 47-4673

The author's trilogy: A London Child of the Seventies; A London Girl of the Eighties; and A London Home in the Nineties, in one volume. It is a detailed account of family life between 1870 and 1900, the story of "just an ordinary suburban Victorian family." Illustrated with family photographs and drawings. For reviews of separate volumes see Book Review Digest, 1934, 1936, 1937.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 12 '47 950w

"Written with a simplicity and sincerity and the power of giving life to the past." L. B. H.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 F 21 '47 250w

"It is nothing short of miraculous that she succeeds in holding our sympathetic attention for some 600 pages. . . . Because she makes no effort to colour her chronicle in any way, we feel we have before us an accurate photograph, rather than a picture, of her time."

Virginia Graham

+ Spec 178:88 Ja 17 '47 310w

HUGHES, PHILIP. History of the church; v3, The revolt against the church: Aquinas to Luther. 556p $4 Sheed

(35-5753)

270 Church history

"The picture of the Church and Western Christendom during the period this third volume of Philip Hughes's history covers—from the death of Saint Louis IX of France in 1270 to the year 1517, when Martin Luther hung out those 95 Theses in Wittenberg—is shadowed, mixed up, and, to a distressing degree, not pleasant reading. It is a period of turbulence and trouble, and, except for the local beauty of some saints and the Italian Renaissance, not a time of the flowering of a civilization but of its painful transition. . . . The material is given a kind of form, or argument . . . principally by two elements. The first is the author's clearly stated allegiance to Thomist philosophy and orthodox theology. . . . The second basis for the organization and comprehension of material is the dominant theme which Philip Hughes sees in the record and which he emphasizes in all his exposition." (Commonweal) Bibliographical note. Index. For earlier volumes see Book Review Digest 1934, 1935.

"Father Hughes condenses into his book of 525 pages an enormous quantity of information about the era. The excellent bibliography and footnotes and the text itself throughout show that he is using the most mature scholarship available, much of it accumulated over only the past decade or two. . . . It is an exciting kind of history to read. In a review there is no room to examine in any critical detail as large a thesis as this book presents. But many readers of this excellent history should find it a thoroughly interesting and rewarding operation." Philip Burnham

+ Commonweal 46:312 Jl 11 '47 1350w

"The five hundred pages of this volume are not equally interesting; but they are all lucid, succinct and well written. Fr. Hughes has written a masterly survey of the history of the papacy in particular and of the church in general; and where readers differ from his conclusions they will very probably find that their difference is of interpretation of evidence, perhaps of initial presupposition, rather than of the nature of challenge to the adequacy of his knowledge or to the authenticity of his evidence."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p341 Jl 5 '47 1450w

HUGHES, RAYMOND MOLLYNEAUX, and LANCELOT, WILLIAM HENRY. Education: America's magic. 190p maps $2.50 Iowa state college press

370.973 Education—U.S. Vocational guidance A46-4799

"Noting the spectacular marshaling of the nation's human and material resources in preparation for the war, the authors of this volume explain these achievements as the product of a system of education in which there is no denial of educational opportunity in terms of social and economic classification of segments of the population. The first half of the book deals with the procedures and the results of an appraisal of the school systems of the states in terms of selected criteria of accomplishment, financial resources, effort, and efficiency in management. The last of the chapters concerned with the evaluation of the school systems presents the results of the overall appraisal in the familiar form of a ranking of the forty-eight states on the basis of educational performance. . . In the latter half of the volume, consideration is given to certain educational problems which are viewed as vital to the continuing progress of American schools toward better performance and wider serviceability." School R

"The president emeritus and a professor of vocational education in Iowa State College discuss, with technical skill, a wide variety of educational problems, some of which are relevant to the current question of federal aid."

+ Christian Century 64:495 Ap 16 '47 150w

School & Society 64:335 N 9 '46 30w

Reviewed by N. B. Henry

School R 55:308 My '47 750w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:162 Je '47 240w

HUGHLETT, LLOYD J., ed. Industrialization of Latin America. 508p il maps $5 McGraw 338 Latin America—Industries and resources 46-8661

"A symposium on Latin American industry by thirty business leaders from the United States and Latin America. This book provides business men, exporters and leaders in all fields of industry and technology affected by the Latin American economy with a comprehensive, over-all picture of the present-day Latin American industrial system, from a practical point of view. It interprets and evaluates trade potentialities, analyzes economic trends affecting manufacturing activities, and attempts to anticipate the direction of future developments, in industries such as cement, chemicals, mining, metallurgy, textiles, food packing, power and communications." (Publisher's note) Index.

Booklist 43:284 My 15 '47

Chem Eng 54:281 F '47 300w

Foreign Affairs 25:709 Jl '47 30w

"Data covering names and affiliations of companies in various industries and plant locations and capacities add to the value of this work." W. E. Rudolph

+ Geog R 38:163 Ja '48 370w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1715 D 1 '46 70w

Management R 36:234 Ap '47 30w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:11 Ja '47

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:265 S '47 280w

HUHNER, LEON. Life of Judah Touro (1775-1854). 192p il $2 Jewish pub.

B or 92 Touro, Judah 47-462

Biography of an American Jewish philanthropist, son of the first rabbi of the Newport, Rhode Island, Jewish congregation. He went to New Orleans as a young man, and there in time became a successful merchant. Most of his money he spent in founding hospitals, and in helping churches and synagogues. Amongst other public gifts he gave the last donation which made possible the completion of the Bunker Hill monument. Index.

"The author had little to go on in creating this biography. His source material was mainly dull business documents and bookkeeping records of philanthropy, a good deal of which was hidden by modesty and anonymity. But he has recreated a striking personality." A. L. Sachar

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 My 4 '47 340w

"Mr. Huhner has written a carefully documented biography of a devout, generous and patriotic citizen and has included a great deal of interesting background in regard to Touro's origins and ancestry. It is the first full biography of this important American." N. K. Burger

+ N Y Times p12 Ap 27 '47 360w

HULL, HELEN ROSE. Octave; a book of stories. 311p $3 Coward-McCann

47-31289

Five short stories and three novelettes. Contents: The debt; Caddis fly; Believe the heart; The secret foe; I have four sons; The telling of the bees; The saw-whet owl; It all begins again.

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 S '47

"Three long stories and five shorter ones, apparently written over the last eight or ten years, give in this book a good cross-section of qualities for which readers look in Miss Hull's writing. Miss Hull looks at her characters with a calm, interested gaze that does not ignore their petty self-deceptions, trivialities or deeper faults. By and large, she likes people and thus is free to understand cantankerousness and other erratic paths that human nature takes. Coupled with her high technical ability, her approach makes for stories that have warmth as well as sensitiveness and a perspective beyond the individuals immediately concerned." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 N 9 '47 450w

"For those in search of reading that will put no tax upon the intellect or the emotions, the group of eight stories in 'Octave' is ready made. Those who look to fiction to provide them with new experiences and rich-textured memories are likely to be disappointed." E. S. Holsaert

+ N Y Times p24 O 12 '47 230w

"All so competently written that it may seem uncivil to remark that only one—'The Saw-Whet Owl,' about a man who has been notified that his son is missing in the war—has enough emotional content to rise above mere realistic reporting."

New Yorker 23:105 O 4 '47 60w

HUMPHREY, ZEPHINE (MRS WALLACE WEIR FAHNESTOCK). Book of New England; il. by Thomas P. Robinson. 292p $3.50 Howell, Soskin

974 New England

47-4304

Twenty-seven essays on as many aspects of New England life. Partial contents: The town meeting; Meeting houses; Taverns; Roger Williams, Thomas Hooker; Female seminaries; Railroads; Puritan children; Doctors and medicine; Heretics and witches; Lighthouses; Peddlers and artists; Graveyards; Nantucket; The Mathers; Weather.

Christian Century 64:1082 S 10 '47 320w

"Not exactly new in material or point of view, but pleasing to lovers of New England wherever they may be, is Zephine Humphrey's 'A Book of New England.' . . The illustrations, from pencil drawings by Thomas P. Robinson, are exquisite. . . The book would make a pleasant accompaniment to an automobile trip through New England, for persons who like to know something of the past or what they see." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 12 '47 600w

"Her material seems to have been gleaned from other books, and to have passed through her typewriter without flavoring. Sometimes she hasn't even read accurately. Herman Melville, for example, never lived in Lenox. Ask anybody from Pittsfield. The book has many pleasant sketches by Thomas P. Robinson." W. P. Eaton

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly R p12 Jl 27 '47 140w

"The author's piece on 'Female Seminaries' is outstanding; likewise her essay on 'Peddlers and Artists.' Her study of New England weather is a gem, and she writes with high historical detachment—and entertainingly at that—about its graveyards. This last amounts

HUMPHREY, ZEPHINE—Continued to something of a feat, even for an author long exposed to this happy hunting ground for historians past and present. Her pieces are interlaced with delicate sketches by Thomas P.
Robinson." James Lyons
+ N Y Times p24 Ag 3 '47 180w
San Francisco Chronicle p24 S 14 '47
170w

"New Englanders everywhere will find many familiar anecdotes and seafaring yarns in Zephine Humphrey's latest work, 'A Book of New England.' Any New Englander can relate these stories from memory, having heard them before an open fire in his childhood. But that doesn't take away one whit from their flavor. . . Thomas P. Robinson, a Massachusetts artist, adds to the volume with some excellent pencil drawings." L. F. Morris
+ Sat R of Lit 30:24 Ag 16 '47 220w
Springf'd Union p4 S 5 '47 150w

HUMPHREYS, DENA. Zoo book. 38p il $2 Holt 599 Animal pictures, Zoology—Juvenile literature 47-3195
Photographs and informative text on the animals to be found in the zoo.

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 23:262 Jl '47 30w
Kirkus 15:237 My 1 '47 120w

"Author has presented her facts simply, accurately and in an unusually readable manner.
Clear photographs." Margaret Miller
+ Library J 72:894 Je 1 '47 30w

"I never saw a book of zoo-animal pictures
I didn't like, but this one I like best, and I think young children will. This is not only for the pictures—large photographs reproduced with uncommon clarity, each showing an animal in a characteristic, natural pose—but for the accompanying text, which tells just what a little child wants to know in the way he wants it told." M. L. Becker
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4
Je 1 '47 180w

"While the material is educational, it is given so informally and with such understanding that the book is free of the stiffness and stiffness of most fact books. The photographs have been chosen from the ample collection made by experts for the New York Zoological Society and emphasize the points made in the text." Lois Palmer

+ N Y Times p25 Jl 20 '47 200w
+ Sat R of Lit 30:29 Je 14 '47 20w
Springf'd Republican p18A O 12 '47 90w
Wis Lib Bul 43:121 Jl '47

HUMPHREYS, ROBERT ARTHUR. Evolution of modern Latin America. 176p maps $3
Oxford
980 Latin America—History 46-8003
For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

"The literary style is good throughout; the thirteen maps are small but helpful; and the three-page 'Note on Sources of Information' is a handy guide for further reading." A. P.
Whitaker

+ Am Hist R 52:579 Ap '47 400w

"For sound and constructive thinking on the development and problems of modern Latin America, this book may well be recommended to everyone interested in the field. It is unfortunate perhaps that a chapter has not been given to cultural and religious factors in the picture." J. A. Magner

+ Commonweal 45:525 Mr 7 '47 900w
Foreign Affairs 25:532 Ap '47 30w

"The author is well acquainted with the entire range of literature in the fields treated, making especially abundant use of American rather than British sources. The summaries of controversial matters and underlying trends are clear and solid, undogmatic, a little cautious. They contain nothing particularly new for the well informed but serve efficiently their purpose as a general introduction to the viewpoints, problems, and literature on modern Latin America." B. D. Wolfe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20
F 16 '47 330w

"This short book brings little that is new on modern Latin America, but does it so well that it should prove eminently useful to the casual reader, or to the thoughtful southbound traveler. There is succinct description of the land and the peoples; a quick retelling of the story of the conquerors, of the settling of the land, of the coming of migrants, and of the movements of emancipation which created the modern states. An able chapter on democracy and dictatorship will aid the reader in understanding the news stories out of Latin America." Hubert Herring

+ N Y Times p29 Ap 13 '47 750w
San Francisco Chronicle p13 Mr 2 '47
90w

HUMPHRIES, ROLFE. Forbid thy ravens; didactic and lyrical poems. 50p $2.50 Scribner 811 47-11016

A fourth book of lyrical poems by a young American writer, who in 1946 won the Shelley memorial award given annually to a poet of outstanding distinction.

Kirkus 15:389 Jl 15 '47 90w

"Rolfe Humphries's poetry is colloquial in tone, humane in spirit, accomplished in form.
Its pure lucidity has sometimes been mistaken for shallowness, but this is the penalty he has had to pay for not allowing his work to be merely witty or merely contemplative. . . Rolfe Humphries, though he deliberately limits his range and 'communicates' in the conventional sense, is truly one of our more valuable and original contemporary poets." M. L. Rosenthal
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5
D 28 '47 500w

"The most impressive feature of Rolfe Humphries' fourth book of poetry is the ease with which it uses traditional techniques. The meters are neat and sure; the rhymes, with the exception of a few false ones, are accurate.
And only seldom is this surface brilliance dulled by a suggestion of padding by attenuation of grammar or near redundancy in order to achieve the necessary rhyme. Unfortunately this polish does not always extend beyond the lines and into the texture of Mr. Humphries' language and thought." Hubert Creekmore
+ N Y Times p36 D 7 '47 500w

"The poems in this volume suffer more from a general failure to achieve than from any outright faults or obvious lapses. Mr. Humphries displays sensitivity and restraint; he has a good ear and the ability of a talented craftsman to manage meter and rhyme without being managed by them. He possesses the taste and discipline to avoid on the whole both the obviously sentimental and the grandiloquent. . .
If these virtues make for polish, urbanity, and verse which, on the whole, is very easy to read, they do not necessarily make for depth of perception or a high degree of originality in the expression. And there are a few poems where all, by the end, is quicksand or marsh."
Fleming MacLiesh

+ Sat R of Lit 31:17 Ja 10 '48 550w

HUNGERFORD, EDWARD. Men of Erie; a story of human effort. 346p il maps $3.75
Random house

385 Erie railroad 47-231
For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

Reviewed by H. S. Hayward
Christian Science Monitor p14 Ja 30 '47
650w

Reviewed by Wayne Andrews
Commonweal 46:149 My 23 '47 260w

"There are two publics for this book—one, the historically minded, and the other, the group that has traveled the Erie between New York and Buffalo, that has scented the fine aroma of the (still standing) terminal at Jersey City, and that has laughed at the whimsies that have grown up around it." E. F. Allen

+ N Y Times p30 Ja 26 '47 550w

"The story of the Erie Railroad is one of the most heartwarming in the history of American business. The managers of this railroad proved their mettle in an unequal and for a long time, losing battle against seemingly hopeless odds. That they succeeded finally is the ultimate tribute to their merit. It is to Mr. Hungerford's eternal credit that he has been the first to portray this story in its true light." E. L. DeGolyer

+ Sat R of Lit 30:17 F 22 '47 550w

"In his genial, offhand manner, [the author] easily manages to skirt the edges of various scandals, including those of the Gould-Fish-Drew era, in order to concentrate on his saga of the heroic efforts of hosts of lesser men to keep the Erie running. . . The pictures are numerous, though rather unremarkable for so photogenic a railroad, and are excellently processed. The author's romantic love for his subject somewhat restricts the appeal of the book. It is, however, a worthy piece of Americana, of some significance to historians of the present transitional period in American railroads."

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:165 Je '47 160w

HUNT, BARBARA. A little night music. 244p $2.75 Rinehart

47-3103

"This is a preoccupation with death—those who are about to die, and those who know that death is near. Ex-GI, Henry J. Stubbs chances into Gavin Macdowell's life just when Gavin realizes his death is momentarily due, and that the problem of providing for his deaf, unlovely daughter must be faced. It is to Henry that Gavin's bookstore offers a refuge, and it is Henry whose quantum mechanics distill Gavin's fore-knowledge of death, solve the question of Gavin's daughter, Henry's experience with death in the war helps the explanation of death as part of life, as more important than atoms, or money." Kirkus

"'A Little Night Music' is animated by sympathy for the unregimented mind and by anger at various types of bigotry, and its sincerity carries one along over many small improbabilities of incident and dialogue. The style is fluent and conventional, with a few four-letter words thrown in for the sake of realism, and looking ill at ease." George Dillon

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Jl 6 '47 360w

"A twilight threshold book that explores the clarification of ideas, of prisoners in time, unfitted cogs, of one man's pitiful romance. Something more along the lines of Frank Baker's audience."

Kirkus 15:197 Ap 1 '47 120w

"It is full of improbable conversations (chiefly about space-time continuum and the atomic bomb), and is pretentious, not too well integrated, and occasionally offensive. The title of Mozart's gay and aristocratic music deserves a better fate than this. Not recommended." E. F. Walbridge

— Library J 72:809 My 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 Ag 24 '47 150w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Jl 20 '47 150w

"We shall never remember either Gavin Macdowell or Henry Stubbs. They are too dim of outline, too flat in dimension. We shall remember the talking, however. Those who are somehow drawn to read this book will be audience to some exciting speculation on science and ethics, and on time as a dimension in a deathless world. Nobody talks quite so passionately and at such impeccable length, about such abstractions, of course, and that will seem a pity." N. L. Rothman

+ Sat R of Lit 30:27 Jl 19 '47 230w

HUNT, BEN. See Hunt, W. B.

HUNT, EVELYN HUSTIS. Music time; songs for children from two to seven; il. by Eileen Evans; introd. by Mary S. Fisher. 48p $2.50 Viking

784 Children's songs 47-2455

"Collection of international, American songs written in major and minor keys to fit the needs of the small child's voice. Many suggest games which will delight both teacher and pupil. This book has grown out of the author's wide experience with children and music. Introduction by Mary S. Fisher, child psychologist." Library J

Booklist 43:297 My 15 '47

"Some of the forty-five songs included here are accompanied by suggestions for rhythmic activity and dramatic play, some are made by children, others are drawn from folk tunes. All have practical value to those who work with young children." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:223 My '47 90w

"Parents and teachers will find this book an invaluable aid to early music enjoyment."

+ Kirkus 15:221 Ap 15 '47 80w

"Recommended for ages 4-6." S. J. Robinson

+ Library J 72:737 My 1 '47 60w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ap 27 '47 310w

Reviewed by Lois Palmer

N Y Times p20 Jl 27 '47 200w

Sat R of Lit 30:28 Je 14 '47 70w

HUNT, FRAZIER, and HUNT, ROBERT. I fought with Custer. See Windolph, C. A.

HUNT, FREDERICK (JOHN FITZGAY, pseud). Royal physician. 317p $3 Roy. pubs. 47-2741

Historical novel based on intrigue, secret agents, plot and counterplot at the court of King Christian of Denmark in the 1770's.

"These actors precipitate enough crises to satisfy even the most jaded reader or motion picture producer. Struensee, shrewd, capable, magnetic, dominates the book, but Fitzgay is most successful with the demented King Christian and his besotted roarings, his night terrors and his violent deeds. With some of the other characters, however, the author is less successful. 'Royal Physician,' like a good deal of recent historical fiction, fails to achieve real success because many of its characters, fail to materialize as human beings." William Peden

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Jl 13 '47 350w

"Contrived, but decorative, if you like this sort of thing."

Kirkus 15:76 F 1 '47 130w

"Too much history plus too many characters make dull going. For inveterate historical fans only." Jayne Doughman

Library J 72:462 Mr 15 '47 80w

"The dialogue is at times incredibly complicated as plotter attempts to outwit plotter, and the author frequently resorts to such hackneyed means of expression as torture racks and forged documents. . . In an attempt to catch the spirit of the eighteenth century, Mr. Fitzgay has struck off a stiff, extremely formal style that puts involved, unpronounceable sentences into the mouths of his characters. With all due respect to Mr. Fitzgay's erudition, it is difficult to believe that any human being, in any century, could talk so ornately or balance complex sentences with such grammatical and syntactical precision." Stephen Stepanchev

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20 Ap 13 '47 60w

"Doubtless, dynastic headaches were important in 1770, but it's not easy to take them seriously today. Nor does Mr. Fitzgay try to. He has made them, instead, merely grist for a tongue-in-cheek melodrama of court intrigue, flashing swordplay and hugger-mugger in Copenhagen." Richard Match

+ N Y Times p16 Ap 27 '47 500w

HUNT, HARRISON. Murder picks the jury. (Mystery house publication) 224p $2 Curl 47-11783

Mystery story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun Book Week N 21 '47 70w

"Definitely declassée."

— Kirkus 15:558 O 1 '47 60w

"The courtroom procedure is most unorthodox and equally unconvincing. Aside from the verdict of acquittal, the most important result of the trial is that Lee, whose past career as a lawyer has been wrecked by one mistake, finds that life is once more worth living." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p50 N 30 '47 180w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p30 N 23 '47 90w

"Fair."

Sat R of Lit 30:40 N 29 '47 40w

HUNT, HOWARD. Stranger in town, 282p $2.50 Random house 47-1651

Story of a returned veteran, in civil life a sculptor, and his struggles to readjust his life and thinking interrupted by his memories of past experiences, martial and amorous.

"It's lush, but vivid; it's sordid on a deluxe scale, and libraries will want to check it over."

Kirkus 14:624 D 15 '46 170w

Reviewed by H. W. Hart

Library J 72:320 F 15 '47 110w

"As a study of the functional Manhattan playboy with the added embellishment of artistic gifts, 'Stranger in Town' is fluent, frank and tailored. Mr. Hunt's cafe society has the authentic gloss, and its brawls and infidelities are conducted according to protocol. But in draping the mantle of hero around Major Fleming's shoulders, and transcribing his global wisdom after listening to news broadcasts, he does too glib a job of salesmanship."

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22 Mr 16 '47 270w

Reviewed by Florence Crowther

N Y Times p41 Mr 2 '47 400w

HUNT, MABEL LEIGH. Double birthday present; il. by Elinore Blaisdell. 55p $1.50 Lippincott 47-4087

Story of the little Quaker twins, Sophie and Susie, whose grandfather made them an unusual birthday gift. The double rocking chair worked beautifully while the twins were friends, but when they quarreled their grandfather had to take drastic measures to settle the difficulty.

Booklist 44:38 S 15 '47

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

Christian Science Monitor p4 S 9 '47 170w

Churchman 161:17 D 1 '47 40w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '47

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 23:354 S '47 50w

"Mabel Hunt has a gift for friendly telling of simple, might-be-true stories, which have a regional and period flavor. Detailed, realistic drawings."

+ Kirkus 15:337 J1 1 '47 90w

"Well written. . . Recommended for ages 5-9." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 72:1114 Ag '47 70w

"I think this the prettiest story Mabel Leigh Hunt has told, and many little children know how pleasant all her stories have been. Now she takes that happy subject, twins, and with conversations in the charming speech of Quakers in daguerrotype days, and with Miss Blaisdell's lovable pictures of this period, unfolds the tale of Susie and Sophie Gooding just before and after their seventh birthday." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 S 7 '47 360w

Reviewed by S. C. Gross

N Y Times p27 S 28 '47 150w

"A very gay and amusing tale."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:29 Je 14 '47 70w

Wis Lib Bul 43:133 O '47

HUNT, WALTER BERNARD. Building a log cabin. 100p il $2.75 Bruce pub.

728.74 Log cabins 47-1924

"This book is the outgrowth of the author's own experience in log-cabin construction. It was suggested by the many questions about the subject put to him the past few years by prospective builders and other interested persons. To encourage and assist such individuals this work is expressly written." (Introd) Includes material on selecting the site, materials, methods used in building chimneys, fireplaces, and cabin itself, as well as on lighting, heating, and the reconditioning of old cabins.

Booklist 43:327 Je 15 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:531 Ap 1 '47 60w

HUNT, WALTER BERNARD. More Ben Hunt whittlings. 107p il $2.50 Bruce pub.

736.4 Wood carving 47-30375

"Follows Ben Hunt's whittling book [Book Review Digest 1944] with projects progressively more difficult, including human figures, groups, and caricatures, as well as birds and animals." Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 43:355 J1 15 '47

Wis Lib Bul 43:114 J1 '47

HUNTER, ARCHIBALD MACBRIDE. Introducing the New Testament. 123p $1 Presbyterian bd.

225.6 Bible. New Testament—Introductions 46-2688

"The author, sometime professor of New Testament Greek in Mansfield College, Oxford, aims to 'present the New Testament to the ordinary reader as it appears in the light of modern scholarship.' He tells the non-professional reader all he would care to know about New Testament 'problems.'" Christian Century

"One would welcome additional chapters on the New Testament books which are not specifically discussed—but as it is, the book is worth more than its price."

+ Christian Century 63:593 My 8 '47 130w

Reviewed by R. P. Casey

J Religion 27:154 Ap '47 270w

HURD, EDITH (THACHER) (MRS CLEMENT HURD). Benny, the bulldozer; il. by Clement Hurd. [33p] $1.25 Lothrop 47-30891

The story of a bulldozer who at first didn't want to work in the country building a road, but was finally persuaded to help the other machines when the Road Superintendent took a hand in the argument.

Chicago Sun Book Week p7a N 19 '47 120w

Kirkus 15:465 S 1 '47 80w

"A good story and enough factual material to satisfy little boys from five to ten who like machinery." N. L. Rathbun

+ Library J 72:1381 O 1 '47 60w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 D 14 '47 270w

"This book proves again the ability of the Hurds to combine story with actual facts and descriptions of how giant machines of today function. For 5 to 10 year olds." Lois Palmer

+ N Y Times p61 N 9 '47 140w

"Children who like realistic picture books will have lots of fun with this story."
+ Sat R of Lit 30:38 N 15 '47 40w

HURST, FANNIE (MRS J. S. DANIELSON).
Hands of Veronica. 278p $2.75 Harper
47-1462

A saintly-looking girl, born and raised in Brooklyn, is the subject of the book. Veronica had inherited a knack of using her hands to help people in pain. When she massaged a little child who had never walked a step and the child proceeded to walk, her fame, and her troubles started. The rest of the story attempts to explain Veronica's gift, and to reconcile science and religion.

Reviewed by Olive Carruthers

Chicago Sun Book Week p5 F 2 '47
430w

"A queer and not wholly pleasant story."
Kirkus 14:557 N 1 '46 250w

Reviewed by Harold Brighthouse

Manchester Guardian p3 My 2 '47 120w

Reviewed by George Conrad

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16
F 9 '47 380w

"Writing in her usual emotional style, Miss Hurst has slowed down her pace with unilluminating talk about God and miracles without seriously weakening her melodrama. The scientific pretension (which might shock medical men if they bothered to take such books seriously) is her unsuccessful effort to be hard-headed and 'humanitarian' at the same time. Deifying science, she would seem to be encouraging a new brand of atomic-age superstition." Nona Bala-kian

N Y Times p16 Ja 26 '47 700w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p13 Mr 2 '47
400w

Reviewed by E. H. Dexter

Springf'd Republican p8R D 21 '47 150w

"Somehow the novel misses fire, perhaps because of the vein of sentimentality which underlies the author's clearly apparent resolve to be unsentimental."

Times [London] Lit Sup p249 My 24
'47 300w

HURST, MARION. 1-2-3 of homemaking. 227p il $3.50 Prentice-Hall

640 Home economics 47-4973

Easy-to-follow directions for running a house. Contents: Home management; General house care and special cleaning methods; Special homemaking activities; Care and use of household equipment; Table setting and service; Menu planning and marketing; Care and preparation of food; Laundry; Child care; Home care of the sick; Household employees. Index.

Booklist 44:46 O 1 '47

Kirkus 15:357 J1 1 '47 140w

Springf'd Republican p12R O 19 '47
130w

HUSSEY, RUSSELL CLAUDIUS. Historical geology; the geologic history of North America, rev 2d ed 465p il maps $3.75 McGraw 551.7 Geology—North America. Paleontology
47-31353

"Comparison with the first edition [Book Review Digest 1944] shows that although there are no major changes, many small revisions have been made. There are some slight rearrangements in the order of chapters and occasional alterations of paragraph or sentence. A number of small tables on the various land formations have been omitted, and several drawings and photographs, especially drawings of historical vertebrates have been added. Other changes include a revised discussion of Triassic reptilian mammals, and the addition of brief descriptions of the newly discovered Pithecanthropus robustus, Meganthropus palaeojavanicus, and Gigantopithecus blacki." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 44:112 N 15 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1615 N 15 '47 40w

"Already well known as a concise but clear survey of its subject, suitable for cultural reading as well as textbook use, this book now appears in a second edition."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 32:49 J1 '47

HUSZAR, GEORGE BERNARD DE, ed. Persistent international issues. 262p $3 Harper 308.2 Social problems. International cooperation. Economic policy 47-740

Contents: The need for a preventive policy, by G. B. de Huszar; Relief and rehabilitation, by R. F. Hendrickson; Displaced persons, by F. K. Hoehler; Health, by G. K. Strode; Food and agriculture, by W. W. Wilcox; Transportation, by H. S. Perry; Industry and trade, by J. A. de Haas; Money and finance, by M. A. Heilperin; Labor, by O. E. Mulliken; Politics, by G. B. de Huszar; Education, by G. N. Shuster; Summary and conclusion, by G. B. de Huszar. Index.

Reviewed by J. D. Larkin

Am Pol Sci R 41:818 Ag '47 450w

Bookmark 8:4 My '47

"Readers will find this a careful collection of essays, having at once unity, succinctness, clarity and lacking in bias." L. G. Seligman

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Mr 30 '47
230w

Current Hist 12:238 Mr '47 60w

Reviewed by H. J. Morgenthau

Ethics 57:231 Ap '47 110w

"A detailed and interesting symposium for informative reading."

+ Kirkus 14:513 O 1 '46 230w

"Excellent discussion group material. Essential." R. E. Kingery

+ Library J 72:74 Ja 1 '47 140w

"The tone of the book is moderately optimistic,—perhaps too optimistic in the light of the deterioration of Soviet-American relations which has taken place since it went to press late last year. Despite a number of relatively unimportant factual errors which have crept into the discussions, the volume merits the serious attention of all American citizens who seek light, not heat, on the course American foreign policy should now follow." W. R. Sharp

Survey G 36:450 Ag '47 550w

HUTCHINSON, FRANCIS ERNEST. Henry Vaughan; a life and interpretation. 260p il $5.50 Oxford

B or 92 Vaughan, Henry [47-5970]

"This seventeenth-century Welsh metaphysical poet, who has his devoted admirers, now at last also has a full-length biography. The book is based on years of research by Miss Gwenllian Morgan, of Wales, and Miss Louise Imogen Guiney, of Massachusetts. The historical background is meticulously dovetailed with all the known details of the private life of the man who now appears, in the words of his biographers, to be 'the most Welsh of all who have written English poetry.'" (New Yorker) Index.

"It contains probably all that will ever be known of the facts of Vaughan's career, soberly and accurately set down. But it tells us little of a more intimate kind. At most it charts the events and influences in his early life which led up to the illumination of his greater poems and reveals that later he had his full share of earthly discords, particularly of family feuds. The chapters in which Dr. Hutchinson appraises Vaughan's verse and the influence of Welsh poetry on it are especially valuable." H. I. A. F.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 3 '47
200w

HUTCHINSON, F. E.—Continued

"With accurate and patient scholarship Canon Hutchinson has pieced together the scanty evidences that tell the story of Vaughan's short stay at Oxford, his study of law, his probable military service on the king's side, his imitative early poetry, his translations, his study of medicine, his law suits with his children about properties. It is unlikely that any fact about Vaughan's life remains to be discovered. But the spark that gives worth to that life is in the small collection of poems and nowhere else, and by far the most interesting chapter in the book is the one about Welsh poetry and the Welsh language which throws a direct light on Vaughan's peculiar felicities of style." Joan Bennett

+ New Statesman & Nation 33:260 Ap 12 '47 400w

New Yorker 23:105 S 20 '47 80w

San Francisco Chronicle p28 D 7 '47 300w

"Dr. Hutchinson has now supplied much of the knowledge that we lacked. His new book tells us all that can be known or is ever likely to be known about Vaughan; and while its scholarship is exact, rigorous and thorough it is written with such unscholarly modesty and charm that even the unlearned may read it with pleasure. And even though we cannot quite say that it gives us the living picture we should wish of this poet who left no portrait, yet it does give flesh and blood to the bare facts of his life; it will remain the final authority on Vaughan." Goronwy Rees

+ Spec 178:306 Mr 21 '47 900w

"Here, set out lucidly, steadily and with sensitive interpretation, is probably all that the past has happened to leave for us concerning the personality and adventures of the poet-physician Henry Vaughan."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p102 Mr 8 '47 3350w

HUTCHINSON, THOMAS H. Here is television; your window to the world. 366p il $4 Hastings house

621.388 Television 47-503

"An account of television as it exists today with a forecast of the developments we may expect in the future. Written in non-technical language, it takes the reader from the first entrance into the studio through all the steps that lead up to a finished production and its reception in the home. The emphasis is on program and production technique." Publisher's note

Booklist 43:342 Jl 1 '47

Bookmark 8:6 My '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Mr 30 '47 50w

Reviewed by James Stokley

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p21 My 18 '47 70w

"Eminently qualified by way of having produced and directed as many, or more, television programs than anyone else in America and through first-hand observation of those produced overseas, Mr. Hutchinson has written a valuable manual for those planning a future in the audio-visual art." Peter Irving

+ N Y Times p24 Mr 16 '47 500w

San Francisco Chronicle p9 Ap 6 '47 90w

"With the television industry at last beginning to move ahead on a serious basis, there will be more books on the subject. It is hoped that in the future writers and publishers will aim at the standards of Hutchinson's authoritative Here is Television, not of the others." R. W. Hubbell

+ Theatre Arts 31:80 N '47 380w

HUTTER, DONALD. Abraham, the itinerant mouse; pictures by Kurt Wiese. 70p $2.50 Dodd

47-11196

Three adventures of Abraham Churchmouse, written by a fifteen-year-old schoolboy. In these stories little Abe catches robbers, prevents the theft of a diamond, and rescues two lady mice from Rollo Rat. For grades four to five.

"Humorous, with a great deal of action." M. J. Meade

+ Library J 72:1692 D 1 '47 40w

"The beguiling Wiese pictures support the droll text perfectly." R. C. Benét

+ New Yorker 23:145 D 6 '47 80w

HUTTON, BUD. See Hutton, O. C.

HUTTON, JOHN HENRY. Caste in India: its nature, function and origins. 280p $3.75 Macmillan

954 Caste [A47-3036]

"A scholarly consideration of the origins and the functions of caste in the social and economic order of Hindustan." Social Studies

"Of the many books on caste in India, this is certainly one of the most open-minded and best balanced. It presses no theory, rides no hobby, and is thoroughly modern and scholarly. . . . Hutton's book is good to have. It will be avidly seized upon by all who teach Asiatic cultures. And its compactness, range, sanity, and readability should commend it widely." A. L. Kroeber

+ Am Anthropol 49:650 O '47 800w

Reviewed by O. C. Cox

Am J Soc 53:230 N '47 550w

"'Caste in India' is a scholar's book, bristling with references to anthropological detail, emphasizing minute differences and insisting upon fine shades of meaning. Whether he succeeds in establishing his contention that caste is a social phenomenon peculiar to India, experts on the subject must decide. The average student of sociology will note the assertion and pass on to other equally dogmatic statements. Before he closes the book, however, he will register his thanks for an elaborate examination of a topic that is becoming increasingly important for the totalitarian western world." Scott Nearing

Am Soc R 12:488 Ag '47 270w

"Professor Hutton has packed his information tightly into little more than 200 pages, making something approaching a 'Golden Bough' in miniature, and enabling students to gain a working knowledge of the castes." H. J. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Je 7 '47 360w

Foreign Affairs 25:706 Jl '47 40w

"The book is of first importance for the study of caste. Though Dr. Hutton has to use the material found in Indian literature at secondhand, he contributes many ethnological data and much thinking which are bound to enlarge and rectify any student's ideas on the institution." W. N. Brown

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p34 My 25 '47 550w

Social Studies 38:240 My '47 20w

"Why is it that the caste system has grown up and survived in India alone? This question has never been answered in a completely convincing manner by any of the treatises devoted to it; and it is the great merit of Professor Hutton's book that it summarizes all the more important theories which have been evolved as explanations, and then proceeds to suggest the best way of supplementing them from the mass of modern knowledge of comparative anthropology which was not available to the majority of earlier writers."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p75 F 8 '47 850w

HUTTON, ORAM C. (BUD HUTTON), and ROONEY, ANDREW A. Conquerors' peace; a report to the American stockholders. 92p $1.50 Doubleday

940.5343 Germany—History—Allied occupation, 1945 47-4155

"Two exceptionally able reporters, who saw the European war from beginning to end as indefatigable operatives of the Army newspaper Stars and Stripes, retraced their wartime steps across France, through Germany and into Berlin and Vienna. They looked at the countryside, probed into the views and feelings of the inhabitants of the several countries, went thoroughly into special matters like American military cemeteries and the displaced persons problem, and dug out facts and figures on pressing issues like the conduct of our occupation troops. Eschewing any sweeping judgment on the exact status of our epic 'investment' in blood, sweat and tears . . . they confine themselves to reporting on conditions, some laudable, some deplorable." N Y Times

Foreign Affairs 26:225 O '47 30w

"A sharp, uncompromising and undeluded picture of Europe today and what has resulted from our investment in blood, time and money, as seen by the authors of The Stars and Stripes."

Kirkus 15:229 Ap 15 '47 180w

Reviewed by Gladwin Hill

N Y Times p7 My 25 '47 800w

"It is a breezy book, written in the hard-boiled style of the kind that had made Stars and Stripes and Yank frequently such good reading during the war. . . 'Conquerors' Peace' is quick, colorful, informal, and very readable. Hutton and Rooney are good reporters and they tell honestly what they see and, particularly, hear. They do not look deeply beneath surfaces but move at a fast clip. Their book, therefore, is strangely unsatisfactory, despite its readability; it contains a minimum of insight, and lacks that thought-provoking reflectiveness which is one of the major reasons for cherishing, or writing, books." S. K. Padover

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:14 J1 26 '47 700w

School & Society 66:31 J1 12 '47 20w

HUXLEY, ALDOUS LEONARD. World of Aldous Huxley; an omnibus of his fiction and non-fiction over three decades; ed, and with an introd. by Charles J. Rolo. 544p $3.50 Harper

828

47-11578

"A Huxley omnibus, containing examples of the fiction, non-fiction, and poetry he has written during the past thirty years. Mr. Rolo, to support his contention that Huxley has 'come close to writing a biography of the ideas of modern man,' has arranged the selections to show the progress and mutations of Huxley's philosophy. The book begins with the novel 'Antic Hay,' printed in its entirety, and proceeds, through the aesthetic, skeptical, and satirical phases of Huxley's career, to the sober doubts about the future moral usefulness of science that he recently expressed in 'Science, Liberty, and Peace.'" New Yorker

Booklist 44:181 Ja 15 '48

Kirkus 15:459 Ag 15 '47 160w

"Any omnibus that makes 'Antic Hay' once more available to the general reader is worth the money. In the twenty-five years since he wrote it, Huxley has not done anything better—or, to say it less dogmatically, he has not done anything about which so many people have been so enthusiastic for so long a time." Russell Maloney

N Y Times p4 N 30 '47 900w

New Yorker 23:134 N 8 '47 100w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman
Sat R of Lit 30:29 D 27 '47 140w

Wis Lib Bul 43:169 D '47

HUXLEY, JULIAN SORELL. UNESCO: its purpose and its philosophy. 62p $2; pa $1 Am. council on public affairs

060 United nations (organization). Educational, scientific and cultural organization 47-30239

"A compact statement by the director general of the United nations educational, scientific, and cultural organization on the philosophy and broad program of the organization founded to help in the emergence of a unified world culture." Booklist

Reviewed by D. F. Fleming

Am Pol Sci R 41:1045 O '47 300w

"Any reader, aware of [the author's] qualifications, must approach the present statement with respect. If to this attitude of respect, however, the reader adds a lively curiosity concerning the way in which UNESCO plans to achieve its primary purpose of contributing to the establishment of world peace and security, he is liable to be disappointed." Harold Benjamin

Ann Am Acad 252:108 J1 '47 420w

Booklist 43:267 My 1 '47

Christian Century 64:496 Ap 16 '47 20w

Ethics 58:77 O '47 240w

Reviewed by Frances Witherspoon

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12
Ag 3 '47 270w

Reviewed by Frank Meyer

N Y Times p32 S 7 '47 750w

"This essay is neither an authoritative statement of the purpose and philosophy of UNESCO nor, as far as this reviewer is concerned, is it a statement of a desirable purpose and philosophy for UNESCO." James Marshall

— Sat R of Lit 30:16 J1 5 '47 1250w

"As executive secretary of the Preparatory Commission of UNESCO and as director general of UNESCO proper, the author has been a 'major influence in that agency' and the views he expresses are 'significant.'"

+ School & Society 65:214 Mr 22 '47 30w

Reviewed by G. N. Shuster

Survey G 37:33 Ja '48 270w

HUXLEY, THOMAS HENRY, and HUXLEY, JULIAN SORELL. Touchstone for ethics, 1893-1943. 257p $3 Harper

171.7 Ethics, Evolutionary

47-11578

Combination of the lectures of two famous English scientists: T. H. Huxley, and his grandson, Julian Huxley, delivered some fifty years apart. "The two Huxleys appear in the same book which includes, among other chapters, the Romanes Lectures delivered by the one in 1893, and by the other in 1943." (Library J)

Booklist 44:177 Ja 15 '48

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 N 15 '47 70w

Kirkus 15:520 S 15 '47 170w

"A unique and stimulating book. For larger libraries." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 72:1466 O 15 '47 140w

Reviewed by H. M. Parsshley

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p34 D 7 '47 400w

"A fascinating and lucid record of man's progress in combining the theory of evolution with the much later and less developed theories of psychology and anthropology." Margaret Mead

+ N Y Times p8 N 16 '47 950w

Reviewed by T. V. Smith

Sat R of Lit 31:27 Ja 10 '48 500w

HYAMSON, ALBERT MONTEFIORE. Dictionary of international affairs. 353p $3.75 Am. council on public affairs

909.82 World politics. International relations 47-3353

"Concise information on political and economic topics that are in the news today. Countries but not people are included. Probably less useful as a reference tool where encyclopedias and yearbooks are available than for circulation. Reprinted from the British edition." Booklist

Booklist 43:306 Je 1 '47

Christian Century 64:715 Je 4 '47 70w

Current Hist 13:34 J1 '47 20w

HYAMSON, A. M.—Continued

"This little encyclopedia is useful despite the arbitrary selection of entries and its not always accurate data."

Foreign Affairs 25:694 J1 '47 50w

"As a reference book this offers little that can't be found in the World Almanac, which is not as limited in scope and costs $2.65 less. It is long on places, treaties, doctrines and raw materials and short on people plus a few other vital subjects. The selection of material is somewhat strange, i.e., of Pacific islands, Nauru is mentioned, but not New Guinea." A. K. D.

— San Francisco Chronicle p18 J1 20 '47 100w

School & Society 66:112 Ag 9 '47 20w

Reviewed by Joseph Kise

Social Educ 11:376 D '47 350w

"The book is useful as a handy reference book for social studies classes."

+ Social Studies 38:377 D '47 180w

"This is a useful book. . . The range here is wide and the information nicely plotted."

+ Spec 178:154 Ja 31 '47 180w

HYATT, JAMES PHILIP. Prophetic religion. 188p $1.75 Abingdon-Cokesbury

224 Bible. Old Testament—Prophetic books 47-2047

"A scholarly and readable account of the messages of the Hebrew prophets to their own times and of their permanent values in Christian thought and life. The author is professor of Old Testament and chairman of the graduate school of religion in Vanderbilt University." Christian Century

Christian Century 64:272 F 26 '47 40w

Reviewed by J. A. Maynard

Churchman 161:16 Ap 1 '47 130w

Reveiled by R. E. Wolfe

Crozer Q 24:268 J1 '47 650w

HYDE, GEORGE GAYNOR. Fundamentals of successful manufacturing. 201p $2.50 McGraw

658.01 Industry—Organization, control, etc. 46-8337

"A clearly expressed outline of organizational and operating practices which are basic to the success of any manufacturing concern. The book is intended to assist the person planning a new enterprise, but it will also be of interest to the established manufacturer. The various topics considered, such as determination of policy, design of product, choice of location, designing and staffing the organization, personnel practices, and research are not discussed in much detail. The author simply suggests some of the main problems and indicates logical methods for handling them. He has pointed up his arguments with numerous brief case histories." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 43:181 F 15 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1332 O 1 '46 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:62 O '46

HYDE, WALTER WOODBURN. Ancient Greek mariners. 360p maps $5 Oxford

910.938 Discoveries (in geography) 47-1237

Historical account of the geographical discovery in the day of the ancient Greeks, which is practically a history of the sea in antiquity. Partial contents: Predecessors of the Greeks in the Mediterranean area; The adventures of Odysseus; Greek colonial expansion and spheres of influence; The discovery of the Atlantic above the pillars of Heracles; Discovery of the Asiatic coast of the Indian ocean; The circumnavigation of Africa; The mystery of the Nile. Bibliography. Index.

"Professor Hyde has produced a book which far exceeds the scope of its title and passes under review the general contribution of Greeks, Romans, and Phoenicians to the opening up of the ancient world by sea and by land. In recording the achievements of the ancient pioneers he does not himself break much new ground, but he provides a clear and well-balanced account of previous research, based on a wide knowledge of the ancient sources and on a considerable acquaintance with the general literature of travel, in the light of which the performance of the ancient explorers can be assessed more accurately." M. Cary

+ Am Hist R 53:86 O '47 900w

"Great and unfamiliar chapters of the human story are appreciatively told in this scholarly but readable and rewarding book." J. T. Frederick

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Ap 27 '47 230w

"The style of this pleasant and useful book is typical of the American classical archaeologist. That is, it is characterized by great modesty and economy, thorough knowledge and a scrupulous objectivity which does not conceal from the attentive reader a deep love of the subject. It is not a dramatized 'popularization' but a book for those mature enough to be interested in the growth of human knowledge in this neglected branch of ancient culture. It has the fascination also of much curious information." E. P. Richardson

+ Commonweal 46:531 S 12 '47 550w

Reviewed by A. Foff

San Francisco Chronicle p14 O 26 '47 100w

"This book by a veteran and outstanding Greek scholar is timely as well as authoritative. It might well be required reading for every mariner, aviator, and student of world politics who would know the origin and progress of the vehicles and the craftsmanship and the science of their pilotage in man's mastery of time and space. . . In so thorough and well-balanced a book, accompanied by excellent maps, I regret the lack of attention to the civil architects and shipwrights who rushed the construction of the fleet, and to the civil navigators in their direction of the decisive naval battle of Salamis, (480 B.C.) against Xerxes's far outnumbering fleet." Frederick Palmer

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:28 Ap 19 '47 1000w

HYDE, WALTER WOODBURN. Paganism to Christianity in the Roman empire. 296p $4 Univ. of Pa. press

270.1 Church history—Primitive and early church. Cultus, Roman, Rome—Church history. Rome—Religion 47-431

"This book purports to tell the story of how Christianity was transformed from the simplicity of its beginning in Jesus 'into a secularized institution during its struggle with the pagan order of the Roman Empire.' But first, the author gives us three chapters (almost half the book) on Roman religion, the Mystery-Religions, and Judaism." (Churchman) Index.

"This is a book for specialists. On every page it bears the marks of the scholar's workshop. The elaborate footnotes citing original sources of modern literature, and untranslated phrases from Latin or German or French in the main body of the text, will discourage the layman from reading the volume. But one whose endurance can survive the perusal of these 270 large and closely packed pages will acquire a vast body of statistical information on a wide range of topics. The title of the book may prove somewhat misleading. At first sight it suggests a genetic study of the influence of paganism on Christianity, but it proves to be a detailed account of the total religious beliefs and practices of the Romans, of the Jews and of the Christians, with only slight if any reference to their mutual relations." S. J. Case

+ Christian Century 64:174 F 5 '47 650w

"The transformation of Christianity from the simple fellowship of its early days to the Catholic church of the Roman Empire can be treated in several ways: as history, or as history seen through the colored spectacles either of theological and ecclesiastical devotion or of polite scepticism. Prof. Hyde is sometimes historian but more frequently the polite sceptic; with the result that we are left with a picture of Jesus and his teaching, of Paul and his influence on the church, and of the development of the faith, which is not that of at least the majority of modern Christian scholars." F. J. Moore

Churchman 161:17 F 15 '47 360w

"This is a very informative volume, but one would like to have a greater concentration on dependable data and less interest in listing mere curios. Too often we are left in doubt about the line between the valid and the fictitious. The author seems to think that Christianity is essentially a static body of ideas, and he doubts whether it can survive the criticism of modern culture. He fails to appreciate the fact that Christianity has always been a social movement in which ideas are incidental to cultural evolution." S. J. Case

+ Class Philol 42:205 J1 '47 500w

"Excellent volume. . . Within [his established] limits Professor Hyde has handled his vast subject with considerable skill and remarkable erudition. His wide classical background and his tremendous range of reading in theological and historical critical literature among German, French, English, and American scholars of the past century and the present is evidenced by the voluminous footnotes and manifold references. Yet this work is far from being learnedly dull or heavy—on the contrary it is eminently readable, for, although presented in a wealth of detail, an integrated picture emerges from his clear-cut and broad approach." R. T. Ohl

+ Crozer Q 24:259 J1 '47 1350w

"[A] complacent and slightly patronizing attitude is characteristic of the whole treatment of the subject, and it effectively blocks the way to any real understanding and interpretation of the great matters with which Mr. Hyde attempts to deal. There is no escape from the conclusion that this book will not do."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p618 N 29 '47 800w

HYMAN, HAROLD THOMAS. Integrated practice of medicine; a complete general practice of medicine from differential diagnosis by presenting symptoms to specific management of the patient. 4v il with index $50 Saunders 610 Medicine Med47-448

"These four volumes and a slender index volume cover the entire field of the practice of medicine. As the author states in the Preface, it is 'a complete text, conceived and written to meet the requirements of the general practitioner. Its four volumes and special index volume are arranged and co-ordinated to deal realistically with diagnostic and therapeutic problems of the individual patient. Cardinal objectives include: (1) complete delineation of the broad and diverse fields of general practice; (2) arrangement of material, in the chronologic sequence of everyday practice; and (3) integration of the various subjects so that each discussion focuses consideration on the human patient as a biologic unity.'" U S Quarterly Bkl

"Dr. Hyman and his co-workers have created a book of a special kind; one which, I am sure, will be greatly welcomed by practitioners and, I should think, also by students. Dr. Hyman was admirably qualified for the task. A graduate of the College of Physicians and Surgeons and on its faculty for many years, he has practiced medicine in New York all his life, and his many patients are deeply attached to him. He has known the manifold problems of general practice from all aspects. He was aided by an able staff of associate editors, but his own personality permeates the whole book which thus became 'integrated' in every respect." H. E. Sigerist

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p17 J1 13 '47 600w

"It is not likely that Dr. Hyman's monumental 'Integrated Practice' will reverse the present trend of medicine so far as specialization is concerned, but it is very likely that it will be a boon to the small-town practitioner who has few of the special facilities on which his counterpart in New York or Chicago may draw and who calls patients by their first names and follows their health from the cradle to the grave." Waldemar Kaempffert

+ N Y Times p42 Ap 13 '47 800w

"There is wide recognition of the urgent need for the organization of smooth cooperation of general practitioners and specialists so that the general practitioner can readily be the family doctor, the specialist can complement him as he ought to do, and the patient can receive the optimum in quality, efficiency and economy of service. This goal can be reached only if the general practitioners are well-versed in their field. Dr. Hyman's book provides them with all the factual knowledge they need. It gives new hope to both the family physician and the patient." Franz Goldmann

+ Sat R of Lit 30:26 J1 26 '47 500w

"Encyclopedic, painstakingly integrated, and intelligently composed. . . Each section can stand as a text by itself, but the outstanding feature of the work, as the title implies, is its integration. . . The text will add little or nothing to the specialist's knowledge of his own field, but it should prove a valuable source of easily available information on other specialties, and should give perspective to the picture of the patient."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:195 Je '47 600w

I

I married a Russian; letters from Kharkov; ed. by Lucie Street. 331p $3 Emerson

914.7 Russia—Description and travel 47-2570

Letters written by the English wife of a Russian scientist, to her sister in England. The first letter is dated 1930; the last, 1945, but the greatest number of letters are about the early years in Russia.

Booklist 43:254 Ap 15 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '47

Foreign Affairs 26:229 O '47 30w

"A book that in its personal terms makes very real the Russian character and life in that country."

+ Kirkus 15:88 F 1 '47 100w

"This volume illuminates only one minuscule segment of the Soviet experience, but does it well and sympathetically." S. S. Harcave

+ N Y Times p30 My 25 '47 430w

"It makes an interesting personal story and a minor footnote to the history of the last eighteen years in Russia."

+ Theatre Arts 31:80 My '47 50w

IAMS, JACK. Body missed the boat. 245p $2.50 Morrow

47-1337

Mystery story.

Booklist 43:273 My 1 '47

Bookmark 8:16 My '47

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p11 Mr 30 '47 110w

Kirkus 14:609 D 1 '46 90w

"If you're in the mood for a tonic this is worth a carload of sober-sided puzzles." Will Cuppy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 F 16 '47 320w

"A story combining hilarity with mystery or mystery with hilarity, whichever way you choose to put it. Seldom has murder been made so enjoyable." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p26 F 2 '47 170w

"Some of the digs, particularly those at State Department protocol, are very funny indeed, but the plot, probably intentionally, is slim."

New Yorker 22:99 F 8 '47 90w

IAMS, JACK—Continued

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p16 F 9 '47
70w

"Equatorial African background and people refreshing and unconventional; considerable gaiety, ample grimness, and razzle-dazzle finish that is slight let-down. Different."

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:42 F 15 '47 50w

IAMS, JACK. Girl meets body. 245p $2.50 Morrow 47-30862

Mystery story.

Booklist 44:135 D 1 '47

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 S 14 '47
80w

Kirkus 15:378 J1 15 '47 60w

"A light, hearty, good-natured affair, well worth reading as a tonic but certainly not the work of 'an author who writes doubled up with laughter.' If, indeed, such a creature exists outside a padded cell. We recommend it for its elegant puzzle, which comes to a head in a really thrilling manner." Will Cuppy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p17
S 7 '47 210w

N Y Times p36 S 7 '47 180w

"Determinedly comic and liberally sprinkled with innuendo."

— New Yorker 23:88 S 6 '47 90w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p13 S 21 '47
90w

"Nutsy but nice."

Sat R of Lit 30:34 S 13 '47 40w

IDELL, ALBERT EDWARD (PHILLIPS ROGERS, pseud). The sea is woman. 321p $2.75 Holt 47-1779

Tale of the life aboard the S.S. Hawkeye State, a converted troop transport, as it rolls thru heat, rain and hurricane, on its way from San Pedro, California, to New York.

"Unfortunately, Idell's memory is better than his prose. His style is platitudinous, his characters stock. The thesis—that current disillusionment is, after all, not very different from that following World War I—probably is true enough, but is presented limply. Despite these faults, the story is fairly interesting on a not-too-high level. Gary Cooper would play the doctor very well." Serrell Hillman

+ — Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Mr 9 '47
280w

"Condensed, tightly plotted narrative emphasizing and exploring human needs crying for fulfillment. . . Sympathy and understanding in somewhat sober vein."

Kirkus 14:608 D 1 '46 130w

"Recommended," E. P. Nichols

+ Library J 72:320 F 15 '47 70w

"Mr. Idell does a noteworthy job of selecting the characters for his voyage and of so designing his story that the thematic materials weave tightly and skillfully into its fabric without forcing. Unfortunately he lacks the poetry that could have given fire and intensity to his symbols." Stephen Stepanchev

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18
Ap 6 '47 600w

"The novel is at its best when Mr. Idell eschews the generally uncomplicated thoughts of his other characters and concentrates on the sympathetic Dr. Brandt. . . The words he speaks in defense of human values are about the best things in a book which is unnaturally loaded with the kind of 'charm' Mr. Idell would do better to save for his Rogers family series." Nona Balakian

N Y Times p34 Ap 13 '47 500w

"The passengers are a varied and likable lot, although it's just probable that you won't care too much for Dr. Carl Brandt (our hero) who is much too much 'the noblest Roman of them all.' But the rest of the people have a gratifying number of faults and weaknesses which more than make up for the cold perfection of the doctor. All in all, you'll find your nine days aboard the S. S. Hawkeye State an exciting experience." Edith James

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ap 13 '47
260w

"The story moves slowly, somewhat awkwardly, and whatever subtlety lies potentially therein is speedily destroyed by the author, who seems bent on explaining things either out of existence or into a realm of absurd and shallow simplicity." N. G. Chaikin

— Sat R of Lit 30:20 My 10 '47 360w

INFORMATION please almanac, 1947; John Kieran, editor; planned and supervised by Dan Golenpaul associates. 1014p maps $2 Doubleday

031 Almanacs. Yearbooks (statistical, historical, etc.) (47-845)

Compilation of facts and a yearbook of events in various fields in 1946. It includes a review of the year (1946) including human activities from sports to politics; as well as usual almanac information. Index.

Booklist 43:181 F 15 '47

Bookmark 8:3 My '47

Foreign Affairs 26:221 O '47 20w

Management R 36:234 Ap '47 40w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p23
Mr 30 '47 700w

"Here is an almanac that can be read from cover to cover for its entertainment value. For more practical purposes it is a staggering compendium of facts, charts and statistical tables enlivened by résumés of current events written in the idiom of the day by leading authorities." Bruce Rae

+ N Y Times p3 Ja 26 '47 700w

"An unusually comprehensive one-volume job."

+ New Yorker 22:99 F 8 '47 80w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p16 F 26 '47
550w

School & Society 65:197 Mr 15 '47 20w

Springfld Union p18 Mr 20 '47 180w

Theatre Arts 31:76 Je '47 60w

Wis Lib Bul 43:65 Ap '47

INGLIS, RUTH A. Freedom of the movies. See Commission on freedom of the press

INGRAM, KENNETH. Years of crisis; an outline of international history, 1919-1945. 487p $5 Macmillan

940.5 History, Modern. World war, 1939-1945. Europe—History [47-20268]

"General outline of political events between 1919 and 1945, covering the peace of Versailles, its aftermath and the Second World War. First published in England, it is written from an English viewpoint." Current Hist

"This volume has much to commend it as a survey of recent world events and developments. The flexibility and freshness of the author's prose is immediately noticeable; facts are abundant yet they do not impede the movement or obscure the direction of the narrative; the chapters, and chapter parts, are well constructed and coherently related. In general, the scope of the work is broad, including Asia and the Western Hemisphere as well as Europe." O. J. Hale

+ Am Hist R 53:80 O '47 650w

Current Hist 13:34 J1 '47 40w

School & Society 65:367 My 17 '47 10w

"Mr. Ingram has done well to write so succinct, readable and accurate a history of the world war. As such, the book can be recommended. But there is still need for a more subtle, profound and more learned analysis and interpretation of what the war was all about, and what it will come to signify in the future."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p110 Mr 15 '47 1300w

INNES, HAMMOND, pseud. See Hammond-Innes, R.

INNES, MICHAEL, pseud. See Stewart, J. I. M.

INSTITUTE FOR RELIGIOUS AND SOCIAL STUDIES. Foundations of democracy. See Johnson, F. C., ed.

INSTITUTE FOR RELIGIOUS AND SOCIAL STUDIES. Jewish theological seminary of America. Labor's relation to Church and community. See Pope, L., ed.

INTERNATIONAL who's who in world medicine, 1947. 745p $18.50 Am. universities medical research publications, inc, 240 Broadway, N.Y. 7

926.1 Physicians—Directories Med47-1976

"Investigation shows that almost all of the biographies of physicians outside North America in the work under review are adapted without any new information from Who's Who in World Medicine, 1939 (London, B. U. E. Limited). The sketches are alphabetically arranged and the scope of the American and Canadian biographies is similar to that usual in books of the 'who's who' type. Entries for foreign physicians are often briefer and dates are not always given. Apparently some attempt was made to emphasize works published by the biographers during the last five years, but there is little uniformity in the manner in which publications are listed. There is no geographical summary or index, but a sampling indicates that more than two-thirds of the persons included are Americans." Subscription Bks Bul

"The selection of names for inclusion is poor. Some of the American physicians chosen would seem to be scarcely of state-wide prominence, much less national or international. On the other hand, many outstanding medical men are omitted. . . . The preface offers apologies for the incompleteness of the work. However, the fact that there may be reasons for some of the shortcomings does not make the book any better or excuse its publication in the present form. . . . Like almost any work of the sort, International Who's Who in World Medicine, 1947, is of some use for the biographies it contains which cannot be found elsewhere. However, it is highly unsatisfactory as a reference book because of poor selection, poor editing and proofreading, and misleading use of old material. It is not recommended."

— Subscription Bks Bul 18:38 J1 '47 800w

INTRODUCING Britain [by] Kenneth Johnstone [and others] foreword by the Earl of Derby. new ed 160p il $2 Macmillan

914.2 Great Britain—Description and travel

"This book is a general survey of the attractions of the British Isles. Chapters range in subject matter from Old English Customs to Modern London. The volume also includes chapters on Hardy's Wessex, East Anglia, Canterbury, Stratford-Upon-Avon, York, English climate, and the Lake country. Thomas Burke, S. F. B. Mais and Edmund Vale are among the contributors. The text is illustrated by numerous photographs." San Francisco Chronicle

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 30 '47 700w

"A more useful or more alluring book, in spirit and matter, has not in many years been offered to those who intend to visit England. Its spirit is that in which anything worth seeing there must be seen and without which nothing of importance is seen at all. . . . The many pictures are photographs thoughtfully chosen and carefully reproduced. This should be read before applying for a passport."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 Ap 6 '47 230w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 F 9 '47 70w

IPCAR, MRS DAHLOV (ZORACH). Animal hide and seek; [il. by the author]. [32p] $1.50 Scott, W.R.

47-30232

Picture-story book for ages five to eight. It shows in colored pictures with brief text how the small animals of the forest achieve protective coloration.

Booklist 43:243 Ap 1 '47

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 23:211 My '47 70w

Kirkus 15:128 Mr 1 '47 70w

"The identification of many small animals makes the book excellent to add variety to the material for the schoolroom library table or the look-at books in a public library. Needs to be prebound, if circulated." B. W. Bell

+ Library J 72:532 Ap 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 My 18 '47 140w

"This is a new kind of picture-puzzle book, a charming and stimulating one for 3 to 7 year olds. It is, too, a first lesson in nature's camouflage. . . . The artist plays fair. Her drawings are realistic and her simple prose tells you what to look for among the arabesques of leaves and branches. This is a fine device to develop that prime requisite for the enjoyment of life—the seeing eye." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p26 Mr 16 '47 190w

IRISH, WILLIAM. See Woolrich, C.

IRVING, ALEXANDER, pseud. See Fox, R. and Fahrenkopf, Anne (Alexander Irving, pseud).

ISAACS, EDITH JULIET (RICH). Negro in the American theatre. 143p il $3.50 Theatre arts

792 Theater—U.S. Negro actors 47-11394

"Appreciative account of Negroes as performers, playwrights, and composers from the early 1800's to the present, illustrated with many portraits and scenes from outstanding plays. Although there have been many periods when Negro players and Negro themes were not acceptable, on the whole the last 125 years are seen as a time of progress for the Negro in the American theater. No index." Booklist

Booklist 44:85 N 1 '47

"To date this is far and away the best treatment of the subject. One could wish that Mrs. Isaacs, so long the erudite critic and editor of Theatre arts, had planned a more detailed book, equipped with an index. Until this comes along the Isaacs book is essential for theatre and Negro collections. Handsomely and profusely illustrated. Highly recommended." George Freedley

+ — Library J 72:1472 O 15 '47 60w

"It is a thrilling story that Mrs. Isaacs tells in 'The Negro in the American Theatre'—the story of how a race has managed to move slowly but ever forward toward self-affirmation and proudfest accomplishment. Moreover, this is not only the story of a people finding themselves in their art, but of a race proving itself a great people the while it followed the search forward. The characters that fill this book establish the fact." Paul Green

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 N 30 '47 1000w

ISAACS, EDITH J.—Continued

Reviewed by John Hobart

+ San Francisco Chronicle p27 N 23 '47
420w

"Written with warmth and a fine narrative and historical sense, superbly illustrated by the understanding cameras of such observers as Carl Van Vechten, Edward Steichen, Florence Vandamm, Fred Fehl, it is at once a record, an interpretation and a study in the gallantry that will not be denied." J. K. Hutchens

+ Theatre Arts 31:74 N '47 1000w

ISAACS, HAROLD ROBERT. No peace for Asia. 295p $3.50 Macmillan

950 Asia—Politics. Reconstruction (1939-)
—Asia 47-2933

"[An] account of the starvation, civil war, mutiny, and chaos among the billion people of Asia. Mr. Isaacs, a correspondent for News-week, visited most of the troubled areas of the Far East after the collapse of Japan. He reports that old rivalries for power have merely been supplanted by new ones, that it is almost impossible to find a spot on the continent of Asia free from the sound of gunfire, and that conditions there seem likely to lead to the start of a war that could spread over the rest of the world." (New Yorker) Index.

Reviewed by Amry Vandenbosch

Am Pol Sci R 41:819 Ag '47 340w

Booklist 43:328 Je 15 '47

Canadian Forum 27:188 N '47 650w

"'No Peace for Asia, is strong medicine. Well written, authoritative, it paints one of the darkest postwar pictures to come out of Asia.'" E. S. Marquardt

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p8 Je 1 '47
440w

Reviewed by C. H. Hamilton

Christian Century 64:901 JI 23 '47 380w

"The author has had exceptional opportunities to be well informed and, on the minutiae of the Asiatic picture, he is exceptionally well informed. He has not only traveled in many parts of Asia, but he has lived there for years in intimate contact with the people. Moreover, he is a man of high purpose and warm sympathies, unquestionably devoted to common men and women. In fact, he is a crusader, a sort of self-appointed missionary to save the Chinese from the Chinese. . . . However, this book is not only largely futile, but partially inaccurate." R. H. M.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Je 7 '47
420w

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 JI '47

Current Hist 12:584 Je '47 50w

Foreign Affairs 26:232 O '47 40w

"Despite the weakness of the book in offering no solution but world revolution, despite its unrelieved pessimism of outlook, the book has urgency implemented by the author's years of first-hand study, extensive social and political knowledge."

+ Kirkus 15:93 F 1 '47 250w

"Fullest, most vivid description of Asia since the war, by a liberal journalist. . . . His interesting anecdotes bring the countries and chaos into sharp focus, his historical backgrounds make the reader feel that he understands more clearly than ever before what is happening across the Pacific. This is an outspoken, opinionated, angry book; it is also an authoritative, beautifully written and highly important one. Recommended for all libraries." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 72:730 My 1 '47 100w

"An extremely gloomy book which marshals its facts and its ideas so impressively that it is difficult to escape its upsetting impact. . . . The important thing is that, agree with Isaacs or not, you will find No Peace for Asia an exceptionally stimulating and challenging work." Richard Watts

+ New Repub 116:25 My 19 '47 2000w

"Mr. Isaacs writes well, but even in the brief time since he witnessed the beginning of the colonial wars it has begun to seem that colonial nationalism is capable of a prolonged resistance which will prevent the restoration of imperial rule in anything like as complete a form as he apparently anticipated." Owen Lattimore

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10
Je 22 '47 600w

"'No Peace for Asia' is more than journalism; superbly written, sensitive, brutally honest, it traces the problems of Asia, brings them to life, explains them, even solves them. But Isaacs' solution is not a nostrum to be swallowed painlessly three times a day; like electric shock or a major operation, it calls for more radical decisions than we may be happy to make." Annalee Jacoby

+ N Y Times p6 My 18 '47 800w

"His recommendations for a solution of the problem of exploited peoples are reasonable and intelligent."

+ New Yorker 23:117 My 17 '47 100w

"The author's discussion of the causes and effects of conflict in these countries is excellent—easily understandable and extremely readable. However, he is as unable to provide a solution as the next man. . . . Still this is the best book to come out on Asia in a long time, and the section on China, while briefer, far surpasses 'Thunder Out of China's' picture of conditions in that country. Isaacs has his own ideas about Chiang Kai-shek, and they sound much more plausible than any that have been heretofore advanced." A. D. K. Doughty

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ag 17 '47
300w

"Isaacs remorseless logic can hardly fail both to impress and to depress the reader. It would be even more convincing than it is if he did not betray here and there—notably in his arrogant and quite inexcusable indictment of Gandhi as a revolutionary leader—a cultural bias and myopia as shocking in its way as that of any pukka sahib." Edmond Taylor

Sat R of Lit 30:18 JI 5 '47 500w

"For a rapid, hard-hitting, vivid picture of the problems of postwar Asia, the average person can do no better than to read Harold Isaacs's book. While his material on China and Japan largely parallels that found in other recent books, his sections on Burma, Korea, Indochina, and Southeast Asia provide some exceptional firsthand reporting. . . . If there is any weakness in the book, it is the tendency to idealize the nationalist movements." Maxwell Stewart

Survey G 36:452 Ag '47 280w

U S Quarterly BkI 3:236 S '47 240w

ISELIN, FRED, and SPECTORSKY, AUGUSTE C. Invitation to skiing; with action photographs by Lloyd Arnold; drawings by S. Fleishman. 170p $3 Simon & Schuster

796.93 Skis and ski running 47-30120

Detailed instruction book for the beginning ski enthusiast. There are photographs and diagrams, advice on what to do and what not to do; and help in choosing the right equipment. One of the authors, Fred Iselin, is a Swiss stylist, formerly at the Sun Valley ski school; the other, A. C. Sectorsky, is a recent convert to skiing. The book contains a ski map of America. Index.

Booklist 43:201 Mr 1 '47

Bookmark 8:7 My '47

"Because the Iselin-Sectorsky book is the most mature work on skiing for the learner, and at the same time a masterpiece of clarity, it cannot help but be a best seller among those who yearn to participate in this wonderful method of locomotion, forgotten by most of us since childhood when winter was anticipated with pleasure." Rufus Oldenburger

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 F 16 '47
360w

"Text [is] not only clear from the 'how-to' angle, but entertaining reading."

+ Kirkus 15:19 Ja 1 '47 170w

"The photographs—'do' and 'don't' style—are well chosen and dovetail admirably with the text. Many of Sectorsky's analogies are helpful, and the diagrams, designed with a great deal of imagination and thought, are especially explicit. At times the book tries to explain too much and becomes confusing. Both the technique and exposition are sound and should appeal particularly to the novice skier." Digory Venn

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5
F 23 '47 150w

Reviewed by Frank Elkins

N Y Times p40 Mr 2 '47 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p12 Mr 2 '47
100w

ISELY, JETER ALLEN. Horace Greeley and the Republican party, 1853-1861; a study of the New York tribune. 368p $4.50 Princeton univ. press

B or 92 Greeley, Horace. New York herald tribune. Republican party 47-4730

"Here is a detailed study of the eight years preceding the Civil War, centered in the activities of the able but erratic creator of The New York Tribune, Horace Greeley. . . The Tribune was his mouthpiece, and he used it vigorously and effectively to further the causes in which he believed and to support the candidates of his choice. . . Through this period the question of slavery was receiving more and more attention, with Kansas the focal point. The Republican party was born in 1853. By 1856 it was powerful in Congress and carried nearly all the Northern states for John C. Frémont. Four years later it elected Lincoln to the Presidency. Greeley's reactions to all of these matters and his influence on national politics are, of course, the main thesis of this volume." N Y Times

Reviewed by M. E. Dillon

Am Pol Sci R 41:1221 D '47 700w

Reviewed by A. B. Miller

Ann Am Acad 254:203 N '47 700w

"Isely has made an exceedingly well-considered study of the complicated process by which the Republican party came into being, and of the part played by Greeley in that process. He has presented the results of his work in a notably lively and readable narrative, marked by firm organization, concrete portrayal of persons and incidents, and a sound sense both of humor and of dramatic significance." J. T. Frederick

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Jl 6 '47
400w

"Mr. Isely has studied all Greeley's writings with care and presents a well documented record which, while showing how wrong he was as a prophet, leaves it possible to believe that his ideas were more right than those of the politicians who made his predictions wrong."

+ Christian Century 64:854 Jl 9 '47 400w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 46:432 Ag 15 '47 900w

Current Hist 13:356 D '47 60w

"An interesting study of an able, pugnacious and irritating man, of equal value to historical libraries and libraries of journalism." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 72:958 Je 15 '47 150w

Reviewed by H. W. Baehr

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Je
29 '47 1350w

"Mr. Isely has succeeded in making Horace Greeley come to life—prodigiously industrious, idealistic, fearless, conceited, opinionated, politically shrewd, avid for office, eager for popularity yet glorying in the enemies he made. . . Mr. Isely has managed to make this study of substantial interest even to those who are not primarily students of American history or politics. His narrative is vivid, even when the events which he describes are highly complicated. The frequent and skillful use of direct quotes adds to the vitality and authenticity of his story." Nicholas Roosevelt

+ N Y Times p7 Jl 6 '47 850w

"An excellent study of Greeley. . . It is a good history of the politics and journalism of that period, and it is also a sharp analysis of the man and his inner conflicts, which made him at once revered for his integrity and detested for his narrow-mindedness and bigotry."

+ New Yorker 23:87 Ag 16 '47 140w

Reviewed by Louis Filler

Pol Sci Q 62:617 D '47 450w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:258 S '47 260w

ISERMAN, THEODORE R. Industrial peace and the Wagner act; how the act works and what to do about it; with a foreword by Leo Wolman. 91p pa $1.50 McGraw 331.154 Labor laws and legislation—U.S.

47-690

"Reviewing the history of the National Labor Relations Act, the author concludes that the Act has increased strikes rather than reduced them; that the NLRB forces people into unions; that preferred unions are given dangerous power; that independent unions are annihilated; and that some of labor's gains are illusory, while others have cost a high price. Seven major changes in the Act and its administration are suggested by Mr. Iserman." (Management R) Index.

"For those who are interested in obtaining ammunition for a war against labor, this little book will seem a handy source. For those who feel that the responsibility of unions must be made more commensurate with their economic power, it will have little usefulness, however, since the author's approach is to limit that power rather than to increase responsibility. And for those who believe that the present legal status of labor is desirable, Industrial Peace and the Wagner Act will be, at best, distasteful." G. M.

+ Harvard Law R 60:682 Ap '47 400w

"It is not as a scholarly treatment of the problem of promoting industrial peace that this book is to be appraised. To academic students of this problem its value lies primarily in the fact that it is a forcible presentation of the point of view of the uncompromising critics of the unions and the Wagner Act within the ranks of the employers. . . For a brief presentation of what an important segment of employers and their attorneys believe about the unions and the present law governing labor relations, this book is highly recommended." E. E. Witte

+ J Pol Econ 55:479 O '47 800w

Management R 36:235 Ap '47 30w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:294 S '47 280w

ISH-KISHOR, JUDITH. Adventure in Palestine; the search for Aleezah; il. by Margaret Ayer. 241p $2.50 Messner

47-2725

The setting is modern Palestine, partly around the city of Tel-Aviv. The protagonists are three young people: the Jewish boy, Judah; his Arab friend, Selim; and the English lad, Hal.

"A splendid idea, beautifully carried out. . . The adventures are swift-paced, exciting, and never artificial, though, as adults, we must confess that the part we liked best was when they were all three in the movies looking at Ingrid Bergman." Jane Cobb

+ Atlantic 179:130 Je '47 90w

"A dramatic and absorbing story for the middle-age group." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn BK 23:265 Jl '47 150w

"Timely and surprisingly unpartisan in dealing with an inflammable issue, this is a good story with a well-sustained and credible plot."

+ Kirkus 15:31 Ja 15 '47 200w

"This book is valuable not for the quality of its story but for the information it gives about ancient and modern Palestine." J. M. Smith

+ Library J 72:819 My 15 '47 70w

"This is a thoughtful, heartening story of the common people living in modern Palestine." N. B. Baker

+ N Y Times p25 Jl 13 '47 160w

ISHERWOOD, CHRISTOPHER. Lions and shadows; an education in the twenties. 312p $3 New directions

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 47-11810

An autobiography, written to be read as a novel, describing the education of a novelist. The book was first published in England in 1938.

Booklist 44:150 D 15 '47

"Without being captious, one cannot help noticing that several useful ingredients of a novel are missing and that what we have is a partly fictionalized account of how a would-be writer actually has become one. . . . 'Lions and Shadows' has occasional lively and ironic insights but it offers less enlightenment as a study of Isherwood as a writer than does the obvious device of reading his novels and stories which reveal quite clearly the direction and boundaries of his perceptions and taste. And, in the bargain, they're much more entertaining!" Adrienne Foulke

+ Commonweal 47:331 Ja 9 '48 270w

Kirkus 15:645 N 15 '47 160w

"In less skillful hands, the substratum of sophisticated imbecilities on which this [book] is based would have remained tenuous and formless. It is Isherwood's special distinction that he has welded refractory characters and improbable events into a smooth and credible tale, cast in a pleasing form and endowed with the animating power of a vigorous and original imagination." Terence Holliday

+ New Repub 117:29 D 22 '47 500w

"Isherwood's later work—which records as passionate and difficult a quest for certainty as has been undertaken in our time—stems from a decision that furnishes the climax of 'Lions and Shadows.' To readers already familiar with the novels of his maturity, 'Lions and Shadows' is likely to seem their indispensable prelude. To those who have read none of Isherwood's books, it will provide an ingratiating and delightful introduction." Lloyd Morris

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Ja 4 '48 850w

"Isherwood is laudably frank. In this autobiography that reads like a novel, he is his own most pitiless prosecutor, recounting the innumerable days wasted, the stories not finished. He admits to his shortcomings, his lack of determination, but instead of boring the reader with these quite conventional neurotic traits of the adolescent novelist, he manages to entertain. Perhaps this is because his style is as flexible and transparent here as in the famous 'Berlin Stories' or in his satire, 'Prater Violet.' . . . In 'Lions and Shadows' it's impossible to determine where truth ends and fiction begins—impossible and unnecessary because the very ambiguity makes the charm of the book." Richard Plant

+ N Y Times p3 D 14 '47 450w

"The book is a very pretty piece of satirical, gently self-mocking writing."

+ New Yorker 23:140 N 29 '47 100w

Reviewed by Richard McLaughlin

Sat R of Lit 30:14 D 27 '47 850w

ISHIMOTO, TATSUO. Art of flower arrangement. 125p il $2.50 Crown

635.9663 Floral decoration Agr47-13

Following a few pages on tools, containers, and general principles on form, the book is made up of photographs of flower arrangements with brief descriptive text. Index.

Booklist 43:326 Je 15 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '47

Kirkus 15:270 My 15 '47 120w

Reviewed by O. S. Stull

San Francisco Chronicle p10 Je 1 '47 80w

Wis Lib Bul 43:94 Je '47

J

JACKSON, CAARY PAUL. All-conference tackle. 242p $2.50 Crowell

47-31096

"Barry Shane, with a New England prep school background, is not quite willing to accept all of the members of the Michigan football team as his equals, especially the Polish boy Kolo. But it is Barry and Kolo, playing and working together, who win the final hard-fought game for Michigan." Library J

Booklist 44:37 S 15 '47

Kirkus 15:366 Jl 15 '47 110w

"Recommended for older boys." M. A. Webb
+ Library J 72:1115 Ag '47 80w

"Throughout this swiftly paced tale the scenes of the locker room and stadium are accurately drawn as it demonstrates by suggestion rather than preaching that fellowship and teamwork go hand in hand." William Glick

+ N Y Times p27 S 28 '47 200w

JACKSON, CLARENCE S., ed. See Jackson, W. H. Picture maker of the old West

JACKSON, ELIZABETH RHODES. Beacon Hill children; or, Chronicles of the Corey family as told by Dee; il. by Deane Cate. 218p $2.50 Page

47-18424

A story of one year in the lives of the Corey children of Beacon Hill in Boston. Dee, who tells the story, and her brothers Jack and Beany and their dog Reginald have a ride in a swan boat, spend a summer on an island in a lake, give a party for Reginald's friends at Christmas, etc.

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton

Christian Science Monitor p12 Je 10 '47 240w

"Pleasant and surprising adventures convey a real feeling of lively childhood experiences." E. M. Gordon

+ Library J 72:647 Ap 15 '47 80w

"Stories are pleasant, but uninspired and verge on the sentimental. Characters never come to life. Told in the first person. May have significance for Boston children, as much is made of the locale. Not recommended for general library use." M. A. Herr

+ Library J 72:647 Ap 15 '47 50w

JACKSON, HOLBROOK, comp. Bookman's pleasure; a recreation for booklovers [Eng title: Bookman's holiday]. 264p $2.75 Farrar, Straus [10s 6d Faber]

808.8 Quotations. Authors 47-3309

Quotations from the works of English and American writers, giving a miscellany of comments about writers themselves and others. The excerpts are grouped according to subject: love; money; good company; table talk; personal appearances; etc. Bibliography. Index of authors.

Booklist 43:306 Je 1 '47

Reviewed by Warren Beck

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Je 29 '47 320w

"It is seldom that an anthologist succeeds in obtaining our unqualified approval; for almost inevitably there will be some unpalatable inclusions or omissions. We may grant the editor every credit for introducing us to new acquaintances; but, if an old friend is passed over, loyalty induces us to see in the neglect a hint of that 'wild vicissitude of taste' of which Johnson spoke. Yet it is hardly likely that Mr. Jackson will suffer in this way. . . . There are some magnificent conversation pieces. Here is Jane Austen in the dumps, Johnson laughing 'like a rhinoceros,' Carlyle anxious about his trousers, and Coleridge in difficulties with a cow. Here, in short, is the most enchanting anthology that has come one's way for years." E. F.-B.

+ Christian Science Monitor p17 N 24 '45 400w

"This small and modest volume is a most admirably civilized one." A. F.

+ Commonweal 46:362 J1 25 '47 390w
Kirkus 15:149 Mr 1 '47 120w

"A delightful anthology for the guest room or the home library, where it need not be read from cover to cover in one week. It is not well adapted to the reading habits of the library borrower and its reference value is negligible. Recommended for library browsing rooms." G. D. McDonald

Library J 72:636 Ap 15 '47 110w

"A most entertaining anthology." G. P.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 22 '45 420w

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett

New Statesman & Nation 30:63 J1 28 '45 1200w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p33 My 25 '47 40w

"'Bookman's Pleasure' may be briefly defined as a denial of the current anthology. It is a reversion to an obsolescent type. It is the commonplace book of a delighted reader, and it has no other purpose than enjoyment. I cannot conceive of its being the slightest practical use to anybody and I recommend its purchase by all those to whom the reading of books is a lingering pleasure." H. M. Jones

+ N Y Times p4 Ap 13 '47 800w

Reviewed by Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p18 My 4 '47 130w

"Mr. Jackson's book is fitly named. It is by a bookman, about bookmen, and for bookmen. And, unlike many compilations ideal for dipping, it may be read straight through with thorough enjoyment." B. R. Redman

+ Sat R of Lit 30:33 Je 28 '47 600w

"It would be unfair to complain of omissions from a collection which only claims to be a selection, and is such an excellent selection; but I could wish that Mr. Jackson had included some of Anthony & Wood's acidities." Rose Macaulay

+ Spec 175:294 S 28 '45 600w

JACKSON, HOLBROOK. Reading of books. 292p $3 Scribner

028 Books and reading 47-30890

"Mr. Holbrook Jackson, a writer of many books and a seasoned reader, has devoted an instructive volume to the analysis of the proper relation between author and reader in a society of free men. The satisfaction to be found in skillful reading, as Mr. Jackson describes it, is twofold: first, the pleasure and excitement of sharing the author's experience and, second, the still keener delight of actively fulfilling one's own nature." (N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R) Index.

Booklist 44:62 O 15 '47

Reviewed by Paul Dinkins

Cath World 166:284 D '47 500w

"'The Reading of Books' is a library in itself and will be a constant source of pleasure to all who give themselves the satisfaction of owning a copy." E. M. Sowerby

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 N 8 '47 900w

"In discussing the motives, methods and results of literary productivity Mr. Jackson is exceedingly fertile in illustrative instances and covers a wide range of writers. . . The period where he is most at home is that just preceding the contemporary, where his knowledge is partly first-hand or drawn from sources not readily available. His analysis of authors, the fruit of years of accumulation, proves so fascinating that in several chapters the reader and his interests seem to be dragged in at the end as though by afterthought." G. F. Whicher

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 S 21 '47 550w

"Holbrook Jackson's 'The Reading of Books' is, as we academicians learnedly say, stimulating. He is not, however, a Calvinist in disguise. His remarks on current theory about One Hundred Best Books Guaranteed to Save the Republic seem to me sound. He has a vast deal to say about the writing temperament, which reviewers more learned than I will undoubtedly quarrel over; and he thinks it ought to be complemented by the reading temperament. . . I commend his pages to the cognoscenti as proper either for browsing or for burrowing. And if Mr. Jackson should think I do not take his pages or his purpose seriously, he is not the man I think he is." H. M. Jones

+ N Y Times p6 S 7 '47 500w

San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 9 '47 110w

Time 50:106 S 15 '47 500w

"Mr. Jackson produces a tapestry rather than a patchwork; and the method of his book tends to substantiate the main thesis he puts forward: that reading, like writing, is an art. By weaving the brightest threads of our reading into such a tapestry we can make reading a creative expression of the self. . . Mr. Jackson's cross-lights and unexpected illuminations are fascinating, and we may feel that, if we impose too strict an order, something of the romance of reading will be lost. Among all his good things from other writers, his own good things should not be overlooked. He can write pointed and striking sentences and could almost weave another tapestry out of his own threads."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p35 Ja 18 '47 600w

JACKSON, JESSE. Anchor man; pictures by Doris Spiegel. 142p $2 Harper

47-11015

Sequel to Call Me Charley (Book Review Digest 1945). The theme is the understanding between Negro and white children in Arlington High. Charley, a Negro boy, happy and accepted as the only Negro in a white high school, helps to solve the problems which arise with an influx of Negro students from another part of the town.

Booklist 44:175 Ja 1 '48

"Unfortunately an uninspired race-problem book, for although an unusual angle is offered, it doesn't build up to much feeling of reality. . . Since comparatively few, if any, white communities have opened their doors freely to Negroes, this book seems to dwell on a fairly theoretical aspect of the problem, especially unreal to the age level for which this book is written. In any case, not a very engaging book."

— Kirkus 15:430 Ag 15 '47 210w

Reviewed by N. R. Sykes

San Francisco Chronicle p8 N 16 '47 170w

+ Sat R of Lit 30:51 N 15 '47 70w

Wis Lib Bul 43:157 N '47

JACKSON, JOSEPH HENRY, ed. San Francisco murders, by Allan R. Bosworth [and others]. (Regional murder ser) 314p $3 Duell 364 Murder 47-4711

Reports of murders which took place in San Francisco between 1870 and 1936. Contents: The case of Laura D. Fair, 1870, by Robert O'Brien; The case of Dr. J. Milton Bowers, 1885, by Oscar Lewis; The case of Theodore Durant, 1895; The facts, by Hildegarde Teilhet; The legends, by Anthony Boucher; The case of Cordelia Botkin, 1898, by L. G. Offord; The murder of Nora Fuller, 1902, by Alfred Meyers; The case of Emma LeDoux, 1906, by J. H. Jackson; The murder of Father Patrick E. Heslin, 1921, by John Bruce; The case of Charles Henry Schwartz, 1925, by L. G. Offord; The murder of Rosetta Baker, 1930, by Alfred Meyers; The case of Jerome Braun von Selz, 1936, by A. R. Bosworth.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Je 15 '47 350w

JACKSON, J. H.—Continued

"Upholds the high quality of a popular series."

+ Kirkus 15:254 My 1 '47 90w

New Repub 116:29 My 26 '47 100w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9
Je 1 '47 320w

Reviewed by Russel Crouse

N Y Times p6 Ag 3 '47 550w

"An excellent addition to this series covering various cities' homicides."

+ New Yorker 23:108 My 24 '47 120w

Reviewed by Edward McQuade

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 My 25
'47 1950w

"Absorbing."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:32 My 24 '47 40w

JACKSON, LLOYD HAROLD. Yarn and cloth calculations. 198p $6 Textile bk.

677.083 Yarn. Textile fabrics—Tables, calculations, etc. 47-4971

"This book is a logically arranged compilation of the mathematical calculations involved in yarn and cloth construction, presented in such a manner as to be especially useful to the textile engineer, weaver, and student. The author has gone one step further than most previous textile mathematical publications; he explains in detail derivations of formulae and mill constants and correlates factors incident to yarn and cloth calculations." (J Home Econ) Index.

"Because of its convenience, completeness, and technical adaptability to mill processes, this book should prove of value to textile students, engineers, and technologists." G. S. Wham

+ J Home Econ 39:660 D '47 260w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:891 Je 1 '47 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:39 Ap '47

JACKSON, PHYLLIS WYNN (MRS RICHARD SORTOMME). Victorian Cinderella. 296p $3 Holiday

B or 92 Stowe, Mrs Harriet Elizabeth (Beecher)—Juvenile literature 47-31122

A fictionalized biography of Harriet Beecher Stowe, for junior and senior high schools. No index.

"One of the briskest biographies we have read in some time and one of the best balanced." Jane Cobb

+ Atlantic 180:148 D '47 70w

"Her biography is well written and easy to read, and the title remarkably well chosen. Attractive, composite illustrations."

+ Booklist 44:114 N 15 '47

"The whole brilliant Beecher family have a share in this vivacious story-biography of its most famous member. . . . Victorian Cinderella shows the influences which led up to the creation of Uncle Tom's Cabin and successfully portrays in a lively narrative the period of its writing." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:448 N '47 100w

Kirkus 15:506 S 15 '47 170w

"There are drama and pathos, poverty and riches aplenty. Girls will be sympathetic with Hattie throughout and will lose their feeling of identification with her only when her outlines become a bit blurred as the author of Uncle Tom's Cabin and the mother of grown children. It should be among the more popular of the biographies." M. B. Snow

+ Library J 72:1620 N 15 '47 70w

"In a year distinguished for good biographies for young people, this one stands out by reason of atmosphere so well realized that, though offered to high-school age, any one can take it." M L Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20 N
16 '47 430w

"In this full-bodied biography, cast in semi-fictional form, Harriet stands out against a well-defined background of her brilliant family and her turbulent period, a very appealing and human figure." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p19 Ja 4 '48 220w

Wis Lib Bul 43:157 N '47

JACKSON, ROBERT HOUGHWOUT. Nürnberg case; together with other documents. 268p il $3 Knopf

341.3 War crimes—Trials 47-1412

"The opening and closing statements of Mr. Justice Jackson at the German war criminals' trial, as well as excerpts from the cross-examination of Göring, Schacht, Milch, and Speer, and other official records. The purpose of the book is not to cover the case or to go into all of its issues in full but to lay bare the anatomy of dictatorship, by showing, through the testimony of the authors of the German tyranny, how a small group of men seeking power can 'legally' seize a government and suppress all opposition." New Yorker

Booklist 43:217 Mr 15 '47

"For lawyer and layman alike, this book is an excellent summary of the American case at Nuernberg." F. S. Marquardt

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Mr 2 '47
270w

"The Nürnberg Case is a valuable adjunct to the author's earlier book on the trials and indispensable reading for an adequate understanding of the first international criminal prosecution. It presents in brief, highly readable form the views of this country on the recent trials and the probable shape of future international justice." W. M. Kunstler

+ Columbia Law R 47:515 Ap '47 1050w

Current Hist 12:581 Je '47 40w

Foreign Affairs 25:695 Jl '47 50w

"Recommended only for special libraries in field of law and political science." H. H. A. Bernt

Library J 72:317 F 15 '47 130w

Reviewed by Rustem Vamberg

Nation 164:492 Ap 26 '47 850w

Reviewed by A. W. Dulles

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4
Mr 23 '47 950w

"This volume is tantalizing in that it contains so much, and still so little. The temporal span of the documents is impressive because, as against the impatience of the American public, we here find that in a period of only about a year an innovation was begun and carried to completion in the field of international behavior patterns." M. L. Ernst

N Y Times p6 F 23 '47 1450w

New Yorker 23:97 Mr 1 '47 100w

San Francisco Chronicle p15 Mr 23 '47
130w

School & Society 65:351 My 10 '47 20w

Reviewed by E. V. Rostow

Yale R n s 36:736 summer '47 1600w

JACKSON, SHEILA. Ballet in England. 32p il $6.30 (21s) Transatlantic

792.8 Ballet

"Black-and-white drawings and colored lithographs of various ballets in the English repertory from the familiar classics to the Jooss dances." Theatre Arts

"A collector's item. Recommended only to large drama and theatre collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 72:163 Ja 15 '47 30w

"Charming renditions capture a good deal of the varied flavors."

+ Theatre Arts 31:71 Ja '47 50w

JACKSON, THOMAS ALFRED. Ireland her own; an outline history of the Irish struggle for national freedom and independence. 443p $3.75 Int. pubs.

941.5 Ireland—History

47-12255

"In this book I try to tell the story, first of how Ireland came to be a part of the British Empire, then of how the Irish people struggled to undo that conquest and so regain possession of the soil and the sovereign rule of Ireland. The reason for telling this story is that, contrary to common belief, the process is not yet complete. I have thought it necessary to show the causes of the Anglo-Irish conflict, since only when these are known will the common people of England, the final arbiters, be able to tackle this long-outstanding Irish Question with a comprehension of the real issues involved." (Foreword) Index.

"A most useful reference."

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p8X D 21 '47 90w

"The best feature of this new history, which its publishers claim to be the only scientific history of Ireland, is that it is written by an Englishman and a Marxist. The only truth worth while being the truth one tells against the grain, it is an exceedingly truthful book, and being Marxist, shows on the English side at least, a real awareness of the economic factors involved. It is not in the least 'scientific' as it contains few references, and some of these are anything but reliable. . . His optimistic view of the results which might be expected from a British withdrawal from Ulster I do not share at all." Frank O'Connor

+ New Statesman & Nation 33:16 Ja 4 '47 800w

JACKSON, WILLIAM HENRY. Picture maker of the old West; [ed] by Clarence S. Jackson. 308p $7.50 Scribner

917.3 West—Views

47-30481

"Seven years ago William H. Jackson, then ninety-seven years old, wrote an autobiography, 'Time Exposure' [Book Review Digest 1940]. Five years ago, nine months short of a hundred years of age, Jackson died, and that year forty of his paintings, made in his eighties and nineties, appeared in Howard Driggs's 'Westward America.' Now his son has assembled an album of Jackson's life work—393 photographs, paintings and sketches—that is at once a monument to the man and a noble record of an almost vanished West." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

"Recommended for larger libraries."

+ Library J 72:1542 N 1 '47 100w

"The text, largely drawn from 'Time Exposure' and from the diaries on which 'Time Exposure' was based, unobtrusively provides an adequate connective narrative; the photographs and the contemporary drawings give the book its authority and its charm. They are unique. It is unfortunate that they are not all dated; a dozen of the early ones are obviously reproductions of the paintings Jackson made, late in life, for the Pioneer Trails Association. These may be prettier than the sketches on which they were based, and they have a quaint primitive charm of their own, but they are not the same thing as original records." Lewis Gannett

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 S 7 '47 800w

Reviewed by Courtenay Terrett

N Y Times p1 S 7 '47 650w

"Scribner has done a splendid job of this album of a remarkable man's work, and the pictures, with the text, constitute a running history of the West itself, almost as much as the history of a man. It will be one of the top picture-books of the year, perhaps of the decade, ranking right along with the Matthew Brady volume also published by Scribner." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 S 14 '47 700w

"It cannot be said that the editing and manufacture of 'Picture Maker of the Old West' is as satisfactory as its photographs. There is a great deal of waste space on the book's pages that might to advantage be occupied with more detailed captions and the captions themselves are extremely general and uninformative, lacking as they are in specific dates and close identification of locales. Nor is there any apparent awareness of modern book-making. . . These, however, are superficial blemishes in the physical economy of a book that, better than any pictorial record that has gone before, gives a clue to the true character of the old West." Lucius Beebe

+ Sat R of Lit 30:11 S 6 '47 1300w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen

Survey G 36:550 O '47 850w

JACOBI, CARL. Revelations in black. 272p $3 Arkham house

47-11448

Twenty-one weird stories by an American writer. They have all been published previously in magazines.

"Mr. Jacobi's stories are regulation to the point of formula and lacking in the brilliance of conception, device and composition that distinguish the classic horror story. The most that can be said for the stories in 'Revelations in Black' is that they supply a special sort of escape for a group of readers even more partisan than detective fans, and presumably less critical." B. V. Winebaum

— N Y Times p53 N 16 '47 290w

"The title-story in this volume rather annoyed us. It is concerned with the proper method of grounding vampires, if that's the way of putting it. We expected to learn something new and foolproof and terrifying about dealing with the pesky things but, by golly, it turned out to be the same thing patented years ago by one Count Dracula." E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p17 N 16 '47 150w

JACOBS, JAMES RIPLEY. The beginning of the U.S. army, 1783-1812. 419p il maps $5 Princeton univ. press

973.4 U.S.—History, Military. U.S. Army—History

47-5140

"A detailed history of the U.S. Army, from the Revolution to the Mexican War of 1846 is begun with this volume. In it, emphasis is placed upon the role of the Army in protecting the expanding western frontier country from the Indians and from foreign encroachment. Particularly well covered are the operations of Generals Harmar, St. Clair, and Wayne against the Northwest Indians. The organization, conditions of service, and generally niggardly treatment received by the regular army are adequately dealt with for the period covered, and there is a good chapter on the founding of the U. S. Military Academy at West Point." U S Quarterly Bkl

"Major Jacobs' professional interest in technical military history is reinforced by a strong human interest in experiences of the officers and men in the army and the conditions under which they lived. Copious quotations from contemporary diaries and letters add life to the picture." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 64:1111 S 17 '47 280w

"This intelligent history is by no means as specialized in content and interest as it is in title. The military history is good, and the understanding of our army and of its 'traditions' requires a book like this one. But, furthermore, the author's claim in his preface is true, that the pages, 'of necessity, also describe an important and somewhat neglected section of our social history.'" Philip Burnham

+ Commonweal 46:457 Ag 22 '47 330w

"Major Jacobs is clever in showing the impact of the personality and character of successive military leaders like Harmer, St. Clair, Wayne and Wilkinson. . . The author's conventional approach to the militia and its role in the national military institution is too narrow. . . Nevertheless, Major Jacobs' first volume of an eventual series is now the best history of the Army for the period he covers. His footnotes and bibliography will be vastly useful to future students." Sidney Forman

+ N Y Times p26 Ag 10 '47 600w

"The limitations of this work are partly the result of its emphasis. There is a tendency to obscure the larger aspects of military problems and policy behind the details of army organization and activity. . . Based on intensive research in a wide variety of sources, this work adds a good deal to knowledge of the beginnings of the Army; and the story is sufficiently well presented to hold the interest of the general reader."

JACOBS, JAMES RIPLEY—Continued

+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 3:278 S '47 200w

JACOBS, MORRIS BORIS. Synthetic food adjuncts; synthetic food colors, flavors, essences, sweetening agents, preservatives, stabilizers, vitamins, and similar food adjuncts. 335p $5.50 Van Nostrand

668.5 Flavoring essences. Food preservatives. Coloring matter in food 47-1370

"In this volume the author, who is Chief of the Chemical Laboratory of the New York City Bureau of Food and Drugs, deals with three types of synthetic food adjuncts: those added to give color and improve appearance; those used to add or enhance flavor; and those used for preservative purposes. He discusses the chemical composition and properties of such products, their specifications as set down by the United States Food and Drug Administration, methods of preparation and use. A chapter on the addition of vitamins to food is included, but the greater part of the book is devoted to flavoring materials. Numerous formulas are scattered through the text, and those for flavor ester mixtures are collected in an appendix. Selected references are given at the end of most chapters." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"A general criticism of the book is that food manufacturers may be led inadvertently into violations of federal and state food laws notwithstanding the disclaimer of the author that he does not presume to give the official views of any branch of the federal, state, or city government. . . . Notwithstanding the above comments, the writer considers Dr. Jacobs' book to be a useful reference for manufacturing and food control chemists, particularly with respect to the selected bibliographies at the end of each chapter. Unlike many recent books, the quality of the paper, printing, and binding is entirely satisfactory." J. W. Sale

+ — Chem & Eng N 25:1762 Je 16 '47 400w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1627 N 15 '46 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:8 Ja '47

"Because the author is well informed of the limitations imposed by the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act, and has clearly indicated what may and may not be done, the reader need have little fear of making use of the wealth of information in this book."

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:213 Je '47 220w

JACOBY, NEIL HERMAN, and SAULNIER, RAYMOND JOSEPH. Business finance and banking. 241p $3.50 Nat. bur. of economic research

332.742 Credit. Banks and banking 47-2406

"The financing of business, especially small business, has come to be a much written about subject. The authors here trace and explain the far-reaching changes which took place, 1900-40, in the relationships between commercial banks and business enterprises. They review the rise of new private and public lending agencies; analyze the relationships of banks and business during World War II; and, finally, consider the emerging role of commercial banks as agencies of business finance." U S Quarterly Bkl

"The material presented is clearly the result of long and skillful research, both broad and intensive, covering a wide field. Statements of fact are reinforced with numerous statistical tables and illustrated with many interesting graphs and diagrams. The presentation, in spite of the technical nature of much of the material, is clear and understandable." F. R. Fairchild

+ Ann Am Acad 253:228 S '47 400w

"This thorough review of nearly half a century of experience should provide the basis for shaping the policy and the future role of banks as suppliers of credit to business."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:157 Je '47 280w

JAEDIKER, KERMIT. Tall, dark and dead. (Mystery house publication) 256p $2 Curl

Detective story.

"Mr. Jaediker spins a lively whodunit of high and low circles in simple, effective prose—not that synthetic stuff other roughsters use. Easy to read and puzzling as well." Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 D 21 '47 90w

"Spalding's murderer is caught with the aid of a mouse, which is, we believe something new in the annals of crime. Aside from this the story is pretty much run-of-the mill." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p10 D 28 '47 170w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p19 D 21 '47 90w

"Could be better."

Sat R of Lit 30:28 D 20 '47 40w

JAEGER, ELLSWORTH. Easy crafts, 129p il $1.95 Macmillan

690 Handicraft 47-1980

Directions, illustrated with line drawings, for a large number of simple crafts, "projects that untrained hands may undertake with materials easily secured." Includes various types of printing—spatter printing, blueprinting, etc.—fashioning a pasteboard box planetarium or a fungus lapel ornament, collecting and mounting insects, bark scraping, cardboard weaving, and many more.

Booklist 43:250 Ap 15 '47

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 J1 10 '47 180w

Kirkus 15:35 Ja 15 '47 90w

"Recommended for use with camp leaders and other adults working with children's handicraft projects." J. E. Lynch

+ Library J 72:468 Mr 15 '47 80w

"Curator of education, professor at the Buffalo Museum of Science, Mr. Jaeger writes, and draws, out of huge and varied experience with people young and old, who long to make something, preferably with materials found out-of-doors, and without effort too protracted. His book meets this urge, with which all Scout leaders, camp officials, and even city teachers are well acquainted, with a blessed plenty of ideas to work out in this way."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22 Mr 23 '47 150w

JAMES, FRANKLIN, pseud. Killer in the kitchen. 281p $2 Lantern press

47-24306

Mystery story.

"Bright in spots, and certainly busy at all times."

Kirkus 15:45 Ja 15 '47 90w

"The book has almost everything except good writing." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p34 My 18 '47 80w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p13 Mr 16 '47 50w

Sat R of Lit 30:30 F 22 '47 40w

Springf'd Union p12 Ag 26 '47 90w

JAMES, HENRY. American novels and stories; ed. and with an introd. by F. O. Matthiessen. 993p $5 Knopf

47-1392

"These are books and short stories James wrote about his own country, which, as he once said, became a romantic land to him only after he had been in self-exile for many years. 'The Bostonians,' 'The Europeans,' 'The Ivory Tower,' and 'Washington Square' are the novels, and the nine stories include 'The Jolly Corner,' which is every bit as fine a ghost story as the more celebrated 'The Turn of the Screw.' Professor Matthiessen has contributed a lengthy and knowledgeable introduction." New Yorker

Booklist 43:241 Ap 1 '47

Reviewed by Cuthbert Wright
Commonweal 45:619 Ap 4 '47 480w

Reviewed by John Farrelly
New Repub 117:31 Ag 4 '47 360w

"Mr. Matthiessen, who often tries to be more profound than his subjects warrant, here writes more simply than usual, and usually with good sense, Henry James, if he knew about this introduction, might be a little surprised to find references to Dreiser and Veblen, but I suppose could and should not object. I cannot imagine that he would understand why Mr. Matthiessen, who never calls George Eliot 'Eliot,' should call Mark Twain 'Twain.' And I am sure James's flesh would creep a little at Mr. Matthiessen's ungrammatical and slack reference to 'the most sustained production of any novelist yet to appear in America.'"

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p32
F 23 '47 700w

"In this latest and by far the most sizable anthology, F. O. Matthiessen, author of a critical study of James and editor of his Notebooks, has collected nearly all the novels and stories with an American setting. . . This volume must contain nearly a million words, and though printed in double columns the type is readable and the format pleasing. For a writer who, as the legend goes, was enamored of old-world privilege and by no means aglow with belligerent fervor in dealing with the national ideals, the work collected in this volume is astonishing in that it shows us to what an extent James was able to express creatively the meaning and quality of American life." Philip Rahv

N Y Times p4 Mr 2 '47 850w

New Yorker 23:98 F 22 '47 100w

Reviewed by George Snell
San Francisco Chronicle p23 My 25 '47 260w

"'The Europeans' may be only a comedy sketch, but it is pure Jacobean, and, however light the author's touch, it is exquisitely subtle, exquisitely sure. In 'The Bostonians,' on the contrary, James has labored heavily and breathed hard. His analysis of character is redundant almost beyond bearing, and his final melodramatic scene is, quite simply, absurd. . . Mr. Matthiessen has provided the four novels and nine stories, with an informed, unpretentious introduction." B. R. Redman

Sat R of Lit 30:66 Ap 12 '47 270w

JAMES, HENRY. Notebooks; ed. by F. O. Matthiessen and Kenneth B. Murdock. 425p $6 Oxford

813 47-11461

This volume contains a carefully edited transcription of James' working notebooks and three related documents. The editorial additions include an introduction on the general significance of the notebooks and commentaries showing the relationships between particular notes and James' finished works. Indexes.

"418 pages of pure joy for the James addict and sure benefit for the practicing craftsman." T. M. Longstreth

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 N 11 '47 120w

Kirkus 15:590 O 15 '47 170w

Reviewed by F. W. Dupee
Nation 165:685 D 20 '47 360w

Reviewed by John Farrelly
New Repub 117:29 D 1 '47 650w

"The 'Notebooks' are invaluable for the insight which they afford into Henry James's creative method; they constitute a major document on his inner life; and they are likely to find a place among the classics of criticism because they expound and so richly illustrate an art of fiction that sought to express life as itself potentially capable of becoming a great and noble art." Lloyd Morris

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 N 23 '47 340w

"Since the publication three years ago of F. O. Matthiessen's 'Henry James: the Major Phase,' the first critical study to be written with a knowledge of James' 'Notebooks,' readers have awaited with increasing interest the publication of the 'Notebooks' themselves. That event, quite clearly of the first importance to modern literature, has now taken place." Mark Schorer

+ N Y Times p5 D 7 '47 1700w

Reviewed by Edmund Wilson
New Yorker 23:133 D 13 '47 1450w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles
San Francisco Chronicle p14 N 9 '47 500w

Reviewed by H. L. Varley
Springf'd Republican p7B D 28 '47 360w

JAMES, MARQUIS. Metropolitan life; a study in business growth. 480p il $5 Viking 368.3 Metropolitan life insurance company

47-30046

The story of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company, "its growth, and its transformation from a struggling private enterprise to a semi-public institution, from its hesitant beginnings at the time of the Civil War, [The author] sketches in the background of insurance from ancient times; traces the course of legislation affecting it; studies its influence in the economic and social growth of the country." (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 43:164 F 1 '47

"The book insures confidence in the reader because of the frankness that runs through the piece. It should be read by businessmen both for its educational value and as a masterly demonstration of how business history should be written." H. J. Owens

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Ja 26 '47 410w

Reviewed by John Broderick
Commonweal 45:427 F 7 '47 900w

Kirkus 14:572 N 1 '46 120w

Management R 36:235 Ap '47 40w

"Metropolitan appears to have been an unusually honest and well managed company, and it is only to be expected that Mr. James's well written account is slightly on the enthusiastic side—just as it was when he was writing about Sam Houston or Andrew Jackson. The same enthusiasm does not extend to statistical details. Mr. James seems to lack the love for analysis of financial and operating data that makes for incisive interpretation of the money-making aspects of money-making business. Figures are inserted in the text but seldom collected in tables that would enable the reader to see long-run trends at a glance. This lack, coupled with an old-fashioned index that lists many names but few business functions, makes it difficult to locate statistical material. Yet, the book is an excellent source for accurate information on Metropolitan and American life insurance. In the treatment of the recent period Mr. James and Metropolitan's executives are to be congratulated for their objectivity. The criticisms of the company made by the T. N. E. C. and the S. E. C., for example, may be minimized, but they are there for the careful reader to evaluate." T. C. Cochran

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p19
Mr 9 '47 1400w

"Mr. James is inclined to overgenerosity in speaking of the Metropolitan as a 'social institution' with an abiding sense of its responsibility for the health and welfare of the toiling masses. Also, he gives rather scant attention to the history of the company's long opposition to the unionization of its agents, a struggle terminated only when the courts forced it to bargain collectively. Granted that life insurance hardly lends itself to the rollicking style which was such a delight in Mr. James' recent

JAMES, MARQUIS—Continued

'Cherokee Strip,' the book under review seems to establish the axiom that the farther removed the biographer is from physical contact with his source of material, the more debilitated becomes his writing. Even so, the present book is a competent and sincere treatment of a complex subject." H. J. Bresler
N Y Times p29 Mr 9 '47 850w

"One of the soundest business histories that has been written. Mr. James has approached his subject with candor and intelligence." Ruth Teiser

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Je 1 '47 500w

Springf'd Union p2 Je 25 '47 120w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:165 Je '47 160w

JAMES, SIR WILLIAM MILBURNE, ed. John Ruskin and Effie Gray. 264p il $3.50 Scribner

B or 92 Ruskin, John, Millais, Euphemia Chalmers (Gray) lady, Millais, Sir John Everett, bart. 47-12193

The story of the marriage of John Ruskin and Effie Gray, as told in letters which were found years after the end of that unhappy affair. The letters have been edited by Effie's grandson by her second marriage with the English painter John Everett Millais. Index.

"Sir William James has done an admirable job of selecting the relevant material from the mass of documents at his disposal, letting the principals speak for themselves with the minimum of commentary needed to link the letters together and explain their background. In the earlier stages of the affair, the reader may feel considerable sympathy for Ruskin. . . But Ruskin's conduct in the last months before the separation is past condoning. He behaved like a heel. The ending, moreover, is as romantically satisfactory as the close of a Victorian novel." De Lancey Ferguson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 D 21 '47 1000w

"Surely in a book that purports to tell 'the truth' omissions are as material as inclusions. For Effie's sake as well as for Ruskin's, all the letters should some day be published in the care of an impartial scholar whose object would be to discover the whole truth." Frances Win-war

N Y Times p5 D 21 '47 1150w

"Sir William's collection of letters throws a new light into the obscurity which still surrounds and interpenetrates the relationship between the Victorian idea of sex and the Victorian idea of society. If for this reason only (and there are others) it is both a fascinating and an important book." George Dangerfield

+ Sat R of Lit 31:11 Ja 10 '48 1050w

Time 50:64 D 29 '47 700w

JAMESON, STORM (MRS GUY CHAPMAN). Before the crossing. 262p $2.75 Macmillan

47-1198

Story of murder and spies in London and Paris in 1939. David Renn, writer of "dry corrosive novels," and a member of the London secret police on the side, is the hero. The solving of the murder of Renn's friend, Henry Smith, is the core of the book.

Christian Century 64:594 My 7 '47 60w
Christian Science Monitor p17 My 24 '47 750w

Kirkus 15:8 Ja 1 '47 210w

"The story is involved and dull and will do little for the early admirers of Storm Jameson. Rather unnecessary—almost noxious—and not recommended for general purchase." K. T. Willis

— Library J 72:528 Ap 1 '47 110w

Reviewed by H. I'A. Fausset
Manchester Guardian p3 My 9 '47 190w
New Repub 116:35 My 5 '47 90w

Reviewed by Walter Allen
New Statesman & Nation 33:419 Je 7 '47 90w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20
Ap 20 '47 290w

"'Before the Crossing' makes no pretense at being a run-of-the-mill whodunit, but since it manages to track down a murderer and withholds his identity to the end, certain mystery story standards may be fairly applied. Incompletion takes the place of suspense. The book does not hold within itself answers to questions that are every reader's right to ask, whether the novel be a thriller, an exercise in symbolism or a work of genius. Further, the plot mentions no explicit punishment or outcome for several characters. . . Omission of essentials in no way guarantees a resultant atmosphere of mystery, Miss Jameson's practiced hand to the contrary notwithstanding." B. V. Winebaum

N Y Times p31 My 11 '47 450w

"Miss Jameson has a curiously disjointed and cryptic style, almost suggesting a parody of Graham Greene, and her characters, though certainly all but incredibly depraved, are somewhat too introspective for any very stimulating villainy. Undoubtedly an honorable experiment on the part of a serious novelist, but unfortunately a somewhat exhausting one for the reader. 'Pretentious' might even be the word."

— New Yorker 23:115 Ap 19 '47 120w

"One would like to welcome the whodunit debut of a novelist usually so distinguished as Miss Jameson; but the present work is largely as a novel ineffectual and as a melodrama dull." Anthony Boucher

— San Francisco Chronicle p20 My 11 '47 70w

"'Before the Crossing' is an exciting novel, a 'thriller' of the same kind as one of Graham Greene's, but written with a quieter maturer wisdom. Miss Jameson is not content to present us with villains—she always lets us know, by insinuation or statement, how the wrong turn was taken, what pressure has diverted men and women into evil and its service. . . As a detective story 'Before the Crossing' is a success; and Miss Jameson is free from any inclination to idealize the work of the detective, or to minimize its hardening effects on a man's character. But the strength of this book lies in the sharp characterization, the skill with which we are taken into the very atmosphere of London, of Paris." R. E. Roberts

+ Sat R of Lit 30:10 My 17 '47 550w

"Cheaply bitter book. Sartre's Age of Reason was a foolish piece of boulevard grumbling; but this is a more depressing work, because, taking the most wretched parts of all our egos for its narrow field, it fails even to make us smile at the figures we cut." Kate O'Brien

— Spec 178:602 My 23 '47 650w

Times [London] Lit Sup p221 My 10 '47 480w

JANET, LILLIAN, pseud. of JANET CICCHETTI, and LILLIAN RESSLER. Touchstone. 346p $3 Rinehart

47-2665

Historical novel about San Francisco and Sacramento in the years following the gold rush of '49. It is the story of a beautiful but predatory woman and the two brothers, very different types of men, who loved her.

"A wealth of California goldrush period material makes 'Touchstone' worthwhile reading, provided one can ignore the lack of continuity and the unimaginative vocabulary. Sustained by very little conflict, and not a jigger of suspense, the soporific plot emerges as an immature interfamily bedtime story." Isabel Carr

— Chicago Sun Book Week p7 My 18 '47 230w

Kirkus 15:42 Ja 15 '47 160w

"'Touchstone' is long and earnest but a little remote, a novel in which everything is completely described and faintly communicated." Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p26
Mr 30 '47 170w

Reviewed by Andrea Parke

N Y Times p12 My 25 '47 290w

"As history, it isn't much. . . But as a novel, it is something else again, for their writing, plotting and characterization are excellent, and given a subject they know more about they should come up with a winner." Edith James

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p12 My 4 '47
120w

JANIS, MRS HARRIET (GROSSMAN), and JANIS, SIDNEY. Picasso; the recent years, 1939-1946. 211p il $7.50 Doubleday

759.6 Picasso, Pablo (Pablo Ruys). Paintings, Spanish 47-190

"Harriet and Sidney Janis are devotees of the closest sort and have for some time expressed their intention to do 'The' book on Picasso and his art. The five years of occupation and the confusion since have only begun to clear away and his work of that period emerges, as it always would, as a fresh shock. Thus it seemed imperative to the authors to set aside their larger plans and concentrate on the war years. The present book is a richly illustrated, well-printed account." N Y Times

Reviewed by MacKinley Helm
Atlantic 179:138 Mr '47 180w

Reviewed by Anne Fremantle
Commonweal 45:549 Mr 14 '47 390w
Kirkus 14:477 S 15 '46 100w

Reviewed by Walter Pach
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8
Ja 26 '47 750w

Reviewed by W. G. Dooley
N Y Times p9 D 22 '46 500w

"The Janises are hampered by insufficient information and an uncomfortable adulation of their subject; still, their text and the hundred and thirty-odd reproductions of photographs of the artist, his surroundings, and his works make a curiously touching picture of Picasso during the Occupation."

+ — New Yorker 22:86 Ja 11 '47 110w

JAKES, MRS FLORENCE (PAGE) Canadian spring; il. by Francis Lee Jaques. 216p $3.50 Harper

917.12 Northwest, Canadian—Description and travel 47-31420

Describes in text and drawings a leisurely three-months' motor trip thru the prairie provinces of Canada. "Mr. and Mrs. Jaques made a study of wild animals and places and found, as always, a heartening serenity. To pioneers of Canadian wildernesses their trip, chiefly by car, might seem de luxe, but this gave them opportunity to observe and enjoy in the lighthearted spirit which is one of the pleasures of the book." (Atlantic)

"Again we are indebted to Florence and Francis Jaques for another book as beautifully written as it is illustrated. Canadian Spring is informing, entertaining, inspiring. . . The writing and illustrations keep pace together, for the black and white sketches of Mr. Jaques, with their exquisite shadings, poses, and expressions, possess the essential and wonderfully real atmosphere and background so characteristic of all his work." Theodora Stanwell-Fletcher

+ Atlantic 180:156 D '47 300w
Booklist 44:66 O 15 '47

"This lacks perhaps the freshness and zest of the Jaques' earliest books but still ranks high not only for the charm of the writing but the beauty of the book with Francis Lee Jaques' drawings. . . A perfect gift book for that sportsman friend."

+ Kirkus 15:451 Ag 15 '47 150w

"Delightful text. Strongly recommended." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 73:43 Ja 1 '48 20w
Wis Lib Bul 43:152 N '47

JASPER, GERTRUDE RATHBONE. Adventure in the theatre; Lugné-Poe and the Théâtre de l'Oeuvre to 1899. 370p il $4.50 Rutgers univ. press

792 Lugné-Poe, Aurélien François. Paris. Maison de l'oeuvre 47-11490

"Lugné-Poe was what the Germans call a theater-mensch, a man to whom life in the theatre is more real than the world outside. . . Lugné-Poe's dream was of a theatre, in Paris in the Eighteen-Nineties, which should express, in a single work of theatre-art, everything that the Symbolists were trying to say in their several ways in poetry, painting, novels, music. For seven years, from 1893 to 1899, Lugné-Poe's Théâtre de l'Oeuvre came close to doing this. . . In 'Adventure in the Theatre,' Gertrude Jasper has tried, resolutely and faithfully, to reproduce the story of the Théâtre de l'Oeuvre." N Y Times

Reviewed by E. J. R. Isaacs
N Y Times p16 N 23 '47 500w

School & Society 67:15 Ja 3 '48 20w

"Adventure in the Theatre, with its careful appendices, has all the earmarks of a doctor's thesis but it is not interesting reading in spite of its rich subject, the man and the theatre which answered his vision." E. J. R. I.

+ — Theatre Arts 32:63 Ja '48 240w

JAVELLANA, STEVAN. Without seeing the dawn. 359p $2.75 Little 47-2146

"This is the story of a man and of a village. The village is a Filipino barrio inhabited by farmer folk whose industry was matched only by the piety of their wives. This story tells of their simple pleasures, of their little joys, their courtships, the laughter of their children, the marriage of their sons, the workaday toil, the songs of serenade. One night disaster came to this village as it descended upon many another Filipino barrio with the coming of the Japanese. This is the story of the death of this village and of the enduring hatred of those who survived it." Author's note

"An extraordinarily vivid book, worked from the fabric of Philippine life—quiet, laughable, exalting, bitter, and horrifying; but it is written almost gently, with an undertone of lightness, like the sound of Filipino voices heard in the fields towards the end of day." W. D. Edmonds

+ Atlantic 180:123 Jl '47 480w

Booklist 43:290 My 15 '47

Reviewed by F. S. Marquardt
Chicago Sun Book Week p3 My 11 '47
320w

"Probably Mr. Javellana's novel shows an accurate picture, as far as it goes, of the average Philippine farmer, but the events seem somewhat trumped up. We have had far too many assembly-line peasants and their passionate ploddings." Elizabeth Johnson

Commonweal 46:124 My 16 '47 120w

"A disturbing book, because it might have been so much better than it is. Ably written, a worthwhile story, extremely vivid in spots, though slow and even dull in the overall—this has the elements of a powerful story, but would have benefited by judicious pruning."

+ — Kirkus 15:135 Mr 1 '47 170w

"Our small library needs this novel for its adult readers." F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 72:639 Ap 15 '47 70w

"Mr. Javellana writes in a basically simple prose, which he uses to good effect for as varied purposes as his lyric descriptions of landscape and his recording of the violence of sudden action. As the narrative moves forward it gathers about itself an atmosphere of almost classic horror and tragedy that engulfs the individual characters and leaves the reader conscious at the end that he has been in intimate contact with the emotions of an entire people struggling against a dark and fearful destiny." J. J. Espey

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 My 4 '47 900w

JAVELLANA, STEVAN—Continued

"The author, Stevan Javellana, is a 29-year-old law student who fought with the Philippine Army and later with the guerrillas. When illness took him out of the fight, he turned to studying the simple farmer folk among whom he lived. . . . Although Mr. Javellana's record of their way of life is far from being a masterpiece, it forms a work of sensitivity and beauty." D. D.

+ — N Y Times p6 Ap 27 '47 550w
New Yorker 23:94 Ap 26 '47 100w

JAYNES, CLARE, pseud. of JANE MAYER, and CLARA SPIEGEL. This eager heart. 282p $2.75 Random house

47-4912

The story of a marriage which had lasted twelve years, but was suddenly brought almost to the breaking point. The scene is the Montana ranch country, and the "Easterner" from St Louis who purchased the adjoining ranch, figures largely in the difficulties between Kay and Mac MacFarlan.

Booklist 44:68 O 15 '47

"The characters in 'This Eager Heart' are real people, and the dialogue is real talk. But it is difficult to believe that a woman as well adjusted in her marriage as Kay seems to have been would not have discovered what was troubling her husband long before any estrangement developed." Dorothy Sparks

+ — Chicago Sun Book Week p3 S 14 '47 420w

Kirkus 15:320 Je 15 '47 110w

"Both Montana country and very real and likeable people who lived in it shown skillfully in this straightforward and appealing story of a marriage that didn't end up on the rocks." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 S 28 '47 230w

Reviewed by Therese de Grace

N Y Times p25 Ja 4 '48 100w

JEANNERET-GRIS, CHARLES EDOUARD (LE CORBUSIER, pseud.). When the cathedrals were white; a journey to the country of timid people [tr. from the French by Francis E. Hyslop, jr.]. 217p $3 Reynal

917.3 U.S.—Description and travel. New York (city)—Description. Architecture—U.S. 47-2718

"World-famous Swiss architect and city planner, long a resident of Paris applies the occupational philosophy developed in his Radiant City (1935) specifically to New York: general to dense concentration of population constitutes a crushing burden on modern society; skyscrapers should be larger and spaced wider apart eliminating traffic congestion, suburban dormitories, and providing space for play; the house as a habitable machine should be produced in factories exploiting modern engineering techniques; the cathedrals were built through complete community collaboration—a feature which should be recaptured." Library J

"In spite of the breathlessness of his impressions of America, this is an important book, likely to be read and studied for many years to come. After reading it you will not be able to take a streetcar, an elevator, see a movie or look at a skyscraper without a refreshingly reawakened awareness of their significance." R. A. Florsheim

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Mr 23 '47 370w

Kirkus 14:618 D 1 '46 140w

"A highly civilized mind, the author is imaginative, communal minded, provocative. Recommended." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 72:223 F 1 '47 140w

"The book is ardent, shrewd, and witty—Le Corbusier's best, and the most tonic for us." Albert Guerard

+ Nation 164:519 My 3 '47 650w

Reviewed by H. S. Churchill

New Repub 116:30 My 12 '47 330w

"'When the Cathedrals Were White' has not very much literary shape. It is hardly memoirs, though some of the episodes of his visit to 'the land of the timid' would be more entertaining if the names of the individuals from whom he quotes and, who can often be identified from the context, were given. . . . It is not a sociological study of America, nor even a comparison of America with France, though poor pre-war France keeps entering the picture, usually to its disadvantage, in a fashion that is rather embarrassing after all that has happened in the last ten years. What Le Corbusier really offers is a loosely joined series of essays, some evidently verbatim quotations from certain lectures he gave on his American tour, others hardly more than emotive sketches touching, with rather naive enthusiasm at times, on aspects of American life which struck him then, as they do many newly arrived Europeans, as having more significance than they are likely to do after the observer is more familiar with the country. . . . Certain stylistic peculiarities in this book are not, as might sometimes appear, due to the translator. On the contrary he has done an excellent job with a difficult task." Henry-Russell Hitchcock

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 Ap 13 '47 1200w

Reviewed by James Stern

N Y Times p6 Mr 30 '47 600w

"When he does approve of something, such as the George Washington Bridge, he grows ecstatic, and he never tries to measure America by European standards. He merely believes that we could do better with our country, and he has some suggestions."

New Yorker 23:115 Mr 22 '47 160w

"Le Corbusier's book is well worth the time of anyone who has imagination enough to see how small a margin lies between our current mode of life and what Le Corbusier suggests. Just by the way, for a quick key to his entire principle, the point on which his whole argument, so admirably and enthusiastically conducted, is based, read the final paragraph on page 194 and see if you can justify the seldom remembered but always present, fearful waste in all our city life as he defines it there." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Mr 21 '47 700w

"The book is illustrated with sketches and diagrams by the author, significant in spite of their affectively careless execution. . . . From a literary standpoint, the book suffers from diffuseness and lack of continuity. . . . Le Corbusier is bursting with stimulating ideas upon a great many subjects. They are presented without logical sequence, and often recur. Thus the reader's train of thought cannot run smoothly, but is constantly interrupted." L. G. White

Sat R of Lit 30:16 My 3 '47 750w

JEFFRIES, BRUCE, pseud. See Jeffries, G. M.

JEFFRIES, GRAHAM MONTAGUE (PETER BOURNE, BRUCE GRAEME, BRUCE JEFFRIES, pseud.). Drums of destiny [Eng title: Black saga]. 570p $3 Putnam

Christophe, Henri, king of Haiti—Fiction

47-30855

Historical novel about the revolt of the slaves in Haiti against their French masters. It is essentially a fictionalized biography of Christophe, and is told from the viewpoint of a Scottish doctor who sought refuge on the island during the last years of the struggle.

Booklist 44:32 S 15 '47

"Conceived in the grand manner, Bourne's novel is extremely well written, even to the tedious introductory section which stopped me because it was cluttered with Scottish dialect. Bourne is a master of vivid phrase, rich color and detail. His book is a rare and gratifying reading experience." Van Allen Bradley

+ — Chicago Sun Book Week p1 S 28 '47 1000w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 S '47

"There's brutality here—and sex violence—but the pace and vigor of the writing carries the reader along through a story of social upheaval."

+ — Kirkus 15:369 J1 15 '47 260w

"Story of the Scotch doctor who becomes involved with the Negro cause, which is used as the thread to tie together the main historical events, is weak and the book is much too long. Nevertheless, novel makes exciting reading and reflects extended research. Recommended." E. H. Kennedy

+ — Library J 72:1269 S 15 '47 80w

Reviewed by Harold Brighthouse

Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 30 '47 300w

"'Drums of Destiny' is rich in the detail of history, packed with the excitement of adventure." Arna Bontemps

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 O 5 '47 800w

"Mr. Bourne writes skillfully and sympathetically of the social and political conflict between Negro and white, between Negro and mulatto, between Negro and Negro. He has dug deeply into Haitian history and produced a fine novel of a gaudy, dramatic era." Hoffman Birney

+ N Y Times p5 S 21 '47 550w

"Any future student of that sturdiest of our contemporary literary commodities, the historical romance, will be well advised not to overlook the present volume. It is, without reservation, a perfect example of that genre" Robert Pick

+ Sat R of Lit 30:11 S 20 '47 380w

Springf'd Union p12 O 3 '47 150w

"An overpoweringly long novel... Mr. Bourne is fascinated by the history of Haiti, but he is not essentially a novelist. All his high dramatic scenes have an appearance of being forced; and his white characters (with the possible exception of the young Scots doctor) are no more than so many marionettes."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p477 S 20 '47 300w

JELKE, FRAZIER. An American at large. 337p $3 Duell

B or 92 47-3305

Autobiographical narrative of an American, born on an Illinois farm, whose later career included the making of a fortune in Wall street, and his acceptance by society in Newport and London.

"Jelke is entertaining as long as he writes as an observer, a traveler, and a play-boy. He bogs down sadly when he attempts a 'think piece.' When, for example, he tries to tell us what a hell-hole Russia is, he sounds like a man who picked up all his evidence in a swanky London Club." H. J. Owens

+ — Chicago Sun Book Week p7 My 11 '47 230w

"In the hands of a man of perception, wit, intellectual appreciation and writing skill, this material might have been made vastly amusing. Lacking these qualities, the author succeeds in marshalling a wealth of material for students of the society of the '20's and '30's; but he murders his subject with his own attitudes."

— Kirkus 15:95 F 1 '47 230w

"Cheerful. Not a necessary book." J. L. Ross

Library J 72:636 Ap 15 '47 80w

JELLINEK, ELVIN MORTON. Phases in the drinking history of alcoholics. 88p pa $1 Quarterly journal of studies on alcohol

616.861 Alcoholism 47-17482

"An analysis of a survey conducted by Grapevine, official organ of 'Alcoholics Anonymous.' Generalizations, descriptive and statistical, from a large number of case studies not here reported in detail." Christian Century

Reviewed by R. E. L. Faris

Am J Soc 53:235 N '47 250w

"Dr. Jellinek is under no illusions about the faults of the questionnaire, the possible non-representative nature of those who responded, and the lack of an adequate control group. Nevertheless, he demonstrates that even a superficial questionnaire on a sample of 98 men furnished highly suggestive and interesting material." Finally, a revised questionnaire form is presented for future use." S. A. Queen

Ann Am Acad 250:172 Mr '47 160w

Christian Century 64:81 Ja 15 '47 70w

JENKINS, DOROTHY HELEN. Around the garden; il. by Joseph Schultz. 206p $2.50 Barrows

635.9 Gardening Agr47-5

Week by week thruout the year suggestions are given for garden work to be done inside and out—studying seed catalogs and care of house plants, early pruning, planting, spraying, harvesting—from January to December. Material was first published in the author's column "Around the Garden" in the Sunday New York Times.

Reviewed by C. R. Everitt

Atlantic 179:154 Ap '47 40w

Booklist 43:237 Ap 1 '47

Bookmark 8:8 My '47

"There is a lot of sound advice, some measure of inspiration, plenty of factual data the gardener would do well to read, mark, learn and inwardly digest." But I, for one, should find it hard to use, as I also found it hard to read consecutively."

+ — Kirkus 15:156 Mr 1 '47 100w

Reviewed by R. S. Lemmon

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p29 My 4 '47 70w

"In brief, this is a practical notebook, not too detailed. It isn't the last word, or the only word, on gardening. Some of the entries seem too brief. But they all have the air of practicality; they are the kind of notes that seem to have been jotted down in the garden itself, without pretentious writing and without pontifical overtones." Hal Borland

+ N Y Times p20 Ap 6 '47 500w

JENNINGS, JOHN EDWARD. Boston, cradle of liberty, 1630-1776. 335p il $3.50 Doubleday 974.461 Boston—History 47-30197

History of Boston up to the Revolution, stressing particularly the part played by the port of Boston in Colonial history. Index.

Booklist 43:239 Ap 1 '47

Bookmark 8:10 My '47

Reviewed by R. B. Nye

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p6 J1 13 '47 500w

"The book's main achievement is the presentation of Boston's vigorous atmosphere and growth of character, as England's repressive measures bring on the catastrophe that is still yielding bitter fruit. Old prints and an astonishing cartoon round out a volume that should prove as interesting outside of New England as in Boston itself." T. M. Longstreth

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Mr 17 '47 550w

"Here is enough drama for a dozen historical novels, rooted in extensive research, and recounted with good humor and touches of gentle satire."

+ Kirkus 15:26 Ja 1 '47 150w

"A good readable book." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 72:385 Mr 1 '47 80w

"Though it fails to live up to the promise of its title, which is too ambitious (and historically questionable as well), nevertheless this book contains much excellent story-telling and vividly presents many dramatic and significant scenes in the early history of Boston that are of perennial interest to all Americans." G. F. Willison

+ N Y Times p6 Mr 23 '47 850w

JENNINGS, J. E.—Continued

"The story, which goes over a certain amount of old grounds (Captain Kidd, witch hunting, the Tea Party, and so on), has been effectively livened by fresh material. The book is a serious historical study, but the writing is on the so-called popular side."

+ New Yorker 23:102 Mr 8 '47 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 My 25 '47 300w

Wis Lib Bul 43:66 Ap '47

JENSEN, ALFRED. Applied engineering mechanics. 316p $3 McGraw

620.1 Mechanics, Applied 47-2627

"An introductory text for use in vocational schools and first courses in engineering colleges. The simplicity of the treatment and the large number of practice problems make it suitable also for home study. The subject is treated in two main parts (1) an analysis of forces acting on rigid bodies at rest, and (2) an analysis of forces acting on rigid bodies in motion. Each section includes many examples and problems which stress the application of the principles of mechanics to the solution of everyday engineering problems." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"Not only students but also engineers studying for professional license examinations will find this volume surprisingly helpful."

+ Eng N 139:95 Ag 7 '47 220w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:390 Mr 1 '47 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:33 Ap '47

JERSILD, ARTHUR THOMAS, and others. Child development and the curriculum. 274p $2.75 Teachers college

370.15 Child study. Education—Curricula 47-1011

"In 1943 a major research project on the curriculum of childhood and youth education was planned by the staff of the Horace Mann-Lincoln Institute of School Experimentation. One of the first steps, preliminary to undertaking actual school experimentation, was the decision to make a critical appraisal of child development materials from the standpoint of their contribution to the curriculum. . . . A committee of Institute staff members, under the chairmanship of Arthur T. Jersild, was accordingly asked to undertake the task of analyzing and interpreting the child development field as it relates to the curriculum." (Foreword) "The first chapter discusses the meaning of the child development approach. The second sets forth a number of principles of development that have implications for education. Four chapters follow that deal, respectively, with the infant, the preschool child, the elementary school child, and the adolescent." (Pref)

Booklist 43:268 My 1 '47

"The book is a successful bridge between the scientific study of child psychology and the practical problems of teachers (and parents) in providing genuinely educational experience for children."

+ Christian Century 64:81 Ja 15 '47 90w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman

School & Society 66:333 O 25 '47 100w

Reviewed by Carson McGuire

School R 55:243 Ap '47 2000w

JESSEL, GEORGE ALBERT. Hello, momma; the never to be forgotten, never to be heard again phone conversations between George and his momma; also, Professor Labermacher and other monologues and essays; foreword by Eddie Cantor; il. by Carl Rose. 153p $1 World pub.

817

47-590

"Familiar to his vaudeville audiences and more recently to his listeners on the air, George Jessel's telephone chatter with his family is a repository of hallowed jokes and topical quips. . . . The book includes one of his Professor Labermacher monologues and other fugitive footlight skits, with Eddie Cantor writing the foreword and Carl Rose sharing the stage with his drawings." (N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R)

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14

D 15 '46 120w

"It's a refreshing stream of fun that runs through this little volume." Joe Laurie, Jr.

+ N Y Times p37 Ja 12 '47 600w

JESSEY, CORNELIA. Growing roots. 324p $2.75 Crown

47-3709

A story of a Russian-Jewish immigrant family who came to America in the 1890's, and eventually settled in a Colorado town, there to put down roots into a new homeland.

"'The Growing Roots' is a deeply felt and ably executed novel, but above all a thoughtful one. As it stimulates one's sympathy for the complexities of its spiritual and cultural problem, so, above all, it stimulates one's respect for the serious talent of its author." Ruth Page

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 J1 13 '47 360w

"It is unfortunate for the author that her novel follows in the wake of 'Gentleman's Agreement' and 'The Wasteland,' both of which dealt more ably and fully with the subject of race conflicts." Eunice Holsaert

N Y Times p14 Je 8 '47 190w

Reviewed by Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p10 Je 29 '47 100w

"The Jew as East-Side tenement-dweller has been sufficiently studied; the Jew as Western pioneer is a less familiar figure in literature. We need to be reminded that he exists. Myron Brinig wrote a brilliant sequence of novels on this theme, and 'The Growing Roots,' for half its length anyway, is as good as these—which is meant to be high praise." N. L. Rothman

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:44 Je 21 '47 410w

JEWELL, EDWARD ALDEN. Vincent van Gogh. See Gogh, V. van

JEWISH BOOK COUNCIL OF AMERICA. Jewish book annual, 1945-46 [English, Hebrew, Yiddish; Solomon Grayzel editor]. v4 270p $1.50; pa $1 The council, 145 E. 32d st, N.Y. 16

296 Jewish literature—Yearbooks (44-6602)

"This is the fourth of the printed annuals published by the Jewish Book Council of America. . . . The book is arranged in three sections, the first being written in English, the second Hebrew and the third Yiddish. The articles in the Hebrew and Yiddish sections are not translations of the English section, but are independent essays. . . . 'The Year's Bookshelf,' a comprehensive survey of American-Jewish publications in English for 1944-45, [is] by Joshua Bloch, chief of the Jewish Division of the New York Public Library. Mr. Bloch gives in running commentary brief descriptive annotations on each book with its publisher and date. This covers about seventeen pages and is of interest to non-Jewish as well as Jewish readers, though the subjects of the books are all related in some way to Jewish interests. . . . From page 87 to page 101 are twenty-four book reviews of important books of the year culled from various periodicals—signed by the critics. Such books as The Warsaw Ghetto, Earth and High Heaven, Justice for My People, and Germany's Stepchildren are included. There is also a necrology for the year 1944 and a brief report of activities of the Jewish Book Council." Subscription Bks Bul

"All in all the Jewish person has in the Jewish Book Annual an excellent guide to the year's reading on Jewish interests. The non-Jewish reader is given an insight into the program and activities of the Jewish Book Council as well as an acquaintance with current Jewish book production. The Annual also provides the librarian with an authoritative buying list, particularly in Joshua Bloch's article, 'The Year's Bookshelf.' Wherever a guide is needed in the field of Jewish literature, this Annual is recommended."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 17:17 Ap '46 500w

JIM, DEEP-RIVER pseud. See Ernst, C. H.

JNANANANDA, swami. High vacua; principles, production, and measurement. 310p il $5.50 Van Nostrand

621.64 Vacuum 47-6490

"First complete handbook of high-vacuum technique from the fundamental theory of gases to the variety of all present-day vacuum pumps, covering their construction, operation, performance and special characteristics with fully tested methods and descriptive information for every operation in high vacuum production and measurement. Includes various types of gauges used in vacuum work. Fully illustrated." Library J

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1615 N 15 '47 70w

"A comprehensive treatment of high vacuum principles and techniques, which will be of value to students and research workers in this field. . . There is no formal bibliography, but related literature is cited in footnotes."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 32:59 Jl '47

JOHN, WILLIAM DAVID. Modern polishes and specialties; raw materials and manufacturing methods. 313p $7.50 Chemical pub. co.

667.7 Polishes. Chemistry, Technical 47-4489

"More than 700 formulae for industrial and household polishes and cleaning preparations are listed with discussions, starting with the basic raw materials and including history and development, methods of preparation, uses, and manufacturing details. Listed are metal polishes, oils and sweeping compounds, shoe polishes, and many household powders and cleaners." Library J

Booklist 44:7 S 1 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1275 S 15 '47 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:56 Jl '47

JOHNS, RAY EARL. Co-operative process among national social agencies. 290p $3 Assn. press

361.8 Cooperation. Charity organization. Federations, Financial (social work) 47-2353

"In this book the author presents the inter-agency experience of seventeen national social agencies; examines critically the experience of the United Service Organizations; analyzes the determining forces, the 'issues,' and the 'dilemmas' of collaboration; seeks to arrive at principles of effective cooperation; and outlines desirable next steps." (Ann Am Acad) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by J. W. Ferree

Am J Pub Health 37:1343 O '47 450w

Reviewed by Arthur Hillman

Am J Soc 53:151 S '47 500w

"Mr. Johns' experience in positions of leadership in the National Council of the Y.M.C.A. and in the U.S.O. gives him unusually good equipment for his task, particularly in relation to agencies concerned with group work, education, and informal education. His approach is scientific, scholarly, and objective; he strikes a balance between the interest of the sociologist in social institutions and the concern of the administrator for practical answers to pressing problems." Arthur Dunham

+ Ann Am Acad 252:165 Jl '47 550w

Booklist 44:46 O 1 '47

"An invaluable analysis of an important trend."

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 19 '47 150w

Reviewed by J. B. Dawson

+ Survey 83:230 Ag '47 900w

JOHNSEN, JULIA EMILY, comp. Atomic bomb. (Reference shelf) 335p $1.25 Wilson, H.W.

341 Atomic bomb. Atomic energy 46-8322

"A careful selection of articles by thirty or more qualified writers, covering the history of atomic theory and research, the social implications of the new discoveries, the necessity and methods of control, and prospects of beneficial uses of atomic energy. A 43-page bibliography is included." Christian Century

Booklist 43:134 Ja 1 '47

+ Christian Century 63:1568 D 25 '46 70w

Current Hist 12:239 Mr '47 30w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:227 F 1 '47 70w

Social Studies 38:190 Ap '47 330w

JOHNSEN, JULIA EMILY, comp. United nations; or, World government. (Reference shelf) 285p $1.25 Wilson, H.W.

341.13 United nations (organization). International cooperation 47-4664

"This number of the Reference Shelf presents some of the recent outstanding discussions on the United Nations Organization, and alternative world government. The endeavor has been made to include diverse viewpoints, both favorable and critical, on both world co-operation and authority. The extent of recent materials now available on the subject has made unfeasible a complete bibliographical listing, but the more timely materials, particularly from the formation of the United Nations in 1945 to date, have been covered as broadly as possible." Pref

Booklist 44:34 S 15 '47

Current Hist 13:228 O '47 40w

JOHNSON, ALEXANDER BRYAN. Treatise on language; edited with a critical essay on his philosophy of language by David Rynin. 443p $5 Univ. of Calif.

401 Semantics. Knowledge, Theory of 47-30311

"This work comprises the full text of the most important early American work on semantics, Alexander Bryan Johnson's A Treatise on language. The Treatise, first published in 1836, is itself an expanded and revised edition of Johnson's earlier work, The Philosophy of Human Knowledge, published in 1828, based on lectures delivered in Utica in 1825. The present edition also contains passages from the first edition (I) that were omitted from the 1836 revision, as well as important variant readings." (Editor's pref) The editor has included a study of the author's career (he was a successful banker, and semantics and philosophy were sidelines with him). Index.

"Johnson wrote with energy, with clarity, with remarkable concreteness. He is easier to read than most modern writers on language, and he had at least as much to say as most of them. One need not accept his philosophical position at all in order to find stimulus and value in his analysis of the nature and the limitations of language." J. T. Frederick

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Ap 6 '47 240w

"Johnson's 'Treatise' has the characteristic power and clarity of all profoundly original thought. It is free from the technical jargon and the pretentious promises that have turned many a modern reader away from books on se-

JOHNSON, A. B.—Continued
 mantics. . . This is a book designed for instruction, but the odd piquancy of Johnson's slightly archaic style makes its reading a true literary experience as well." Stillman Drake
 + San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 9 '47
 750w

Reviewed by H. R. Walpole
 Sat R of Lit 30:39 Je 7 '47 550w
 Times [London] Lit Sup p366 Jl 19 '47
 1700w
 U S Quarterly Bkl 3:137 Je '47 300w

JOHNSON, CARL GUNNARD. Metallurgy.
 3d ed 418p il $5 Am. tech. soc.
 669 Metallurgy 46-7264
 "Third edition of a practical text covering fundamentals for shop courses concerned with design, shaping, sizing and fabrication of metal products. Deals with the physical characteristics of metals and heat treatment." (Library J)
 For earlier edition see Book Review Digest 1942. Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
 Library J 72:79 Ja 1 '47 30w
 N Y New Tech Bks 31:63 O '46

"The present revision was made in view of the growing importance of metallurgy in industry, and is recommended for those working in industry and also as a textbook for trade and industrial schools."
 + Special Libraries 38:54 F '47

JOHNSON, CHARLES SPURGEON, and others. Into the main stream. 355p $3.50 Univ. of N.C. press

325.26 U.S.—Race question. Negroes, South
 —Social conditions 47-30299

"President of Fisk University and Director of Race Relations Division of the American Missionary Association pilots this 'survey of best practices in race relations in the South' in the fields of citizenship, education, health, housing, recreation, general understanding and attitudes. Written with the assistance of Elizabeth Allen, Horace Bond, Margaret McCulloch, Alma Polk, and the cooperation of hundreds of others this is specific reporting of specific achievements that should function as a needed guide and spur to action on both sides of the Mason-Dixon line." (Library J) Index

Reviewed by I. De A. Reid
 Ann Am Acad 253:241 S '47 360w
 Booklist 43:303 Je 1 '47

"This book makes absorbing and heartening reading for American citizens. Its usefulness and helpfulness I think would be hard to overestimate." J. T. Frederick
 + Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ap 13 '47
 280w

Reviewed by Emerson Hynes
 Commonweal 46:194 Je 6 '47 550w
 Current Hist 12:501 My '47 80w

"Essential." R. E. Kingery
 + Library J 72:527 Ap 1 '47 110w

Reviewed by Carey McWilliams
 Nation 165:20 Jl 5 '47 1200w

Reviewed by M. S. Watson
 Sat R of Lit 30:11 Ap 26 '47 700w
 School & Society 65:167 My 17 '47 20w

"The rich materials of this dispassionate volume should prove invaluable to social studies teachers." E. P. Stickney
 + Social Educ 12:46 Ja '48 650w
 Spring'd Republican p12B O 19 '47
 170w

Reviewed by L. B. Granger
 Survey 83:260 S '47 650w
 U S Quarterly Bkl 3:294 S '47 160w

JOHNSON, ENID, and PECK, ANNE MERRIMAN. Big bright land [il. by Anne Merri-man Peck]. 264p $2.50 Messner 47-2101

The twins, Jean and John Merryweather, leave their Connecticut home and friends to go out to a ranch in Arizona which their father has inherited. For a while their experiences are of the sort to test their courage and resourcefulness but in time Arizona, the big bright land, takes its place as home in their thoughts.

Booklist 43:295 My 15 '47

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold
 Christian Science Monitor p13 S 25 '47
 170w

"A well-sustained story for teen age boys and girls."
 + Kirkus 15:130 Mr 1 '47 120w

"Good atmosphere, but pat story with every character ultimately finding his or her niche. Junior high school group who like books about the out-of-doors may enjoy it." Eileen Riols
 Library J 72:738 My 1 '47 80w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
 N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Jl 20 '47 360w

Reviewed by Rosejeanne Slifer
 N Y Times p25 Jl 20 '47 150w

JOHNSON, FORREST HAYDEN, and others. Job evaluation; il. by J. Gurney Miller. 288p $3.75 Wiley

658.511 Job analysis 46-8419

"Authors F. H. Johnson, R. W. Boise and Dudley Pratt are connected with the Boeing Aircraft Co. Book covers functions of typical job evaluation programs in a large assembly industry. Among the topics are purpose of job evaluation, formulating a plan, examples of plans, merit ratings and methods of settling grievances." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 43:151 Ja 15 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
 Library J 71:1332 O 1 '46 70w

Reviewed by H. S. Fuhrman
 Management R 36:229 Ap '47 400w
 N Y New Tech Bks 32:52 Jl '47

JOHNSON, FREDERICK. Heat treatment of carbon steels [Eng title: Metal working and heat-treatment manual]. 204p il $4 Chemical pub. co.

669.1 Steel, Heat treatment of 46-7401

"The English edition of this book appeared under the title Metal working and heat-treatment manual, volume I. Three additional volumes are projected to cover alloy steels, cast iron, non-ferrous alloys, surface-hardening processes, furnaces and pyrometry. The present volume deals with carbon steels except for several chapters on testing, parts of which have applications to other metals and alloys. The methods used in the heat-treating of carbon steels are described and the metallurgical principles are explained compactly. Some information on the machining of carbon steel is included. The work is written for engineers rather than metallurgists." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
 Library J 71:1627 N 15 '46 80w
 N Y New Tech Bks 31:48 Jl '46

JOHNSON, FREDERICK ERNEST, ed. Foundations of democracy; a series of addresses. (Inst. for religious and social studies. Religion and civilization ser) 278p $2 Harper

321.8 Democracy 47-2400

"1944-45 lectures in the Religion and Civilization series, giving independent studies by sixteen speakers—a symposium on the sources and expressions of the democratic idea embodied in Western culture. . . Comprehensive survey from classic times to present, each scholar covering an historical period, or discussing some definite relevant theme." Library J

"All in all, the book is a pleasant literary survey from which one may obtain many suggestions and no little information relevant to democracy. But most of the book is primarily of academic interest, and it will contribute little to the technique or methods of dealing with the crisis of our era of world revolution." H. E. Barnes

+ Am J Soc 53:314 Ja '48 390w

Reviewed by E. M. Kirkpatrick
Am Pol Sci R 41:1254 D '47 500w

Reviewed by Seba Eldridge
Ann Am Acad 253:239 S '47 400w

"This would be a highly useful basic text for thoughtful study groups—but they must be genuinely thoughtful and studious."

+ Christian Century 64:529 Ap 23 '47 110w

"One may feel that economic, social, and educational aspects receive fuller attention than do the political and international elements, and that more might have been said about international democratic organization, then at the Dumbarton Oaks stage. The Far East is scarcely mentioned, although strong movements toward democracy in that area were already manifest. One notes a few inaccuracies, as in regard to the three items which Jefferson prescribed for his epitaph, or the numerical designation of the King Charles against whom the Covenanters rebelled. Yet on the whole the book contains in brief compass a wealth of fact, interpretation, and suggestion to which any teacher, minister, or general reader may well refer for years to come." Earl Cranston

+ Crozer Q 25:75 Ja '48 850w

"Very interesting source book from which to trace development of our current theories. Individual reports occasionally in conflict; sure to provoke the reader to further thinking. Should bring better understanding of present and future needs of democracies." A. B. Lindsay

+ Library J 72:458 Mr 15 '47 140w

School & Society 65:351 My 10 '47 20w

Reviewed by R. A. Brown
Survey G 36:551 O '47 700w

JOHNSON, GENE. Airplane model building; drawings by the author. 141p $3 Cornell maritime

629.13334 Airplane models 47-30013

"Written especially for teen-age hobbyists, this book begins with the first steps in model building, describing the equipment, tools, and materials needed. In addition to solid and flying models it includes gasoline engine propelled planes and helicopters. Many useful sketches supplement the instructions. Working plans are on three large sheet inserts." Booklist

Booklist 43:156 Ja 15 '47

"Decidedly a 'must' book for all libraries having teen-age boys and girls interested in building model airplanes." M. A. Webb

+ Library J 72:86 Ja 1 '47 70w

JOHNSON, GERALD WHITE. First captain; the story of John Paul Jones. 312p $3.50 Coward-McCann

B or 92 Jones, John Paul 47-11239

Popularly written biography of John Paul Jones. The author regards Jones as the true father of the American Navy who had to wait more than a century after his death for anything like adequate recognition of his value to his country.

Booklist 44:106 N 15 '47

"Gerald Johnson has written an enthusiastic book about his hero, in which no one involved on the other side except Benjamin Franklin comes out with a clean slate. Of necessity, since there is so little existing documentation, he imagines thoughts that Jones had, explanations of his actions, involved speculation as to the reasons for this and that. Since there can be no quarrel with the main conclusions of the book and since Mr. Johnson has established the character of his hero so well we feel sure Jones did and said these things and had these fundamental creative ideas." Lincoln Colcord

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 O
26 '47 1400w

"This book is more than a collection of facts and figures. Being seriously concerned with the personality of its hero, it analyzes the motives behind his boundless energy, his uncommon skill and his uncanny power; and it tries to account for the stupid manner in which Jones was frequently treated by civilian superiors. The whole makes a hard-fisted story with punch and movement, garnished with shrewd interpretations. It is a story that concerns a man who lived dangerously and whose stature increased as danger mounted." Nathan Goodman

+ N Y Times p51 N 16 '47 850w

"Both in itself and for the effect it must inevitably have, this is one of the healthiest books to appear in some time—and before anyone gets the idea that 'The First Captain' is being boosted as a specimen of uplift, let it be added that the adjective is used as a metaphorical means of saying that the book is full of clear thinking and interesting reading." Fletcher Pratt

+ Sat R of Lit 30:91 D 6 '47 750w

JOHNSON, HEWLETT. Soviet Russia since the war. 270p $3 Boni & Gaer

947.084 Russia 47-11714

"The Dean of Canterbury, ardent Socialist, friend and champion of the Soviet Union, bases his new book on his three-months' visit to Russia in 1945, 'the year of victory.' He travelled from Moscow, Leningrad, and Sevastopol to Armenia, Georgia, Asiatic Tashkent and Samarkand." Library J

"The Dean is in a mellowed and friendly mood, full of genuine admiration for Soviet achievements and genuine affection for the Russian people. With irresistible enthusiasm, the itinerant churchman dilates upon the blessings Sovietism has brought to the downtrodden Russian masses and tells of the friendliness he met with." H. J. S.

Christian Science Monitor p14 D 9 '47 600w

"His manifold personal contacts have resulted in a colorful, vital, narrative. . . Many will consider it propaganda. Perhaps it is. But propaganda for international understanding, for tolerance, for human betterment, is not necessarily more insidious—though less effective—than propaganda for atomic war. The immediate values that the book holds should be available to all readers." H. E. Haines

+ Library J 72:1609 N 15 '47 160w

"The book as a whole is made up of personal observation, factual material which is often very impressive although one could wish for more information of its source, and a good deal of inconsequential trivia." F. R. Dulles

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8
N 30 '47 800w

"The Dean of Canterbury has written a carefully documented, informative book about present-day Russia, and throughout the entire volume his own amiable, persuasive and deeply sincere character glows brightly." Oriana Atkinson

+ N Y Times p7 N 16 '47 1000w

New Yorker 23:137 N 15 '47 110w

"As a travel account 'Soviet Russia Since the War' is commendable for its warm, keen observations as well as for the freshness of its material." S. S. Harcave

+ Sat R of Lit 30:62 D 6 '47 650w

School & Society 67:30 Ja 10 '48 20w

JOHNSON, KATRINA. Evening street. 218p $2.50 Putnam

47-12007

Stunned by the death of her father, Victoria Andrews leaves her home on Evening street and marries the first reader of a religious sect called 'Joshua's Sheep.' The marriage is not a happy one, but eventually Victoria is rescued by her former neighbor, Rosa, who unwittingly provides the strait-laced husband with grounds for divorce.

JOHNSON, KATRINA—Continued

"With winter about to set in, many a reader will delight in the vacation-effect produced so lightly and easily in 'Evening Street.' There are a number of pleasant persons and situations to be found in this first novel, but even better than these is the description, in both detail and spirit, of 'an island town of the United States; a town where the poinsettias blazed in winter and blue water showed at the ends of all the streets.' . . . So many of the scenes are done with dialogue that one is tempted to speculate if 'Evening Street' might not have been planned as a play. It would certainly make a good night at the theatre—one of enjoyment rather than serious edification." B. V. Winebaum
N Y Times p10 D 7 '47 470w

Springf'd Republican p10B N 30 '47
140w

JOHNSON, MARGARET SWEET, and JOHNSON, MRS HELEN (LOSSING). Joey and Patches; a story of two kittens; il. by Margaret S. Johnson. 70p $2 Morrow 47-30141

A tale of two kittens, their adventures and escapades in their adopted home. When mischief became too rife, one kitten was sent to the barn to live, but eventually, after proving their courage and devotion, the two kittens were rewarded by being brought together again.

Booklist 43:228 Mr 15 '47

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:263 Jl '47 50w

Kirkus 15:30 Ja 15 '47 120w

"Recommended." J. E. Lynch

+ Library J 72:467 Mr 15 '47 80w

"These are real live kittens." M. L. Becker
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Mr 2 '47 140w

"A generous supply of sketches showing the kittens rough-housing or napping between adventures, plus large type and a vocabulary carefully chosen for young readers make a book well suited to the 6 to 9 year-old group." Lois Palmer

+ N Y Times p22 Mr 2 '47 140w

Wis Lib Bul 43:70 Ap '47

JOHNSON, MARTIN CHRISTOPHER. Time, knowledge and the nebulae; with a foreword by E. A. Milne. 189p $2.75 Dover

530.1 Space and time, Relativity (physics). 47-5245

"Subtitled An Introduction to the Meanings of Time in Physics, Astronomy and Philosophy, and the Relativities of Einstein and Milne. Significance of time in modern physics and philosophy. A discussion of the idea of time in determinacy, in laws of cause and effect, in relativity and particularly in the so-called expanding universe of nebulae, together with recent trends in philosophy affected by physics. Summary of new cosmology involved in Professor E. A. Milne's theory of relativity." (Library J) Bibliography. Indexes.

Chem & Eng N 25:3030 O 13 '47 140w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1039 Jl '47 70w

JOHNSON, ROBERT WOOD. People must live and work together, or forfeit freedom; line decorations by Bernice Jamieson. 271p il $2.50 Doubleday

331.1 Industrial relations 47-30720

"A defense of private enterprise system by a liberal conservative. Author, chairman of board of Johnson and Johnson medical supply house and former vice-chairman of War Production Board, is outstanding member of group of smaller, independent, informed and liberal businessmen. Mr. Johnson believes private enterprise is now undergoing its greatest test with termination or continuance to be determined during next half decade. He feels that continuance is fully possible—technology having brought the necessary production—but only if business accepts full social responsibility for its acts, readjusts pricing mechanism, restores dignity to labor, and accepts the necessity of social controls and planning." Library J

Booklist 44:100 N 15 '47

"The preliminary survey of industrial conditions in earlier years is too sketchy to be of much value except as a very general background. The strength of the book lies largely in its breadth of view and its clear recognition of the social responsibilities of business."

Christianity Century 64:1366 N 12 '47
200w

"A book to comfort the conservative, and at present apprehensive, management class in the face of labor conflict and government interference. Beyond this group, however, the market seems doubtful."

Kirkus 15:355 Jl 1 '47 120w

"Smooth, reasoned, evidently sincere." Harold Lancour

+ Library J 72:1103 Ag '47 130w

"Here is a book adding measurably to the list of contributions by top-ranking management to the expression of an industrial philosophy with which much of today's social thinking is preoccupied." H. F. Willkie

+ Management R 36:607 N '47 450w

Reviewed by Robert Bendiner

Nation 165:507 N 8 '47 1200w

"Mr. Johnson, who combines long personal experience in this field with a close study of the work of men like Elton Mayo, has many ideas about humanizing labor-management relations. They deserve the attention of both business men and union leaders. While Mr. Johnson recognizes the vital need of balance in distributing the fruits of production, he has failed to convince this reviewer, at any rate, that the mechanisms of private enterprise are capable of achieving that balance without more fundamental adjustments than this book advocates." Keith Hutchinson

+ — N Y Times p16 S 21 '47 750w

"This is one of the most important books ever written by an American businessman. For Robert Wood Johnson sends crashing down many of the idols before which the majority of U. S. industrialists still bend and bow. . . . What Mr. Johnson seems to lack is a realistic appreciation of government's role in the economy, the need for a new partnership between government and industry and labor and agriculture. Equally important, he seems also to lack any awareness of the peril of having most members of Congress, radio and press editors, commentators, and educators think and act precisely as Big Business wants them to think and act; thus we fashion our new totalitarianism of the mind, a uniformity that is non-violent but quite as lethal as the body-burning kind." Herbert Harris

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:15 S 13 '47 1400w

JOHNSON, ROY IVAN, ed. Explorations in general education; the experiences of Stephens college. 262p $3 Harper

376.8 Stephens college. Education of women. Education—Aims and objectives

47-30080

"Stephens college began a reorganization of its curriculum in 1921 under a 25-year program. After deciding upon the activities common to all women irrespective of vocation, definite proposals for changes were made. The burden of planning and research and the development of textbooks were carried by the faculty. An attempt was made to individualize instruction by assigning an adviser to each student and by instituting numerous 'clinics.' In some respects this book is not so readable for the layman as those about Bennington and Antioch, but the editor does include subject matter and methods of certain classes—a fact which may please educators. College staff contributed materials." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 43:181 F 15 '47

"Johnson's book is an admirably clear and forthright account of the Stephens experiment—its underlying philosophy, and the details of its content and progress. No doubt the plan of reorganizing the traditional departments and courses into a limited number of areas or 'divisions' corresponding to the needs of students (as ascertained by scientific analysis of reports from 300 women who were college graduates) has worked out well in some fields, not so well in others. I have long been especially interested in the Stephens College 'Basic Course' in the Humanities as organized and administered by Louise Dudley and others, and I have reasons to know that it has yielded some excellent results." J. T. Frederick

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p4 F 16 '47
210w

"All things considered, this book is, without question, an important contribution to the literature. There have been too few case-study analyses of particular school situations. Despite its relation to the education of young women in a private school, its fundamental thinking and basic techniques will be challenging to all persons who are earnestly grappling with the ever new problem of the adaptation of the curriculum to the needs of youth." C. G. Erickson

+ El School J 48:229 D '47 800w

Kirkus 14:586 N 15 '46 90w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman

School & Society 65:493 Je 28 '47 180w

JOHNSON, SAMUEL. Doctor Johnson's prayers; ed. by Elton Trueblood. 66p $1.50 Harper 264.1 Prayers 47-5956

"Samuel Johnson lived in the eighteenth century when the general attitude of intellectuals was to scoff openly at Christianity... The good Doctor, one of the really great intellectuals of his age, held inviolable the Christian doctrines to such an extent 'that he paid no attention to the ordinary inhibitions of politeness when anyone depreciated religious morality.' As a devout member of the Church of England he found strength and satisfaction in the experience and practice of personal religion. Prayer came naturally to him, as those familiar with his Prayers and Meditations know. Few know, however, that he composed altogether about one hundred prayers, now collected and edited superbly by Trueblood, whose introduction is a well-grounded portrayal of Johnson's religious character." Crozer Q

Booklist 44:62 O 15 '47

"In form, these prayers generally follow the pattern of the collect, as found in the Book of Common Prayer. Choice of words and sentence structure show the influence of the same admirable model. There is nothing of the ponderous and sonorous rhetoric or of the verbal redundancy that characterize some of Dr. Johnson's other writings. These are the simple and sincere utterances of a soul voicing its dire need of God. As a master of words, he selects his words with unconscious skill and does not permit his words to master him. One feels sure there is nothing here that was put in because he thought it would sound well. Therefore it rings true, and incidentally it does sound well." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 64:1207 O 8 '47
460w

"The prayers are definitely personal, expressed in language reminiscent of the Prayer Book and following generally the form of the collect. One reading them cannot but be moved to a richer enjoyment of genuine religion... The editor's contribution is twofold: he has made easily available for general use a great devotional classic; he has provided excellent material for our prayer-experience today." R. E. Keighton

+ Crozer Q 24:379 O '47 300w

Kirkus 15:534 S 15 '47 170w

JOHNSON, SAMUEL. Portable Johnson and Boswell; ed. and with an introd. by Louis Kronenberger. 762p $2 Viking 828

47-5127

"A collection, made up of a chunk of Boswell's 'Life of Samuel Johnson,' some selections from Boswell's journal of the tour of the Hebrides that he made with the usually comfort-loving Doctor, and a sprinkling of Johnson's own writings—lives of Pope and Savage, prefaces, letters, and poems. The book provides an opportunity to compare the Johnson of Boswell's biography (which has been called one of the great novels of all time) with the Doctor as he revealed himself when he ponderously took his pen in hand." New Yorker

Booklist 44:71 O 15 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p9 Jl 20 '47
90w

"Perennial interest in Johnson and Boswell should provide a ready market for this excellent addition to the Portable Library."

+ Kirkus 15:234 Ap 15 '47 180w

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18
Jl 13 '47 430w

"The preface is filled with shrewd remarks and witty, quotable phrases. It insists wisely that Johnson's apparent bigotry 'was actuated not by passionate belief but by a strong tendency toward disbelief.' The treatment of Boswell's technique as a biographer is excellent. Though not all readers will agree with individual judgments, nearly all should enjoy the pungent quality of Mr. Kronenberger's remarks." J. L. Clifford

+ N Y Times p3 Jl 27 '47 500w

"Mr. Kronenberger, who is very much at home in the eighteenth century, contributes a knowledgeable and amusing introduction."

+ New Yorker 23:72 Jl 19 '47 130w

Time 50:87 Jl 28 '47 900w

JOHNSON, VANCE. Heaven's tableland; the dust bowl story. 288p $3 Farrar, Straus

631.45 Agriculture—Southwest. Drought

Agr47-46

"The 'boom and bust' story of the Great Plains, the 'mistreated earth.' From the wholesale killing of buffaloes, and incidentally Indians, through the period of cattle farming, crop farming, real estate speculation, mechanized farming, to the tragedy of the 'dust' and finally to the attempt at soil conservation." (Library J) No index.

Booklist 44:131 D 1 '47

"Mr. Johnson is a Texas newspaper man who has witnessed many of these things in the workaday course of duty. His account is unpretentious and straight." E. S. Skillin

+ Commonweal 47:42 O 24 '47 1100w

"A regional portrait of the dust bowl, which in effective, eloquent prose, records its precarious, ultimately tragic history, its promise and failure."

+ Kirkus 15:360 Jl 1 '47 170w

"Well written, and good reading. The book is instructive far beyond merely regional interests. A typical story of pioneering and exploitation in the United States, the 'greatest next year country' on earth' as the author calls it." Rudolph Hirsch

+ Library J 72:1190 S 1 '47 110w

"Written without footnotes for the general reader, 'Heaven's Tableland' is nevertheless a substantial historical document. A scientist might have included some graphs to show the recurring pattern of drought and the ensuing economic effects. But neither historian nor scientist could have been at greater pains to learn the truth and tell it clearly than has this workmanlike reporter from Texas." P. B. Sears

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4
N 2 '47 850w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 N 4 '47
1100w

JOHNSON, VANCE—Continued

"This able book is a history of the Dust Bowl and the conditions and men who periodically create it. The author knows what he is talking about, having spent the full period of the last great drought in various capacities on the staff of the Amarillo Daily News, in the heart of the Dust Bowl country." Stanley Vestal

+ Sat R of Lit 30:16 N 8 '47 600w

JOHNSON, WALTER. William Allen White's America. 621p il $5 Holt

B or 92 White, William Allen 47-4962

Biography of the famous editor of the Emporia (Kansas) Gazette, for many decades a leading figure in mid-western and national political life. Bibliographical statement. Index.

Reviewed by J. B. Shannon

Am Pol Sci R 41:1216 D '47 700w

Booklist 44:14 S 1 '47

Reviewed by Lloyd Lewis

Chicago Sun Book Week p1 Ag 10 '47 1050w

"The author of this volume, thoroughly familiar with the voluminous correspondence carried on by Mr. White, has drawn generously, and also wisely, from that correspondence to add body and vitality to this excellent, full-length portrait of a truly great American and of the transition period through which he talked and wrote, laughed and worked, and lived (in his own words) 'a swell life.'" R. A. Brown

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 S 9 '47 700w

Reviewed by George Streater

Commonweal 46:482 Ag 29 '47 1650w

"Pungent phrase and emotional expression livens a text that is better than competent coverage, but not inspired. Johnson has written a good popular biography, not a great one."

+ Kirkus 15:326 Je 15 '47 160w

"Stands as a valuable companion volume to the Selected Letters of William Allen White." J. H. Berthel

+ Library J 72:1103 Ag '47 80w

"Walter Johnson has written a competent, conscientious biography—too conscientious, for my taste, in the elaborate details of long forgotten political campaigns. He rather labors the point that White became the myth hero of the Middle Western middle class, but no doubt there is something in it. His book is a successful portrait of the era as well as a picture in the round—and how round he was!—of Bill White." Bruce Bliven

+ New Repub 117:28 Ag 11 '47 1400w

"Mr. Johnson's book is open to two criticisms, one of matter and one of manner. It does not give us as large a sampling from the letters of White's contemporaries as we should have liked. . . . The second criticism has to do with style. . . . The contrast between Mr. White's racy and vigorous style and Mr. Johnson's pedestrian and pedantic style is often distressing. . . . Yet these minor inadequacies are more than offset by major virtues. The book is critical, comprehensive and intelligent, informed by an understanding of the historical background, illuminated by liberalism and tolerance. It re-creates for us both the times and the man." H. S. Commager

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 Ag 17 '47 1200w

"Perhaps many years from now some biographer will come back to William Allen White as a true symbol of two American generations. Perhaps the biographer will be ironic and bitter and perhaps he, too, will be a hero worshiper. One hopes the latter. One wouldn't care to see Mr. White psychoanalyzed or subjected to economic determinism. As of today Mr. Johnson has given us a definitive book, thoroughly documented, well-written, entertaining and enlightening. Somewhere in the invisible, a chubby wraith will chuckle over it and truly feel that his countrymen have not forgotten him, and will not." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p1 Ag 10 '47 1400w

"In this biography, the author has tried to picture White as the average middle-class American, but the project fails, chiefly because White, a talented, vain, ebullient, and cannily ambitious man, was not average, no matter how hard he worked to give that impression. . . . As a straight biography, however, the book is of high quality, well written and interlarded with anecdotes."

+ New Yorker 23:79 Ag 23 '47 240w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p10 Ag 10 '47 1850w

Reviewed by Maxwell Geismar

Sat R of Lit 30:17 Ag 16 '47 1050w

Wis Lib Bul 43:150 N '47

JOHNSON, WILLIAM HARDING, and NEW-KIRK, LOUIS VEST. Home mechanics. 302p il $3.95 Macmillan

643.7 Household appliances. Repairing 47-31114

A book prepared for use in teaching home mechanics to boys and girls. Contents: Electricity in the home; The care and repair of home utensils and appliances; Plumbing and heating; Windows and doors; Home and garden. Index.

Booklist 44:84 N 1 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1377 O 1 '47 60w

"Repair procedures are concise and in most cases accompanied by large, detailed illustrations. Binding is good and paper heavy enough to withstand hard usage. Useful in industrial arts and physics classes and for anyone making home repairs. Especially recommended for high school girls and housewives. Essential for any high school library." M. I. Ross

+ Library J 72:1476 O 15 '47 140w

Spring'd Republican p10B O 5 '47 150w

JOHNSON, WINGATE MEMORY. Years after fifty; with a foreword by Morris Fishbein. (Whittlesey house health ser) 153p $2 McGraw 618.97 Old age Med47-41

"The purpose of this book is to help the intelligent man and woman prepare for the later part of life. Since prevention is coming to be recognized as of greater importance than treatment, emphasis is placed upon the means of anticipating and, insofar as is possible, postponing or preventing the problems and disorders, physical and mental, that are peculiar to this period." Publisher's note

"Dr. Morris Fishbein could hardly have found a better author for this volume than Dr. Wingate Johnson. He is a distinguished physician, Professor of Clinical Medicine at the Bowman Gray School of Medicine, and recently designated a trustee of the American Medical Association, but, more important still, the volume reveals such wisdom and philosophic understanding of human beings as is given to not many men. Added to this, it is a rare treat to come across a literary style that is as delightful as this." T. G. Klumpp

+ Am J Pub Health 37:1601 D '47 300w

Booklist 44:46 O 1 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Ag 17 '47 60w

Kirkus 15:354 Jl 1 '47 110w

"Sound medical advice . . . in simple language with emphasis on constructive ways of adjusting to and enjoying this time of life." A. I. Bryan

+ Library J 72:1103 Ag '47 110w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ag 14 '47 60w

JOHNSTON, ALVA. Case of Erle Stanley Gardner. 87p il $1.50 Morrow

B or 92 Gardner, Erle Stanley 47-2109

A short biographical sketch of a famous writer of detective stories. The article, first published in the Saturday Evening Post, shows how Gardner's early training and experiences as a lawyer affect his stories, tracing many incidents of his novels to actual events and cases.

"The portrait of Gardner himself is a very pleasant and a forthright one." James Sandoe
+ Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Mr 16 '47 60w

Kirkus 15:50 Ja 15 '47 120w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 Mr 16 '47 700w

"With a serial quality this is excellent reporting but hardly biography with any depth." Theodore Pratt

N Y Times p45 Ap 13 '47 340w

"Johnston's volume is not so much a book as an unreorganized reprint of magazine articles. He skirts over some of the more interesting aspects of his subject (such as Gardner's unique relations with his publisher). But he presents vividly a character and career; he adds photographs and an unusually detailed bibliography; and above all he provides a multitude of stories of Gardner's own courtroom days." Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Mr 30 '47 300w

Sat R of Lit 30:34 Mr 29 '47 50w

Wis Lib Bul 43:68 Ap '47

JOHNSTON, MRS EDITH FARRINGTON. Strange visitor; pictures by [the author]. 72p $2.50 Macmillan

Insects—Legends and stories

Story of a praying mantis which young Peter found on the rose hedge and adopted as a strange and interesting pet.

Booklist 44:175 Ja 1 '48

"The delicate line drawings in this book, which show the praying mantis protectively disguised on twigs and leaves, would not indicate that she is really a terror to other insects, were it not for the entertaining account of the way Peter and his father studied her habits after they brought her indoors." A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 24:46 Ja '48 80w

Kirkus 15:503 S 15 '47 80w

"Interesting information and outstanding black-and-white illustrations by the author. A large library could use with ten- and eleven-year-olds who enjoy nature books." E. W. Turpin

+ Library J 72:1784 D 15 '47 50w

"The book, well illustrated, will do for seven to twelve. In the full-page pictures, as in nature, you must look close to find the mantis—in plain sight all the time—camouflaged among flowers." M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ja 25 '48 200w

JOHNSTON, GIDEON. Carolina chronicle; the papers of Commissary Gideon Johnston, 1707-1716; ed. by Frank J. Klingberg. 186p pa $2 Univ. of Calif. press

975.7 South Carolina—History A46-1634

"Dr. Klingberg states in the preface 'For historical purposes this collection is sufficiently full and continuous to give a complete view of South Carolina in the early years of the eighteenth century.' The papers of Commissary Gideon Johnston, compiled from the S.P.G. transcripts in the Library of Congress, not only give a full historical conspectus but also form a fascinating personal narrative and afford an unparalleled insight into the social and intellectual life of the young colony. Johnston arrived in South Carolina with his family early in 1708. The colony was still in its formative stage with troublous years ahead. Poverty, inflation, disease, political and religious dissension, frontier defense, and the confusion and evils of a weak proprietary system plagued the colony in this period and are vividly described in the commissary's reports and letters. He experienced the hardships, suffered the ills, and engaged in the controversies, all in full measure. The Chronicle is most valuable, however, for the light it throws on the establishment of the Anglican Church in South Carolina. Johnston's part in this was considerable." Am Hist R

Reviewed by F. P. Bowes

Am Hist R 52:574 Ap '47 330w

"To anyone with the slightest interest in American beginnings, this collection of letters and papers will make surprisingly interesting and informative reading. They indicate that the Church of England in the colonies had its rugged and devoted defenders who struggled even unto death against terrible odds to bring the church and its gospel to the crude and largely thankless settlers. They also present a vivid picture of the everyday life in the new colony." S. E. Mead

+ Christian Century 64:302 Mr 5 '47 490w

JOHNSTON, MERCER GREEN. First among the unafraid. 210p $2.50 Longwood co, 2015 Klingler rd, N.W., Washington 10, D.C.

812 Jesus Christ—Drama 47-20552

"A dramatic presentation of scenes in the life of Jesus Christ." Subtitle

"The author goes in for 'modern speech:' e.g., at a meeting of the Sanhedrin: 'Third son of Annas, 'Out with it! What's on your chest?' Fourth son of Annas, 'What's eating you?'"

Christian Century 64:769 Je 18 '47 100w

"If you are willing to overlook human faults and if you are a clergyman to whom over-familiarity, preaching Sunday after Sunday, has made the Christ too much the Pale Galilean, or if you are a layman, fed up with the trite and insipid sayings of too many clergy, read this book. It will either make you angry or it will inspire you to deeper thought of the whole implication of Christianity. It may inspire you to new levels of thinking and theological interest." C. W. Sheerin

Churchman 161:17 N 15 '47 210w

JOHNSTONE, KENNETH, and others. Introducing Britain. See Introducing Britain

JONATHAN, pseud. See Stein, M.

JONES, BENJAMIN SAMUEL. Sam Jones: lawyer; with drawings by Dick Underwood. 218p $2.75 Univ. of Okla. press

B or 92 Jones, Samuel 47-3281

In an informal, anecdotal style, reminiscent of Clarence Day's classic work, this is a biography of the author's father, a small town Kansas lawyer of a generation ago.

"Informally written and thoroughly readable, 'Sam Jones, Lawyer,' shows the love, insight, and understanding of a son who intends to follow the pattern of his father's life, that of a country lawyer in a Kansas town." B. P. Rauh

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Je 21 '47 480w

"Chapters are arranged so that nothing is lost by reading this work piecemeal, but few will read it that way, for it is a most entertaining book, with a style that is simple and fluid." Frederick Woelzel

+ N Y Times p10 J1 27 '47 450w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 My 25 '47 100w

JONES, BENJAMIN S.—Continued

"The book is good reading, pleasant, light-hearted, blessedly restful in these anxious days, and as a segment of the great American picture, well worth the few hours it takes for finishing. The simple line pictures with their faithful Victorian details, are appropriate. The print and paper, as with all the publications of the University of Oklahoma Press, are admirable, even beautiful." Adelaide Parker
+ Sat R of Lit 30:38 Je 7 '47 650w

JONES, CHARLES S. Casey Jones cyclopedia of aviation terms. See Williams, H. L., ed.

JONES, ELIZABETH ORTON. Big Susan [pictures by the author]. 82p $2 Macmillan 47-11696

Story and pictures portray the daily life in a little girl's doll house. The Doll family were very fond of Big Susan, and so on Christmas eve when all toys come alive Mr and Mrs Doll, their six celluloid children, the cook and the nurse tidied up the house, and the new doll baby looked enchanting in her little bed. Big Susan had the surprise of her life.

Booklist 44:138 D 1 '47

"A most endearing new book for any little girl who is still so unworldly as to like dolls." B. J. Thompson

+ Cath World 166:239 D '47 70w

Chicago Sun Book Week p2A N 19 '47 180w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 24:39 Ja '48 60w

"This is a delectable story."

+ Kirkus 15:547 O 1 '47 100w

"This reviewer was entranced with the doings of Susan's dollhouse family on that one night in the year when all dolls come alive and can speak. This is a different kind of Christmas book." Elizabeth Sussdorff

+ Library J 72:1692 D 1 '47 70w

"Once in a while some one writes a story in which the magic inherent in a doll's house comes to the surface. . . In the softly colored pictures, in this gentle story, Elizabeth Orton Jones makes her contribution to this little literature." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 N 16 '47 380w

"To illustrate this tender, amusing story Elizabeth Orton Jones has drawn in just proportions her own childhood doll-house, celluloid dolls with people-size safety pins closing their garments, candy-box padding to serve as a quilt, and other objects ingeniously diverted from their original function." S. C. Gross

+ N Y Times p50 D 7 '47 130w

"The author has modelled her attractive drawings on dolls she treasured when she was a child. She covers the fine points of doll housekeeping with a mixture of realism and imagination that little girls should enjoy." R. C. Benét

+ New Yorker 23:144 D 6 '47 60w

Reviewed by Leone Garvey

San Francisco Chronicle p11 N 30 '47 110w

Sat R of Lit 30:32 D 13 '47 110w

Wis Lib Bul 43:177 D '47

JONES, IDWAL. Vermilion. 495p $3 Prentice-Hall 47-2544

This story of the Five Apostles, most celebrated cinnabar mine in California, from whose veins flows quicksilver for the world, is also the story of the Cope dynasty. Pablo Cope, son of a Cornish father and a California-Spanish mother, is born when California belongs to Mexico. He inherits, along with the Five Apostles, a fanatical obligation to it. We follow the fortunes of the Copes thru several generations of sons, none of whom care as much for the fortunes of the mine as they care for their own private interests.

Booklist 43:272 My 1 '47

"Like the two-volume novels that rejoiced our grandfathers, [this book] presents a host of characters, and decently accounts for the careers of every last one before it is through. Idwal Jones has packed it full of his immense and miscellaneous knowledge of wines, mining, vine culture, horses, places and people. It is remarkably rewarding." Leo Kennedy

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p1 My 18 '47 1050w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '47

Kirkus 15:170 Mr 15 '47 250w

"Something for everybody. . . A good yarn, content to be so and to carry readers right through its five hundred pages." R. E. Kingery

+ Library J 72:753 My 1 '47 80w

"Not all of 'Vermilion' is uniform in bouquet and sparkle, but it is a novel of quality and flavor—a pleasure to decant and enjoy." Lisle Bell

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20 My 25 '47 650w

"If the characterization in 'Vermilion' leaves something to be desired, the stage on which they play their parts is beyond fault-finding. Idwal Jones is at his best in description, in the conveying of atmosphere. Those readers who have an interest in early California can hardly fail to relish a book which brings clearly before their eyes costumes and furnishings, food and drink and the customs of serving them, celebrations and commemorations as these existed under Mexican rule." E. R. Mirrieless

+ N Y Times p5 My 18 '47 900w

"When you have said that Mr. Jones has his history of California down pat and has worked it very effectively into his narrative, you have about listed the virtues of this intelligent but slow-paced novel."

+ New Yorker 23:105 My 24 '47 120w

"Though you may call 'Vermilion' in some sense a costume piece, it has one virtue which the average costume piece can never claim; its characters are far closer to three dimensions than such novels afford. Some of the lesser people, in fact, threaten to stick in your mind even more firmly than some of the more important. . . And Jones has a style all his own, a way with words not quite like anyone else now writing. . . He has a sense of the depth and richness of language and he cherishes a warm affection for words well used. He has also—and perhaps this accounts in some degree for his colorful handling of language—an exceptional feel for background as the five senses can convey it." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 My 25 '47 1100w

"A long, unhurried, reflective, and richly ornamental novel, 'Vermilion' amply displays Idwal Jones's own varied interests and experiences. Mining, ranching, and viticulture in California, Cornwall, and Spain, and the oblique folkways, business practices, and more, of the Chinese, Cornish, Spanish, and California peoples are ingredients stirred meditatively together, and if the book is not deeply satisfying, it is yet original in conception and salted by a warm and wise feeling for men and women and the paradoxical values they live by, which remains savory in the mind after the book has been laid by." D. L. Morgan

+ Sat R of Lit 30:19 My 17 '47 800w

Wis Lib Bul 43:118 Jl '47

JONES, JESSIE (ORTON). Many mansions. See Bible. Whole. Selections

JONES, NARD. Evergreen land. (Sovereign states ser) 276p il $3.50 Dodd

917.97 Washington (state)—Description and travel 47-2669

A native son, with an undying enthusiasm for his own state, here gives an historical and anecdotal "portrait of the state of Washington." Index.

Booklist 43:288 My 15 '47

+ Current Hist 13:35 Jl '47 40w

"The author is a native son, a novelist of more than regional repute, well fitted by experience and ability to be biographer of his home state. He patently loves it, as all honest men do, yet his is no loud booster, blind to abuses and shortcomings, nor is he guilty of the detached snootiness displayed by a few native sons and daughters who wanted to show how cultured and sophisticated they were in contrast to the run-of-mill louts. Moreover, and to our gain, Mr. Jones has humor." Stewart Holbrook

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Mr 30 '47 550w

"In the preface to 'Evergreen Land' Nard Jones renounces all intention of writing a Chamber of Commerce tract about his native State, and then goes ahead and does exactly that. This is booster material, pure and simple. Superlatives drip from it. The letters which spell the word 'greatest' must be practically worn out on the Linotype machine used to set this volume. Mr. Jones is frankly an enthusiast. . . In defense of the author, it may be said that the State of Washington readily lends itself to the sort of promotional treatment he has given it. . . As a result of Mr. Jones' superficial handling of the State's economic and social problems, his book is barely more than a breezy travelogue." R. L. Neuberger

+ N Y Times p33 Ap 13 '47 500w

"'Evergreen Land' is informative, readable and compact." Edith James

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 My 11 '47 150w

Wis Lib Bul 43:79 My '47

JONES, OSCAR BERNARD. Applied industrial mathematics. 342p $4; to schools $3 Prentice-Hall

510 Mathematics 47-4633

"Basic mathematics necessary for working out specific problems in shop mathematics. Contains many examples and problems which arise in engineering departments, drafting rooms, and throughout the shop. Author is a well known tool engineer and founder of the Detroit College of Applied Science, where he has used the material in this text for over twenty years in a course in tool and production engineering." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 44:7 S 1 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1275 S 15 '47 60w

JONES, RICHARD SEELYE. History of the American legion. 393p il $3.75 Bobbs

369.1861 American legion 46-7962

An "authorized" history of the American legion. It began in Paris in 1919, when twenty officers met with Theodore Roosevelt, jr., at the Allied officers club, and has grown to be the nation's largest veterans' organization. It closes with the Legion's successful campaign for World war II members in 1946. Index.

Booklist 43:236 Ap 1 '47

"As such stories go, it is undeniably a success story. . . Jones looks with frank admiration upon everything the Legion did. . . He bolsters his account with so many names, dates and documents (including a picture of President Truman in Legionnaire's cap) that the book should prove interesting, and perhaps useful, to critics of the Legion as well as to its most super-enthusiastic members." C. R.

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p7 F 2 '47 150w

Christian Science Monitor p15 N 8 '47 80w

Foreign Affairs 25:700 Jl '47 10w

"No doubt the standpat element in the Legion's membership will accept this as a slice of good American history. Outside the Legion, the interest would be slight."

+ Kirkus 14:564 N 1 '46 170w

Reviewed by Charles Hurd

N Y Times p34 Mr 9 '47 1050w

"Writing a lively history of a living organization calls for the courage of a soldier and the tact of an Ambassador, especially when the living organization is made up of doughty war veterans. But Richard Seelye Jones jumps into the campaign with zest, and comes out of the inky trenches with an interesting victory over stuffed-shirtiness. . . Jones, himself a veteran of World War I and a delegate to the Legion's first organizing caucus in Paris, had access to all the documents and photographs of the organization in preparing the book. But it is not one of those often deadly things, an 'officially authorized history.' The result is that it is a lively story, well documented and illustrated with striking photographs, but full of one good soldier-journalist's own style and snap and personal notions about a big subject." Louis Burgess

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 D 11 '46 750w

JONES, ROBERT WILLIAM. Journalism in the United States. 728p il $7.50; educ ed $5.85 Dutton

071 Journalism 47-4147

A comprehensive survey of American newspaper history covering almost two hundred and fifty years, from Benjamin Harris' "Public occurrences" published in Boston in 1690, to the present post-war times.

"Except in isolated instances, the text is almost formless, just a marshalling of facts, illustrated from source material, but to anyone concerned with those facts, it will prove a goldmine of information. Schools of journalism will find it invaluable."

+ Kirkus 15:271 My 15 '47 240w

"The first part of the book is drawn from established sources and is interesting and well presented, with much original documentation. But the contemporary scene gets indifferent treatment under the general heading 'Recent Decades'—a hodgepodge of unrelated and sometimes inaccurate detail that weakens the effect of this work as a standard textbook on journalism. Mr. Jones is guilty of glaring omissions, of mistakes in names, and of a certain lack of balance in his general appraisal of recent developments in journalism." Bruce Rae

+ N Y Times p19 Jl 13 '47 1000w

"The early chapters, describing the evolution of newspapers from the crude Colonial news letters printed on wooden presses to the powerful journals of the middle nineteenth century, are sharp and spirited, but when Professor Jones writes of modern times, his catalogue treatment of the controversial men and issues of the day makes for dull going. The book would be an excellent reference work if the index were not all but worthless."

+ New Yorker 23:97 Je 14 '47 120w

"As complete and accurate a text on America's newspaper history as you will find anywhere." Edith James

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Je 15 '47 150w

"This latest history of American journalism is, first, factually adequate and, historically competent, and second, it is more than a scholarly volume for journalists and historians. The author has written with the flair of a playwright for dramatic episode. . . Many indexes are bad. The one in Professor Jones's voluminous study is particularly so. 'Journalism in the United States,' however, is both an entertaining and a scholarly book; an up-to-date history of value to specialists and a dramatic story for general readers. And that is a contribution." Roscoe Ellard

+ Sat R of Lit 30:23 Ag 2 '47 1500w

"In general, the book adds to similar volumes in the field a coverage of newspaper history during the years of World War II. It contains also a praiseworthy selection of illustrative material. There are no footnotes, but there is a fairly comprehensive bibliography, not too conveniently deployed for use."

+ U S Quarterly Bk1 3:237 S '47 240w

JONES, RUFUS MATTHEW. Luminous trail.
165p $2 Macmillan

922 Christian biography 47-1932

A series of essays dealing with a number of saintly persons (some canonized, some not) who have been instrumental in effecting changes in mankind's way of life. Among those treated are St Paul, Hugh of St Victor, Clement of Alexandria, Catherine of Siena, Hans Denck, Erasmus, William Law.

Reviewed by F. M. Eliot
Atlantic 179:134 Je '47 420w
Booklist 43:346 Jl 1 '47

"The 'trail' is that of the saints and mystics who have achieved a direct awareness of God and a sense of his presence. No one is better qualified than Dr. Rufus Jones to serve as a guide on that path, for he has followed it himself these many years. At eighty-four he thinks with the clarity that has always characterized his thought, and writes with a crisp felicity of style unsurpassed in any of his previous writing."

+ Christian Century 64:656 My 21 '47
280w

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell
Churchman 161:19 My 1 '47 240w
Cleveland Open Shelf p19 S '47

Reviewed by R. E. Keighton
Crozer Q 24:283 Jl '47 200w

"The book is beautifully written and whether or not one is ready to follow Rufus Jones all of the mystic way, one is sure to find in his writing illumination upon one's own way of life. The closing chapter dealing with the death of his son, Lowell, and of the spiritual meaning that tragic experience came to have for him, is particularly moving."

+ Kirkus 15:61 F 1 '47 210w

"Rufus Jones is thoroughly familiar with the trail that saintly feet have made luminous in their passage through our shadowed world. For the Quaker mystic has known in his own person 'the vernal equinox of the spirit' and been to our own times a 'transmitter' of the light... To this account of his great 'saints' Dr. Jones adds a closing chapter on the life of a little saint, his own son... A fitting summary of a beautiful book." Frances Witherspoon

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p25
My 4 '47 600w

Reviewed by K. N. Rhoades
Survey G 36:304 My '47 360w

JONES, MRS SALLY (PICKRELL). Lights burn blue. 252p $2.75 Reynal

47-2667

Psychological novel tracing the effects of a father's suicide, plus the mother's cowardly attitude toward the truth, upon two adolescent children.

"A taut monotone, with careful shading, this is not for primer-readers."

Kirkus 15:74 F 1 '47 170w

"Mrs. Jones writes very carefully, sometimes with crystal precision and simplicity, occasionally slipping for brief stretches into not very successful impressionism. But the novel holds together admirably a tenuous, delicate, deft report of shifting psychological states, concerning which it is by no means easy to write so clearly as Mrs. Jones succeeds in doing in 'The Lights Burn Blue.'" F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12
Ap 6 '47 700w

"Mrs. Jones has a story to tell, but she has obscured it with more than just an overabundance of guilt complexes. Every now and then she suffers an attack of punctuationphobia and, also intermittently, she sends her words careening around the page, bumping and sliding into one another, as she attempts to squeeze out of them emotion rather than understanding. Moreover, although there is a certain brilliance in the scenes describing the viciousness and hatred of school children, the dialogue is far too adult and professional." Florence Crowther

+ N Y Times p21 Ap 20 '47 450w

"Miss Jones does a remarkable job of fictionalizing and some excellent outright reporting, too, and she is to be commended for playing down the real facts upon which her book is based. By turning sensational headline making material into a calm, intensely interesting story she shows a mental maturity far beyond her years." Edith James

+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 Ag 31 '47
270w

JONES, WILLIAM NORTON. Inorganic chemistry. 866p il $4.25 Blakiston 546 Chemistry, Inorganic 47-1465

A first-year college textbook on inorganic chemistry. The author begins with theoretical material, before presenting the descriptive matter. The book contains a forty-nine page supplement of questions and problems, divided by chapter. Includes portraits and brief biographical sketches of important chemists. No index.

Booklist 43:250 Ap 15 '47

"The book should be of real value for students with a background of high school chemistry, but the reviewer questions its suitability for students encountering chemistry for the first time. Its value for new students seems jeopardized by the extensive treatment of the subject and by the author's tendency to introduce terms without proper definition—i.e., page 96 where he speaks of 'cathode' and 'anode' but fails to define the terms until three pages later." A. J. Ihde

+ Chem & Eng N 25:1694 Je 9 '47 350w

Reviewed by T. D. O'Brien
J Phys Chem 51:1032 Jl '47 550w

JORDAN, GERALD RAY. Emerging revival.
186p $1.75 Abingdon-Cokesbury
243 Sermons, Christian life 46-7405

"Mr. Jordan looks for a revival that will at once be biblical and ethical, and spring from a genuine regard for humanity. In a series of brief essays, he attempts to portray what a genuine revival would mean to the church, its members, and the nation. It would greatly change the lives of men so that they 'would live in the same spirit in which they engage in Christian worship.' It would enable them to see clearly how to build a new world. It would add zest to living as they would seek to give of their very best." Crozer Q

Reviewed by W. L. Stidger

+ Christian Century 63:1182 O 2 '46 170w

"The book is interestingly written and copiously illustrated; it contains little that is new, but it does put truths, often stated, in new settings. A reading of the essays may well inspire the Christian to live and act in a way that will make the predicted 'emerging revival' a reality." A. M. McDonald

+ Crozer Q 24:91 Ja '47 250w

JORDANOFF, ASSEN. Dials and flight. 359p il
$5 Harper

629.1351 Aeronautical instruments 47-1527

"Describes the construction, operation, and servicing of modern aircraft instruments. Same format as the author's previous books, with many illustrations." Booklist

Booklist 43:250 Ap 15 '47

"Well-written, not too technical, well-illustrated account of the purpose, use and servicing of aviation instruments." L. A. Eales

+ Library J 72:531 Ap 1 '47 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:27 Ap '47

Wis Lib Bul 43:78 My '47

JOST, WILHELM. Explosion and combustion processes in gases; tr. by Huber O. Croft. 621p il $7.50 McGraw

541.39 Explosions. Combustion. Gases 46-8037

"A few copies of the original German edition (1939) of this work reached the United States before World War II; and in 1943, a reprint of the German edition was issued in this country by authority of the Alien Property Custodian. . . . As readers who have struggled with the German edition know, it is a comprehensive monographic survey of the knowledge of the field. All the important experiments and theories are described and references are given to the original literature. The emphasis is on theory, but there are two extensive chapters on combustion in spark-ignition engines and in Diesel engines. The work is a fundamental one for engineers, chemists or physicists concerned with explosive and combusive processes." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 43:250 Ap 15 '47

"If, as the translator's preface suggests, 'the transformation to smooth English has on occasion been sacrificed where a literal translation expresses more faithfully the intended meaning' these occasions are inconspicuous and the translator is to be congratulated upon an outstanding job of clear, idiomatic English. The subject index, which obviously is of utmost importance in a reference work of this character, seems adequate. The book should be a welcome addition to the shelf of every combustion technologist." N. K. Chaney

+ Chem & Eng N 25:632 Mr 3 '47 300w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1332 O 1 '46 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:61 O '46

JOY, CHARLES RHIND, ed. See Schweitzer, A. Anthology

JOYCE, JAMES. Portable James Joyce; with an introd. and notes by Harry Levin. (Viking portable lib) 760p $2 Viking

828 47-1424

Contents: A Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man; Exiles; Collected Poems; Dubliners; and passages from Ulysses and Finnegans Wake.

Booklist 43:225 Mr 15 '47

Kirkus 15:37 Ja 15 '47 170w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p32 F 23 '47 330w

Reviewed by Richard Watts

N Y Times pl Mr 2 '47 1400w

"Of 'Ulysses' and 'Finnegans Wake,' the editor has included just a few, usually brief, selections—wisely, because it is very difficult to make any intelligible selections from these books and the most one can attempt is to give the reader a taste in the hope of exciting his appetite. The explanatory notes are accurate and to the point."

+ New Yorker 23:98 F 22 '47 120w

Time 49:109 F 17 '47 600w

JUDSON, CLARA (INGRAM) (MRS J. M. JUDSON). The lost violin; they came from Bohemia; il. by Margaret Bradfield. 204p $2.25 Houghton

47-30721

Another story in this author's series on immigrant groups in America. This is about a Bohemian family who came to Chicago in 1892. The plot is centered around a valuable violin belonging to Anna Kovec, which disappeared on her first day in America. Anton Dvorak appears in the story briefly. Grades five to seven.

Booklist 44:53 O 1 '47

Reviewed by M. B. King

+ Chicago Sun Book Week N 1 '47 140w

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 Ag 28 '47 240w

"This is a worthwhile continuation of the series." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:356 S '47 100w

"A tale of friendly relations, sturdy values, and good inter-cultural material, in a readable story."

+ Kirkus 15:340 Jl 1 '47 110w

"Despite some stilted writing, this should prove useful as a mystery and as regional material. . . . Recommended for fifth and sixth grades." Anne Izard

+ Library J 72:1278 S 15 '47 80w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p21 N 16 '47 360w

"The mystery plot seems a little forced, but it carries the story along at a lively pace. The Sokol picnic in Lincoln Park, the stripping party, Bohemian Day at the World's Fair—these are vivid pictures of great and lasting value." N. B. Baker

+ N Y Times p42 O 19 '47 150w

Wis Lib Bul 43:135 O '47

JUNG, LEO, ed. Israel of tomorrow. 501p $3.75 Herald square press, inc, 233 Spring st, N.Y. 13

236 Jews. Jews—Civilization 46-3921

"A score of contributors on the cultural, legal and political position of the Jews, with special attention to Palestine, Poland and America." Foreign Affairs

Reviewed by J. M. Oesterreicher

Cath World 164:185 N '46 260w

Foreign Affairs 25:338 Ja '47 20w

JURJI, EDWARD JABRA, ed. Great religions of the modern world. 387p $3.75 Princeton univ. press

290 Religions A46-33

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

Bookmark 8:3 Mr '47

"We hail Jurji's book as being of unsurpassed value." J. A. Maynard

+ Churchman 161:17 Mr 15 '47 230w

Cleveland Open Shelf pl1 My '47

Reviewed by Vergilius Ferm

Ethics 57:309 Jl '47 220w

"Dr. Jurji's symposium is a work of illuminating scholarship. His own chapter on Islam is a model of authoritative interpretation, and Dr. Neuman's Judaism is not only dictated by great learning, but set forth in words of eloquence. The other essays are uniformly on the same high plane." J. H. Holmes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 My 4 '47 250w

School & Society 65:184 Mr 8 '47 20w

"This collection of authoritative articles on the ten great living religions provides students with a valuable introduction and reference book. . . . Perhaps Christianity as a whole should have been described somewhere, for surely its internal dissensions are less striking than its differences from other religions. But by assigning three chapters to Christians it was possible to treat their religion in considerable detail. And since Orthodox or Catholic or Protestant neighbors should be better known, this approach has its advantages."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:31 Mr '47 220w

JUSTUS, KARL B. What's wrong with religion? 102p $2 Essential bks

280 Church unity. Christianity 47-545

The author was a chaplain in World war II, and a veteran of five major landings in the South Pacific area. With his experiences as a background he studies the lack of unity in the present church, and attempts to promote a "better understanding among the peoples of the world."

JUSTUS, KARL B.—Continued

"There is a good deal here of calling on fellow men to remove the sources of human misery and grief. But of the inmost sources of religious power, of the nature of God and how He can make any difference in human life, there is next to nothing—certainly not enough to warrant the title of the book." Conrad Bergendoff

Ann Am Acad 254:227 N '47 200w

Reviewed by G. E. Shipler

Sat R of Lit 30:29 Mr 29 '47 650w

K

KABACK, GOLDIE RUTH. Vocational personalities; an application of the Rorschach group method; pub. with the approval of Harry D. Kitson, sponsor. 116p $2.10 Teachers college

137.8 Rorschach test

A47-781

"Report of an experiment in which the Rorschach (inkblot) Group Method was administered to 75 pharmacists and 75 accountants actively engaged in their occupation, and to 150 students in the Schools of Pharmacy and Business in three universities. A number of implications for vocational selection and guidance may be drawn from the findings." Management R

Management R 36:302 My '47 140w

School & Society 65:16 Ja 4 '47 30w

KADER, BORIS MARK. Life, I salute you! an old world crumbling; a new world forming; with a foreword by Reinhold Niebuhr. 365p $3 Sci-Art pubs.

B or 92

45-5812

"In four decades Dr. Kader has lived in more than as many worlds. Born in the ghetto of a White Russian city, he was a high-school boy in St. Petersburg during the massacre of Bloody Sunday and the ensuing revolution of 1905. In the disillusionment of the liberal idealists—the aftermath of that revolution—and in the wave of suicides, especially among students, Kader found that specific focus of his own humanitarian activities, the crusade against suicide, which provides the unifying motif of this kaleidoscopic series of episodes and recollections. . . This impressionistic autobiography carries the liberal Russian lawyer through the first World War as an officer in the Red Cross, through the Russian Revolution of 1917, then through his life in impoverished and humiliated Germany until after her conquest by the Nazis, and finally through the flight of the non-Aryan refugees, without being so much a personal record or a general history as a series of case studies in the forms of despair and misery these crises have so richly provided." J Religion

"The title of this book suggests a Browningsque thesis, 'Oh, the wild joy of living. . . The book itself, however, from the emotionally cosmic context of world war and persecutions indescribable, is a discussion of suicide, with implemented conclusions stoutly set against self-destruction. The title is appropriate, with an earned appropriateness." T. V. S.

+ Ethics 57:151 Ja '47 300w

Reviewed by J. H. Nichols

J Religion 26:307 O '46 230w

KAFKA, JOHN. Apple orchard. 264p $3 Coward-McCann

47-11373

Novel about a communal settlement in Idaho in the 1860's. The leader is a liberal Boston minister. On the death of the "Elder" and the discovery of gold the experiment is abandoned.

"Slight aura of philosophic intellectuality for a not too deep story."

Kirkus 15:552 O 1 '47 170w

"Style labored and characters not too well drawn. Good movie material in plot and background. Not essential." G. W. Hill

+ Library J 72:1269 S 15 '47 70w

"It is the first part of the novel that gives it its value. The author has become quite intrigued by the Christian-socialist settlement, and he has poured his heart into the writing of these chapters. Even the dialogue—a weak part of the book—is better here than later. . . This could have produced a fine novel, but the main theme simply doesn't come off." Richard Plant

+ N Y Times p30 N 30 '47 500w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 6 '48 850w

Reviewed by C. M. Brown

Sat R of Lit 30:44 D 6 '47 450w

KAFKA, ROGER, and PEPPERBURG, ROY L., eds. Warships of the world, victory ed 1167p il $17.50 Cornell maritime

623.825 Warships, Navies. World war, 1939-1945—Naval operations 47-119

"First complete record and description of every major naval action and invasion in World War II, Sept. 1, 1939 to Sept. 2, 1945. A naval history of the war, tactical and technical, and a guide to the world's navies, listing and describing all ships with careful data on the fate of every landing craft lost in the war. Nearly 1000 photographs and numerous line drawings." (Library J) For earlier edition see Book Review Digest, 1944, 1945.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:79 Ja 1 '47 70w

"Much information that was unavailable at the time of preparation of the first edition has been included in this one: details of armament, information on the naval engagements of specific ships, and descriptions of ships commissioned during the war. Most of the ship profiles are new, and a few plan views of top decks showing the placement of armament have been included for the first time. The arrangement of ship classes has been changed so that the latest classes are now described first. The book has been completely reset. It is still the same convenient size, but the matter has been set more compactly so that considerably more data are supplied in the same format and without much increase in the number of pages."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 31:68 O '46

"This particular edition is not a mere annual or a technical catalogue; it is a valuable historical document. The usual statistical summaries of the warships of the world, classified by nations, are included. But also, under each ship listing is its war record, including engagements, commanding officers and dramatic incidents. . . This sort of thing makes 'Warships of the World' a storehouse for the raw materials of histories, novels and legends still to be written." Scott Newhall

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ap 20 '47 600w

"The chronology of war at sea from September 1, 1939 to September 2, 1945, with which the book commences, is an excellent source of information and adds much to the value of the work. With the possible exception of Jane's Fighting Ships, this American guide to world navies is as authoritative and competent as any other similar manual, and is better than most. One other excellent feature is the inclusion of all warships which were built or building on September 1, 1939, whether or not they survived the war. Those sunk, of course, are so marked. The chief weakness lies in a paucity of profile and plan drawings, and the fact that the drawings the book does contain are not of uniform quality."

+ U S Quarterly BkI 3:116 Mr '47 170w

KAHN, ELY JACQUES. The Voice; the story of an American phenomenon. 125p il $2 Harper

B or 92 Sinatra, Frank 47-2598

A study of the Sinatra saga, based on a series of articles which appeared in The New Yorker. Illustrated with photographs.

Booklist 43:274 My 1 '47

Kirkus 15:91 F 1 '47 160w

Reviewed by E. P. Nichols

Library J 72:458 Mr 15 '47 30w

"Some of Mr. Kahn's chapters read like a press agent's dream, but you can't blame him for that. The bare truth is more extravagant than the most barefaced Broadway fabrications. But when the author says (on page three) that 'Sinatra is not conceived' we know where his tongue is—we hope." Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 My 18 '47 340w

"Mr. Kahn's essay and investigation is lively and readable, and is thin only in format. Like the Voice, itself, the container is deceptive. Despite apparent frailty, Mr. Sinatra has the strength to go on singing songs all night, Mr. Kahn, on his part, has made a complete study." Lewis Nichols

+ N Y Times p45 Ap 13 '47 600w

San Francisco Chronicle p11 Ap 27 '47 260w

Wis Lib Bul 43:81 My '47

KAIN, RICHARD MORGAN. Fabulous voyager: James Joyce's Ulysses. 299p il $4 Univ. of Chicago press

823 Joyce, James 47-2073

"Mr. Kain's purpose is to serve as a guide to the various themes that weave their way through 'Ulysses.' As he puts it: 'Gilbert's chapter-by-chapter analysis fails to take account of the fact that Joyce's themes are never limited to single chapters but must be followed through the entire novel. It is the major purpose of this study to undertake such a task on a scale more complete than has hitherto been done in Joyce's criticism.' He has a great number of interesting and sensible points to make, and there should perhaps be special mention of his reminder that Joyce's 'understanding of the plight of modern society and his pity for humanity are more important than his technical virtuosity' and his warning that the author of 'Ulysses' was also a great humorist who liked his joke and must not always be taken too literally by the serious-minded." (N Y Times) Index.

"Under Kain's skillful guidance even the most average reader can make sense out of Joyce's complex novel. . . The sophisticated reader should not think that 'Fabulous Voyager' has nothing for him. . . Indeed, there is much that is challenging and illuminating for any kind of reader in 'Fabulous Voyager.'" H. C. Webster

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p2 F 23 '47 550w

Christian Century 64:926 Jl 30 '47 250w

Reviewed by Henry Rago

Commonweal 46:121 My 16 '47 600w

"Will appeal to those who are already admirers of Joyce or those with patience." Current Hist 12:372 Ap '47 90w

Reviewed by William Peden

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p42 D 7 '47 290w

"A genuine labor of love and understanding. Since he is, among many other things, the sort of scholar who enjoys counting word formations, his book might have been of a perilously pedantic nature, save for the happy fact that he has brightened his illuminating critical study with such infectious enthusiasm and liveliness that it becomes a highly readable book in its own right and one that succeeds in imparting its author's excitement about his subject to the reader." Richard Watts

+ N Y Times p42 Mr 2 '47 700w

"This book has perhaps some value as a series of popular tours through the complexities of Joyce's novel, and the appendices contain useful concordances to the characters, to the mentality of Leopold Bloom, and to the psychological motifs associated with Bloom and Dedalus. But it has little importance as criticism, the writing is banal, and it is marred by such ineptitudes as the description of the dream ballad in 'Finnegans Wake,' with its Freudian confusions of sense and its woozy rhyme and metre, as being 'in the manner of a W. S. Gilbert lyric.'" New Yorker 23:101 Mr 8 '47 210w

Reviewed by H. M. Robinson

Sat R of Lit 30:23 Je 7 '47 750w

Time 49:109 F 17 '47 600w

"As a discussion of Joyce's Ulysses, Mr. Kain's book is, on the whole, the best full-length study of the work that has so far appeared. . . His work has not the stylistic brilliance of Mr. Harry Levin's book on Joyce, but his careful analysis conveys his own enthusiasm for his subject and it sends the reader back to Ulysses itself with increased powers of understanding and enjoyment."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:134 Je '47 160w

KAMEN, MARTIN DAVID. Radioactive tracers in biology; an introduction to tracer methodology. (Organic and biological chemistry, v 1) 281p $5.80 Academic press

574.1 Biological physics 47-4073

"Volume 1 in a series of monographs on organic and biological chemistry edited by Louis F. and Mary Fieser. Text is devoted primarily to biological applications of radioactive tracer isotopes. First chapter concerns phenomena and concepts of nuclear physics and chemistry, basic for an intelligent approach to the subject but greater part of book is devoted to an extensive survey of tracer methods with emphasis on biochemical and physiological applications. Chapter on procedures for radioactive assay Bibliography. Illustrated." Library J

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1112 Ag '47 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:36 Ap '47

KANE, FRANK. About face. 271p $2 Curl 47-24298

Detective story.

"Between the covers of this book you will find murder and mayhem in abundant measure." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p20 Jl 20 '47 140w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Jl 20 '47 50w

"Interesting central idea—with sound factual basis—completely surrounded and engulfed by tawdry tough-stuff."

Sat R of Lit 30:26 Jl 26 '47 40w

KANE, HARNETT THOMAS. Natchez on the Mississippi. 373p il $4 Morrow

976.2261 Natchez, Mississippi—History 47-11784

History of the great houses of Natchez, and stories of the people who built them and lived in them. Among the famous historical figures included are: Andrew Jackson and his Rachel, Aaron Burr, and Wilkinson. Illustrated with photographs of both exteriors and interiors of some of the great houses. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:131 D 1 '47

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon

Chicago Sun Book Week N 12 '47 450w

Reviewed by Horace Reynolds

Christian Science Monitor p12 D 23 '47 480w

"Fascinating!"

+ Kirkus 15:490 S 1 '47 150w

"The details are a bit lush—but so was Natchez. Mr. Kane puts it on with a pastry tube less often than many who write about old houses and their vanished glories. Because he is writing about his own country, he writes honest sentiment, not sentimentality. And he is a good reporter. His book makes smooth, entertaining reading; it will make many people want to see Natchez; and they will certainly enjoy Natchez more if they bring Mr. Kane's book along." E. H. Smith

KANE, HARNETT T.—Continued

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 N 30 '47 650w

"Mr. Kane's illustrations are good and well selected. The story of Natchez remains to be told in sufficient detail and with sufficient understanding of the factors that have made the town unique from the days of its Indians who supplied the name of the town, to the present; but there is every reason to be grateful for as readable a book as has now been made available." Herschel Brickell

+ — N Y Times p7 N 30 '47 700w

"Readers of crime stories will like best in 'Natchez on the Mississippi' the chapter on Goat Castle, home of the eccentric Dick Dana and Octavia Dockery. . . . While Mr. Kane certainly has made no effort to subdue color or to suppress glamor, he has been more restrained in his descriptions of the Natchez houses than some of the guides through the old mansions during the annual spring pilgrimage." G. W. Healy

+ Sat R of Lit 30:26 D 20 '47 550w

KANE, HENRY. Halo for nobody. 241p $2
Simon & Schuster

47-1270

Detective story.

"The toughness of this one is a little self-conscious at the outset, his plot has at least one fortuitous corpse (in a litter that is early Hammett) and Chambers smirks from time to time. But the tale is hard and fast and legitimately hard and fast; its violence is related to the plot rather than the mode; and the plot itself, although foggy enough during its run, is wonderfully clear in retrospect. The book's flaws and excesses are minor irritants; the tale itself is genuine." James Sandoe

+ — Chicago Sun Book Week p7 F 16 '47 130w

Kirkus 14:583 N 15 '46 70w

New Repub 116:40 F 10 '47 70w

"Peter Chambers, more than six feet tall, with blue eyes and the 'humor wrinkles' usual to all heroes bearing his Christian name, makes an acceptable narrator-sleuth in this toughie. He should appeal to a wider clientele once the fun of slinging underworld jargon has worn off, and he may as well shed those revolting little passages that shock the squeamish while he is at it." Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p23 F 2 '47 230w

"It is a brutal story of mayhem and murder liquor and lust. Do you like that sort of thing? Well, then, take it away." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p32 F 9 '47 150w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p20 F 16 '47 60w

"Intelligently writing, vital people—and plot so devilishly complicated it demands one-sitting reading."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:26 Mr 1 '47 50w

KANTOR, MACKINLAY. But look, the morn, the story of a childhood. 308p $3.50 Coward-McCann

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 47-30121

An account of the author's childhood in his grandfather's home in Webster City, Iowa. His mother, deserted by his father, worked valiantly to support her two children, and the book pays tribute to her courage and success.

Booklist 43:204 Mr 1 '47

Reviewed by H. C. Webster

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 F 9 '47 450w

"Mr. Kantor, far from not knowing how to put his poignant childhood into words, knows too many ways. His place-descriptions are quite vigorous and colorful, but he loses his compass when confronted by emotions and people. Throughout his collection of recollections the overbearing adjective, the flamboyant phrase, jars, irritates and dismays." Elizabeth Johnson

— Commonweal 45:476 F 21 '47 450w

"Engaging account of author's childhood. . . Mr. Kantor's portrait of his gallant mother, deserted by her husband, as she struggles to support her children, is written with affection, admiration and humor." M. H. McElfresh

+ Library J 72:159 Ja 15 '47 80w

"As in many books dealing with childhood memories, some of the material in 'But Look, The Morn,' holds more significance for the author than it does for the reader. It serves, however, to weave the background against which the color and pattern of a life are exposed." Rose Feld

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 F 23 '47 1100w

"There is occasional loose writing, sprawling phrases, a bit of inexact wording here and there. A very precise reader might even detect some few examples of slap-dash judgment, of careless, hasty thinking. But such faults as these, both verbal and intellectual, are at their worst merely minor blemishes in work of such complete vitality. Indeed, in a way, they seem queerly human, authentic, almost virtuous touches; for they mark this book for what it truly is, a piece of warm and real writing, never so much calculated as it is spontaneous, never coldly and deliberately but always abundantly and naturally impressive. This is a good book, an honest and ardent one, a generous and affecting record." Richard Sullivan

+ N Y Times p7 F 9 '47 750w

"It is a sentimental work but an honest one. Mr. Kantor sometimes writes too easily for his own good, but this story of growing pains (and there were a lot of them) . . . has real poignancy."

+ — New Yorker 23:98 Mr 1 '47 100w

Reviewed by Phil Stong

Sat R of Lit 30:21 My 10 '47 230w

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:148 Je '47 220w

KAPLAN, ALVIN HAROLD (JOHN WELLS, pseud), and KAPLAN, MRS BETI ENID (STREIFF). The job that fits you, and how to get it. 423p $3.75 Prentice-Hall

371.425 Vocational guidance 46-8080

"This comprehensive vocational guide enables the prospective job seeker to self-test and analyze his skills and aptitudes as a means of determining the occupations for which he is best fitted. Includes an extensive battery of quizzes based on tests employed by the Armed Forces, the War Manpower Commission, the Civil Service Commission, and the USES to determine manipulative dexterity, mechanical comprehension, vocabulary, etc. Discusses the application of test results to the demands of specific types of occupations, and provides practical pointers for landing the right job." (Management R) No index.

"Some good material on how to make use of skills acquired in the armed forces. But in the main, just another book on how to fit the peg into the right hole."

Kirkus 14:414 Ag 15 '46 90w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1333 O 1 '46 80w

Management R 36:125 F '47 140w

KARAKA, DOSOO FRAMJEE. I've shed my tears; a candid view of resurgent India. 280p $3 Appleton-Century

915.4 India—Civilization 47-3021

Partly autobiography, partly personal comment on political affairs in India, this book is the work of an Indian journalist, educated at Oxford, a war correspondent during the war, a traveler who knows both East and West.

Booklist 43:328 Je 15 '47

Reviewed by J. O. Supple

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Je 29 '47
180w

"Despite his frequent caustic and cynical lapses, Karaka has done a first-rate piece of work. This reviewer feels, however, that Jawaharlal Nehru was accorded a somewhat cavalier treatment. In the light of the Pandit's recent great personal success at the first Inter-Asian Conference held in New Delhi in April, one feels strongly that here is India's real leader. The Conference certainly demonstrated his leadership among Asiatics from all over the Orient." T. H. D. Mahoney

+ — Commonweal 46:267 Je 27 '47 330w

"A powerful and important book."

+ Kirkus 15:122 F 15 '47 270w

"Subtitled 'a candid view of resurgent India,' it is obviously directed to an American audience. Although occasionally spiteful, it provides an excellent vantage point from which one may observe the struggle which India still faces." G. D. McDonald

Library J 72:730 My 1 '47 100w

"Mr. Karaka has written a thoughtful book. In the main one has no reason to dispute his facts." Frances Witherspoon

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22
My 25 '47 750w

"A full and sanguine answer to the query: What happens to a young Indian imbued with the liberalism of the West when he faces the problem of reabsorption in the ancestral fold? . . . Mr. Karaka knows how to condense and highlight the relevant and yet ensure the necessary continuity, his review begins with the Nineteen Twenties and ends virtually yesterday, so that we are left with a sense of entity and insight. His conclusions are strongly individualist, and they will not fail to stir the thoughtful reader." J. G. Hitrec

N Y Times p3 J1 13 '47 600w

"The discussion of India's political and social problems is interspersed with admirably concise biographies of some of the country's political leaders that place each man in his historical and political setting. The last chapter is an account of a love affair between Mr. Karaka and an American girl, whose parents made her break her engagement because of his race, and as a result he is pretty thoroughly down on American democracy. The episode seems out of place in an otherwise cool and objective book."

New Yorker 23:80 My 31 '47 160w

Reviewed by Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Je 15 '47
130w

Wis Lib Bul 43:152 N '47

KARG, HENRY. Shoe repairing. 138p $2.50
Bruce pub.

685.31 Shoes—Repairing 47-2624

Practical instructions on shoe making and repair methods, illustrated with diagrams. Gives brief information on the operation of a shoe repair shop. Index.

Booklist 43:285 My 15 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1039 J1 '47 30w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:58 J1 '47

KARIG, WALTER (KEATS PATRICK, pseud). Zotz! with drawings by the author. 268p $2.75 Rinehart

47-11135

Satirical novel about a mild little professor who finds himself possessed of a dangerous secret which could be used to advantage in the war. He is unable to place his powers before the correct authorities and the end of the war finds him reduced to a very lowly means of earning his living.

"This is supposed to be very funny, but it misses fire (with one reader anyhow). . . . The author knows his departmental routine—but his story is no second Mr. Adam."

+ — Kirkus 15:321 Je 15 '47 110w

Reviewed by Richard Watts

New Repub 117:31 O 20 '47 850w

"Perhaps 'Zotz!' would have seemed funnier two years ago, when people still were making jokes about the Pentagon Building. But even today Captain Karig lands a number of well aimed shafts on such familiar personalities as armchair generals, deck-chair admirals and practicing politicians, who like the poor, we have always with us." Herbert Kupferberg

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10
O 12 '47 700w

"The joke was worn thin after 200-odd pages. . . . One has realized long ago that Jones will never get to use his power where it will actually count; one realizes, just as surely, that the threat of Zotz is pretty well stymied. For most of the distance Mr. Karig makes the mistake of enjoying himself more than the reader—and reveals en route, that his material was hardly robust enough for such full-dress treatment." C. V. Terry

+ — N Y Times p24 O 5 '47 800w

"Some of the least felicitous satirical writing of the season."

— New Yorker 23:126 O 18 '47 120w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 O 16 '47
650w

"You can relax! Here is really good light fiction. Mr. Karig's former work in 'Battle Report,' three volumes of war history, done in collaboration with other Naval Reserve officers, could not possibly have prepared us for this gem of hilarity." W. R. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 30:24 O 25 '47 500w

Time 50:115 O 13 '47 650w

KARIG, WALTER (KEATS PATRICK, pseud), and others. Battle report [v3] Pacific war: middle phase; prepared from official sources. 434p il $5 Rinehart

940.545 World war, 1939-1945—Naval operations (44-47969)

"Volume 3 in an account of what happened to Navy men and Navy ships in World War II. The present volume presents a graphic picture of the battles of the Coral Sea and Midway, of Navy participation in the march up the islands from the Solomons and Russells to Bougainville, and of engagements in the Aleutians to the occupation of Kiska." Library J

Reviewed by R. A. Brown

Ann Am Acad 254:183 N '47 350w

Booklist 43:306 Je 1 '47

Reviewed by R. A. Brown

Christian Science Monitor p18 Je 28 '47
850w

Kirkus 15:116 F 15 '47 100w

Reviewed by J. W. Rogers

Library J 72:806 My 15 '47 70w

"'Battle Report' is neither the best nor the worst book about the Pacific war. In accuracy and in many details it is excellent and the authors are to be commended for their skill in concocting not only a readable but a stirring account, but it is regrettable that they did not go a step further and make the book a first-rate history by tying events into a consecutive, unified whole." P. J. Searles

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8
My 13 '47 7450w

"'Battle Report's' account of what was perhaps our worst naval defeat of the war—the first battle of Savo Island—is probably the best yet published and reveals what the public has not generally known—that Vice Admiral Frank Jack Fletcher commanded all of the ships involved in the invasion of Guadalcanal and in the subsequent Savo battle. There are, however, some mistakes and omissions in the telling." H. W. Baldwin

+ — N Y Times p17 Je 15 '47 1050w

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt

Sat R of Lit 30:26 My 31 '47 800w

KARRER, PAUL. Organic chemistry; tr. by A. J. Mee. 2d English ed rev & enl 953p il $7.50 Elsevier

547 Chemistry, Organic 46-21494

"Second English edition revised and enlarged, based on the 8th German edition published and distributed by the authority of the Alien Property Custodian, translated by A. J. Mee. Excellent advanced authoritative textbook with emphasis on methods of synthesis and determination of the constitution of organic compounds, stereochemistry, and descriptive organic chemistry of naturally occurring substances." (Library J) For first English edition see Book Review Digest, 1939.

KARRER, PAUL—Continued

"In summary it can be said that Karrer's 'Organic Chemistry' is a convenient reference book for students and working chemists, which, by virtue of its logical and orderly arrangement of classical organic chemical knowledge will help the student acquire and retain facts. For the working chemist it may serve as a useful adjunct to a faulty memory. The physical aspect of the book is excellent and reflects fine workmanship in its production." R. W. McNamee

+ Chem & Eng N 25:264 Ja 27 '47 380w
Chem Eng 54:270 J1 '47 100w

"Readers who are not able to carry on research themselves will find the book a valuable source of information. . . . Of those who are in a position to do original work, some will be stimulated by it to continue advances along classical lines, others to produce theoretical interpretations of data it contains. The work of the translator, that of the composer, and that of the printer are of excellent quality." C. F. Koelsch

+ J Phys Chem 51:627 Mr '47 500w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

+ Library J 71:1627 N 15 '46 80w
N Y New Tech Bks 32:6 Ja '47

KARSH, YOUSUF, Faces of destiny; portraits. 158p $5 Ziff-Davis

779.2 Photography—Portraits. Portraits 47-738

Seventy-five large-size photographs of outstanding men and women of the United States, Canada and Great Britain. Brief biographical notes accompany each portrait with some material on the personality of the subject and on the taking of the photograph. The photographer is an Armenian, now a Canadian citizen.

Booklist 43:182 F 15 '47

"His text is now anecdotal, now informative (as to the whys and the hows of his effects), but always adding, in brief space, just that additional note of human interest that lifts the book out of the category of straight picturebook. . . . A beautiful piece of bookmaking."

+ Kirkus 15:47 Ja 15 '47 130w

Manchester Guardian p3 J1 4 '47 220w

Reviewed by R. F. Crandell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 Ap 13 '47 700w

N Y Times p43 Mr 23 '47 230w

"A volume of extraordinarily fine portraits."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ja 19 '47 70w

Theatre Arts 31:82 N '47 100w

"[The portraits] are 'set pieces,' however much Mr. Karsh may claim a fondness for the informal, and, in their own way, they are magnificent. . . . Mr. Karsh attaches to each of his studies a note on the impression his sitters made on him. . . . They are trite to a degree."

Times [London] Lit Sup p376 J1 26 '47 330w

KATZ, LEO, Seedtime; tr. by Joel Ames from the German. 381p $3 Knopf

47-4502

A novel about the Rumanian peasant uprising of 1907 as it affected the border town of Sereth. The uprising did not last long and was soon forgotten, but the author's story of the characters involved is wittily told.

"This story is written in terms of events rather than of character. Translated from the German, the writing is strong, if sometimes a bit ragged; it is satirical and dramatic, and rich with portent. It helps one to understand Central Europe and its troubles." John Cournos

+ Atlantic 180:142 O '47 300w

"One who, like myself, is somewhat acquainted with the setting of this novel will appreciate the author's powerful and utterly realistic description of an episode typical of the Dual Monarchy's era of slow disintegration. American readers on the other hand, will enjoy the book as a poetic tale of a Never-Never Land which, actually was the Georgia of Eastern Central Europe." Alfred Werner

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p9 J1 20 '47 600w

Kirkus 15:244 My 1 '47 170w

"Numerous characters excellently portrayed. Author has remarkable gift of combining comedy with tragedy but one feels that the laughter might readily give way to tears. A sense of the tragic runs through story—a threatened pogrom—but a modern Comedy of Errors has laughable dénouement." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 72:733 My 1 '47 130w

"Mr. Katz does a skillful job of integrating his broadly liberal political insights with a crucial event in the life of a border town. His writing is characterized by balance and full control over his material. All the action develops probably from antecedent events and strictly in accordance with the traits and inner dynamism of his characters. Even the humorous and satiric passages, in which Austrian officialdom and rumor-mongering are assailed, come through without appreciable distortion: the comic effects arise from ironic reflection on man's limitations and not through plot manipulation." Stephen Stepanchuk

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 J1 13 '47 300w

"A novel that bubbles with mirth and humanity, teeters between broad farce and muted tragedy. You can read 'Seedtime' as a nostalgic memoir of the late Dual Monarchy or as a universal incident in the story of the world's everlasting scapegoats, the Jews. Either way it is a rich and fruitful experience." Richard Match

+ N Y Times p10 J1 20 '47 600w

"Contrary to understandable forebodings this book turns out to be extremely readable, with, in spite of the seriousness of its theme, a cheerfulness that has a touch of Gogol. There are dozens of characters, and the plot is complicated beyond belief, but Mr. Katz manages to preserve sufficient balance between stirring action and a well-formulated and edged picture of Balkan chicanery to produce a rich, bright narrative."

+ New Yorker 23:66 J1 12 '47 120w

"A superb humor and an anecdotal wealth that sometimes suggest the incomparable Sholem Aleichem tinge his portraits of city dignitaries and government officials, tradesmen and local savants, brothel keepers and publicans, faithful women and sundry ne'er-do-wells. . . . The story of the Revolt itself, I'm sorry to report, is a far less successful achievement." Robert Pick

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:30 J1 19 '47 650w

KAUFMAN, ENIT, il. See Fisher, D. F. C. American portraits

KAVAN, ANNA, pseud. See Edmonds, H. W.

KAVANAGH, PATRICK, Soul for sale; poems. 54p $2 Macmillan

821

47-25080

"This new book of poems by Patrick Kavanagh [is] a serious, loving evocation of rural Irish life, culminating in a long study of the old peasant, Patrick Maguire." N Y Times

"[The volume] is so clearly above the general run of what passes for poetry among American publishers today that it seems ungenerous to record it as a disappointment. It is wiry and aware, where so many of our moderns are nerveless and glib. It plays no tricks (perhaps not enough). It is not afraid that it will be caught with its statements down, its convictions exposed. It is, moreover, rough Irish; I am thinking not of the Irish rough of my native Boston but of Yeats' Connemara fisherman." Dudley Fitts

+ — N Y Times p10 Ag 24 '47 800w

"In Patrick Kavanagh peasant Ireland has a poet. But 'peasant Ireland' needs an explanation. . . . The older poets took their matter from a folk; today's poets take theirs from the individual peasant. Patrick Kavanagh writes under this new dispensation. His verse has no longer a traditional lilt with the overtones of folk-poetry; again and again we catch a rhythm that recalls 'The Waste Land.' But 'A Soul for Sale' is of the Irish countryside, and its figures are recognizable as the farmers and priests, the boys and girls of a parish." Padraic Colum

+ Sat R of Lit 30:24 S 20 '47 650w

"Patrick Kavanagh is always Irish in his humour and liveliness. He is a keen, sympathetic observer of his native country and its traditions. However far he travels, he returns to native landmarks."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p240 My 17 '47 480w

KAYE, S. LEON. Production and properties of plastics. 612p il $5 Int. textbook

668.4 Plastics 47-30139

"Providing a detailed technical treatment of the development, chemistry, properties, testing, design and production of plastics, this book stresses, in its complete survey of the field, the importance of the relationships among all phases of the industry. The author discusses selection of raw materials, treatment processes, design of molds, application of heat and pressure and finishing operations in the production of plastic articles." (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 43:269 My 1 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:642 Ap 15 '47 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:15 Ja '47

Wis Lib Bul 43:78 My '47

KAYE-SMITH, SHEILA (MRS PENROSE FRY). The Lardners and the Laurelwoods. 280p $3 Harper

47-31119

"The Laurelwoods are upper middle-class—the father a modest barrister—fancying themselves in the outer fringes of the upper classes. The Lardners are middle-class farmers in Kent, whose precarious finances are strengthened by the yearly vacation of the Laurelwood paying guests. Miss Kaye-Smith gives an expert's view of the niceties of class distinctions involved in the visits. After a long lapse since the last visit, the Laurelwoods return in 1936. The mother and two grandchildren come first, and her sudden illness brings her own children back to Idolsfold. The three of them, all around 40, wonder why the traditional visits had ceased twenty-four years ago. Three incidents in the past play their part in the answer." N Y Times

Booklist 44:68 O 15 '47

"In this rural idyl the author has captured some of the loveliest features of the incomparable English countryside and with them framed an absorbing contrapuntal study of social and family relationships."

+ Cath World 166:285 D '47 250w

"Sheila Kaye-Smith's latest is both a full-bodied short novel and an impelling tract." E. S.

+ Commonweal 46:578 S 26 '47 260w

Kirkus 15:373 Jl 15 '47 210w

Reviewed by H. E. Peerless

Library J 72:1107 Ag '47 80w

"The author's insight into the individuals in the farm family and the city family and her skill in handling the effect of time combine to provide not only an entertaining and likable novel but also a gently penetrating social satire of the British middle class. Though the only tragedy of the association was on their side, the Lardners come out with the better showing in inner satisfactions, integrity and personal accomplishments." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 S 28 '47 600w

"Each incident is given in detail, from the point of view of the participants and of the lookers-on in the two families. This is cleverly handled, keen analysis. The device is adroit and expertly manipulated, but the characters it serves to illuminate are a shallow lot. The most poignant of these episodes is Mrs. Laurelwood's pathetic, silly, but courageous effort to keep her husband closely bound in the family cocoon. . . . The initial telling of each of the three main episodes is always the best, the secondary accounts adding very little. But the picture of petty and painful class distinctions in 1912 (and of their echoes in 1936) is given in excellent and gently satiric fashion." Barbara Bond

+ — N Y Times p10 S 28 '47 360w

"What may irritate American readers is the quiet assumption by the now middle-aged Londoners (and by the author) that it is proper for their childhood friends to wait on them at table and observe other class distinctions."

New Yorker 23:98 S 20 '47 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 N 2 '47 220w

"With a deft and subtle hand Miss Kaye-Smith weaves an intricate pattern of family relationships and then, with quiet irony, snips away the threads which have crisscrossed from family to family, from generation to generation, leaving of the once closely meshed fabric only a few tattered remnants." Mary Thompson

+ Sat R of Lit 30:17 N 1 '47 1250w

Springf'd Republican p9B N 9 '47 120w

Wis Lib Bul 43:153 N '47

KAYSER, RUDOLPH. Spinoza: portrait of a spiritual hero; with an introd. by Albert Einstein; tr. by Amy Allen and Maxim Newmark. 326p $3.75 Philosophical lib.

B or 92 Spinoza, Benedictus de 47-1566

"The story of the life of the great thinker, pictured in the midst of the emigration of the persecuted Jews to the Netherlands. There is more about Spinoza's philosophy than about his worldly affairs. Albert Einstein contributes a laudatory introduction." (Current Hist) Bibliography. No index.

Reviewed by George Edison

Canadian Forum 27:70 Je '47 450w

"The book has such striking merits in its sympathetic rendering of the characters of such men as Spinoza's rabbinical teachers and his great Dutch contemporary Jan de Witt, and is so successful in evoking the emotional quality of the religious culture of the Jewish community in Amsterdam, with its roots in the life of the Marranos (Christian Jews) and the unconverted Jews of Spain and Portugal, that it is a pity that its central story is not more solidly told. The major weakness in the book is its resolute avoidance of any systematic exposition of Spinoza's ideas." C. F. S. Virtue

Christian Century 64:1047 S 3 '47 700w

Current Hist 12:153 F '47 50w

"This book, a lofty estimate of the spiritual quality of Spinoza's life, is conceived in piety and is executed with devotion. For lasting effect, it is overdone. No man can live up to the reputation here given Spinoza, whether in wisdom or in blessedness; and there is an unmistakable symptom, before the book is finished, of one's being slightly cloyed." T. V. S.

Ethics 57:153 Ja '47 140w

J Philos 44:192 Mr 27 '47 90w

"If it was worth while to introduce Spinoza to the general reader a more exact estimate of his place in the history of thought might have been attempted."

Times [London] Lit Sup p130 Mr 22 '47 950w

KEAN, CHARLES DUELL. Meaning of existence. 222p $3 Harper

201 Existentialism, Religion—Philosophy 47-4199

"This study is [an exposition] of Christian Existentialism, which stems from the original Existentialism of Kierkegaard, the Danish theologian. It is native American, however, in its outlook, and fully responsible to the Christian concern with society and history. Human life is here described in three dimensions; history, intellect, and Existence. History is the realm of fate where economic systems, political orders, institutions, nations, and civilizations obey amoral laws of interaction, rise and fall. Intellect is the faculty with which beauty and truth are experienced. Existence is the deepest level of human life, where self-conscious, person to person relationships take place, and the real human problems, tragedy and anxiety, appear." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Index.

"Not only as 'the first native American philosophy squarely based on Kierkegaard's existentialism', but as the work of a bold and original thinker this book will prove an arresting and stimulating contribution to present-day religio-philosophical writing." K. M. Chworowsky

Churchman 161:16 N 1 '47 160w

"The volume will serve as a highly readable introduction for American readers to the much-disputed existential theology so popular among sophisticates today." E. E. Aubrey

+ Crozer Q 24:263 J1 '47 700w

"A brilliant exposition. . . The book is intended for readers willing to subject themselves to disciplined definitions and sustained thinking, for those whose allegiance to reason and historical reality prohibits acceptance of literalistic Christianity, for all who suspect that the ancient power and good news of the Gospel can still be theirs."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:252 S '47 400w

KEATING, LAWRENCE ALFRED. Jerry Dowd, fraternity man. 256p $2.50 Lantern press (N Y)

47-30934

"When Jerry Dowd, an outstanding student at Lanefield High School, was elected a member of the Zeks, his fraternity brothers began to promote him as 'Mr. Big' in the school. Jerry comes to a slow and painful realization of the fraternity's underhanded methods in controlling student elections and the undemocratic beliefs of some of its members as well as their gambling." Library J

Booklist 44:115 N 15 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p7a. N 19 '47 140w

Kirkus 15:434 Ag 15 '47 150w

"Convincing argument against secret Greek letter societies in high schools. Recommended for older boys." E. F. Clift

+ Library J 72:1476 O 15 '47 70w

"If editorial readers had caught the grammatical errors and the technical faults in the paragraphing of its dialogue, this otherwise excellent book would have been worthy of a place beside John Tunis' 'All-American' and Phyllis Whitney's 'Willow Hill.'" Howard Pease

+ — N Y Times p36 O 12 '47 150w

KEE, ROBERT. A crowd is not company. 278p $2.75 Doubleday

47-11266

"This book, which is obviously autobiographical and can only very loosely be called a novel, is an account of a British officer's experiences as a prisoner of the Germans during the war." New Yorker

Kirkus 15:477 S 1 '47 170w

"Less sardonic than The Enormous Room to which the publisher compares it, and less witty than George Millar's Horned Pigeon, this book by a young British RAF pilot is nevertheless one of the most continuously interesting personal records to come out of either world war." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 72:1470 O 15 '47 100w

"Mr. Kee is a modest writer and he has put down what he has been through with no flourish of trumpets. As a record his book is valuable. But it is hardly a novel and its deficiencies of form and narrative skill mean that its durability is severely limited. If you read it for what it is, however, you will find out things about this war you may not have known." Seymour Krim

+ — N Y Times p26 N 16 '47 700w

"The description of the spiritual ravages that imprisonment works upon men is less gaudy than you may have come to expect, and the story, for a change, does not culminate in the author's escape and subsequent arrival at the British Embassy in Madrid. Some of Mr. Kee's most effective passages, in fact, deal with the eroding of a prisoner's will to escape."

New Yorker 23:110 N 1 '47 110w

KEECH, EMILY. Dandy, the decoy; il. by Emily Campion. [32p] $1 Rinehart

46-20791

Dandy was a decoy duck, made by Peter's father, to take with him when he went duck hunting. This story-picture book tells how Dandy got lost, of his adventures with other ducks, and how finally Peter found him.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Je 1 '47 150w

"Unfortunately Dandy's adventures are only mildly interesting so that the unsubstantial story doesn't equal the excellence of Emily Campion's illustrations." R. A. Gordon

+ — N Y Times p26 Mr 16 '47 130w

KEELER, MRS KATHERINE (SOUTHWICK). Summer comes to Meadow Brook farm [pictures by the author]. 40p $2 Nelson

47-2896

Pictures and story describe the joys of summer on the farm for ages six to ten.

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

Christian Science Monitor p5 Ag 26 '47 120w

Kirkus 15:164 Mr 15 '47 80w

"There are much better farm books. Would not advise buying." Peggy Melcher

— Library J 72:820 My 15 '47 40w

"It is an apt description of life on a farm and will appeal as a read-aloud story for little children and for the third and fourth grades. However, we are sorry to have Mrs. Keeler point out morals which are already obvious to discerning children. Recommended." N. L. Rathbun

+ — Library J 72:820 My 15 '47 50w

"This is the second of Mrs. Keeler's Meadow Brook stories. Spring came in the first one—and their special quality makes me glad the year has four seasons, which implies two to come." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 My 25 '47 320w

Reviewed by S. C. Gross

N Y Times p23 Je 1 '47 140w

KEEN, BENJAMIN. David Curtis DeForest and the revolution of Buenos Aires, 186p il $3 Yale univ. press

B or 92 DeForest, David Curtis 47-2513

"David Curtis DeForest occupies a leading place among the adventurous Yankee traders who in the epoch of Spanish-American emancipation established the first commercial and political relations between the United States and the new states of Spanish America. Merchant, prince of privateers, and diplomat, he took an active part in the revolutionary struggles of the people of Buenos Aires, capital of the provinces known today as the Argentine Republic." (p. 1) This biography has been written by an associate professor of history at West Virginia university. Bibliographical note. Index.

"Professor Keen has told the story well; it is abundantly documented from sources in Argentina as well as the United States; and its only flaw—a slight tendency to exaggerate DeForest's importance—will doubtless be detected and discounted by the alert reader, so that no harm will be done." A. P. Whitaker

+ Ann Am Acad 253:219 S '47 500w

"His career of audacious adventure coupled with shrewdness is admirably narrated in 'David Curtis DeForest and the Revolution of Buenos Aires.'" J. T. Frederick

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p4 F 23 '47 130w

Christian Century 64:337 Mr 12 '47 120w

Current Hist 12:373 Ap '47 80w

"Except for his failure to present an appropriate setting Mr. Keen has produced a model doctoral dissertation, a work not only sound and accurate but interesting. Some day perhaps he will tackle the larger and much more significant story of which this is merely a small part, the story of sea power and the winning of Latin-American independence, which in turn is only a segment of a still vaster and more important theme, the impact of the Anglo-Saxon world upon the Latin-American, against which the government at Buenos Aires now appears to be in full and perhaps futile revolt." J. F. Rippey

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22 Mr 16 '47 800w

"Anyone who enjoys a colorful human story of the good old sailing ship days when Yankee privateers and smugglers became respected merchant princes and patrons of higher learning, would do well not to overlook this tightly packed little volume. . . . All this Dr. Keen has told in simple easy-reading form, being careful to hold his footnotes to a minimum and to keep the bibliography and critical apparatus out of the way. He probably thought that he was producing merely a work of scholarship, but he has given an account that should afford pleasure to any reader with a taste for the adventurous and an admiration for Yankee nerve." Samuel Putnam

+ N Y Times p40 Mr 16 '47 500w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:149 Je '47 200w

KEES, WELDON. Fall of the magicians. 55p $2 Reynal

811 47-4459

A second volume of poems by the author of The Last Man (Book Review Digest 1943). It contains several studies in the macabre, some ironical verse, a sestina, and five villanelles.

"He is an exceptional technician with a sharp edge of satire, a vagrant imagination, and a taste for the macabre." Gerald McDonald

+ Library J 72:1196 S 1 '47 60w

"These poems by Weldon Kees form a chapter in the history of the disintegration of our world, written by an intelligent, witty and detached mind. . . . Blank verse, usually arranged in paragraphs of three to six lines, is the poet's preferred form, and he works within it easily and fluently and with nice variety of rhythm and sound. He has also experimented, however, with the villanelle and sestina in this volume; why, one cannot guess, for they show his gifts to far lesser advantage. . . . Both forms have been naturalized by such writers of light verse as Austin Dobson, but they are poor vehicles for the intellectual and penetrating poetry of Mr. Kees." Milton Crane

+ — N Y Times p18 Je 8 '47 550w

"Weldon Kees, in his second book of verse, demonstrates his versatility and control of his medium whether employing traditional forms or cadenced prosody. His satire hits the mark with the accuracy of a well-aimed projectile. He is expert in the use of contemporary detail, the calculated understatement, the illuminating commonplace. Above all, he upholds the standards of taste established by an older generation of American poets before the Auden influence crept in." H. R. Hays

+ Poetry 70:330 S '47 950w

"Mr. Kees is a most fluid poet, and he is willing to try almost any form. In his poetry there is an excitingly controlled emotion, which heightens in some magical way the effects he achieves. Kees is one of the moderns who believes chaos is upon us, and he writes calmly within that acceptance." George Snell

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Jl 13 '47 70w

KEESING'S contemporary archives; weekly diary of important world events with index continually kept up-to-date. v. 1-6, 1931-1948 (in progress) $23.50 per year postpaid; binding case, $4.65; back volumes postpaid; 2-4, 1934-1943, $31 each; 5, 1943-1945, $38.50. Keesing's publications, ltd, 65 Bristol Road, Keynsham Bristol

909 History, Universal

"Keesing's Contemporary Archives is a weekly, loose-leaf news service which had its origin in the Netherlands but is now published in England. Early in its history it was reviewed in Subscription Books Bulletin for October 1932 [Book Review Digest 1934] and though described favorably was not recommended for American libraries because of the time lag in delivery and because it was held that libraries would have the material in other forms. Increased interest in international affairs, the possibilities of speedier delivery offered by airmail, and the fact that Keesing's now has fifteen years of publication behind it, all combine to make a new appraisal seem appropriate. . . . Keesing's service is international in scope and covers news events of major interest in the fields of international politics, economics, government, finance, commerce, education as well as art, science, sports, religion. The reports are based for the most part on newspaper accounts, the (London) Times being the most often quoted. . . . Articles vary in length from a short paragraph to a page or more and are thus long enough to permit extensive quotations from documents, addresses, etc." Subscription Bks Bul

"Presentation is scholarly in manner, restrained in tone, and impartial. . . . Keesing's main sphere of usefulness is as a valuable reference tool for recent information and retrospective material emphasizing European and British government and politics, rather than as a source of information on events for the last week or month, though some of the latter may be found. It presents more substantial reports than Facts on File, in extremely objective analysis, and brings together material otherwise available only in scattered form in newspapers, periodicals and documents of world scope. For all libraries interested in world affairs and needing a convenient, reliable and reasonably current reporting service on foreign news, Keesing's Contemporary Archives is recommended."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 18:17 Ap '47 950w

KEEZER, DEXTER MERRIAM. The light that flickers: a view of college education which contrasts promise and performance and suggests improvements. 160p $2.50
Harper

378 Education, Higher

47-4254

"Dr. Keezer, president of Reed College from 1934 to 1942, opens his book with the melancholy observation that 'it is almost the duty of a college president to become a stuffed shirt.' . . . No longer under any bread-and-butter obligations to alumni and trustees, he presents a view of college education that contrasts promise and performance and suggests many sane and provocative improvements—all without benefit of academic jargon." (N Y Times) Index.

Booklist 44:5 S 1 '47

Current Hist 13:165 S '47 100w

Kirkus 15:210 Ap 1 '47 170w

KEEZER, D. M.—Continued

"His book is written with an urbanity of humor not always found in the average college administrator. And if the story he tells is not new, it is a story that needs to be told often, particularly from Dr. Keezer's liberal-progressive approach." L. R. Middlebrook

+ N Y Times p22 Je 22 '47 550w

School & Society 65:430 Je 7 '47 20w

"The individual who has never been a faculty member will find in this volume an illuminating account of how a college functions. The professional will find it at once a mirror and a challenging guidepost." E. B. Sackett

+ Survey G 36:707 D '47 550w

KEFAUVER, ESTES, and LEVIN, JACK. Twentieth-century Congress; foreword by Robert M. La Follette. 236p $3 Essential bks.

328.73 U.S. Congress 47-3751

"Mr Kefauver, representative from Tennessee, and Dr. Levin, a Government lawyer, [present] this analysis of the defects of Congress and the possible measures for reform. Briefly, their suggestions include: The installation of an electric voting system; the abolition of riders; a workable cloture rule to abolish the filibuster; a report-and-question period in which Cabinet members would co-operate with Congress; an efficient and revitalized use of the caucus; a still further simplification of the committee system; the nullification of automatic seniority-chairmanships; teamwork between congressional committees and Government agencies [etc]." San Francisco Chronicle

Reviewed by F. L. Burdette

Am Pol Sci R 41:1007 O '47 600w

Booklist 44:5 S 1 '47

Reviewed by Walter Johnson

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Je 22 '47 400w

Reviewed by Philip Levy

Columbia Law R 47:1246 N '47 900w

"His style is simple, direct, and convincing. If there is any solution, short of the adoption of the parliamentary system of government, for taking the hopeless kinks out of our out-moded check-and-balance system, Mr. Kefauver has it. The work is a splendid contribution to the cause of civic education." J. G. Kerwin

+ Commonweal 46:409 Ag 8 '47 460w

Reviewed by J. L. McCaskill

El School J 48:111 O '47 550w

Kirkus 15:211 Ap 1 '47 120w

"The book's many suggestions deserve the widest circulation and study. The author's program for legislative reform should be pushed by all those concerned with strengthening democratic processes in America. Congress cannot hope to function in an atomic age unless its creaking machinery is modernized." Will Maslow

+ Nation 165:105 Jl 26 '47 700w

"Occasionally the authors seem to claim too much for their reforms, but, on the whole, Mr. Kefauver and Mr. Levin have done an excellent job in presenting practical solutions for the problems created by antiquated legislative machinery in today's complex world." Harry Baehr

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Ag 31 '47 550w

"This is a sober, temperate study. It covers largely familiar ground, but also it boldly faces many problems which vex political mechanisms." H. J. Bresler

+ N Y Times p24 Je 1 '47 460w

"Kefauver and Levin have done their expository job and done it beautifully. If you're not content to have a snuff-box government, it's up to you to study their exposition and act upon it." W. A. P. White

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Je 5 '47 600w

"It is a healthy thing for the citizens to worry about Congress; it is especially healthy when one of the most distinguished and useful members of Congress does the worrying. . .

There is little doubt but that in the times we are coming into the choice is between following counsels such as those in this book, or seriously weakening and possibly destroying the institutions without which self-rule and freedom cannot survive in this country." T. K. Finletter

+ Sat R of Lit 30:15 Je 28 '47 500w

Reviewed by J. P. C. Carey

Survey G 37:32 Ja '48 250w

KEITH, MRS AGNES (NEWTON). Three came home; sketches by the author and Don Johnston. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 317p $3 Little 940.547252 World war, 1939-1945—Prisoners and prisons, Japanese. World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American

47-30230

The author of Land Below the Wind (Book Review Digest 1939) here tells the story of her years of imprisonment by the Japanese.

Booklist 43:270 My 1 '47

"It is a brave and compassionate tale and we recommend it to thoughtful readers." M. E. Brennan

+ Cath World 165:378 Jl '47 500w

"If governments were sensible enough to give medals for nobility of spirit, Agnes Newton Keith would be high on the list of awards for the gaiety and courage with which she has recorded the three miserable years she, her husband Harry, and their small son, George, were held as internees, but treated as prisoners-of-war, by the Japanese. For she has written a book which should be required reading for anyone who dares to use the phrase 'the next war.'" Emmett Dedmon

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Ap 13 '47 550w

"Not pleasant experiences, but they are told without bitterness or rancor, with a good reportorial sense of factual accuracy, and with drama and humor enough to make [the book] an interesting as well as an informing record."

+ Christian Century 64:594 My 7 '47 130w

"The work has humor, readability, clever sketches by the author and Don Johnston, and many other accoutrements of popularity." H. S. Hayward

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Ap 11 '47 700w

"This story of three and a half years of captivity is we believe the most touching, the most understanding, and the most rewarding, of all the stories of such experiences. [Mrs. Keith] never lost her courage or her sense of humor, and was able in a measure even to understand her persecutors. . . It is a revealing picture of what human nature can endure, and how through courage and ingenuity it can overcome the most adverse circumstances." W. L. Caswell

+ Churchman 161:18 Jl '47 360w

Reviewed by Edward Skillin

Commonweal 46:44 Ap 25 '47 200w

Kirkus 15:84 F 1 '47 250w

"Highly recommended." H. S. Taylor

+ Library J 72:527 Ap 1 '47 100w

"'Three Came Home' should rank with the great imprisonment stories of all times; it contains every ingredient of authentic feeling. On a base of brutality and tragedy is set a chronicle of fear, dirt, hunger, torture, death, every degradation and infamy to which humans can be subjected. Agnes, Harry and George came home; countless others did not. Her tale is one of unbelievable courage, perseverance, endurance in the face of every insult and privation, one which can never be forgotten by those who read it, for it is a true story of men and women at their worst and best." P. J. Searles

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Ap 6 '47 1700w

Reviewed by Annalee Jacoby

N Y Times p5 Ap 6 '47 650w

"The book reflects rare courage, of course. But is at the same time—or should be—an extraordinarily effective sermon on the uselessness of hate, the self-consuming folly of revenge." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ap 13 '47
1900w

"This is a story that will bring tears, with little laughter, for it is a story of imprisonment at the hands of the Japanese. It is a story of brutality and humiliation, of starvation and filth and torture. And yet it is a story of courage and selflessness and love. It is told with an understatement which gives it strength, with a sincerity that obviously is truth." M. H. Gunnison

+ Sat R of Lit 30:11 Ap 5 '47 600w

Time 49:106 Ap 14 '47 750w

Wis Lib Bul 43:79 My '47

KEITH, SIR ARTHUR. Evolution and ethics; with a pref. by Earnest A. Hooton [Eng. title: Essays on human evolution]. 246p $3 Putnam

575 Evolution 47-3126

"Sir Arthur Keith, now in his eighties, is one of the world's great surgical anatomists and physical anthropologists. In this sequence of essays he gives challenging answers to the problems of man's recent and future growth. He anatomizes the paradox of civilization's antipathy to the fierce forms of war which it has created. And at a deeper level he exposes, in family affection and distrust of strangers, the origins of ethical and 'cosmical' codes of action." Sat R of Lit

"It is good that these forty essays, nineteen of which appeared in 1943 and 1944 in the Literary Guide and the Rationalist Annual, have now been published as a handy volume, not because the resulting book is good but because it is a most revealing statement exposing a trend of ideas widely prevalent among scientists as well as among the general public, but rarely propounded so forthrightly and forcefully. It should be bought, read and carefully studied, especially by Lord Vansittart and his faithful adherents." Robert Eisler

Hibbert J 44:377 J1 '46 1850w

"For a learned, socio-anthropological audience."

Kirkus 15:55 Ja 15 '47 160w

Reviewed by A. B. Lindsay

Library J 72:385 Mr 1 '47 140w

"The reader will find here a multitude of reflections, especially on the problem of evil, illustrated by many quotations from Sir Arthur's wide reading and flavoured by his realisation that irrational factors continually affect our efforts and our decisions. The book may well check facile optimism." H. J. F.

Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 13 '47 240w

Reviewed by Ruth Benedict

N Y Times p22 Ag 3 '47 800w

"The work cannot be dismissed as racism though it skirts this pitfall. Social scientists will be amazed at the almost complete omission of childhood conditioning as a factor in national character and at the consequent confusion of recent social evolution with long-term species evolution... Obviously it was impossible in England during the war to write on man's future without bias. But perhaps the ultimate reason for disagreement is that the author's approach combines nineteenth-century rationalism with modern skepticism... And it is a tribute to the author's ability that it does so without being offensive. Yet ultimately the book is important more as a symptom of everybody's concern over the future of mankind than as a major contribution to anthropology." J. L. Angel

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:24 Ag 30 '47 600w

"Here is a volume of essays by one of the foremost anatomists and anthropologists of his day... His life-long integrity, his brilliant services to his own subjects, would alone make these essays well worth reading and pondering." H. H. Bashford

+ Spec 176:278 Mr 15 '46 700w

"The importance of Sir Arthur's new book of essays is that they emphasize the uncomfortable truth that it is difficult to produce change without struggle. His particular emphasis is that war has been an integral part of the process of human evolution. Since his views have often been misinterpreted, it must be stated in fairness that he claims that he does not like war... It would be foolish to ignore Sir Arthur Keith's warnings because we dislike them or to dismiss the subject because we feel that very little is known about it."

Times [London] Lit Sup p160 Ap 6 '46
1200w

KEITH, JOSEPH JOEL. Hearth lit. 67p $2 Dierkes press, 1212 Washington st, La Porte, Ind.

811

47-27022

The third book of poems by a young American author. Many of the poems have appeared in English and American magazines.

"Skilled workmanship is evident in the short verses where the images are adroitly built and rounded off. At his best, the poet shows himself to be a craftsman who is able to reproduce for us the fragile bits of beauty that affect him... 'The Hearth Lit' will be enjoyed by those who share Mr. Keith's regard for the simple and untrammelled experience; others will wish that the poet had delved more deeply into his subject-matter." T. C. Benet

+ — N Y Times p28 O 5 '47 370w

"It is easy to understand Mr. Morton's enthusiasm for these poems, since they suggest the same interests and virtues as his own: 'sound and hush' is not a bad epitome of their quality. Unfortunately, this kind of poetry is essentially static; nothing much happens, and the sound itself is so close to a hush that only ears specially attuned to it will hear it." G. P. Meyer

— + Sat R of Lit 30:35 My 3 '47 410w

KELLAND, CLARENCE BUDINGTON. Double treasure. 248p $2.50 Harper

Modern treasure hunting story. The scene is the Long Island shore.

Booklist 43:273 My 1 '47

"What Clarence Budington Kelland has is a sure-fire formula which never aims very high but never misses either. If you accept his characters (none of whom have any similarity to real persons, living or dead) and his plots, (which never even resemble reality), you have to admit that he turns them into a story which hangs together." C. T.

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ap 6 '47
180w

Kirkus 15:42 Ja 15 '47 90w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22
Ap 6 '47 140w

Wis Lib Bul 43:142 O '47

KELLEY, DOUGLAS MCGLASHAN. 22 cells in Nuremberg; a psychiatrist examines the Nazi criminals. 245p $3 Greenberg

943.086 Germany—Nazi movement. Germany —Biography. War crimes 47-1219

"Dr. Kelley, the psychiatrist charged with getting the case histories of the Nazis on trial at Nuremberg, tells, in a number of very interesting reports on his interviews, what he found out about the men. The account ends with a composite portrait of Hitler, derived from the author's talks with the Führer's henchmen. Dr. Kelley maintains that there was nothing very unusual about these men, that their counterparts can be found in any society, including our own, and that the only definite psychotic was Hess." New Yorker

Reviewed by Wendell Johnson

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ap 6 '47
650w

Foreign Affairs 26:221 O '47 20w

Reviewed by W. E. Jackson

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p32
N 23 '47 600w

KELLEY, DOUGLAS M.—Continued

"In brief, clearly written chapters Dr. Kelley gives an account of each defendant, concluding with a chapter on Hitler as described by his associates. All the data are evidently authentic and critically sifted. The psychiatric evaluation remains of necessity on a formal, not to say pedestrian, level, since in no case was the essential part of a psychiatric story, the inner life history of the individual, elicited by the examiner." Frederic Wertham

N Y Times p7 F 2 '47 1000w

New Yorker 22:98 F 8 '47 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p15 Mr 23 '47 130w

KELLEY, FRANK RAYMOND, and RYAN, CORNELIUS. Star-spangled mikado. 282p $3.50 McBride

940,5352 Japan—History—Allied occupation, 1945- 47-4161

A study of the American occupation of Japan, emphasizing its political aspects and the role of MacArthur in bringing about the democratization of the country.

Booklist 44:11 S 1 '47

"Though no single volume can cover all phases of occupation life, 'Star-Spangled Mikado' is a first-rate try and will clear up (or at least expose) much that has been obscure." P. J. Searles

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Je 29 '47 500w

"A colorful and informative report." Gunther Stein

+ N Y Times p7 Je 29 '47 750w

KELLY, ERIC PHILBROOK. The hand in the picture, a story of Poland; il. by Irena Lorentowicz. 241p $2.50 Lippincott

47-4735

"The story opens with the landing of a young Polish stowaway in a plane from Mexico to France. In the fever that followed his arrival at the home of relatives, Philip, who is of noble family, has a vision which takes him back into the history of his country through contact with different figures living in times of crisis from the coming of the Golden Horn, 600 B.C., to the fall of Warsaw, 1944." Horn Bk

"The book will not be popular in many libraries but is worth the attention of the unusual reader. Simply written."

Booklist 44:37 S 15 '47

"Fascinating book." H. F. Griswold

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 S 25 '47 270w

"How very cross those Poles are sure to be who have followed the archaeology of Biskupin, the village beneath the lake. They will not thank [Eric Kelly] for talking about poor Slavs wearing skins when Poland has a weaving culture perhaps the oldest in Europe. Very decorative pictures."

Commonweal 47:157 N 21 '47 70w

"Like other of Eric Kelly's books, The Hand in the Picture is inspired by a profound belief in the unquenchable spirit of the Pole and a conviction that a new and greater Poland will arise in the years to come. The illustrations glow with the same spirit." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:360 S '47 150w

"From an adult point of view, there is much that is irritating here: the confusion of politics, the lack of an inspired touch, the emphasis on battle, etc., etc. There is no doubt that Kelly's absorption in his material has moments of effectiveness, but the whole does seem sentimental and overwritten."

— Kirkus 15:396 Ag 1 '47 170w

"A distinguished book... While only the most discriminating young people are likely to read the book themselves, it should make excellent material for the storyteller or the teacher reading aloud." M. B. Snow

+ Library J 72:1115 Ag '47 70w

Sat R of Lit 30:52 N 15 '47 80w

Springf'd Republican p8B D 21 '47 130w
Wis Lib Bul 43:157 N '47

KELLY, FRED CHARTERS. George Ade, warmhearted satirist. 282p $3.50 Bobbs

B or 92 Ade, George 47-30196

Biography of an American humorist. "He was a happy man who was lucky enough to live the longer half of his life in America which two world wars had not yet shaken out of a feeling of security. Mr. Kelly's early chapters recreate the Indiana of the 1880's, the 'characters' of the small town of Kentland, the college and the Grand Op'ry House in Lafayette, where one fancies, George learned as much to his purpose as he did in the halls of Purdue. Over all is the sense of leisure, of time to observe people and their ways, of times departed." (Christian Science Monitor) Index.

Booklist 43:254 Ap 15 '47

Reviewed by John Drury

Chicago Sun Book Week p21 My 4 '47 380w

Reviewed by Horace Reynolds

Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 11 '47 560w

"An admiring, loving account that fills a niche in period literary figures, but that lacks the spark that might make it popular biographical reading."

+ Kirkus 15:49 Ja 15 '47 180w

"Fred Kelly's book about George Ade is fascinating reading, especially to those whose grandfathers can recall the nineties and early nineteen hundreds." F. P. Adams

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Mr 9 '47 1000w

"Fred C. Kelly, who started reading George Ade in 1893, and knew him personally from 1906 until Ade's death in 1944, has written an enjoyable eulogy of his old friend. Into it he has put many pleasant quotes from one of the most popular humorists of a bygone day. The book might have been richer for a more generous use of the George Ade correspondence (which Mr. Kelly tells us was enormous), and it would have been keener for more analysis of George Ade's work, but it will interest older generations who laughed a lot at George Ade's writing." M. K. Werner

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 2 '47 900w

"Mr. Kelly has prudently permitted Ade to tell as much of his own unlit story as could be culled from 'articles, books, speeches, unpublished manuscripts and letters,' uncluttered by footnotes or documentation. The result comes agreeably close to being a series of mellow reminiscences, with explanatory asides. . . . It is Biographer Kelly's misfortune that his own prose suffers like nobody's business from juxtaposition with Ade's. . . . The sad fact is that Mr. Kelly writes so laboriously and monotonously as to give the impression that, however much he loved his subject, the actual composition was a burden to him. Another source of irritation lies in the Pollyanna approach. . . . It does seem a pity that Mr. Kelly paints his rollicking Chicago newspapermen as if they drank nothing stronger than sarsaparilla and Ade took that only to be sociable." Jack Iams

+ Sat R of Lit 30:31 Ap 12 '47 700w

Springf'd Union p3 S 16 '47 140w
Wis Lib Bul 43:68 Ap '47

KELLY, FRED CHARTERS, ed. See Ade, G. Permanent AdeKELLY, JOHN. All souls' night. 283p $3 Harcourt

47-3318

Novel about three young people, two men and a woman. They are: Greg, a gifted scholar-athlete; Pearse, his best friend; and Ida, intelligent, outspoken, and intimate companion to both of them. The setting is mainly a New England university town in the late nineteen-thirties.

Reviewed by Alice Gasaway
Chicago Sun Book Week p6 J1 6 '47
270w

"Invidious to vicious character and conversation piece, this is weighted against wide popularity by its dependence on erudition, quotation, heavily charged late 1930 atmosphere. A first novel, displaying a wide range of possibilities for the author's future—if a narrow field of reality in the present."

Kirkus 15:141 Mr 1 '47 130w

"A raw summary omits every good thing in this Goethe-like first novel. Better read it first." F. A. Boyle

Library J 72:462 Mr 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by John Farrelly
New Repub 116:35 Mr 24 '47 140w

"It is anybody's guess what Mr. Kelly is up to in this elaborate fantasy, this literary curiosity that is more like a charade than a novel. It is this reviewer's guess that the book is a book. And a good one, too, when it finally gets going. . . . The book is not notable for its social satire, nor for its dramatic pretensions, as the publishers seem to hope. It is a rare mixture of humor and sheer fantasy, no matter how exasperating Mr. Kelly, as he studiously intrudes his sophomore characters, may be." Kenneth Fearing

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14
Mr 16 '47 550w

"Mr. Kelly knows a good deal about what makes people tick, even if he doesn't literarily know yet how to make them tick (Pearce is a possible exception). He has a subtle and agile mind. He has wit. He can contrive good social scenes and hurl satiric lightnings about them. And when he stops saying that people 'survey' their 'physical accoutrements' when he means that they merely take a look at themselves, he will write the King's English with fewer purple flourishes and more potent effect." Charles Lee

+ — N Y Times p14 Mr 16 '47 650w

"The author's style is brilliant, his command of words and images superb. In addition to his other gifts John Kelly is a social satirist of no mean order. If in his next novel he should find a less involved theme than the mental and amorous dominance of two men over each other and over a woman and should care to express it through less complicated natures and simpler relationships to the ultimate mysteries of life, John Kelly may well prove himself to be one of the outstanding creative talents of the coming days. But even if the reader finds it difficult to discover what it is all about . . . he will find it a relief from the sharp realism and the somewhat primitive folk dramas that engage the minds of most of our novelists today." Harrison Smith

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:29 Mr 22 '47 850w

KELSEY, MRS ALICE (GEER). Racing the red sail; il. by Dorothy Bayley Morse and Robert Bayley. 140p $2 Longmans

Children in Greece 47-30645

Fourteen stories about young people in present-day Greece. All royalties from the sale of the book go to the Near East foundation for its work with Greek children.

Booklist 44:53 O 1 '47

Reviewed by B. J. Thompson
Cath World 166:236 D '47 110w

"During her own recent travels around Greece, the author saw young people like these engaged in adding to the family income or celebrating one of the many festivals and her stories have a truthful quality which will be recognized and enjoyed by younger readers."

A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:361 S '47 120w

Kirkus 15:397 Ag 1 '47 120w

"The war itself is touched upon matter-of-factly, without grimness. The children are real and lovable, cheerfully shouldering their difficulties and extracting a great deal of fun from straitened living. This is the sort of book that youngsters in the 8-12 bracket will read and reread to tatters." N. B. Baker

+ N Y Times p40 N 15 '47 140w

Reviewed by Eleanor Breed
San Francisco Chronicle p6 N 16 '47
150w

Sat R of Lit 30:48 N 15 '47 50w

School & Society 66:192 S 6 '47 30w

KEMP, CHARLES F. Physicians of the soul; a history of pastoral counseling. 314p $2.75 Macmillan

250 Pastoral work. Psychology, Pastoral 47-4694

"In recent years churches have given increasing attention to the use of psychiatric methods in dealing with sick souls. Mr. Kemp's book shows that, regardless of method, the great Christian ministers have always been physicians of the soul. His chief interest is in the cure of souls in the Protestant churches and his book is filled with the great names of Protestantism, Luther, Wesley, Drummond, Brooks, and with discussions of Protestant religious movements from revivalism to church clinics in psychosomatic medicine and social case work." (San Francisco Chronicle) Index.

"Mr. Kemp has done an enormous amount of research. He seems to have read and digested everything written on the subject and he quotes exhaustively from his sources. It is a remarkable job of reporting. One wishes that it had more of the critically evaluative quality. . . . This book is must reading for the Christian minister who would acquaint himself with the great tradition of the pastoral ministry, and who wishes to know something about recent significant developments in this field of service." C. T. Holman

+ Christian Century 65:15 Ja 7 '48 550w

"In plan and treatment this book is comprehensive rather than discriminating. It includes an enormous number of names without much attempt to evaluate their contribution. It is therefore surprising to find in a history of the cure of souls no mention of the Y.M.C.A. evangelism as represented by Mott and Speer or of its continuation in modified form under Frank Buchman. Neither is sufficient attention given to the therapeutic significance of the revivalistic cults in a period when the liberal churches were offering neither treatment nor diagnosis to those who were sick of soul. As an attempt to give expression to the growing interest in the efforts to bring the methods of science to bear upon the problems of pastoral care in which our theological schools have shown such a surprising lag, Mr. Kemp's book is worthy of a hearty welcome. It should help to make clear that what is now needed is not just the adding of another course or two to an already overcrowded seminary curriculum but a thoroughly new approach to the abiding problems of theology and of pastoral care." A. T. Boisen

+ — Crozer Q 25:91 Ja '48 400w

"A vast amount of historical research is embodied in this volume. But because this research is utilized to buttress a flaming devotion to the cause of making the pastoral function of the ministry more effective and more intelligent, this is a book which should hit every Protestant minister where he lives."

+ Kirkus 15:537 S 15 '47 230w

Reviewed by E. M. Tainton

San Francisco Chronicle p8 N 30 '47
100w

"Thorough and intelligent research brings a fresh point of view to bear upon the field of pastoral care. It will be of especial interest to the clergy, but will be informative to any one interested in the growing movement to relate the spiritual power of Christian faith in a practical way to the findings of the best in modern psychiatry." H. H. Wagner

+ Springfield Republican p10B N 16 '47
120w

KEMPTON, KENNETH PAYSON. Short story. 267p $3 Harvard univ. press

808.3 Short story 47-4307

"Mr. Kempton, who has done considerable commercial writing himself and who has more-over taught writing at Harvard and Radcliffe for about 30 years, here gives enthusiastic be-

KEMPTON, KENNETH P.—Continued
ginners his own notions on the art of the short story." San Francisco Chronicle

Booklist 44:30 S 15 '47

"This book goes into more detail than Dorothy McCleary's work; but it is not so helpful in showing the beginner how to find and develop material and is not so clearly and logically organized. Mr. Kempton seems to enjoy putting the cart before the horse. . . But, whatever the order or disorder of the chapters, the book is lively, challenging, and illuminating. It makes clear its points with a wealth of examples from stories new and old and by apt quotations from other advisers." Robert Berkleman

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Ag 16 '47 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 J1 '47

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ag 31 '47 200w

"It is pleasant to note at the outset that Mr. Kempton's excellent manual on short-story writing is as readable as it is down-to-earth. A must for all neophytes in that exacting art, it can be read with enjoyment and profit by practitioners in every literary field." C. V. Terry

+ N Y Times p4 J1 6 '47 900w

"His ideas on technique and marketing are clearly presented and well illustrated, and should, no doubt, be of some help to the beginner who is intelligent enough to shape them to his own uses." A. F.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ag 10 '47 80w

School & Society 66:287 O 11 '47 20w

Wis Lib Bul 43:138 O '47

KENDALL, HELEN W., ed. See Good house-keeping institute. Good housekeeping house-keeping book

KENDALL, NANCY NOON. Wise in heart. 282p $2.75 Crowell

47-1652

"A story about Mamma Dean. . . [She] is a menace, a 'good' woman who looks for evil in all things and is pleasurably excited when she finds it. She is an organizer and a meddler, relishing each move in advance, especially when it bodes ill for someone. . . The Deans—Mamma, Papa, Tony and Laura—live in an expensive, over-decorated house in the best section of the city. Next door, in a twin monstrosity, live the Carmodys; near by are the Collinses and Fanshaws. . . All the Mammass bow to Mamma Dean's will, and so she manages not only the lives of her own children but theirs as well." N Y Times

Booklist 43:310 Je 1 '47

Kirkus 15:77 F 1 '47 170w

"To the 'mother knows best' annals of fiction, Nancy Kendall has made a solid contribution." Lisle Bell

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p21 Ap 27 '47 70w

"An ironic and extremely readable tale. Nancy Kendall knows how to catch the special aura of childhood without sentimentality or cuteness." Andrea Parke

N Y Times p10 Ap 20 '47 250w

"Miss Kendall, in her study of unwholesome, unhappy mothers, has turned out rather a harrowing book. Calamity is everywhere. . . I could not help feeling that Miss Kendall's portrait of Mamma, sinister and real a social problem as she is, is weakened in this story by all sorts of hackneyed statements and over-worked ideas. . . We cannot, of course, underestimate the importance of Miss Kendall's thesis and what it means to say about the effect of neurotic maternal domination. But we can expect, in a case which has been treated so many times before, more sharp and original treatment than we get in this fairly absorbing novel." N. G. Chaikin

+ Sat R of Lit 30:52 Ap 12 '47 380w

Springfd Union p10 O 8 '47 120w

KENDRICK, BAYNARD HARDWICK. Make mine Maclain; The silent whistle; Melody in death; The murderer who wanted more. 218p $2.50 Morrow

47-3321

Three stories about Captain Duncan Maclain, the blind detective.

Kirkus 15:143 Mr 1 '47 80w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p32 O 26 '47 140w

"While these stories are not so satisfying as the full-length Maclain novels, they are well worth the attention of the captain's many admirers." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p30 My 11 '47 150w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p22 My 18 '47 70w

"Good."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:31 My 17 '47 50w

KENNEDY, GERALD HAMILTON. His Word through preaching. 234p $2.50 Harper

251 Preaching 47-2123

"The author discusses the nature, the purpose, the methods and the necessary content of preaching. He is minister of St. Paul's Methodist Church, Lincoln, Neb., and has been professor of homiletics in Pacific School of Religion. The present volume is based on lectures he gave at Union Theological Seminary, New York." Christian Century

Christian Century 64:495 Ap 16 '47 60w

"This book is far more than a discussion of the technique of sermon-preparation, though it does offer many helpful suggestions. It should be read, not only by the seminary student, but by those who regard themselves as experienced preachers." W. L. Caswell

+ Churchman 161:17 Ap 15 '47 180w

Reviewed by R. E. Keighton

Crozer Q 24:281 J1 '47 420w

Kirkus 15:159 Mr 15 '47 170w

KENNEL, RUTH EPPERSON. Adventure in Russia, the ghost of Kirghizia; il. by John C. Wonseller. 196p $2.50 Messner

Children in Russia 47-31398

A story of present day Russia. The hero is a boy who is afraid of horses, altho his father was a Cossack officer. A girl who is a champion rider, and an American engineer who teaches him some lariat tricks help him overcome his fears. There is a ghost in the story, too!

"Unusual and beautifully written book. . . The book is exciting and interesting." Jane Cobb

+ Atlantic 180:148 D '47 70w

"A good story for older children." M. B. King

+ Chicago Sun Book Week O 25 '47 70w

"The sketches are ably executed."

Churchman 161:17 D 1 '47 40w

"A pleasant relief to find a book on Russia that is not buoyantly pro-, or bitterly anti-, anything at all."

+ Kirkus 15:432 Ag 15 '47 180w

"Not a necessary purchase." Elizabeth Burr

Library J 72:1694 D 1 '47 70w

"An amazing amount of factual information is packed away beneath the surface of this lively, smooth-running story." N. B. Baker

+ N Y Times p13 D 28 '47 190w

KENNER, HUGH. Paradox in Chesterton; intro. by Herbert Marshall McLuhan. 156p $2 Sheed

B or 92 Chesterton, Gilbert Keith 47-11074

"Mr. Kenner's purpose . . . is to demonstrate that Chesterton, at first intuitively and later, after his complete acceptance of Catholicism, studiously adhered to the philosophic tradition established in pure form by St. Thomas Aquinas. Furthermore he contends that the constant use of paradox, a tool of ancient heritage, was essential to Chesterton's own particular method of exposition. . . . In expanding this theme, the author turns frequently to Blake, Eliot and Joyce—indeed his most original thought concerns the multiple paradoxes in 'Finnegans Wake.' N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

Kirkus 15:674 D 1 '47 150w

"One may welcome Mr. Kenner's interpretation of Chesterton's 'unique metaphysical intuition' but still complain that he has too much neglected, even if intentionally, the complex, joyous figure that was G. K. C. Must we, alas, stamp from memory 'The Ballad of the White Horse' in favor of 'Heretics'?" J. W. Chase

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p34 D 7 '47 310w

"Mr. Kenner, writing as a philosopher, well understands the philosophic side of a creator, but, in the process of vindicating Chesterton's claim to be considered an original and profound thinker, he angrily, even contemptuously, dismisses the creative side of a philosopher as 'spurious Toby-jug heartiness.' His attempt to establish an impossible dichotomy here vitiates an otherwise admirable brochure. We cannot carve up this Aristotelian Fat Boy of modern letters like a Christmas turkey; we must take him whole or not at all." C. A. Brady

+ — N Y Times p4 J1 6 '47 700w

KENT, NORMAN, ed. Drawings by American artists; with an introd. by Rockwell Kent. 158p $5 Watson-Guption

741.973 Drawings 47-2947

The managing editor of the magazine American Artist has edited this book of selections from the works of American artists, and has written brief descriptions to accompany the drawings.

Cleveland Open Shelf p17 S '47

"Well-known and less familiar but skilful and rewarding work is represented in the reproductions of Bellows and Cadmus, Glackens, Kroll, McBey, Sloan and the rest. . . . Biographical information would enhance its use." A. S. Plaut

+ — Library J 72:889 Je 1 '47 130w

KENYON, THEDA. That skipper from Stonington. 538p $3 Messner

47-213

A historical novel of the first half of the nineteenth century. The hero, son of a sea-faring family of Stonington, Connecticut, runs away to sea to help beat the British in the war of 1812. Thereafter the story follows his career on sea and land, as cabin boy, youthful sea captain, inventor and shipbuilder thru nearly half-a-century.

Booklist 43:170 F 1 '47

"It is a pity that so much detail of filth and misery darkens the early pages. Otherwise, it is complete diversion and suitable for the young at heart of any age." M. B. S.

Christian Science Monitor p10 F 1 '47 230w

"Its style is pedestrian, its characters stereotyped."

— Kirkus 14:400 Ag 15 '46 160w

"A masculine subject sentimentalized, dramatized, feminized, good reading in general. Recommended." H. A. Wooster

+ Library J 71:1542 N 1 '46 110w

"Miss Kenyon's novel is based on a rich attic haul of authentic records; it is good reading." Lisle Bell

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 Ja 12 '47 250w

"Yankee whaling has been covered more vividly in other books, and even this season John Jennings' 'Salem Frigate' sailed the seas of 1812 with considerably more dash and excitement than Miss Kenyon has managed.

But her Captain Loper is a real if rather stuffy person, and her background details, drawn from Stonington family records, are scrupulously accurate." Richard Match

+ N Y Times p16 Ja 12 '47 600w

KERBY, SUSAN ALICE, pseud. See Burton, E.

KERR, MRS LAURA (NOWAK). The girl who ran for president; il. by Mildred Lyon Hetherington. 192p $2.50 Nelson

B or 92 Lockwood, Belva Ann (Bennett) 47-30417

Fictionized account of the life of an American woman, Belva Lockwood, who was a candidate for president in 1884 and 1888. She was a teacher, lecturer, lawyer, and a worker for woman suffrage. For junior and senior high school.

Booklist 44:54 O 1 '47

Kirkus 15:398 Ag 1 '47 100w

"Although an informal study, the book serves to quicken one's interest in American women's struggle to gain political, economic, and professional equality with men. For older girls and young people's collections." E. F. Clift

+ Library J 72:1200 S 1 '47 80w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20 N 16 '47 320w

"Paradoxically, although it is carelessly written, with dialogue which sounds rather unlikely for the period, it is easy to read. Mrs. Kerr doesn't define Mrs. Lockwood's character very clearly. . . . The book does, however, bring home to older girls a realization of the long struggle for women's freedom which in this day we take so easily for granted." E. L. B.

+ — N Y Times p13 D 28 '47 270w

KERR, SOPHIE (MRS UNDERWOOD). Wife's eye view. 280p $2.50 Rinehart

47-3825

An unsuccessful writer suddenly wins a literary prize and a Hollywood offer of $150,000. He is quickly caught up into a dozen different ventures, all savoring of the trained seal act, and it is up to his more sensible wife to bring him back to earth.

Kirkus 15:244 My 1 '47 90w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 Ag 24 '47 120w

Reviewed by John Farrer

Sat R of Lit 30:11 Ag 9 '47 2750w

KERSH, GERALD. Prelude to a certain midnight. 249p $2.50 Doubleday

47-4017

Characterizations of a group of London bohemians who are shocked by the brutal murder of an eleven-year-old girl who had lived nearby. One of their number is guilty, but he is never punished.

Reviewed by Jex Martin

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Je 8 '47 150w

Kirkus 15:174 Mr 15 '47 230w

"Kersh's portraits of the eccentrics and minor artists who inhabit the Bohemian world have the vitality of first-rate satire; his novel is also a parable on evil and its indulgences, eloquent with indignation and disgust." H. W. Hart

Library J 72:809 My 15 '47 70w

"Mr. Kersh has so much individuality and skill, so much intelligence, that one may naively wonder why he writes about this kind of thing in this kind of way. No doubt there is something to be said for helping people to read between the lines of the more tragic paragraphs in the 'Sunday papers.'" Paul Bloomfield

Manchester Guardian p3 S 19 '47 190w

KERSH, GERALD—Continued

Reviewed by Julia Strachey
New Statesman & Nation 34:315 O
18 '47 240w

"The novel is wholly successful in its integration of meaning, story and character. The Kersh cosmos and the people who inhabit it carry his insights easily, without forcing. There is a curious relevance even in the mingling of bohemian and criminal elements, for in Kersh's view both are Nietzschean rebels obsessed by a wish for freedom and power. The book is unquestionably good reading. In style it is pleasantly informal, as if the author were writing a letter to the reader, and its phrasing is quick and perceptive. No one who ventures on 'Prelude to a Certain Midnight' is likely to put it down in a hurry." Stephen Stepanchew

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6
My 25 '47 650w

"Kersh is not a writer to be recommended to everyone without reservations. If you like him you like him very much and his nuisance value to those who don't like him is correspondingly great. Everybody must agree that he is unique. If, in each of his books, he occasionally falls into a fit of moralizing, the while he keeps the reader anxiously awaiting the next happening in his story, that is something we'll just have to learn to put up with." Russell Maloney

N Y Times p7 Je 8 '47 450w

"Mr. Kersh has worked rather too hard at trying to make us understand his eccentric characters, who are introduced with a more elaborate buildup than the unsubstantial narrative justifies. In the end, only the reader and a flighty elderly spinster, who doesn't much care, learn who murdered the child. Probably the reader won't much care, either."

— New Yorker 23:102 My 24 '47 100w

Reviewed by W. A. P. White

San Francisco Chronicle p11 Je 29 '47
500w

"The novel is worth while for the not unpleasant tingling it will produce along the reader's backbone, though it will not be conducive to pleasant walks in a city park at night. For the author of 'Faces in a Dusty Picture,' a remarkable first novel, it is a minor work. The plot itself is a contrivance and, in spite of the vividness with which he presents his characters, it seems incredible that so many dubious and frightening people could be assembled together under one roof." Harrison Smith

+ Sat R of Lit 30:17 My 31 '47 800w

"Prelude never really gets going and never comes to an end, simply limping from sketch to sketch, as though even Author Kersh were never quite sure what he intended to say on the last page."

— Time 49:110 My 26 '47 220w

Times [London] Lit Sup p505 O 4 '47
360w

KERSTEN, FELIX. Memoirs; ed. by Herma Briffault; tr. by Ernst Morwitz; introd. by Konrad Heiden. 300p $3.50 Doubleday

B or 92 Physicians—Correspondence, reminiscence, etc. 47-1801

Memoirs of an anti-Nazi, Finnish physician, who treated some of the top Nazis, notably Himmler. When offered the possibility of doctoring Hitler, he refused. Index.

Kirkus 15:21 Ja 1 '47 170w

Reviewed by Russell Hill

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p25
Ap 20 '47 800w

"Dr. Kersten vindicates himself, over and over again, of what might be the average reader's suspicion of collaboration, until the process gets a little boring. Konrad Heiden has written a masterful introduction dealing with the psychology of Hitler's inner group." Russell Maloney

N Y Times p4 Mr 9 '47 500w

"An orgy of self-adulation prompted perhaps by Dr. Kersten's feeling of guilt for having consorted with the Nazis. The memoirs are a potpourri of flamboyant inconsistencies and extravagant assertions." A. C. Book

— San Francisco Chronicle p11 Ap 6 '47
500w

"The indulgent gullibility of Himmler, head of a relentless espionage and security system, is extraordinary. Kersten, a foreigner, has access to top secret documents. . . . The tale contains other defects besides implausibility. Certain dates are inaccurate. Some of the inside dope . . . are contradicted by more authoritative sources. The credibility of these recollections is not assisted by Kersten's offhand admission that most of his notes were burned. . . . Most of the objective story accords undeniably with established fact. But as to Kersten's subjective role it is impossible to repress a lingering skepticism. . . . His book is an absorbing report, worth reading for its intimate glimpses of life and cabals among the top Nazis. But it is not to be swallowed whole." W. E. Jackson

+ Sat R of Lit 30:14 Mr 8 '47 900w

Time 49:104 Mr 24 '47 460w

KESSEL, JOSEPH. Sirocco; tr. from the French by Katherine Woods. 175p $2.50 Random house

47-4658

A portrayal of violence in which the persons involved are a brave but brutal sergeant in the French Colonial army; his superior officer, a sinister Frenchman, known as Mehemet Pasha; and a fifteen-year-old dancing girl with whom both men are in love. The place is Beirut in Syria.

"Sultry, explosive little novel. . . . Apart from some perfunctory, cheesecakeish paragraphs itemizing the charms of the adolescent, drab Violette, the story is compact and well written. The characterization of Hippolyte is not original, but is time-tested and pleasantly familiar." Jex Martin

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Je 1 '47
190w

Kirkus 15:108 F 15 '47 170w

"There is great savagery in some of the scenes, a slashing and banging poster-like movement in which the sexual and combative passions come to life for the time of reading. And yet, it seems to me, Mr. Kessel fails in the extremely subtle task of disentangling the emotions of a brute, showing the false and the true and making us believe it. If we put down the book for one minute its world fades out completely; we do not really accept its view of its own events." Vincent Sheean

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10
Ap 27 '47 800w

"One never ceases to admire the skill with which French writers are able to construct a tight narrative, agitated by suspense, told in vivid, muscular prose, and enlivened by characterizations that are subtle, yet sharp. In 'Sirocco,' the popular French novelist Joseph Kessel has displayed all those talents so long identified with tradition. . . . Kessel tells this tale of viciousness and passion with typical French detachment. No moral homilies interrupt the reader's tense absorption in its swiftly paced action. It is only on reflection that one appreciates the skillful exposure of the brutal limitations of a creed that makes rejection of compassion its noblest virtue." John Bicknell

+ N Y Times p16 My 4 '47 450w

"Its one merit is that it runs to only a hundred and seventy-five pages." Hamilton Basso

— New Yorker 23:104 My 10 '47 90w

Reviewed by William Hogan

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Je 29 '47
170w

"The roads M. Kessel's two protagonists are made to follow in this melodramatic tale are a bit too wondrous. At least one of these characters seems to be a case history for Havelock Ellis rather than the credible picture of a great colonial military man going native and being caught in the throes of sexual passion. Yet with so much to be said against the book it is only fair to add that as sheer storytelling it will frequently hold the interest of the reader." Robert Pick

— + Sat R of Lit 30:42 My 24 '47 320w

KESTEN, HERMANN. Happy man; il. by George Grosz [tr. by Edward Crankshaw]. 254p $3 Wyn

47-2433

Ironical novel of Germany, especially Berlin in the 1920's. It is the story of Max, whose dreary middle class existence is heightened by his love affair with Else. In order to save Else's father from a prison sentence, he steals some money, and is caught by another of her suitors. The story ends with Else a suicide, and Max married to a wealthy woman.

Reviewed by D. M. Weil

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Mr 16 '47 330w

"A more condensed, simplified book than the recent The Twins of Nuremberg, which will get a critical rather than a popular reception. It lacks the warmth, the relief that gave a book like Little Man, What Now? its impetus to general popularity."

Kirkus 15:39 Ja 15 '47 180w

"Generally reminiscent of Fallada's Little Man What Now? But writing is of uneven quality. Work, G. Grosz' illustrations, book's probable success—all only fair. No lasting demand from readers anticipated. Probably most suitable for public libraries with urban clientele." H. H. A. Berni

Library J 72:462 Mr 15 '47 80w

"The novel is superbly illustrated by George Grosz; the text and the pictures are so complementary that one feels that if the writer and the artist had exchanged mediums they would have produced the same volume." John Farrelly

New Repub 116:35 Ap 14 '47 400w

"As a narrative the novel is lively and entertaining. Much of its forward motion is due to Mr. Kesten's clever trick of beginning the chapters with an interest-rousing climax or conclusion and then working backward to the antecedent crisis. The writing is deft and linear, and the tawdry details that are emphasized are precisely right for the acid portraits of Max Blattner, Felix Pfeiderer and the rest. George Grosz, the noted German artist who now, like Mr. Kesten himself, lives in the United States, has illustrated the text admirably." Stephens, Stepanchev

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Mr 23 '47 550w

"The picture he gives us of Germany between two wars makes most literary renderings of the same subject, such as Christopher Isherwood's Berlin Stories, seem no more than sentimental water colors. Despite this, Mr. Kesten has not written a successful book. It takes us on a tour of the several levels of his Germanic Hell, sparing us nothing, but all the time he has a joker up his sleeve. . . . Although Mr. Kesten has all the material for a satire here (hardly a subtle one, however), his book doesn't work out. He keeps his intention so carefully concealed and strives so hard to make us feel sympathetic toward Else and Max that his final chapter, upon which the effect of his novel completely depends, is merely contrived and artificial." Hamilton Basso

— + New Yorker 23:113 Mr 15 '47 800w

Reviewed by Alfred Kay

San Francisco Chronicle p11 Je 1 '47 300w

Reviewed by F. C. Weiskopf

Sat R of Lit 30:19 Ap 19 '47 370w

KEYES, MRS. FRANCES PARKINSON (WHEELER). Came a cavalier. 577p il $3 Messner

47-11106

Traces the story of an American girl, Constance Galt, from the time when she was a Red Cross searcher in France after World war I, until she had lived thru World war II as Madame la Baronne de Fremont.

Booklist 44:90 N 1 '47

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon

Chicago Sun Book Week p8 N 2 '47 170w

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '47

"A story rich in details of the life, the people, the countryside and its ways, its moods—and with cross pattern of subplot to lend light and shadow. Good storytelling, based on a deep and abiding love of the Normandy of which she writes."

+ Kirkus 15:474 S 1 '47 280w

"Author's 'faithful' will adore this new tome." C. W. Roth

Library J 72:1194 S 1 '47 70w

"Frances Parkinson Keyes has the narrative gift. She can tell a romantic story so that her readers keep turning the pages over to see what happens next." D. C. Fisher

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 N 23 '47 330w

"Frances Parkinson Keyes has a deep love and sympathy for France and delights to pay generous tribute to the fine qualities of the liberty-loving French. Some readers may feel that there is a plethora of factual material. . . . But readers who learned about Louisiana from 'The River Road' will doubtless be delighted with this large-scale portrayal of the French scene." Barbara Bond

+ — N Y Times p33 O 26 '47 500w

Springf'd Republican p10B N 30 '47 120w

Wis Lib Bul 43:175 D '47

KEYES, MRS. FRANCES PARKINSON (WHEELER). Once on Esplanade; a cycle between two Creole weddings; il. by Addison Burbank. 202p $2.50 Dodd

47-11240

This novel for young readers tells the story of a New Orleans family during a period in the 1880s between the marriages of two sisters.

"This book is packed with that detail which is the result of painstaking research and it gives a good picture of Creole family life in New Orleans at the end of the last century. It has the color and romance so necessary to teen-age reading." B. J. Thompson

+ Cath World 166:240 D '47 80w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 N 23 '47 360w

"When a story-teller, well-known in the adult field for her sense of local color, writes her first book for young readers, it should be an exciting event; but this description of nine years in the life of Marie Louise, daughter of a wealthy Creole family, falls disappointingly short of being a good story." V. H. Mathews

— + N Y Times p47 N 30 '47 190w

KEYES, SIDNEY ARTHUR KILWORTH. Collected poems; ed. with a memoir and notes by Michael Meyer; pref. by Herbert Read. 124p $2.50 Holt

821

47-3181

Collected poems of a young English poet who was killed just before his twenty-first birthday, on Hill 133 in Tunisia. Herbert Read says in his preface: "He died, the subtlest, the truest, the most open representative of a generation we have yet to welcome and understand." The book includes a brief biographical memoir.

"These are not exactly war poems yet in a profounder sense they are just that, for they betray a tragic sense of loss by one whose brief experience as a writer was confined to a time of battle." George McDonald

+ Library J 72:889 Je 1 '47 130w

KEYES, S. A. K.—Continued

"Although its author fell in battle at the age of twenty, The Collected Poems of Sidney Keyes bears the unquestionable assurance of his immortality." Wilfred Gibson

+ Manchester Guardian p3 O 10 '45 120w

"Let me add, for the sake of those who already possess the two earlier volumes, that these Collected Poems contain a number of new poems including a touchingly appropriate elegy for Virginia Woolf. The book is beautifully edited. The eight pages of Notes, with quotations from letters and diaries are a most valuable addition to our knowledge of Keyes, and it is to be hoped that Mr. Meyer or Mr. Heath-Stubbs will discover enough material in prose to make a further volume." G. W. Stonier

+ New Statesman & Nation 30:96 Ag 11 '45 1300w

"Keyes was a precocious, sensitive, intelligent poet. He was more than a young man 'drunk with death's unquenchable wisdom.' He was an instinctive craftsman. Even the earliest poems of this volume have shape, significance and a fine precision of imagery: a finality of tone and phrasing that is remarkable. This tone is almost without exception clear, passionate and bitter." J. J. Sweeney

+ N Y Times p32 My 11 '47 850w

"His later poems showed signs of a growing talent, a remarkable sense of words, and a wide range of literary reference, which help offset the usual youthful derivations and a rather overdeveloped self-consciousness."

+ New Yorker 23:99 Je 14 '47 120w

"The technique—the kind of poetic statement—is not exciting or splendid, but the images and the rhythms are fitted adequately to the mood that seeks expression. And lest anyone should think that to say this is adequate poetry is to damn it with faint praise, I will add that I cannot think of more than four young poets (if that) on either side of the Atlantic whose poetry even begins to deserve the term." David Daiches

+ Poetry 71:45 O '47 1200w

Reviewed by G. P. Meyer

+ Sat R of Lit 30:35 Je 28 '47 600w

"He died aged 20, having devoted his life very largely to the problem of death, and proved the strength of his character, his intellect and his literary resource in many graphic poems."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p378 Ag 11 '45 1200w

KIBBE, PAULINE ROCHESTER. Latin Americans in Texas. 302p il $3.50 Univ. of N.Mex. School of Inter-Am. affairs, Box 4306, Albuquerque, N.Mex.

325.272 Mexicans in Texas 47-586

"A Texan writes of the people of Mexican descent in her state, and of the disabilities—economic, social, and educational—which are imposed upon them. Introductory chapters explain the background of the Mexicans, and the strategic importance of Texas as our point of contact with Latin Americans. Seven-page bibliography." Booklist

"The interpretation is clearly colored by a desire to vindicate Texans as a whole and overlooks the fact that reported incidents are more likely an index of incompletely functioning patterns of discrimination than a degree of prejudice. In view of the slight bias and such facts as, 'the great majority of labor unions refuse to admit Latin Americans,' the reader looks in vain for evidence supporting the emphatic contention that discrimination is not on the increase. . . . The book is well organized, pleasingly written, and should be useful for its discussion of economic problems of Mexicans and as a summary of earlier research. The detailed outline of problems and remedies in the final chapter should be helpful in courses in minority problems." R. H. Turner

Am J Soc 53:70 Ji '47 430w

Booklist 43:217 Mr 15 '47

Christian Science Monitor p14 Ja 27 '47 400w

"Mrs. Kibbe's book is written with affection and sensitiveness, and deserves careful reading not only from her fellow Texans, but from all concerned for the translation of the doctrines of good neighborliness into a more generous and intelligent attitude toward Americans of Mexican blood." Hubert Herring

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 Mr 2 '47 1700w

"Mrs. Kibbe is probably as well-qualified a person as one could find to write a book on the Latin Americans of Texas. She has had broad, practical experience in the field, and at present serves as executive secretary of the Texas Good Neighbor Commission. This book justifies the responsible position she holds; its substance is informative, and its judgments command respect." G. L. Joughin

+ N Y Times p43 Mr 30 '47 600w

Reviewed by H. E. Moore

Social Forces 26:228 D '47 600w

U S Quarterly BkI 3:295 S '47 290w

KIBLER, LILLIAN ADELE. Benjamin F. Perry, South Carolina Unionist. 562p il maps $5 Duke Univ. press

B or 92 Perry, Benjamin Franklin 47-311

Biography of the South Carolina Unionist, who was editor of the Greenville Mountaineer, a Unionist journal, during nullification days. The book is based on Perry's manuscript journal, correspondence, and on the newspapers he edited. Bibliography. Index.

"Benjamin F. Perry is an attractive figure in South Carolina history and a biography of him is long overdue. This work by Miss Kibler, evidently a student of Professor Nevins, who writes an illuminating foreword, is based upon a wealth of manuscript materials such as few biographers enjoy." L. A. White

+ Am Hist R 52:754 Ji '47 1000w

"Miss Kibler's treatise is emphatically not in the line of romantic tradition but in that of careful, if uninspired, historical research. It is far more readable than the bulk of modern historiography, but at that it is to be read for information, not for entertainment." G. W. Johnson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 F 2 '47 1050w

"Using a wealth of material, including two autobiographies written by Perry for the family, a diary covering thirty years, and the results of diligent research, the story is told in sometimes overwhelming detail. But the author has done a good job, and she has made it abundantly clear that, even in the feverish days before the 'irrepressible conflict' produced the clash of arms, not all South Carolinians were secessionists any more than all Northerners were abolitionists." H. I. Brock

+ N Y Times p23 Je 29 '47 1000w

KIDNER, FRANK LE ROY. California business cycles. 131p $2.50 Univ. of Calif.

338.54 California—Economic conditions. Business cycles A46-1769

"Indices of freight car loadings, building permits and other phenomena from 1919 to 1939 show that 'the cyclical behavior of California is very similar to the cyclical behavior of the nation as a whole.' (p. 106) Similarities are more marked during contraction periods than during periods of expansion. Good technical research report." Am Soc R

+ Am Soc R 12:131 F '47 50w

"Thorough and competent study," Carl Landauer

+ Ann Am Acad 250:159 Mr '47 240w

U S Quarterly BkI 2:204 S '46 220w

KIERAN, JOHN. Footnotes on nature; wood engravings by Nora S. Unwin. 279p $3 Doubleday

574 Nature 47-30833

Random memories of nature walks which the author has taken with a group of friends, spiced with anecdotes of Mr Kieran's boyhood on a Dutchess county farm. Most of his trips were taken in the wilds of Westchester or New England, but some were in the immediate vicinity of New York city. The appendix contains lists of the birds, flowers, trees, and insects encountered on his walks and mentioned in the book.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks
Atlantic 180:118 S '47 550w
Booklist 44:7 S 1 '47

Reviewed by J. W. Lane
Cath World 166:373 Ja '48 210w

"Not only does this volume reveal Kieran as a writer of unusual ability, but it indicates that fundamentally he has the soul of a poet. Here we follow him in his various and meandering adventures as a nature-lover, especially as a devotee of birds and bird lore. . . And it is, all done simply, without literary flourishes." John Drury

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Jl 27 '47 350w

"Since the book is modestly entitled 'Footnotes on Nature,' no one can find fault that the writer skips from subject to subject, now being severely factual, now telling a good story, occasionally rising to flights of enthusiasm over such matters as a wood thrush's song or an elm tree's shape, breaking out frequently in a quotation from English poetry, and slashing his text with Latin phrases. It is all pure Kieranese. 'Footnotes on Nature' is lavishly embellished with wood engravings by Nora S. Unwin. These are particularly interesting and vital representations of birds and country vignettes which add greatly to the beauty of the book." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Jl 19 '47 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '47

"Abandoning the elaborate weaselings customary in reviews, let it be said clearly and immediately that John Kieran shows himself a real naturalist, in the best sense: a man with a deep, intelligent and lifelong devotion to the wonder of the natural world, and a man who knows how to write about his nature adventures with a winning enthusiasm." Alan Devoe

+ Commonweal 46:387 Ag 1 '47 700w

"There's charm here, and tranquility too, giving this a special quality for followers of natural history via John Kieran."

+ Kirkus 15:252 My 1 '47 120w

"A book for nature-lovers and admirers of Kieran—that includes everyone." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 72:1030 Jl '47 130w

"It is unpretentious, informal, and factual rather than philosophical, but it does manage in some way to communicate a good deal of the author's keen pleasure. Both Tennyson and Shakespeare do, besides, frequently raise their pretty heads." J. W. Krutch

+ Nation 165:234 S 6 '47 270w

"A pedestrian book, this, with a fellow walker who never loses the first fresh excitement, whose approach to nature, however well informed, has a quality of childlike simplicity and wonder." Richardson Wright

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 Jl 20 '47 500w

"'Footnotes on Nature' is a genuine act of love, and like all the best books of its kind, it gives the reader a very exciting impulse to go out and take for himself these pleasures which are so near, so costless and so inexhaustibly rich. And even if that impulse dies, there is always something elevating in the written record of a man like John Kieran—who finds himself so intelligently and happily at home in the amazing world God has fashioned for him." R. G. Davis

+ N Y Times p6 Jl 20 '47 850w

"The book as a whole is as pleasant a one as you could wish for."

+ New Yorker 23:64 Ag 2 '47 110w

"His book isn't an easy one to describe, excepting perhaps by saying that it is distilled essence of Kieran. Come to think of it, that's as good a recommendation as most like-minded people will ask." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Jl 16 '47 550w

"The reader coasts through the pages with a pleasant sense of enjoying the outdoors, its rigors and rewards, in good company. Occasionally, however, he finds himself becoming inwardly incandescent with the author's controlled emotion at some remembered scene or incident, and this is one very good test of high quality in literature." L. J. Halle

+ Sat R of Lit 30:9 Jl 12 '47 950w

Wis Lib Bul 43:138 O '47

KILPATRICK, GEORGE DUNBAR. Origins of the Gospel according to St Matthew. 151p $3.50 Oxford

226.2 Bible. New Testament—St Matthew 47-21349

"Mr. Kilpatrick's study is a record of close and detailed work on the Greek text of the Gospel, and it demands equally close application on the part of the reader. . . The first part of the book asks the question whether compilation of sources and editorial modifications are sufficient to account for all that St. Matthew's Gospel presents. The answer is that they are not; and Mr. Kilpatrick finds a new and important factor in the liturgical use of the Gospel and its sources. . . Having made his picture of the way in which the Gospel was put together, the author turns, in the second part of the book, to consider when and where the process is most likely to have taken place." Times [London] Lit Sup

"New Testament scholars will find in these learned and acute pages much to stimulate their own critical processes and doubtless some points of disagreement."

+ Christian Century 64:434 Ap 2 '47 150w

"It has nothing to say to those who are in a hurry: for those who will take trouble and read it with the text constantly at hand it will yield a rich store of fresh and fruitful observations, any one of which may be the starting point for further investigation. Some of the ground covered is already more than well trodden; but even here Mr. Kilpatrick notices new things."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p394 Ag 2 '47 600w

KILVERT, ROBERT FRANCIS. Kilvert's diary, 1870-1879; selections from [his] diary; chosen, ed. and introduced by William Plomer; special introd. by A. L. Rowse. 407p $3 Macmillan

B or 92 47-1660

Excerpts from the diary of an English curate, later vicar, of certain small Welsh towns in the 1860's and 1870's. Selections from the diary were first published in England in three volumes in 1938-1940. This one-volume edition is further compressed and edited by William Plomer. Maps on end papers. Index.

"The diary is a valuable document for the historian; it is even more valuable as the record of a fine spirit." F. E. L. P.

+ Canadian Forum 27:72 Je '47 180w

Cath World 165:381 Jl '47 150w

Reviewed by Henry Rago

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Ag 3 '47 400w

"Kilvert saw rural England with a clear eye, interpreted it with a simple but sensitive mind, and described it in a lucid and sometimes luminous style."

+ Christian Century 64:797 Je 25 '47 210w

Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 12 '47 160w

"Will Kilvert's diary become a classic? To me it seems unlikely. Francis is as frustrated as a lost croquet ball; his humor and his background are both limited but it is easy to understand how Daisy broke her heart over him. He is the ideal Victorian hero." E. V. R. Wyatt

Commonweal 46:123 My 16 '47 1000w

"Here is a minor English classic, of great charm and an authentic picture of mid-Victorian times and customs."

+ Kirkus 14:549 N 1 '46 160w

KILVERT, ROBERT F.—Continued

"It is unquestionably one of the most original, charming and literarily artistic journals in the English language. The author is a stylist of very rare quality. No discriminating reader will want to miss it, but it will not be popular." G. W. Wakefield

+ Library J 71:1713 D 1 '46 100w

"The excitement of these pages is a literary one of a very pure and rare kind. It is no use regretting that Kilvert left little else than these pages, for they are themselves writing of great distinction. The man who wrote these entries was an unmistakable poet, and this is, in a very high and unrheterical sense, prose poetry. These are notations of a spirit, delicately articulate and intensely responsive. Their writer records daily what was precious to his eyes and ears and feelings . . . But particularly to his eyes and ears. . . This loving and dearly lovable man had a sharp eye, and occasionally a sharp wit. But, for the most part, he is engaged in recording the more radiant surfaces of life as they impinged on his rare, radiant spirit. This diary is a caressing record of things lovely and pleasant, which become for a generation much later and far distant the remembrance of things past and, at this remove, serene and lucid images of themselves." Irwin Edman

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 F 23 '47 1500w

"His prose is full of contradictions. It can be genuine poetry, and open to more than one interpretation, as in this entry, part of a long description of a young girl waking. . . Or it can be as banal as a provincial parson's sermon. . . While the descriptions of nature dominate this volume, the most moving entries concern the lives of the country people. Kilvert had a tender and generous affection for them, but he was always clear-eyed. The creed of this least prudish of clergymen was that of 'the gentle path.' It was not touched, however, by the sentimentality of the period. . . Although the first entry was made when he was 30, the diary sounds curiously like that of a precocious boy. But whether or not he was capable of a more formal kind of writing, as a diarist he was unique, fascinating and superb." Herbert Lyons

+ — N Y Times p4 F 23 '47 1050w

"An imported literary curiosity, and something of a find. . . The book could have been slightly less inclusive; there isn't much substance, for instance, in an entry like 'Neuralgia very troublesome'."

+ — New Yorker 23:99 Mr 1 '47 110w

Reviewed by R. E. Roberts

Sat R of Lit 30:27 Mr 22 '47 650w

Reviewed by John Derby

Yale R n s 37:183 autumn '47 850

KIMBALL, MARIE (GOEBEL) (MRS SIDNEY FISKE KIMBALL). Jefferson: war and peace, 1776 to 1784. 398p il $6 Coward-McCann

B or 92 Jefferson, Thomas 47-4981

This second volume of the author's monumental study of Jefferson, his times and his services to his country, covers the war years and early post-war years, 1776-1784. During this period Jefferson filled three important posts, he was a member of the Virginia Assembly, a member of the Continental Congress, and governor of Virginia. For Mrs Kimball's Jefferson: The Road to Glory, see Book Review Digest 1943.

Booklist 44:14 S 1 '47

Reviewed by R. B. Nye

Chicago Sun Book Week p1 Ag 3 '47 900w

"Mrs. Kimball has written her book in a style that is charming and easy to read. Her scholarship is not often oppressive, and many outside of the profession will find it interesting. The documentation is extensive; there is no bibliography, and the index is unsatisfactory. This may well be the most satisfactory of the comprehensive treatments of Jefferson's career that are now available. Its excellence, however, is mechanical rather than spiritual, and the definitive treatment of this great American has not yet been written." R. A. Brown

+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 29 '47 650w

Current Hist 13:164 S '47 100w

"A book for students of the man. Informed but uninspired reading."

Kirkus 15:251 My 1 '47 160w

"Carefully documented, this study, made possible by a Guggenheim Fellowship, presents material of interest to the student of American history. Recommended for university and large public libraries." J. H. Berthel

+ Library J 72:1030 JI '47 120w

"'Jefferson: War and Peace' is written in a pleasant, if somewhat pedestrian, style which makes it relatively easy reading, but there is nothing in it half as revealing as another book on Jefferson half as long—Helen Duprey Bullock's 'My Head and My Heart.' Mrs. Kimball furnishes scholars with additional reasons for holding to their present opinion of Jefferson. This is a service not to be dismissed sniffishly; but there is nothing sensational about it, hence the work is unlikely to excite laymen." G. W. Johnson

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Ag 10 '47 950w

"Mrs. Kimball has failed to thicken the text with social background and milieu, with descriptive color, and with (what is so vital in any study of Jefferson) attention to the intellectual significance of his views. Jefferson's ideas, when presented at all, are analyzed in a superficial and tiringly conventional way. . . Yet the author's scholarship is in many ways admirable. New sources are tapped, and careful notes given at the end of the volume. It would have been better to give the dates of letters and manuscripts cited in these notes." Adrienne Koch

+ — N Y Times p7 Ag 17 '47 1450w

Reviewed by Carolyn Stull

San Francisco Chronicle p10 Ag 10 '47 650w

"Comparatively little has been written about the eight years of Thomas Jefferson's career between his authorship of the Declaration of Independence and his departure for Paris as minister plenipotentiary. Around them have sprung misconceptions, misunderstandings, and falsifications. 'Jefferson: War and Peace,' the second volume of Marie Kimball's ambitious study of the life and times of Thomas Jefferson, is therefore doubly welcome at this time. It is the first complete and generally satisfying account of this little known and often distorted epoch." William Peden

+ Sat R of Lit 30:12 JI 26 '47 800w

Social Studies 33:380 D '47 30w

KINCAID, ROBERT LEE. Wilderness road. (American trails ser) 392p il maps $3.75 Bobbs

976.9 Wilderness road. Frontier and pioneer life—Northwest, Old 47-2857

The first volume in a proposed series of books to commemorate our national trails. This is a study of the Wilderness road, extending thru nearly three centuries. It begins in 1644 with the death of the brother of King Powhatan, and brings the record to the 1940's. The author is executive vice-president of Lincoln Memorial university. Bibliographical note. Index.

Reviewed by T. P. Abernethy

+ Am Hist R 53:194 O '47 400w

Booklist 43:288 My 15 '47

"With admirable fidelity but with scant respect for the reader's patience, the author enumerates every Indian skirmish, every hazardous river crossing, almost every campfire and bivouac. Such interminable geographic details grow more tedious because of the inadequacy of the endpaper maps, the only maps in the book. But when Kincaid gets away from exploration and settlement to tell the military history of eastern Tennessee and the economic exploitation of the Cumberland Gap region, he gives an interesting, many-faceted picture of the old road's periphery and he proves himself a competent social historian. Even his style improves in these latter pages." J. T. Flanagan

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Ap 27 '47
500w

"[Mr Kincaid's] book has both the ring of authenticity and the polished style of a good newspaperman." R. A. Brown

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Jl 12 '47
1050w

"A thorough history of the famous pathway to the West."

+ Kirkus 15:91 F 1 '47 160w

"The American Trails Series has opened auspiciously. Robert Kincaid has written of the Wilderness Road with affection and understanding. His book makes good reading. It is the result of broad and useful research. It sets a high standard for the companion volumes which are to follow." Avery Craven

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3
Ap 27 '47 1050w

Reviewed by W. B. Hamilton

N Y Times p5 My 25 '47 650w

"Mr. Kincaid spins a fascinating, albeit scholarly, yarn, with distracting footnotes, of the early and more recent history of this trail. The maps leave much to be desired for the ordinary reader who is not fully acquainted with the region. But for the reader who is avid for details of little-known facets of early American history, the book constitutes a well-written account of colonial life and the urge to expand." Beach Conger

+ Sat R of Lit 30:29 O 18 '47 330w

Springf'd Union p5 Jl 21 '47 210w

"It is regional history in an attractive form and will give Americans a new appreciation of those days when the road was but a trail leading into the unknown and untamed West and of the area's development by the sons of hardy pioneers."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:279 S '47 360w

Wis Lib Bul 43:80 My '47

KINERT, REED CHARLES. Little helicopter; pictures by [the author]. [40p] $1 Macmillan 47-30672

The little helicopter could fly up, or down, or back up, or even stop in the air. This story for the youngest readers describes the little helicopter's part in a rescue at sea.

Chicago Sun Book Week p4a N 19 '47
50w

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

Christian Science Monitor p12 N 11 '47
90w

+ Kirkus 15:576 O 15 '47 50w

"Amusing and harmless, but author might be surprised to know how unnecessary it is to dress up information for even the youngest children." M. B. Snow

Library J 72:1278 S 15 '47 70w

New Yorker 23:139 D 6 '47 30w

Reviewed by Mabel Edwards

San Francisco Chronicle p7 N 16 '47
40w

"Excellent reproductions of drawings. . . A book that every small boy will particularly like."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:40 N 15 '47 30w

Springf'd Republican p8B D 21 '47
70w

KINERT, REED CHARLES. Our fighting planes; the story of U.S. military aircraft of World War II; il. by [the author]. 160p $3.75 Macmillan

623.746 Airplanes, Military 46-8201

"Author, who has been a flying instructor and pilot, describes the many new developments in aviation. Compact summary gives a full page of text about each plane including technical details, pertinent remarks about performance and peacetime conversion of war models. Full-page illustrations by author of each plane, many in color." (Library J) Index.

"Fine drawings opposite each page of description portray, exactly and dramatically, the many types of aircraft flown by United States fighters in World War II. . . Air-minded persons of any age will enjoy this book which, though full of enthusiasm, does not glorify war."

+ Horn Bk 23:118 Mr '47 90w

"Lists of obsolescent aircraft, army and navy designations and an index make this a useful book for air-minded youngsters and for reference work. Recommended for school and public libraries." M. M. Smith

+ Library J 72:230 F 1 '47 80w

"One can have nothing but admiration for this stunning book. . . It will gladden the heart of all aviation enthusiasts, even the very young ones. . . It is, too, a record of achievement of which every American can be proud." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 30:29 Ja 18 '47 140w

KING, MRS CAROLINE BLANCHE (CAM-PION). This was ever in my dream. 297p il $3 Caxton printers

635.9 Gardening Agr47-157

An account of the author's attempts to make a garden out of an unlikely bit of Pennsylvania hillside. Some of the material has appeared in Country Gentleman and Flower Grower. Illustrated with photographs of Mrs King's home and garden.

Booklist 44:130 D 1 '47

Kirkus 15:528 S 15 '47 90w

School & Society 66:400 N 22 '47 20w

KING, RUFUS. Lethal lady. 192p $2 Doubleday 47-11842

Detective story.

Kirkus 15:517 S 15 '47 60w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24
N 30 '47 140w

Reviewed by Jack Glick

N Y Times p20 Ja 4 '48 160w

"A rather absurd idea, skillfully handled."

— + New Yorker 23:144 N 29 '47 70w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p20 D 14 '47
100w

"Not King-size."

— Sat R of Lit 30:44 N 22 '47 50w

KING, WILLIAM B., and O'BRIEN, FRANK. The Balkans, frontier of two worlds. 282p map $3.50 Knopf

949.6 Balkan states 47-4201

A report on post-war political and international problems in the Balkan states—Yugoslavia, Rumania, Bulgaria, Albania, Turkey and Greece—written by two American journalists who have visited the countries both during and since the war.

Booklist 44:12 S 1 '47

Reviewed by L. S. Stavrianos

Chicago Sun Book Week p11 Jl 20 '47
270w

"The authors' point of view is objective and discriminating. Russia's historical and current roles are properly appraised. Enthusiasms and bitternesses are largely absent. One finds keen observation without cynicism. Some warmth is shown toward leading personalities. The bizarre of the Balkans is described without turning it into burlesque. . . Unfortunately, the book is fragmentary—not superficial, but in every way incomplete. The reader hardly feels the reality of the Balkan peoples or the terrific drama of Balkan events." R. H. M.

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Jl 12
'47 600w

Reviewed by W. H. Hindle

Commonweal 46:434 Ag 15 '47 1500w

KING, WILLIAM B.—Continued

"A frightening, enlightening book—confessedly biased against Russia."

Kirkus 15:298 Je 1 '47 170w

"Recommended as particularly timely." W. A. Kalenich

+ Library J 72:1030 Jl '47 100w

"The nature of their work for a wire service required the authors to live almost exclusively in the various Balkan capitals within a few minutes' reach of the telegraph. In consequence provincial life largely escapes their attention. . . Such criticism is perhaps unfair, for the authors hardly pretend to present a complete and balanced picture of Balkan society and government. The book does provide a summary of recent events, neither more nor less reliable than the reports which appear daily in our newspapers. As such it serves as a useful recapitulation and can well be used to refresh memories jaded by the complexities of Balkan events." W. H. McNeill

+ — Nation 165:104 Jl 26 '47 850w

Reviewed by Richard Watts

New Repub 117:26 Jl 21 '47 600w

Reviewed by Stoyan Pribichevich

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Ag 3 '47 1150

Discussion by W. B. King

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 Ag 31 '47 230w

"Two correspondents of The Associated Press have here collaborated to produce a hasty and somewhat disparate survey of conditions in Yugoslavia, Albania, Rumania, Bulgaria, Greece and Turkey. The chapters on Turkey and Rumania — which I assume were written by Frank O'Brien — are full of illuminating bits of history. . . William B. King, whose knowledge of the Balkans dates from the end of the war, has, on the other hand, a tendency to strain at royalist gnats while swallowing communist camels. . . Both authors make frequent mistakes in spelling, and the style of each is overburdened with clumsy metaphors and painful clichés." Leigh White

+ — N Y Times p7 Ag 3 '47 600w

Discussion by W. B. King

N Y Times p13 Ag 31 '47 550w

Discussion by Leigh White

N Y Times p13 Ag 31 '47 380w

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 10 '47 230w

"The contents of the book add very little to what a regular reader of the newspapers will have learned over the past two years. Only a feeble attempt has been made to present background material on the Balkans. . . The writing is slipshod, tasteless, and often illiterate. The comparison of recent Greek history to 'a corny movie serial' is callous and offensive. . . King and O'Brien's book hardly lives up to the billing on the dust jacket, which calls it 'an essential book for the student of current affairs.' This is all the more unfortunate, since there is an obvious need for a book which renders genuinely intelligible to the American reader the swift and tragic march of the most recent events in the Balkans, where the question of mankind's survival may yet be decided." R. L. Wolff

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:15 Jl 19 '47 800w

KING-HALL, MAGDALEN. Lovely Lynchs [Eng title: How small a part of time]. 272p $2.75 Rinehart

47-1208

Pictures the splendor and the poverty of life in Ireland, England, and France in the eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries. Two exceptionally beautiful Irish sisters, Jenny and Dorothea Lynch, are the heroines. They were introduced to Dublin society in 1768, and their fame spread rapidly. Both married titled Englishmen, but the ebullient Jenny, after a gay interval in society and out, died young. The more stable Dorothea lived out her long life graciously, and died in 1838.

Booklist 43:330 Je 15 '47

Kirkus 15:176 Mr 15 '47 170w

"Mildly recommended." M. H. Zipprich

Library J 72:888 Je 1 '47 50w

"Magdalen King-Hall knows her century so well, all the minutiae of furbelows, and furnishings of boudoirs and dining halls and kitchens, so much about what was inside the books on the library shelves of eighteenth-century houses, and catches so well the rhythm of letters written with quills, that her relation reads as smooth as silk and pleases like an old brocade. It all sounds like romances and old books of memoirs one must have read before. Yet the pages are so fresh, so quick with simple feeling and old wisdom about troubles forever new in domestic circumstance, the scenes in town and country, in France and England, are so vivid, the pattern of politics and wars so well sketched, and the scandals so in the grand manner and the full flavor of a historic period, one is obliged to sigh on debarking, back again in Manhattan, in 1947." Ernestine Evans

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Je 8 '47 1950w

"What carries on the story is the author's flair for period decoration. She has an awareness of fashion, and a preoccupation with it, that are often submerged in the efforts of other historical pastiche-makers—even the ladies among them. Miss King-Hall concerns herself exclusively . . . with women of style and wicked ladies; her gentlemen and masculines, as the case may be, are silhouetted in the candlelight. But her talents have a pleasant habit of matching her attainments." B. V. W.

+ N Y Times p12 Je 1 '47 500w

"Miss King-Hall, in her skilful telling of the story, shows all her craft in the painting of the background in London and in Paris. . . Not the least of her triumphs in this book is the way in which, without any insistence or emphasis, she shows how in these years were sown the seeds of our present discontent and discomfort." R. E. Roberts

+ Sat R of Lit 30:15 Jl 5 '47 900w

"Colourful, credible and often exciting. It contains nothing new, but most readers will find their interest competently sustained."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p197 Ap 27 '46 240w

KINNEY, THOMAS, pseud. See Thomas, C.

KINNOULL, CLAUDE. Come home, traveller. 346p $2.75 Doubleday

47-1303

Tragic story of a woman who did not want to be a mother, and when her child was born, a deformed idiot, thought to turn it over to the sisters in a Paris convent. But remorse overcame her, and she left her home and husband to devote her life to the pitiful creature. The scene is French Equatorial Africa and Paris.

"The author is quite successful in sketching in her background and in conveying the aimlessness and despair so rampant during the period. However, her too frequent use of melodramatic devices and coincidence and her effort to compress the entire range of human misery into one brief narrative vitiates her valiant attempt at high tragedy."

+ — Cath World 165:380 Jl '47 250w

"Sets a new high in torment and exaltation, and throws a medical book at you which includes African abortion, a Mongolian idiot, sleeping sickness and tuberculosis, and extracts therefrom some fairly martyred melodrama."

— Kirkus 14:580 N 15 '46 170w

"Characterization is adequate and plot never lags. Standard fiction." E. P. Nichols

Library J 72:161 Ja 15 '47 80w

"[The plot] sounds crude, but this novel mixes it with sound character-sketches of cosmopolitans in Provence, literary allusiveness not at all crude." Harold Brighouse

Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 18 '46 120w

Reviewed by Harold Tager

— N Y Times p24 Ja 26 '47 240w

"In spite of overwritten passages—and some outright bad writing—the novel, a first, suggests that its author will do much better; probably development of the talent for selection will be the answer."

San Francisco Chronicle p15 F 9 '47
100w

"An unusual and disturbing novel, which, if a first book, is impressive, though it has been more so had the author been less concerned to wring our withers with horror. The characters are French, upper class and Royalist, and the novel reads at times like a translation from the French or the work of a writer whose first language is French. It has considerable power. . . . The descriptions of country life in Provence and French Africa are especially good." Walter Allen

+ Spec 176:464 My 3 '46 110w

KIRCHER, RALF CHARLES. There's a fly in this room; with il. by Gluyas Williams. 146p $2 Rinehart

817 46-8423

Brief, humorous chapters on the inconveniences of being the head of the house. Among the agonies pilloried are housecleaning, mowing the lawn, putting on the house screens, etc.

Kirkus 14:479 S 15 '46 110w

"The material is not very original, and the laughs are scattered. Married people and bachelors will react quite differently, for reasons which even a fly could perceive."

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20 N
24 '46 100w

"It's a very funny book, made even funnier by the delightfully ridiculous drawings of Gluyas Williams." E. J.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 F 2 '47
70w

KIRK, GRAYSON LOUIS. Study of international relations in American colleges and universities. 113p $2 Council on foreign relations

341.07 International relations—Study and teaching 47-5856

"A survey of the problems facing educators in a new and imperfectly organized field of knowledge, with constructive suggestions for dealing with them." (Publisher's note) No index.

Foreign Affairs 26:224 O '47 30w

School & Society 66:334 O 25 '47 30w

KIRKBRIDE, RONALD DE LEVINGTON. Private life of Guy de Maupassant. 256p il $3 Fell

B or 92 Maupassant, Guy de 47-3314

"Mr. Kirkbride has shuffled through de Maupassant's fiction and correspondence, selecting what he regarded as biographical data, and then constructed a narrative, purportedly told by a mistress, of the last few years of de Maupassant's life. The emphasis is on the erotic and the sensational." (New Yorker) Includes two of de Maupassant's short stories: Boule de Suif; and La Horla.

"It is, on the whole, an ingratiating work, though the Maupassant it evokes is at best a conventionalized legend." Jex Martin

Chicago Sun Book Week p8 Mr 9 '47
400w

"This is as inexcusable a performance as has been perpetrated for some time. Neither the publisher's introduction, nor two of de Maupassant's stories included, offers justification."

— Kirkus 15:85 F 1 '47 160w

"There is much of interest in the book, but whether it even approaches accuracy is anyone's guess."

New Yorker 23:103 Mr 8 '47 100w

KISCH, SIR CECIL HERMANN, tr. Wagon of life, and other lyrics by Russian poets of the nineteenth century; tr. into English verse; with a foreword by C. M. Bowra. 60p $4 Oxford

891.7108 Russian poetry—Collections 47-11226

An anthology of sixty nineteenth century Russian lyrics, translated into English, with the Russian originals on opposite pages. Index.

"A fine and valuable book—a book that presents the Golden Age of Russian poetry." Alfred Kay

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 O 26 '47
240w

"The translations, representing a long time hobby, are careful renderings of the thought but more unusually the meter and rhyme scheme of the originals. Except where a novelist happens also to be represented by a poem, many of the names are unfamiliar, but the poems are attractive. The translations are a little stiff with contradictions and inverted lines, naturally, but a reader with knowledge of Russian can follow the original on the opposite page." H. L. Varley

+ Springfield Republican p8B D 21 '47
120w

KISER, MARTHA GWINN. Rosanna; il. by Anne-Marie Drutzu. 193p $2.50 Longmans 47-30690

A novel for young people, using New England in 1838 as a background. Rosanna, the heroine, is a lively young person, living in Concord. Rosanna wants to go to work, but women seldom did in those days. She finally falls in love and marries, choosing a home instead of a career. Ralph Waldo Emerson is a friend of Rosanna's young husband.

Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun Book Week N 1 '47 100w
Kirkus 15:340 Jl 1 '48 80w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 N
2 '47 470w

Reviewed by G. M. Cordts
San Francisco Chronicle p9 N 16 '47
100w

"A good story, touched with humor, that gives an excellent picture of New England life."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:52 N 15 '47 50w
School & Society 66:112 Ag 9 '47 20w

KISSAM, PHILIP. Surveying; instruments and methods for surveys of limited extent. 384p il $3.50 McGraw

526.9 Surveying 47-4975

"Provides a text for a short course in surveying for freshman college students of all branches of engineering. Book is unusual in its stress on surveying instruments and places as much emphasis on surveying in manufacturing as on field surveying with illustrations and explanations of shop practice. Covers fundamental principles, construction, theory and use of the transit level and basic surveying methods." (Library J) Index.

"Here is a book packed full of the sort of practical information about surveying instruments and their use that every young engineer needs when he begins to put his theoretical training to use in the field."

+ Eng N 139:110 O 2 '47 160w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:1275 S 15 '47 70w
N Y New Tech Bks 32:58 Jl '47

KISSIN, RITA. Desert animals; il. by Helene Carter. [26p] $2.50 McKay 47-30580

Rhymed text and colored pictures describe the flora and fauna of the desert, with the stress on fauna, for the very young.

KISSIN, RITA—Continued

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

Christian Science Monitor p5 Ja 13 '48
100w

Kirkus 15:393 Ag 1 '47 80w

"Boys and girls who have been fortunate enough to have leisurely trips over the desert recently will find satisfaction in the beautiful pictures of desert life by Helene Carter. In spite of the rather annoying rhyme of Rita Kissin's text, she does manage to convey a good bit of useful information about the animals and reptiles of the desert. Very expensive considering poor sewing and limited use. For large collections only." F. W. Butler

+ Library J 72:1273 S 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22 N
16 '47 140wKISSLING, MRS DOROTHY HIGHT (RICH-ARDSON) (DOROTHY LANGLEY, pseud).
Mr Bremble's buttons. 186p $2.75 Simon & Schuster

47-1627

Portrait of a sensitive, vulnerable little man, Henry Bremble, much over-shadowed by his stout wife and mother-in-law, both of whom lived on good deeds and self-esteem. When too much harried Henry took refuge in mental puzzles, or his collection of buttons, or at times in intimate conversation with God. Eventually Henry makes his escape from a world grown too bewildering.

"The solution seems not altogether satisfactory, and this is regrettable in a book that is as beautifully written and has such strong characterizations as this one. Also, since there are a few flaws and they all appear after the middle of the book, its latter half does not quite live up to the high promise of its beginning." Clare Jaynes

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ap 13 '47
430w

"Fantasy and commentary that has bright and funny, sad and cynical, but never sentimental moments, and offers an antidote for too serious fare."

+ Kirkus 15:80 F 1 '47 170w

"Here is a story of warm sympathy that is never profound. It lightly touches the social problems of today and slyly discusses the pros and cons of Americanism and the elements of social distinctions and annoyances in Henry Bremble's sphere of acquaintance. Miss Langley is a quiet writer who creates her effects with a light touch." Toby Rowland

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10
Ap 13 '47 700w

"It is clear on every page that Mrs. Langley earnestly desires to communicate an important message through these incidents; precisely what that message may be, is not so clear. There is the question, too, of just how glibly and prosaically great and tragic human problems may be presented and still retain their meaning." Thelma Purtell

N Y Times p24 Ap 27 '47 370w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 My 25 '47
90w

"Mrs. Langley has imagination, and her thesis is entirely valid. Mr. Bremble is believable, as is his small town, Amelia, as the prodding, nagging wife, is something of a stock character, pedestrian in her procedure. But the novel has good moments and a decided message to which we should give our willing attention." C. M. Brown

Sat R of Lit 30:23 Ag 9 '47 340w

KITCHING, EDWIN HOWARD. Sex problems of the returned veteran; foreword by Ernest R. Groves [Eng title: Sex problems of the returning soldier]. 124p $1.50 Emerson

392.5 Marriage. Sexual hygiene 46-6812

"In this book, written for the returned veteran and his wife, problems of separation and attendant strain on marriage ties are recognized. Although less spectacular than physical injury, such separation often results in great injury to the personal and family lives of those involved. . . The author discusses the goal of marriage, dangers of separation to the marriage, effects of separation on the husband and the wife, and problems of reunion and readjustment to everyday life." J Home Econ

"Honest, straightforward, understanding."

B. K. Finn

+ J Home Econ 39:362 Je '47 100w

Kirkus 14:288 Je 15 '46 120w

"Quiet, sensible work. . . Its information, which goes into details, and its advice is intended for an average healthy young man in his twenties, who on the approach of war viewed not without dismay the prospect of leaving a decent job and a married life of a year or two, and for his wife who was left to make her own adjustment to independence."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p26
S 29 '46 140wKJELGAARD, JAMES ARTHUR. Buckskin brigade; il. by Ralph Ray, Jr. 310p $2.50 Holiday

47-31120

A series of stories presenting in fictional form incidents from the history of the exploration and settlement of the North American continent, from the early sixteenth century to the middle of the nineteenth century.

Booklist 44:94 N 1 '47

Reviewed by M. B. King

Chicago Sun Book Week N 1 '47 130w

"The book is both inspiring and thrilling and will repay any reader." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn BK 23:445 N '47 120w

Kirkus 15:504 S 15 '47 80w

"These are vivid and exciting tales, characters alive and real, and the book as a whole is a ringing tribute to the little people who made America great. Will be useful as background material, though its chief value will be as an exciting adventure story. Recommended for general purchase for children's rooms and young people's collections." M. D. Read

+ Library J 72:1476 O 15 '47 90w

"An absorbing contribution to our understanding of America." H. B. Lent

+ N Y Times p5 N 16 '47 130w

Wis Lib Bul 43:157 N '47

KJELLBERG, ELIZABETH. Secret the song.
266p $2.75 Ziff-Davis

47-173

"In this romance of a twice-transported American girl, the keystone of drama is the impact of two European cultures on an impressionable and not quite stabilized character. The opposing forces could hardly be more completely at variance—one rooted in the democratic traditions and family loyalty of a Swedish home, the other moldering in the impoverished aristocracy of proud Hungarians, long practiced in tyranny over the peasantry and soon to know the tyranny of a Hitler." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

"'Secret the Song' has glitter and irony, and the writing is fluent." Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22
F 2 '47 270w

"With a simpler plot and a little more restraint, Miss Kjellberg's next novel might easily be a much better one." Andrea Parke

N Y Times p12 F 2 '47 230w

Springf'd Republican p10B O 5 '47 120w

KLAF, A. ALBERT. Trigonometry refresher for technical men. 629p $5 McGraw

514 Trigonometry

46-7820

"Companion volume to author's Calculus Refresher for Technical Men. He uses the same question and answer method to present plane and spherical trigonometry and its applications. Useful as a refresher as well as a tool in presentation of solved practical technical problems in mechanics, surveying, electricity, aerial and sea navigation, light and hydraulics. Extensive chapter on the theory, construction and use of the straight slide." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 43:129 Ja 1 '47

Library J 71:346 Mr 1 '46 90w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:63 O '47

KLEIN, LAWRENCE ROBERT. The Keynesian revolution. 218p $3.50 Macmillan

330.1 Keynes of Tilton, John Maynard
Keynes, 1st baron. Economics 47-4534

"Admittedly not 'Keynes for the layman,' the book offers an exposition of the General Theory, its background, points of departure from classical theory, its applicability to other than 'depression economics,' and implications of social reform. A mathematical appendix is substituted for extensive use of equations in the text." (Library J) Index.

Current Hist 13:357 D '47 40w

"An exhaustive, able defence of Keynesian liberalism, not for the uninitiated."

+ Kirkus 15:212 Ap 1 '47 120w

"Doubtless, the book is intended for advanced college use, as its treatment of the subject, except in the appendix, seems hardly adequate for the sophisticated economist, who must be familiar with many of the phases explained at length. Useful in presenting simply and clearly a 'revolutionary' change in theory. Recommended." Walter Hausdorfer

+ Library J 72:1104 Ag '47 120w

Reviewed by B. B. Seligman

New Repub 117:32 O 20 '47 140w

"The work is marked throughout by the high order of scholarship which should be associated with graduate research. Pleasantly surprising, however, is the combination of a graceful and unclouded use of language with such scholarship." L. R. Salkever

+ Pol Sci Q 62:639 D '47 550w

KLING, ESTHER B. (MRS SAMUEL G. KLING), and KLING, SAMUEL G., comps.
For better, for worse. 489p $3.50 Holt

Short stories—Collections 47-3530

A collection of stories of marriage and married life gathered from many literatures and many ages. Partial contents: Here we are, by Dorothy Parker; Mrs. Bullfrog, by Nathaniel Hawthorne; Just him and her, by Ruth Suckow; The conservatory, by Guy de Maupassant; A happy ending, by Anton Chekhov; Golden wedding, by Ruth Suckow; Patient Griselda, by Giovanni Boccaccio; Predetermined marriage, by Li Fu-Yen; The marriage of Cupid and Psyche, by Lucius Apuleius; The log, by Guy de Maupassant; The wife, by Washington Irving; The matron of Ephesus, by Gaius Petronius.

Reviewed by Virginia Dale

N Y Times p34 N 30 '47 180w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 Jl 13 '47 100w

KLING, SAMUEL G., and KLING, ESTHER B., eds. Marriage reader; a guide to sex satisfaction and happiness in marriage; an anthology. 489p $3 Vanguard

392.5 Marriage. Sex 47-3464

An attempt to analyze marriage and to cure some of its difficulties. It is made up of a series of articles by well-known doctors, psychologists, and other writers on sex problems; the chapters arranged under the following headings: Why marry; When to marry; Romantic marriage; Mixed marriages; Preparation for marriage; The honeymoon; Sex in marriage; Marriage and children; Famous quotations on marriage; Psychology of marriage; Jealousy; In-laws; Economics of marriage; Marriage quiz.

Kirkus 15:55 Ja 15 '47 120w

"This book is for the most part highly readable and yet distinctly serious in purpose. The need for it is great in our time, when, as the editors state, one marriage in four ends in divorce and almost half are otherwise dismal failures." H. M. Farshley

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13
Ag 24 '47 320w

Reviewed by Jacob Panken

N Y Times p24 My 4 '47 330w

KLUCKHOHN, CLYDE, and LEIGHTON, DOROTHEA (CROSS). The Navaho. 258p il $4.50 Harvard univ. press

970.3 Navaho Indians 47-735

"Published as one of a series of studies undertaken by the University of Chicago in connection with the U. S. Office of Indian Affairs. Emphasis is on present Navaho life, with reference to ways of earning a livelihood, relationships with the outside world, supernatural beliefs and practice. For the reader with a special interest in the subject or the student seeking information." Wis Lib Bul

"The appearance of The Navaho fulfills a long-standing need. Although the avowed purpose of the book is to supply background information for administrators and teachers who will work among 'The People' (as the Navahos call themselves), and the authors say that 'The ethnographer will find many gaps', these gaps are inconsequential in the face of this simple, straightforward, and well-rounded account of the history, life and livelihood, extra and intra-tribal relationships, religion, and language of the Navahos." L. C. Wyman

Am Anthropol 49:631 O '47 1250w

Reviewed by Fred Eggan

Am J Soc 53:229 N '47 800w

Reviewed by E. H. Spicer

Ann Am Acad 253:251 S '47 550w

Reviewed by M. D. Luhan

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ag 3 '47 900w

"Probably the best comprehensive account of our largest—and, incidentally, most publicized—Indian tribe, this book brings the Navaho right up to date." C. L. McNichols

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2
My 4 '47 700w

"This book teaches the salutary lesson that majority culture patterns are not self-justifying in terms of sheer weight and mass determinism, and that personal and group satisfactions, individual self-assurance and group stability are the highest tests of social structure. If we have achieved a greater mastery over the forces of nature than the Navahos, perhaps they have received more by experiencing the beauty and emotional values in nature than we. Each culture can contribute something of good to the other. The work of Kluckhohn and Leighton could serve as a model for the presentation of the problems of other minority groups in the United States." T. M. Pearce

+ N Y Times p31 My 4 '47 800w

School & Society 65:16 Ja 4 '47 20w

"There is abundant evidence of exhaustive research, but this does not get in the way of effective presentation of the material. The publisher has given the book an attractive format, there are many illustrations, and there is a good index. The book is to be strongly recommended." C. C. Qualey

+ Social Educ 11:140 Mr '47 400w

Reviewed by Mischa Titiev

Social Forces 25:459 My '47 850w

"As the authors assert, this book is primarily an adventure in human understanding of the problems facing minority peoples, especially those whose manner of life is very different from the European-American tradition. As such it is an approach to the subject, and does not attempt to present a specific program of action."

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:82 Mr '47 290w

Wis Lib Bul 45:53 Mr '47

KNAGGS, NELSON S. Adventures in man's first plastic; the romance of natural waxes; il. by Frederic H. Kock. 329p $6.75 Reinhold 665 Waxes 47-4675

"Not a technical book but a fascinating study of man's search for natural waxes—vegetable, insect and mineral waxes with the history and application of each through the centuries. Gives the story of the 'Lost Wax Process,' little changed in principle in over 3000 years and this principle of casting metals was used in World War II in production of parts for P-80 Shooting Stars and jet propelled planes. Bibliography." Library J

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 J1 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1113 Ag '47 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:40 Ap '47

"Nelson S. Knaggs is a chemist who has been called out of his laboratory many times to study and search for waxes in some of the world's most remote places. Learning a vast deal about the subject, he has become enamored of waxes as some persons become enamored of guppies. . . . He has written 'Adventures in Man's First Plastic' with the enthusiasm and abandon of a cub reporter writing his first story on a five-alarm fire." R. D. Dinsmore

N Y Times p21 Ag 10 '47 280w

San Francisco Chronicle p28 D 7 '47 150w

"Possibly the title will not tempt many readers and this is too bad, for the book is unusually entertaining. It might well serve as a model of successful accomplishment in popularizing a technical subject. Those who like stories of travel and adventure and who don't mind picking up by the way accurate information on archeology, biology, history, and techniques of art and industry will find this unique book a delightful surprise." Donald Armstrong

+ Sat R of Lit 30:27 S 20 '47 380w

"A unique blend of technical information and of interesting sidelights, this is a book for the general reader who enjoys a good narrative."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:318 S '47 200w

KNAPP, SALLY ELIZABETH. Women doctors today; il. by Robert Hallock. 184p $2.50 Crowell

926.1 Women as physicians Med47-2494
Biographical sketches of twelve women who have made successful careers in medicine. Contents: Katherine Li, cancer surgeon; Vesta Rogers, general practitioner; Edith Summerhill, medical legislator; Lena Edwards, obstetrician; Ida Scudder, medical missionary; Lauretta Bender, psychiatrist; Emily Van Loon, otorhinolaryngologist; Katharine Elsom, nutritionist; Sophie Rabinoff, public-health administrator; Hanna Hirschfeld, pediatrician; Barbara Stimson, orthopedic surgeon; Rita Finkler, endocrinologist.

Booklist 44:173 Ja 1 '48

Commonweal 47:156 N 21 '47 40w

"An excellent, personal survey of the possibilities of careers for women in the medical field. Fresh, sprightly biographies of women who have made their marks in their work, tell of all types of people and medicine."

+ Kirkus 15:435 Ag 15 '47 100w

"Style is lively; subject matter is timely. Recommended for intermediate ages." M. A. Herr

+ Library J 72:1544 N 1 '47 70w

"Miss Knapp tells their stories briskly, and along with her portraits of individuals paints in an interesting background of the widely different fields of medicine in which her subjects are at work." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p48 D 7 '47 200w

KNAPPEN, MARSHALL MASON. And call it peace. 213p $3 Univ. of Chicago press
940.5343 Germany—History—Allied occupation, 1945- 47-11542

Reviews the policy which the United States is following in the course of the reeducation of the German people. The author was chief of the Religious affairs section and deputy chief of the education section of our office of military government for Germany. He is a strong opponent of the Morgenthau plan and believes in the necessity of the Marshall plan. Index.

Booklist 44:104 N 15 '47

"This is clever, good writing and smart reporting of postwar Germany, our military government and our army." Irving Pfbaum
+ Chicago Sun Book Week p8 N 15 '47 450w

"The factual excellence of this book I praise. Its political impetuosity I deprecate. Its philosophical tone I deplore. In a single word, the book is querulous. Querulousness is cosmically unmeet, politically inopportune, and spiritually hazardous; for, since war is—as the pious Lincoln saw and said—God's infliction upon men, to participate in its aftermath and to approach its peace in spirit is perilously close, one must fear, to being impious. God save us all from impiety." T. V. Smith

— + Christian Century 64:1484 D 3 '47 1900w

"It must be conceded that there has been a great deal of brass and considerable bungling in occupation policy in Germany. But it is doubtful whether Marshall Knappen's contribution to the now-it-can-be-tolds will serve as a major corrective. . . . He is a liberal, an historian, and a patient man. But his liberalism, his respect for the lessons of the past, and his patience were all outraged by the shortsighted policies that encumbered his work." Charles Gratke

Christian Science Monitor p16 N 22 '47 360w

"It is my opinion that Dr. Knappen weakens his argument by overstating his case against the Army. He is not content with the usual civilian dissatisfaction with the military, much of it justified. He attempts a general indictment of our whole military system, which has the weakness of all sweeping generalizations. On his reckoning, we could hardly have won the war. With this exception, the reader should profit by his observations; perhaps, as the author hopes, we may still salvage something from the wreckage." J. N. Moody

+ — Commonweal 47:282 D 26 '47 600w

Current Hist 14:38 Ja '48 50w

Reviewed by Russell Hill

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 D 28 '47 700w

"This book is useful as an honest piece of American self-criticism. Unfortunately, it is crowded with technicalities which sometimes obscure its underlying views. It also fails to take into account certain recent developments which point in the direction of the author's aims. . . . For a historian, Mr. Knappen seems rather oblivious of Germany's past. We can only hope that a future Germany will not give the lie to his rosy basic assumptions." Siegfried Kracauer

+ — N Y Times p6 Ja 4 '48 1150w

"Much of this rather disappointing book is the familiar, bitter story of military snafu—the craven stupidity of The Brass, the evils of the Regular Army . . . etc. Through it all runs a note of disgruntled frustration and a defense of education officers against the sneers of old-line troopers that education is not a 'he-man business.'" W. E. Jackson

— Sat R of Lit 30:12 N 29 '47 550w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman

School & Society 66:515 D 27 '47 180w

KNEDLER, JOHN WARREN, ed. Masterworks of science; digests of 13 great classics. (Masterworks ser) 637p $4 Doubleday

508 Science

47-3691

"An interesting collection of the epochal works of science selected as those which have most influenced the trend of science down the ages. Editor gives a brief biography of each scientist and then the particular opus which advanced science another step. Euclid, Archimedes, Copernicus, Galileo, Newton, Dalton, Lyell, Darwin, Faraday, Mendel, Mendeleyev, Curie and Einstein complete the roster of 'masterminds.'" Library J

"To have in one volume in the authors' own words the essential part of books which have been the foundation of scientific growth is a distinct advantage. Reading them makes clearer the common scientific background and the contribution each writer made. . . The editor has done his work well. . . One wonders why Pasteur was not included, yet none of the authors chosen could well be omitted. That the chronological order followed elsewhere is not used in placing Darwin causes surprise." Harison Hale

+ — Chem & Eng N 25:252 S 1 '47 350w
Cleveland Open Shelf p19 S '47
Kirkus 15:116 F 15 '47 90w

"Recommended." W. A. Kalenich
+ Library J 72:527 Ap 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by J. R. Newman
New Repub 117:28 Ag 25 '47 1300w
San Francisco Chronicle p10 Jl 6 '47 60w
School & Society 65:464 Je 21 '47 30w

KNIGHT, CHARLES ROBERT. Animal anatomy and psychology for the artist and layman; with ill. by the author. (Whittlesey house publication) 149p $5 McGraw

743.6 Anatomy, Comparative. Animal painting and illustration 47-4533

Anatomical and artistic studies of animals, and descriptions of their environment and emotional traits, by a well-known artist. With many illustrations by the author.

"Definitely the book for which many who draw animals must have waited a long time. Scientific accuracy and interesting draughtsmanship plus information about other renderers of animal life are made into a pleasing volume. Author's skill has frequently enriched Natural History museums of New York, Chicago and Los Angeles. Recommended." A. S. Plaut
+ Library J 72:1036 Jl '47 50w

"An excellent reference work, particularly for the artist, this book is honest and profound. . . A criticism which might be made is that a number of structural plates expose only one view of an animal, leading the artistic observer to little circumferential knowledge of the subject. This, however, is a minor criticism and the artist will be a better animal draftsman after examining Mr. Knight's competent drawings and text." Howard Brodie

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p17 Jl 20 '47 150w
School Arts 47:8a S '47 120w

KNIGHT, CLIFFORD. Affair of the Golden Buzzard. 236p $2 McKay

47-599

Detective story.

"Clifford Knight sustains his narrative by making his characters react so slowly to his situations that they seem short-witted." James Sandoe

— Chicago Sun Book Week p7 F 2 '47 70w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 F 9 '47 180w

"A good story." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p34 Ja 26 '47 140w

"Opening chapters set fast, suspenseful pace, but elucidation of quadruple crime, hinging on old train-orders, grinds to somewhat slow finish. Average."

Sat R of Lit 30:28 Ja 18 '47 50w

KNIGHT, FRANK HYNEMAN. Freedom and reform; essays in economics and social philosophy [essays sel. by Hubert Bonner and others]. 409p $3.50 Harper

304 Economic policy. Liberty. Social problems 47-3030

"In these critical and exploratory essays, most of them originally printed in various places in the last dozen years, Professor Knight has the object of discovering how individual freedom may be preserved against current developments which threaten the liberal organization of society. He pursues his purpose with seriousness, summoning argument and illustrations from the many fields with which he is familiar, including the natural sciences as well as anthropology, sociology, ethics, economics, and politics." (Ann Am Acad) Index.

Reviewed by E. D. Ellis
Am Pol Sci R 41:1255 D '47 750w

"From a well-stocked, restless mind, this is a book written in a library. For all its scientific method, one may feel that it is a book of dogma, not sufficiently mindful of developments which compel compromises." Broadus Mitchell

Ann Am Acad 254:207 N '47 400w

"A deep, serious, somewhat theoretical book about present world trends and their meaning. . . Dr. Knight is brilliant and even humorous in his own language; but for a plain man from Kansas, like the present reviewer, the ABC's of that language are hard to grasp, let alone adroit and subtle sallies." R. H. M.
+ — Christian Science Monitor p18 Ap 24 '47 550w

School & Society 66:367 N 8 '47

KNIGHT, GEORGE WILSON. The crown of life. 336p $5 Oxford

822.33 Shakespeare, William—Criticism and interpretation 47-5849

"Essays in interpretation of Shakespeare's final plays." (Subtitle) The plays studied are: Pericles; The Winter's Tale; The Tempest; Cymbeline; and Henry VIII.

"It is easier to follow the promptings of one's own cumulative response to Mr. Knight's volumes, and to say that he writes a deal of nonsense. But, of course, his interest is not really in Shakespeare; it is in some kind of esoteric Christian mysticism. Whilst we have neither desire nor right to comment on Mr Knight's faith, we protest against his pretension as a Shakespearean critic to deny Shakespeare to all except the acolytes of his own conventicle and we suggest that even for their delectation it is not obviously sound to distort Shakespeare." H. B. Charlton

— Manchester Guardian p3 My 20 '47 550w

"One has sometimes to search rather hard for Mr. Knight's best observations. He can be nebulous and oracular. Like nearly all modern critics, he can forget about the quality of a passage too easily. He forgives bad writing provided he is in sympathy with the idea. Consequently he often writes of the play Shakespeare ought to have written rather than the play Shakespeare wrote. . . The substance of Mr. Knight's argument could easily be translated into naturalistic terms. The rebirth pattern of the final plays is that, not only of the Christian story, but of a hundred other religions; and, to my mind, Mr. Knight's criticism would be strengthened if it were cut loose from a particular theology. Even without such strengthening, it is among the best contemporary work in the field." Eric Bentley
+ — N Y Times p34 S 7 '47 1000w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 D 21 '47 170w

"Though the fundamental quality of these plays is well indicated, the detailed analyses by which the general thesis is sustained are often unconvincing."

Times [London] Lit Sup p552 O 25 '47 2800w

KNIGHT, KATHLEEN MOORE. Blue horse of Taxco, 221p $2 Doubleday

47-4931

Detective story.

+ Kirkus 15:246 My 1 '47 90w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 J1 20 '47 120w

"With each murder an oddly shaped bit of blue pottery is left near the body. Solving this pottery jig-saw is crucial and Miss Knight puts the pieces together deftly. It makes a nicely paced tale, including abduction, a chase into the desert, plenty of love, mystery and surprises." J. G.

+ N Y Times p19 J1 27 '47 170w

"Fairly exciting, in spite of routine plotting."

+ New Yorker 23:72 J1 19 '47 90w

"Miss Knight by-passes a good solid novelistic theme to go careening off on some not too plausible melodrama; but it's all performed with infinite smoothness." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 J1 20 '47 100w

"Plentiful action, rich local color, diversity of characters, Yankee and American, including unbelievably hard-boiled N. Y. 'career-girl,' and sinuous plot."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:32 Ag 16 '47 50w

KNIGHT, KATHLEEN MOORE. Footbridge to death, 256p $2 Doubleday

47-630

Detective story.

Booklist 43:207 Mr 1 '47

"Brave little smiles, tight little laughs, queer little stabs of pity, and other diminutive exercises indicative of volcanic emotional upheaval, tightly (bravely) checked, are strewn prodigally through the text. And the sum is as meaty as a bucket of marshmallows." James Sandoe

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ja 5 '47 120w

"A better story than mystery, with good island background."

Kirkus 14:561 N 1 '46 90w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 Ja 12 '47 120w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p26 F 2 '47 170w

"[The book has] a tricky solution that may annoy even the most ardent devotees of the bayberry-and-salt-air school of detection."

New Yorker 22:88 Ja 11 '47 100w

"But by and large one of the more readable specimens of mystery-cum-romance." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ja 12 '47 60w

"Pretty good."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:33 Ja 11 '47 50w

KNIGHT-PATTERSON, W. M. See Kulski, W. W.

KNIGHTS, LIONEL CHARLES. Explorations, 219p $3 Stewart

820.4 English literature—History and criticism 47-5060

"Essays in criticism mainly on the literature of the seventeenth century." (Subtitle) The author's intention is to reawaken the reader's awareness of such authors as Shakespeare, Bacon, George Herbert, Henry James, and W. B. Yeats. Contents: How many children had Lady Macbeth?; Shakespeare's sonnets; Prince Hamlet; Shakespeare and Shakespearians; Bacon and the seventeenth-century dissociation of sensibility; George Herbert; Restoration comedy: The reality and the myth; Notes on a Marxian view of the seventeenth century; Henry James and the trapped spectator; Poetry and social criticism: the work of W. B. Yeats; The University teaching of English and History: A plea for correlation.

"The critic is bent on the trivial aspect of the subjects he explores; he is more confounding than illuminating."

— Kirkus 15:234 Ap 15 '47 90w

Manchester Guardian p3 J1 10 '46 300w

"The value of this kind of criticism, which involves a rigorous re-examination of the text, is unquestionable. Its danger is that it may lose a sense of the whole while it scrutinises the parts; and, above all, that the insistence on 'discipline' may obscure the more important experience of delight—that joy of the creator which is communicated to the reader, however painful the theme may be, and whatever effort may have been necessary before it became 'a thing of beauty.'" Joan Bennett

New Statesman & Nation 32:137 Ag 24 '46 950w

Reviewed by F. O. Matthiessen

N Y Times p4 Je 15 '47 1100w

"It is an excellent thing to have the essays collected in book form, for Mr. Knights's criticism has been among the most intelligent written in England during the past fifteen years; his mind is penetrating and original, his style is lucid, and his references illuminating." Theodore Spencer

+ Sat R of Lit 30:14 Ag 16 '47 850w

"Essays that have appeared as articles or reviews have inevitably a tendency to be a little insistent on their author's point of view when they are collected together in a book; but, even if Mr. L. C. Knights in Explorations hammers away repeatedly at his favourite themes, he has some good things to say. . . . An admonition to read the words that Shakespeare wrote, and study them carefully, is no doubt timely; but in attacking one sort of donnishness Mr. Knights sometimes sails dangerously near the shallows of another variety. . . . Some interesting points are made about Henry James, and of W. B. Yeats's philosophy of 'Aristocracy.'" Anthony Powell

Spec 177:220 Ag 30 '46 750w

Times [London] Lit Sup p341 J1 20 '46 550w

KNIPSCHER, JAMES M. W. (JAMES M. FOX, pseud). Lady regrets, 181p $2.50 Coward-McCann

47-24203

Detective story.

"Second rate."

Kirkus 15:142 Mr 1 '47 70w

"Mr. Fox is an expert at portraying the American scene as it exists in Hollywood and mystery. He even improves his medium by the fine art of omission, having apparently no yen for bad words, floods of likker, 'luscious babes' and similar standbys of whodunit 'realism.'" Will Cuppy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p28 My 4 '47 240w

"You should be able to guess the identity of the villain before you are halfway through the book. If you can't do it, you belong at the foot of the class." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p40 My 4 '47 110w

"Gets off to a lively promising start but bogs down in confusion." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 My 11 '47 50w

Sat R of Lit 30:46 Je 21 '47 40w

KNOX, RONALD ARBUTHNOTT. Retreat for priests, 186p $2 Sheed

250 Roman Catholic church—Devotions. Retreats (religious) 47-1565

"Monsignor Knox, fresh from his translation of the Old Testament, has taken Old Testament stories as the subject of eighteen meditations to be used in a retreat for priests. And in most cases he has chosen an incident in the New Testament and placed it side by side with the other." Publisher's note

"The book deserves a wide circulation and will claim many constant readers among the spiritually discerning."

+ Cath World 165:475 Ag '47 100w

"Each of these meditations is an Old Testament story. The author is not concerned to establish its historicity but only to use it for spiritual profit to-day. It may occasion some surprise that he should think it worth while to re-tell at full length to an audience of priests such familiar stories. But Mgr. Knox is well able to narrate an old story vividly and with original touches of humour very characteristic of his alert mind."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p174 Ap 12 '47 380w

KNOX, RONALD ARBUTHNOTT, tr. See Bible. Old Testament. Psalms

KNUDSON, ALBERT CORNELIUS. Philosophy of war and peace. 221p $2 Abingdon-Cokesbury 172.4 Peace. War 47-976

Dr Knudson is dean emeritus of the Boston University School of theology. His book is "primarily concerned with the basic question or questions as to the necessity of war and the possibility of permanent peace, and treats these questions in the light of their historical development. It is written in the interest of the peace movement, but seeks to be objective and dispassionate in its exposition and discussion of divergent views." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

"This book excellently achieves the purpose for which it was written. . . Despite the excellence of the book—and as to that there is no question—a few, perhaps minor, points may be raised. In discussing imperialism the author might well have mentioned W. L. Langer's notable two-volume work. Richard Hofstadter's recent study, as cited on page 87, does not have the full title given. In the treatment of the theories of 'race' superiority there is no reference to Gobineau, surely the key figure in this aberration in the nineteenth century. It is the reviewer's impression that the estimated population of the world in 1630, as given on page 92, is low." J. D. Squires

+ Christian Century 64:463 Ap 9 '47 850w

Reviewed by Paul Ramsey
Crozer Q 24:250 Jl '47 1400w

"He rightly makes no undue concessions to showmanship in this book but relies, rightly, on the inherent universal interest of his subject and material to hold the reader." Stephen Fry

+ N Y Times p24 Mr 23 '47 500w

KOBER, ARTHUR. That man is here again; the adventures of a Hollywood agent. 235p $2.50 Random house 46-8274

Eighteen incidents in the life of a Hollywood agent, fictional in form but based on "true stories." Most of the sketches originally appeared in the New Yorker.

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Ja 26 '47 120w

Kirkus 14:501 O 1 '46 90w

"Mr. Kober has written a foreword in which he says, 'Don't get me wrong. I like Benny Greenspan.' His readers didn't get him wrong from the start. They always liked Benny, the man denied his natural right to 'hustle a fast buck.' They will like him now in his full-dress regalia, with all his misfortunes intact and all his grief unassuaged. Some day Benny will be recognized for his true worth as a folk etymologist, a man who looked for opportunity in 'every nook and granny,' and who never missed a chance to kick his native language upstairs." Thomas Sugrue

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Ja 26 '47 800w

Reviewed by John O'Hara
N Y Times p7 D 8 '46 900w

San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ja 5 '47 140w

"No matter how entertaining Mr. Kober's sketches of an irrepressible, phrase-mangling Hollywood flesh-peddler may be when read individually in The New Yorker, they do not quite add up to the kind of book to be read at one sitting. . . Read as this reviewer has read them, however, at the leisurely rate of one or two an evening, the adventures of Benny Greenspan . . . are a highly diverting and good-humored slander of Celluloidia's ubiquitous ten-percenters." Budd Schulberg

+ Sat R of Lit 30:13 Ja 11 '47 700w

KOEHLER, ROBERT PORTNER. Hooded vulture murders. 256p $2 Phoenix 47-21836
Detective story.

"It all adds up to a fairly routine detective story with Mexican trimmings." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p15 Jl 6 '47 110w

"Pleasant narration and agreeable local color off the standard tourist trail." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Je 1 '47 70w

"Routine."

Sat R of Lit 30:46 Je 21 '47 40w

KOFFLER, CAMILLA (YLLA, pseud). il. Sleepy little lion. See Brown, M. W.

KOLITZ, ZVI. Tiger beneath the skin; stories and parables of the years of death. 172p $2.50 Creative age 47-11640

A collection of stories and parables about the European Jews during the last war.

Reviewed by Rose Feld

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20 N 23 '47 370w

"In spite of the gothic details that adorn the text and the fact that these are stories of torment and suffering even to death, these tales of Mr. Kolitz are not, as might be imagined, fantastic or horror tales. . . Certain stories aside, this collection does not succeed, primarily I think, because the author succeeds too well in emulating his models. Mr. Kolitz can recite all the modern horrors, and yet his tales have a singular quality of non-involvement." Thomas Lask

N Y Times p22 D 7 '47 470w

KOMROFF, MANUEL. Feast of the jesters. 305p $3 Farrar, Straus 47-11414

A story of a band of French actors who come to Vienna in 1814 to play their parts in real life and on the stage against the glittering background of the political and social intrigues of the kings and rulers, diplomats and courtiers who were met there to settle the fate of Europe after the defeat of Napoleon.

Booklist 44:134 D 1 '47

Reviewed by Louis Zara

Chicago Sun Book Week O 28 '47 600w

Kirkus 15:441 Ag 15 '47 160w

"With fuller and more careful treatment book could have had great value for our time. Disappointing." C. W. Roth

+ Library J 72:1269 S 15 '47 100w

"There would be a place, at the present time more than ever before, for a novel of real stature about the Congress of Vienna. But the 'Feast of the Jesters,' for all its reconstructed atmosphere, can neither open men's eyes nor rouse their purpose. At best, it can mildly entertain." Virgilia Peterson

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22 N 23 '47 600w

"A skillful, deceptively simple tale. . . There are amusing brief profiles of the great ones at the Congress. There are several effective scenes; of parties and pageants, of a vast desolate battlefield in Russia. . . There are amusing, even wise little maxims and epigrams. . . And finally the tragedy of a divided Europe in a very small nutshell: 'One is born in Europe only to die for one's country.'" N. K. Burger

+ N Y Times p7 N 2 '47 550w

KOMROFF, MANUEL—Continued
New Yorker 23:110 N 1 '47 120w

"In spite of stylistic defects, the novel is charming and carries a real punch." Katharine Scherman

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:16 N 1 '47 470w

KONVITZ, MILTON RIDVAS. The alien and the Asiatic in American law. 299p $3 Cornell univ. press

323.67 Aliens—U.S. Citizenship—U.S. Orientals in the U.S. 47-30101

"In his Preface the author describes this book as: 'chiefly a study of how the United States Supreme Court has reacted to problems relating to the alien and to the American citizen of Asiatic descent. It is also a study of the past and present legal status of these groups, and an attempt to make a contribution to the field of legal and political sociology.' . . . At the end of each chapter the author presents a critique of the law, which adds to the value of the factual recital. There are a bibliography, a table of statutes and documents, a table of cases, and an index." U S Quarterly Bkl

Am Hist R 52:570 Ap '47 180w

Reviewed by H. F. Angus

Am J Soc 53:72 J1 '47 950w

"This will be an exceedingly useful book to both lawyers and political scientists, for its analysis of court decisions pertaining to the law of aliens is at all points complete and up to date, and its vigorous criticism of these decisions is continuously challenging." R. K. Carr

+ Am Pol Sci R 41:342 Ap '47 550w

"There are two great drawbacks in the otherwise valuable contribution of this book to the literature of civil liberties. The position of the alien in the United States is viewed only as a legal problem, with no consideration of the economic background of the legislation under discussion. The other difficulty is the prejudice of the author which views as desirable only that legislation or those judicial decisions which are always favorable to the alien." J. P. C. Carey

+ — Ann Am Acad 254:185 N '47 400w

Foreign Affairs 25:700 J1 '47 10w

"The book contains useful compilation of statutes and secondary materials on every phase of the subject. Those who accept the author's thesis will find ammunition for their cause. Others may feel that Mr. Konvitz has done little to dispel doubts as to the practical wisdom of a policy of judicial legislation. Such a policy may win battles at the cost of much bad law and of setting in motion a train of long-term reactions that will lose the campaign. And it dodges the fact that any lasting solution must come from Congress."

— + Harvard Law R 60:322 D '46 320w

"The work is well annotated for professionals in both the field of law and sociology, as well as for the satisfaction of the lay reader. Previous writers have exhibited the same critical attitude toward the evacuation process but no one else has supported his contentions with quite the wealth of documents evidenced in this book." R. W. O'Brien

+ Social Forces 25:458 My '47 700w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:71 Mr '47 320w

KONVITZ, MILTON RIDVAS. Constitution and civil rights. 254p $3 Columbia univ. press

323.4 Civil rights, U.S.—Constitutional law A47-1116

"Detailed consideration of the law of civil rights as it has developed under judicial decision and interpretation, based on the Constitution and its amendments and the Civil Rights Act of 1866, 1870 and 1875. Analyzes the impact of States Rights and sees a solution in the development of state responsibility for local law enforcement. Applies our experience in this field to the problems of anti-lynch laws, fair employment practices legislation and laws prohibiting discrimination.

Closes with reprints of national and state laws and bills in these areas." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by W. F. Swindler

Ann Am Acad 252:111 J1 '47 600w

Current Hist 12:373 Ap '47 50w

"Professor Konvitz has written an important book about a tragically important subject." R. F. Watt

+ Ethics 57:212 Ap '47 950w

"The book fails to present an acute examination of premises; it contains no deep analysis of conclusions. Rather, Dr. Konvitz has, by using quotation, paraphrase, and summary, in the main set forth the opinions of the principal Supreme Court cases on the subject, the statutes, federal and state, prohibiting discrimination, and the state statutes compelling or allowing discrimination."

— Harvard Law R 60:498 F '47 320w

"Encyclopedic review, scholarly and tightly reasoned (with copious citations) which will be essential in scholarly collections but of little popular use." R. E. Kingery

Library J 71:1712 D 1 '46 140w

Reviewed by A. G. Hays

Sat R of Lit 30:16 Je 7 '47 950w

"Even for those who differ from [the author] as to the area, state or federal, of legal responsibility for the protection of such minorities as the Southern Negro, the study will be useful, especially to technicians who must be critically informed of the current state of the law relating to civil rights. And for those who are unfamiliar with the social and technical legal background of racial discrimination in the United States, the systematic review which the author presents will be highly informative." U S Quarterly Bkl 3:174 Je '47 300w

KORMENDI, FERENC. That one mistake [tr. by Amy Allen]. 308p $3 Philosophical lib.

47-3635

The one mistake was the marriage contracted by a not too successful young lawyer, with a wealthy but very ugly daughter of a Hungarian industrialist. The story of the marriage is developed slowly, and that of John's growing love for his wife's sister keeps pace with it, until the inevitable tragedy.

"This is an entrancing novel with its petty intrigues, changes of character, love, hate, brightness, and tragedy. It provides enjoyable reading." F. D. Horvay

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Ag 3 '47 270w

Reviewed by H. G. Kelley

Library J 72:529 Ap 1 '47 110w

"The characters prove their emotions exhaustively in print, arriving at conclusions perfectly obvious long before to the reader." Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22 Ap 20 '47 130w

KOSSAK-SZCZUCKA, ZOFJA. Angels in the dust. 467p $3.50 Roy pubs.

47-12190

Novel of the first crusade. It "begins with three Silesian knights—three brothers, who have been driven from their still only half-Christianized Poland in a feudal war—who fall in with the general movement of European knights to the great council called by Urban II at Clermont. Thereafter we see at rather long intervals how the three Poles fare on the crusade, and the novel ends with the homecoming of the surviving brother." (N Y Times)

Booklist 44:134 D 1 '47

Reviewed by Louis Zara

Chicago Sun Book Week D 4 '47 800w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '47

"Mme. Kossak would have gained by establishing a dramatic density, by letting one battle stand for several and staking everything on a single outcome. The characterization is only tolerably clear. We tend to forget which minor or major personage is which during the long campaigning. On the other hand the average historical novel is to be judged, I suppose, largely as we judge a folder of connected postcards; and Mme. Kossak has a flair for the picturesque, particularly for the landscapes of southern France, which she apparently knows well. Further, she is an experienced novelist, and her story has no flagrant faults." Warren Ramsey

+ — Commonweal 47:329 Ja 9 '48 1000w

"Plot and counterplot, drama, adventure, romance, a great story, which occasionally lags in multitude of detail, but emerges, a vigorous whole."

+ Kirkus 15:553 O 1 '47 300w

"Recommended for lovers of historical novels." Katherine Shorey

Library J 72:1374 O 1 '47 100w

"A choice lot of arrogant, quarrelsome, brutal scoundrels they were, those knights of the First Crusade so spectacularly and realistically portrayed by Zofia Kossak in a novel which combines stirring melodrama, historical accuracy and finely drawn characterization. . . . Zofia Kossak has written with unusual fidelity to history a superb tale of romance, gallantry and high adventure, glowing with color, throbbing with action. She has also written the story of man's dual nature." P. J. Searles

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly BK R p8 O 26 '47 600w

"Mme. Kossak describes battles brilliantly and such scenes of suspense as the stealthy night entrance up the ladder of the traitor's guard post in Antioch. The novel is full of vividly credible, horrifying visions of massacres, of individual cruelty and violence, of superstition and ritual, of hunger, thirst and cannibalism, of decomposing bodies and of cartloads of heads sent back as evidence of victory. . . . In its psychology, politics and love affairs 'Angels in the Dust' is less interesting." R. G. Davis

+ — N Y Times p4 N 9 '47 850w

KRACAUER, SIEGFRIED. From Caligari to Hitler; a psychological history of the German film. 361p pl $5 Princeton univ. press

791.4 Moving pictures 47-4412

"Written by a man who is at once an authority on the social and economic structures of the German middle classes and on the German cinema, it analyzes those tendencies which, from 1920 to 1933; ended in the rule of Hitler. Starting from the premise that 'the films of a nation are fully understandable only in relation to the actual psychological pattern of this nation,' he also approaches movies as a psychoanalyst approaches dreams, and uses them as a key to the interpretation of a psychosis. . . . After briefly recounting the development of the motion picture in Germany before 1915, Dr. Kracauer takes up its subsequent history from the time 'The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari' startled a world by no means entirely prepared to accept movies as esthetically original or important. He traces the progress of German films and refreshes our recollections of them through the period of innovations such as the traveling camera." New Repub

Reviewed by A. A. Mercey

Ann Am Acad 254:173 N '47 600w

Reviewed by Daniel Bell

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Je 22 '47 900w

Current Hist 13:35 Jl '47 40w

"His study of film as film has historical and aesthetic value, though its psychological and sociological impact is undoubtedly its most important aspect. Recommended for cinema and sociology collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 71:1805 D 15 '46 120w

"The book is a provocative one. To students of German history, of the motion picture, or of psychology, it will prove equally revealing and useful." Lester Asheim

+ Library Q 17:234 Jl '47 1000w

Reviewed by A. M. Schlesinger, jr.

Nation 165:104 Jl 26 '47 900w

"Probably only a German could have written this book, and I doubt whether it could have been achieved by any other than a close student of contemporary German history. Despite certain naïvetés, it affords an original scrutiny of the most powerful medium for the dissemination of ideas which has yet been invented, and discloses, as has been shown nowhere else so clearly, the strange symbiosis which links film and society—each nourishing and affecting the other." Iris Barry

+ New Repub 116:28 My 19 '47 1000w

"As an orderly and informative history of German movies, Mr. Kracauer's book seems to me entirely first rate; and its value is enhanced by numerous well-chosen 'stills' and by an appendix on the Nazi film. But Mr. Kracauer intends much more than this. His preface states: . . . 'It is my contention that through an analysis of the German film deep psychological dispositions predominant in Germany from 1918 to 1933 can be exposed'. . . . But unfortunately much of Mr. Kracauer's argument is dependent on his postulate of a German collective soul, an entity to which every sinister motif in German movies is attributed. The theme of the book is that the Hitler epoch is prefigured in the movies of the Weimar Republic. Obviously this idea is not wholly untrue, but, believing in a national soul, Mr. Kracauer is led into exaggeration: having followed his argument through to the end you find it simply incredible that, with their Grand Guignol, the French have not had a Hitler, too. Oddly enough Mr. Kracauer is himself a German; and, if one shared his belief in national souls, one might call his own method profoundly Teutonic. His love of darkly evocative historical utterances is positively Spenglerian. 'From Caligari to Hitler' looks very much like a refugee's revenge." Eric Bentley

+ — N Y Times p7 My 18 '47 320w

New Yorker 23:126 Je 7 '47 170w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman

School & Society 66:512 D 27 '48 270w

"Many questions can be raised about this pioneer study in film analysis. At times the interpretations seem gratuitous; often they have ad hoc flavor. An important shortcoming is the absence of any explicit conceptual theory by reference to which the facts and conclusions could be independently verified and validated. Perhaps the book is best considered as the initial presentation of a new social-psychological technique inviting research and as an ambitious and promising hypothesis which still requires considerable testing." J. J. Honigmann

+ — Survey G 36:490 S '47 550w

"The appearance of this book will call for a revision of the qualifications of every film expert. For this is an important book. It is important to the film student and researcher, important to the student of foreign affairs, but, over and beyond that, it is important to anyone interested in the relationship of a society to its art." Arthur Rosenheimer

+ Theatre Arts 31:70 Je '47 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p658 D 20 '47 700w

KRAFT, JAMES LEWIS. Adventure in jade. 81p $3 Holt

549.61 Jade 47-3792

Information on the finding and working of jade in the United States. The author, who is best known as a manufacturer of cheese, describes his adventures in collecting and carving jade, which has been his hobby for many years. Bibliography.

Booklist 44:7 S 1 '47

"Mr. Kraft was the first man to prove that jade is indigenous to North America, and that part of the book in which he describes his hunt for jade in various sections of the United States makes especially good reading. The thrill of jade for Mr. Kraft lies in the hunt. Nevertheless, he does not neglect its aesthetic attractions and has contributed an all-too-brief chapter on what jade means to the Chinese: 'Symbolism in Jade.' " Melvin Maddocks

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Jl 19 '47 360w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '47

Kirkus 15:155 Mr 1 '47 80w

KRAFT, JAMES LEWIS—Continued

"Few can indulge this hobby, few can find jade or work it, and so the appeal of this rather over-written and somewhat sentimental volume is necessarily exceedingly limited."

Library J 72:736 My 1 '47 90w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10
Jl 6 '47 130w

"This (to me) delightful book is neither science nor art—it is the work of a gifted amateur. It is packed with information of hunts and finds—such as the great mountain of jade in the furthest wilderness of Alaska—and is rich in shrewd comments on the habits and occurrences of this, the most historic and best loved of semiprecious stones. From its text classifiers and analysts will profit." H. S. Canby

+ Sat R of Lit 30:29 Jl 5 '47 320w

Wis Lib Bul 43:113 Jl '47

KRAMER, ALBERT JACK. Inventions at your service; important patents available to the public free of charge. 139p $5 Progress press
608 Patents. Inventions 47-18

"The purpose of this book is to bring to the attention of interested persons, the public service patents of the Department of Agriculture. The patents have been selected on the basis of probable commercial interest. The title, patent number, patent date, inventor's name and an abstract are given for each patent listed. Also, the dedicated patents, which may be used without formal permission, are distinguished from the assigned patents, for the use of which a permissive but royalty-free license must be obtained." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by G. G. Taylor

Chem & Eng N 25:804 Mr 17 '47 210w
N Y New Tech Bks 32:34 Ap '47

KRANTZ, PAUL (ERNST ERICH NOTH, pseud). Bridges over the Rhine; Rita Reil, and Hugh Corbett, translators. 317p $3 Holt 940.5314443 Reconstruction (1933-)—German. National characteristics, German. Europe—Politics 47-11899

"This book is a passionate warning against the German economic recovery program of the Western powers. The author . . . decries the 'crime,' as he puts it, of 'being prepared not only in Germany but against Germany which is the same thing.' Mr. Noth works from the realization that the central problem of the world peace is the German problem and says: 'While the United States and Russia are struggling for Germany, the greatest chance to carry off the victory is on the side of Germany herself.' . . . The first part of 'Bridges Over the Rhine' is addressed to the French, the second to the American people." (Sat R of Lit) No index.

"Mr. Noth offers little that is specific in the way of constructive proposals. 'I have no advice to give,' he says. 'My specialty is warning.' Unfortunately, owing to the plethora of Cas-sandras, the author's specialty just now is somewhat at a discount. His generalizations are shrewd and at times brilliant, but they are not enough without supporting information. . . . This book, which is marred by an inexcusably large number of typographical errors, has been translated from the French, although it reads like American journalism of the most advanced type without a lingering flavor of French left visible—a remarkable piece of translating!" H. J. S.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 D 16 '47 500w

"The book's main defect is its tone. Its rhetoric is insensitive: for example, its use of that lamentable banality, 'No, a thousand times no!' . . . Was it really necessary to stray from the theme by muttering mysteriously about 'my ill-wishers' (presumably book reviewers and other cads) and by soulful self-analysis ('my cynical moments—which to me are so many hours of despair') and by never letting readers forget 'my modest reputation as a town crier'? But literary objections do not invalidate political insights. Politically, this well-reasoned, if cheaply written, book concerns every American anxious to forestall a third German war." Peter Viereck

N Y Times p3 N 30 '47 950w

"The author's views on the 'Red Peril' are clearly defined. . . . The second part of the book, less eloquently written but more precise, charges that the Americans have hardly made any effort to 'think the peace,' that they are constantly improvising, and show more concern for economics than for the other aspects of international politics. . . . 'Bridges Over the Rhine' does not offer any concrete solution to the German problem. The value of the book, written in a somewhat oratorical but very impressive style, lies in its stimulating vigor, its honesty, and its general liberalism rather than in its novelty. For this reason and for its timeliness it deserves a place on the shelf of every student of foreign affairs." H. B. Kranz

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:62 D 6 '47 600w

KRAUS, HENRY. The many and the few; a chronicle of the dynamic auto workers. 293p $2.50 Plantin press, 1052 Manzanita, Los Angeles

331.892 Automobile strike, 1937. International union, United automobile, aircraft and agricultural implement workers of America 47-16974

"As one of the original editors of the United Automobile Workers paper and a union functionary, Mr. Kraus was able to follow closely the growth of this union and its fight with the automobile industry, climaxed by the forty-day General Motors sitdown that took place in 1937. His book is . . . [an] account dealing chiefly with some of his personal experiences during the strike, and a few inside details on how the strike developed and was handled by Wyndham Mortimer (a one-time vice president of the UAW) and Robert Travis, strike director in Flint." N Y Times

"A wooden, lifeless representation of the struggle at Flint. Kraus makes a genuine, if awkward, effort to avoid flagrant factionalism in choosing his favorites. But the 'people' to whom the book is ostensibly dedicated are totally overshadowed by his passionate desire to write a 'pro-union' book, dramatizing the glories of 'unity' in the labor movement. The lives of trade unions and their members are unhappily more varied and complex than Kraus is prepared to admit in public." J. A. Wechsler

+ — Nation 165:147 Ag 9 '47 330w

"While all this will hold a nominal interest for anyone who keeps himself informed on labor questions, Mr. Kraus' book fails to persuade the reader that this is anywhere near a complete account of the General Motors sit-down. Despite his official connection with the strike, one does not feel that Mr. Kraus was close enough to the real story to give a well-rounded picture of it." Lawrence Resner

N Y Times p24 Jl 27 '47 400w

KRAUSE, HERBERT. The thresher. 548p $3 Bobbs

47-417

A story of the mid-western wheat country and of Johnny Black (born Schwartz) who achieved his life's ambition as head of a threshing crew.

Booklist 43:170 F 1 '47

"The reader of 'The Thresher' . . . is immediately impressed by the language in which the book is written. Krause is a poet, and he loves and uses words as a poet does. . . . Krause wrote his novel with the aid of a University of Minnesota Regional Writing Fellowship. Its appearance gives further evidence of the very real and lasting value of these fellowships in the furthering of significant literary production in the Midwest." J. T. Frederick

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Ja 19 '47 800w

"There's an appealing and sad love story. A novel that is both a fine piece of writing and highly satisfying reading, picturing a modern frontier."

+ Kirkus 14:556 N 1 '46 170w

"If the characters do not become inevitable they do achieve a stark and restless reality. And the threshing rig, though it does not become for the reader the symbol of time, is actual and vibrant, a driving force in the lives of the prairie people. The novel stops short of universality, but it is an urgent, compassionate, uncompromising picture of rural life, which Hamlin Garland would earnestly affirm." Walter Havighurst

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Ja 12 '47 850w

"Mr. Krause has done a better job of writing in this novel than he did in his last one, 'Wind Without Rain' [Book Review Digest, 1939] and he shows the same sincerity and deep feeling for the country about which he writes. Still, it is hard to believe that anybody wants to know as much about threshing wheat as he is bent on telling."

+ New Yorker 22:93 Ja 18 '47 90w

"Mr. Krause's characters are vivid, strong, absorbing. We are consumed with a kind of ambivalent attitude, an attitude which understands and loves these people even as it acknowledges their injustices and hates for them. The writing is as powerful as the forces with which it deals—each word obviously loved and carefully chosen, each phrase adding to a total surging, poetic effect. It is in his fondness for metaphor, however, that Mr. Krause runs into trouble. Given the material alone, at face value, we could accept the frequent figures of speech as they come, admire the metaphorical divisions by which Mr. Krause directs the life of his story to follow the life of the wheat. But, either through an addiction to metaphorical treatment or through a conviction that without it his book would not measure up to standards of profundity, he insists upon imposing upon the story, again and again, a reminder that we are dealing not alone with people, with characters, but with Time, all-powerful Time who changes all things." N. G. Chaikin

+ Sat R of Lit 30:12 F 8 '47 700w

Wis Lib Bul 43:55 Mr '47

KRAUSS, RUTH (MRS DAVID JOHNSON LEISK). Growing story; pictures by Phyllis Rowand. [31p] $1.75 Harper

47-30688

Pictures and simple text describe a small boy who observed the growing of the grass, flowers, and chickens, but did not seem to realize his own growth until he put on his last year's clothes.

Booklist 44:38 S 15 '47

"The completely charming and decorative pictures . . . overshadow the text . . . in spite of the fact that it has originality, humor, and even a childlike point of view." B. J. Thompson

Cath World 166:238 D '47 90w

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

Christian Science Monitor p12 N 11 '47 100w

"Appealing pictures, modern and stylized without sacrifice of a certain tenderness that never degenerates into being wishy washy."

+ Kirkus 15:335 J1 1 '47 160w

"The delicate pictures by Phyllis Rowand in their pastel colors and the simple text present satisfactorily a small boy's observation of the growth of things. . . For preschool age." M. A. Herr

+ Library J 72:1278 S 15 '47 70w

"If the five-year-old for whom you are choosing a story is like others of his age he finds the rate of his own growth a matter of warm interest. Here is a little story all about this one matter, as it affected a little boy, a puppy and some chickens." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 S 14 '47 230w

N Y Times p42 N 16 '47 140w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét

New Yorker 23:140 D 6 '47 80w

Wis Lib Bul 43:133 O '47

KREBS, RICHARD JULIUS HERMAN. See Valtin, J.

KRIEGER, SEYMOUR, comp. Nazi Germany's war against the Jews. 618p $5 Am. Jewish conf, 521 5th av, N.Y. 17

296 Jews in Europe. Germany—Politics and government. World war, 1939-1945—Atrocities 47-4621

"The complete account of Germany's destruction of European Jewry as revealed in the evidence assembled at Nürnberg." School & Society

"Excellent as is Mr. Krieger's summary of the documentary evidence, it fails completely to analyze any of the legal issues of the crimes-against-humanity count of the Nürnberg indictment. Nor is this failure explained by the existence of legal comment elsewhere, which has been largely confined to the legality of the trial itself or to the aggressive warfare count." Will Maslow

+ Columbia Law R 47:1085 S '47 900w

Foreign Affairs 26:227 O '47 20w

"Seymour Krieger, a member of the bar of the District of Columbia, who prepared and compiled the volume, served on Justice Jackson's staff. The bulk of his book consists of authentic documentary evidence that withstood the crucible of the Nuremberg trials. This utterly depressing volume is probably the most comprehensive and most painstakingly documented history of anti-Semitism in modern Germany." Alfred Werner

N Y Times p30 Ap 27 '47 300w

School & Society 65:318 Ap 26 '47 30w

KROLL, HARRY HARRISON. Darker grows the valley. 400p $3 Bobbs

47-31027

A panoramic view of life in a southern mountain region, from 1778 when Josiah Clinch and his family from North Carolina arrived in the valley until a century and a half later when the Tennessee Valley Authority comes into control.

Booklist 44:152 D 15 '47

"The book is rich in colorful particulars of pioneer life. . . 'Darker Grows the Valley' is an ambitious novel in its span of time, wealth of chronicle and legend, and the intricacy of the pattern the author traces through the lives of families and a host of individuals. The force and clarity of the narrative and the interest of the individuals and the common life they made for themselves evidence Mr. Kroll's abilities as a novelist. Along with its appeal as a story, this novel offers wide and penetrating insight into forces that have gone into the making of our life as a people." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 O 19 '47 700w

"Most of the faults of 'Darker Grows the Valley' arise from Mr. Kroll's attempt to deal with too much material in too short a space. This attempt results, in turn, in hasty characterization, poor handling of theme and inadequate development of situation. This is unfortunate, for in many minor ways the novel is an interesting one. The customs, diction and habits of the settlers are presented with historical fidelity; there are occasional spots of genuine humor and pathos; and the writing, though uninspired, is kept on a level of steady competence." Arthur Foff

+ N Y Times p24 N 2 '47 440w

Springf'd Republican p7B D 28 '47 60w

KRONENBERGER, LOUIS, ed. See Johnson, S. Portable Johnson and Boswell

KROPOTKIN, ALEXANDRA, princess. How to cook and eat in Russian. 270p $3.50 Putnam 641.5 Cookery, Russian 47-30122

Russian recipes, containing only ingredients procurable in the United States. Contains explanations of Russian food habits and service, Index.

Booklist 43:200 Mr 1 '47

KROPOTKIN, ALEXANDRA—Continued

"What a Russian kitchen is like, how to prepare the zakoska table, the fine distinction between pirogi and piroshki, and the comforting ceremony of evening tea are some of the things that Princess Kropotkin discusses pleasingly and with authority."

+ New Yorker 22:103 F 15 '47 90w

KRUG, EDWARD AUGUST, and QUILLEN, ISAAC JAMES. Living in our communities; civics for young citizens. 598p il $2.64 Scott 300 Social sciences 46-3846

"A textbook for ninth-grade students. The organization and presentation are designed to help students to think for themselves and to raise problems about their own community. In reading this book, the students are encouraged to generalize from the information which is presented and to consider ways in which their own community may be made a better place in which to live." School R

"If you want to see what modern education can do by way of relating life and learning, an hour or two with this textbook will delight both your mind and your eye." Martha Luginbuhl

+ Am J Pub Health 36:933 Ag '46 330w

"This survey of community life is not just another book. It is a distinct contribution to the literature of the field, and both pupils and teachers will enjoy its realistic treatment of life in representative American communities. Pupils who study this book should develop attitudes that will carry over into later adult activities." R. B. Weaver

+ School R 54:495 O '46 1150w

Reviewed by J. H. Haefner

Social Educ 11:47 Ja '47 800w

"Textbook authors invariably are faced with the problem of what to include and what to exclude, of what to stress and what to mention in passing. On the whole, the authors of Living in Our Communities have met the problem judiciously. The book may have had better balance, however, had more attention been devoted to the economic aspects of community life, as well as to labor relations, social security, and conservation. And in this day when international problems occupy the thoughts of all people, it seems that a section dealing with the world community should have been included." E. B. Fincher

+ Social Studies 38:43 Ja '47 500w

KRUMBHAAR, WILLIAM. Coating and ink resins; a technological study. 318p il $7 Reinhold

668.4 Gums and resins, Synthetic. Printing ink 47-5662

"Study of resin types now in common use, light colored, hard, soluble and high viscosity groups and the resin oil reactivities as they occur in varnish cooking. Chemical characteristics of resins, basic principles underlying formation of resins, influence of resins on surface coatings and printing inks including water proofing, and resin application on surface coatings are discussed. Two chapters in this timely book on machinery and equipment and the patent situation. Illustrated with color plates and half tones." Library J

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1377 O 1 '47 100w

"Although considerable attention is given to the chemical fundamentals and chemical analysis of these resins, the book is concerned primarily with the technological aspects of the subject."

N Y New Tech Bks 32:50 Jl '47

KRZESINSKI, ANDRZEJ J. Poland's right to justice. 120p $2 Devin-Adair

943.8 Poland

"The author extols Polish heroism in the recent war and finds it poorly rewarded with the transfer of eastern Poland to Russia, as decided at Yalta." Foreign Affairs

Foreign Affairs 25:344 Ja '47 30w

Reviewed by R. M. Morgan

Springfd Republican p4 Jl 13 '46 120w

KUHN, ROBERT J. And never goodbye. 276p $2.75 Appleton-Century

47-3662

Portrays the break-up of a marriage in a series of flashbacks which show the past lives of the husband and wife. The action takes place on a long drive to an asylum where the wife is to be an inmate.

Reviewed by Clinton Textor

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Je 29 '47 250w

"A taut, narrowed study of emotional distortion, involuntary, inescapable, which has a direct, communicable sympathy."

+ Kirkus 15:136 Mr 1 '47 120w

"Recommended as a commentary on war neuroses, not for complete relaxation." R. P. Tubby

Library J 72:809 My 15 '47 70w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 Jl 6 '47 110w

"Mr. Kuhn has not made the development of Evelyn's emotional crack-up convincing—and it is here that the weakness of the novel lies. . . . Throughout [he] makes a direct emotional appeal to the reader, and achieves it best in a passage relating to Danny's boyhood ordeal. Elsewhere the uneasy flitting between mind and mind, between past and present, tends to blur the edges of his story and to confuse the sequence. He has, further, an unfortunate tendency to rely on typography rather than the right words to gain his effects. . . . Like a radio drama, 'And Never Goodbye' is intimate, feverish, immediate, and rather easily forgotten." Mary McGrory

N Y Times p14 Je 1 '47 600w

KUIST, HOWARD TILLMAN. These words upon thy heart; scripture and the Christian response. 189p $2.50 Presbyterian com.

220 Bible. Whole 47-4008

Six lectures delivered by the author at the Union Theological Seminary in Virginia during February and March, 1946. Contents: Scripture and the common man; Adventuring in first-hand acquaintance; Opening the eyes of the understanding; The form and power of Holy Scripture; Scripture and freedom to think; Translating Scripture into action; Appendix: Ruskin's essay on composition, Index.

Reviewed by J. B. Pritchard

Crozer Q 25:92 Ja '48 300w

"The book is seriously written and somewhat demanding. To those who will give it careful reading it will be rewarding." N. K. B.

+ N Y Times p22 Jl 20 '47 200w

School & Society 65:431 Je 7 '47 20w

KULSKI, WLADYSŁAW WSZEBOR (W. W. COOLE, W. M. KNIGHT-PATTERSON, pseud). Germany from defeat to conquest, 1913-1933, by W. M. Knight-Patterson; foreword by Lord Vansittart. 622p $5 Macmillan

943.085 Germany—History—1918-1933

[46-3677]

"An amply documented history of the Weimar Republic, in which the author makes clear the failure of all the political parties, including the Socialist, to do anything effective toward establishing the indispensable bases for real democracy in Germany. There is a useful list of 'books consulted.'" Foreign Affairs

"Germany from Defeat to Conquest follows a strict chronological order with little effort to weave a coherent pattern. An appearance of objectivity is lent it by the inclusion of an overgenerous sprinkling of quotations from contemporary newspapers, periodicals, books, and public debates. Footnotes and an extensive bibliography also add to its scholarly appearance." D. F. Lach

Am Hist R 52:733 Jl '47 650w

Current Hist 12:238 Mr '47 70w

Foreign Affairs 24:751 J1 '46 50w

Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 17 '46
450w

Pol Sci Q 62:588 D '47 80w

Reviewed by John Stapleton

Spec 177:588 N 29 '46 350w

KUNITZ, HAN A. Oil heating handbook. 3d ed rev 464p $5 Lippincott

697.7 Oil burners. Heating 47-18144

"A manual of theoretical and practical considerations entering into the manufacture, installation and use of oil burners in moderate size heaters, including a complete oil heating terminology." (Subtitle) Minor text changes; material relating to standards has been brought up to date." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 43:293 My 15 '47

N Y New Tech Bks 32:13 Ja '47

KUNITZ, JOSHUA. Russia, the giant that came last. 413p $5 Dodd

947 Russia—History 47-31339

"This book attempts to tell the dramatic story of Russia's emergence, growth, and consolidation on the Eurasian plain. Its aim is to comprehend and re-create the material and spiritual influences which in each period served to initiate or accelerate Russia's progress, and the sole criterion it employs in evaluating any given historical factor is its effect on the dynamics of this progress. . . . Whenever possible the author permits the Russians to speak for themselves, believing that the occasional stylistic awkwardnesses and semantic unclaritys caused by the weaving of translated quotations into the texture of the narrative are more than compensated by the intimacy of contact thus established." (Pref) It begins with Russia's Christianization from Byzantium and ends with Lenin's triumph in 1917. Index.

Commonweal 47:54 O 24 '47 160w

Current Hist 13:293 N '47 60w

"Here is a highly unconventional history of Russia. . . . Joshua Kunitz can see the traits of Ilya Muramets, Russia's Paul Bunyan, in the life and legend of Lenin, and he can explain the debt of the Bolsheviks to Ivan the Dread and Peter the Great as more than an historical joke. His book is knobbly with the bumps of one man's unorthodox view of history, and so it helps to fill, more satisfyingly than many smoother, academic histories, a great void in the reading of most Westerners where Russia is concerned." Joseph Barnes
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3
O 5 '47 1150w

"It is written as it should be out of a deep sympathy with Russia, but by its one-sided perspective it will neither increase an understanding of Russia's problems nor of her relations with the world." Hans Kohn

N Y Times p7 O 5 '47 1050w

"His book, which is notably clear and concise, should be helpful to anyone who wants a forthright account of Russia's complex past."
+ New Yorker 23:114 S 27 '47 80w

San Francisco Chronicle p14 O 26 '47
110w

Social Studies 38:380 D '47 20w

KUNKEL, FRITZ. Creation continues; a psychological interpretation of the first Gospel. 317p $3 Scribner

226.2 Bible. New Testament—St Matthew 47-1933

"A detailed study of the Gospel of Matthew in the effort to discover the secret of the influence of Jesus upon those who came in close contact with him. The author's thesis is that as creation was re-enacted with the coming of Jesus into the world, so it is re-enacted in the life of each believer in Him. Thus, the title: Creation Continues. The author writes professedly as a psychologist. But his 'psychological study' of Matthew is an attempt to parallel each outward event by some corresponding event in the inner life, each spoken word of Jesus by some word that can come to the inner consciousness today." Kirkus

"This book is not to be read in a single sitting, or even in a half-a-dozen sittings. It will be most readily appreciated by the minister in search of homiletical material and by the serious student of the Bible. Many readers may feel that it is an exercise of the holy imagination in which pious wishful thinking has too much to say. Certainly this book is not to be classified under the heading of biblical criticism, nor under that of scientific psychology of whatever brand. . . . In a time when the general trend in psychiatric thinking has been toward reductive interpretations, the constructive religious insight represented by this book is a welcome contribution." A. T. Boisen
+ Christian Century 64:433 Ap 2 '47 550w

"Psychology has its place; but does this include biblical interpretation? Some may read this book and still say that it does not. But on the whole, St. Matthew comes out very well from Dr. Kunkel's hands. . . . It is certainly a new thing in Gospel study; and preachers will find it evocative of ideas for sermons." F. J. Moore

Churchman 161:16 Ap 1 '47 150w

"Here is an interpretation of the First Gospel which stands in a class by itself. It will irritate 'orthodox' critical scholars and be pooh-poohed by the academically static minds. Many readers will find themselves busy spitting out the stones while they are eating the cherries of this tree of interpretation. But its very marked differences from other books on Matthew may be a very good reason for giving Kunkel attention and endeavoring to come to an understanding of what he attempts in this book." J. P. Berkeley

+ — Crozer Q 24:357 O '47 1200w

"The author is scholarly, in that he is familiar with the works of the best New Testament scholars and utilizes their findings. Theologians will probably have less to criticize in the book than psychologists who would challenge many of his presuppositions and deductions. Those who are seeking a new understanding of the power of the Christian faith in the world and have not found it either in Orthodox Protestantism or in Catholicism might find light upon their path in this reverent volume."

+ — Kirkus 15:65 F 1 '47 180w

"Dr. Kunkel's unusual and effective style captures the reader's attention from the outset. He uncovers a message in an ancient document. Recommended for all types of libraries." O. G. Lawson

+ Library J 72:159 Ja 15 '47 110w

KUTTNER, HENRY (LEWIS PADGETT, pseud). Day he died. 218p $2.50 Duell

47-30413

Mystery story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ag 31 '47
150w

Kirkus 15:350 J1 1 '47 80w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p17 S
7 '47 110w

N Y Times p36 S 7 '47 100w

"Overwrought, and rather pretentious."

— New Yorker 23:68 Ag 30 '47 110w

"Mr. Padgett more than fulfills the promise of his memorable first with this novel, whose lively portrayal of N.Y. writing circles combines with its cumulative, all-but-supernatural power and terror to lift it far above the by now formulaized conventions of the 'suspense novel.'" Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ag 31 '47
100w

"Generally satisfactory yarn."

Sat R of Lit 30:30 Ag 30 '47 40w

KUZNETS, SIMON SMITH. National income: a summary of findings. 144p $1.50 Nat. bur. of economic research

339.373 Income 46-8506

"As the subtitle suggests, this book is a summary of earlier works on national income, rather than a report on new research. Reasonably accurate and complete statistics of annual income in the United States are available only for the years after the first world war, and the author devotes the first part of his book to a discussion of these data. . . The second part of the book considers the broad changes in the size and composition of national income which have occurred since 1869. Although annual data are not available for the period before 1919, Professor Kuznets presents a number of interesting comparisons by using estimates of income by decades which were previously prepared by the National Bureau of Economic Research. . . The third part of the book is devoted to the cyclical movements in national income and its components which have occurred since 1900. The final section is a discussion of the author's views concerning the meaning of national income." U S Quarterly Bkl

Reviewed by Robert Dubin
Am J Soc 53:237 N '47 700w

Reviewed by A. Morgner
Am Soc R 12:370 Je '47 600w

"The author, who is an outstanding economist and statistician, sticks close to a straight reporting of the statistical data. The amount of thought and labor that must have gone into this work is not apparent until the fourth part is reached. Here, in a much too brief chapter on the problems of interpretation, the author points out the care that must be exercised in using national income estimates. He emphasizes the need to understand thoroughly the assumptions underlying these estimates, the problems of statistical methodology, and the significance of the levels and fluctuations as they are measured. However, the latter two points, while mentioned, are not discussed." R. C. Fletcher

Ann Am Acad 250:157 Mr '47 380w
Management R 36:121 F '47 70w
U S Quarterly Bkl 3:49 Mr '47 330w

KYD, THOMAS, pseud. Blood of vintage. 246p $2.50 Lippincott

47-17697

Detective story.

"The trick on which his solution hangs is mechanically neat if thin support for a novel, but Kyd's manner is easy and engages the attention brightly still." James Sandoe

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p9 Mr 2 '47 110w

Kirkus 14:629 D 15 '46 60w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 Mr 30 '47 130w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p38 Mr 2 '47 140w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher
San Francisco Chronicle p14 Mr 23 '47 70w

"Commendable."
+ Sat R of Lit 30:44 Mr 8 '47 40w

KYLE, ELISABETH, pseud. See Dunlop, A. M. R.

L

LABE, LOUISE CHARLY, called. Love sonnets; with tr. by Frederic Prokosch. $2.50 New directions

841 S47-30889

Translations of twenty-four love sonnets written in the sixteenth century by a French woman who was "known for her wit and beauty, and her belligerent vitality as well."

The French originals are given on the page opposite the translations.

"Frederic Prokosch has made some admirable translations of the love sonnets of Louise Labé. He has some stubbornly personal poetry to contend with; he is often confronted with passages which are pure fire in sixteenth century French but are only rather banal exhalations in twentieth century English. It is good to see how he gets behind these words to the causes of their infections; behind the meaning to the intention." Henry Rago

+ Commonweal 47:353 Ja 16 '48 340w
Kirkus 15:594 O 15 '47 90w

"It is almost impossible to translate these twenty-four intense and severe sonnets of the French Renaissance without making them sound like products of the Romanticism that came much later. Mr. Prokosch's English versions are even softer and more diffuse than Rilke's German ones."

New Yorker 23:106 S 20 '47 80w

"If these sonnets are scarcely 'among the most beautiful love poems ever written,' as the jacket of this translation says they are, they are nevertheless of great formal and rhetorical interest. Controlled, clear, almost straitly classical, they have the exalted declamatory tone of an étude majeure: they call for the rostrum rather than for the alcove. Mr. Prokosch's translation of them is notable for its fluid grace and for the tact with which so many difficult problems are undertaken." Dudley Fitts

+ Sat R of Lit 31:29 Ja 3 '48 410w

LA DUE, RUSSELL MORSEBY. No more with me. 274p $2.50 Doubleday

47-2414

An ex-marine, just out of service, tries to win back a girl who no longer loves him, and when he fails goes on a prolonged tour of the "hot spots" in his attempt to forget her.

"'No More With Me' is another of those postwar buff-bam-zowie, how-about-another drink, hey-do-you-love-me novels. It is uneven and quite disturbing because the young author, a former Marine and now an instructor at the University of Michigan, shows so many flashes of talent that one wishes he had read his final draft just one more time." Herman Kogan

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ap 20 '47 200w

"Introducing a young writer, this carries the stamp of sincerity, and is symptomatic of these times, even if it is not fully realized nor resolved."

Kirkus 15:41 Ja 15 '47 90w

"'No More With Me' is a novel of one idea, with matching dialogue. The author has a staccato style which is effective, but after a time you wish he would change the needle—or the record. The game of sex is transcribed with expertness, and the characters are done with surface fidelity, but Mr. La Due is mistaken in thinking that the game is more absorbing if played without intermissions." Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p26 Mr 23 '47 380w

"There is no doubt that the author knows his subject well—too well, in fact, for we are under the impression that he believes that the antics of his young collegians are as hilarious as they appear to themselves. But the truth of the matter is that their preoccupation with sex and liquor seems quite unreal and unimportant. Separating their smug little world from the universe of larger issues and real people is a barrier which Mr. La Due has not surmounted." David Dempsey

— N Y Times p14 Mr 23 '47 470w

LAFARGE, OLIVER. Santa Eulalia; the religion of a Cuchumatán Indian town. 211p il $4 Univ. of Chicago press

970.02 Ethnology—Guatemala. Indians of Central America—Religion and mythology

47-2338

"This book presents the greater part of observations made during a visit to Los Altos Cuchumatanes in 1932. . . A main subject of investigation was the native religion and ceremonial, viewed both for the archeological interest of their Mayan survivals and as part of a study in acculturation. As the information gathered on this subject far outweighs the balance in interest, this book concentrates upon it." Intro

Reviewed by S. K. Lothrop
Am Anthropol 50:112 Ja '48 800w

"La Farge, who is himself a Roman Catholic, gives a more obviously unbiased account of religion in Santa Eulalia than a non-Catholic could and a more exact description and analysis of the phenomena than could be given by anyone but an experienced ethnologist. His observations were made several years ago, but there is no reason to believe that the conditions have greatly changed. . . The whole picture of this Indian village, with its pagan ideas and practices in Catholic garb, is of fascinating interest." W. E. Garrison
+ Christian Century 64:655 My 21 '47 230w

"There is endless fascination and illumination in this study of the blend of outward Christian forms with inward Indian philosophy, and, so far as the reviewer knows, it has never been caught so well by the combination of a gifted pen, a sharpened interest, careful preparation and sheer good luck." B. D. Wolfe
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 JI 20 '47 1200w

Reviewed by Mildred Adams
N Y Times p7 My 11 '47 750w

"This study offers a perspective and an approach to those who have an archaeological interest in Mayan survivals and to those who seek to unravel the acculturation processes which took place after the discovery and colonization of the New World."
U S Quarterly Bkl 3:154 Je '47 240w

LAFFERTY, HARRY MONTGOMERY. Sense and nonsense in education. 202p $2 Macmillan

370.973 Education—U.S. 47-2619

Fourteen essays which examine some specific problems of American education. "The mission of this book is . . . to examine a few specific problems of American education, problems which often do not get the attention they deserve, and to report matter-of-factly the results of such examination." (Foreword) The author is professor of education at East Texas State teachers college. Index.

Booklist 43:325 Je 15 '47

"Written in a boldly humorous and popularized style. . . Just as many professional writers will wince at some of Lafferty's hard remarks, sympathetic reviewers of books will find little comfort in his blunt appraisal of their value to the profession. Both points, of course, are well taken. Some persons may report that Lafferty's use of the facetious style, which, unfortunately, is often ineffective if not a handicap, is hardly the kind of example needed. The 'wisecrack' medium is difficult to use, and some chapters, particularly the last, are so strained that they nearly collapse. However, the adopted style is, in general, employed with much effect and usually results in appropriate and brilliant expressions which clinch the author's points in a memorable way. The book is delightful and stimulating and, by virtue of its readability, one which both laymen and educators in great numbers can enjoy as a common experience." R. H. Anderson
+ — El School J 47:595 Je '47 800w

"A witty approach that tends to throw the serious fallacies into sharp relief."
School & Society 65:286 Ap 19 '47 40w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman
School & Society 66:428 N 29 '47 500w
Social Studies 38:376 D '47 360w

LAIR, ELBERT A. Carpentry for the building trades. 188p il $2.50 McGraw 694 Carpentry. Building 47-30909

"A modern text for secondary schools. Deals with all branches of house building, construction, framing, roofing and siding as well as material on insulation, blue print reading, and safety rules. Special emphasis on the smaller house. Illustrated." (Library J) Index.

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:1039 JI '47 40w
N Y New Tech Bks 32:45 JI '47

LAIRD, MRS HELENE. Nancy keeps house; il, by Sari. 189p $2 World pub.

47-31479

In story form describes how Nancy learned to keep house from dish washing to party giving, and how she put her knowledge into practice while her mother was in the hospital. For girls of twelve or over.

"Girls who like that sort of thing will profit by it. Those who hate housework but have to help Mother will be grateful for it." Jane Cobb
+ Atlantic 180:150 D '47 50w

Booklist 44:156 D 15 '47

"Yes—it's that impossible thing, an exciting book about keeping house. . . It's a good story."

+ Kirkus 15:581 O 15 '47 140w

"The practical suggestions should be of help to both mothers and daughters. Attractive drawings by Sari. Recommended." Elizabeth Johnson

+ Library J 72:1544 N 1 '47 60w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 D 21 '47 290w

"This is a 'how' book, charmingly disguised as the cheerful story of an eager little girl and her understanding mother." N. B. Baker
+ N Y Times p20 Ja 11 '48 140w

LAIRD, JOHN. Philosophical incursions into English literature. 224p $2.75 Macmillan

820.4 English literature—History and criticism [47-891]

"The author was Professor of Moral Philosophy at Aberdeen University. . . The book was written during the war when he sought refreshment in unprofessional reading. An amateur in literature, but an expert in philosophy, he combined the two qualities very happily in a series of essays on such diverse authors as Shakespeare and Pope, Sterne and Bridges, Shelley and Browning, Dickens and Dr. Isaac Watts. His purpose in each essay was to explore the philosophy of the writer in question, either in one of his works or more generally in his work as a whole. His method was largely expository and was based on liberal quotation." Manchester Guardian

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ap 20 '47 70w

Manchester Guardian p3 D 10 '46 250w

"Professor Laird's leisurely and urbane comments on some figures in English literature that interest him are unfailingly to the point. He writes with distinction." G. S.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 Ap 20 '47 60w

"Laird wrote well; his style is graceful and lucid, not disfigured by the philosophic jargon too frequent with modern philosophers (it is absent in Berkeley) and, alas! not entirely unknown among literary critics. Occasionally, it is true, one hears the voice of the philosopher rather than that of the critic, and sometimes one realises that the philosopher is imperceptive of matters plain to the man of letters. On the whole, however, the book can be read happily as the work of a well-versed critic, so much so that it is only gradually that the limitations of the philosopher's approach dawn on one." Bonamy Dobrée
+ — Spec 178:17 Ja 3 '47 1250w

LAKE, ELIZABETH. Marguerite Reilly. 396p
$3 Pilot 47-4819

Character study of a ruthless domineering woman, Marguerite Reilly, daughter of humble Catholic parents, who determines to raise herself and her family to greatness. She has the will to succeed, and for a time she does. But her family will not be ruled by her, and partly because of that, and partly because of her own instability her plans fail.

"A sordid, trivial, uneventful yet interesting study, a novel only in the way that Defoe's books are novels. . . Recommended for large libraries." E. L. Lewis
Library J 72:463 Mr 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by Harold Brighthouse
Manchester Guardian p3 N 15 '46 120w

"One is ready to concede that such a woman could exist, in fact probably did—perhaps almost to the life within the first-hand experience of her creator, Miss Lake. But her story is told so objectively, recapturing so little of the color and emotion that Marguerite herself must have experienced in her obstreperous years of living, that one never becomes deeply concerned with it. Miss Lake is rather repetitious, too, in her use of her materials, telling her tale with tireless thoroughness at one monotonous level." F. H. Bullock
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p27 Mr 30 '47 800w

"In its tempo, in its thorough search for truths, 'Marguerite Reilly' is an honest achievement." H. B. Parker
+ N Y Times p24 Ap 27 '47 450w

"It is a remarkably complete character-study, and on a smaller scale the portraits of other members of the family are equally good. The book engages the reader's attention from the first page. It is acutely observed and beautifully written; but it is a very long story, and it is so entirely concerned with unpleasant people that admiration for the novelist's achievement gives way before the end to restlessness. The Reillys are a deplorable family, and 350 pages would have been enough for them." V. C. Clinton-Baddeley
+ Spec 177:558 N 22 '46 280w

"There are [some] extremely well-drawn characters, such as the mother and Kathleen, all of whom live, although Miss Lake seems happier in portraying women than men. This is a long novel, carefully and imaginatively written."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p589 N 30 '46 330w

LAKE, JOE BARRY (JOE BARRY, pseud).
Clean-up. 256p $2 Arcadia 47-1833

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun Book Week p10 Mr 9 '47 90w

"Readable roughie."
+ Sat R of Lit 30:30 Mr 15 '47 30w

LAMB, HAROLD. Garden to the eastward. 374p $2.75 Doubleday 47-30195

Novel of love, archeology, and politics, the scene of which changes from Cairo to Baghdad, to an ancient settlement in northern Kurdistan near the border of Russia, and finally Washington, D. C. The hero is Captain Jacob Ide, of U. S. army intelligence; the heroine a shell-shocked American girl. Together they explore the ancient city, founded in Babylonian times, suspected of being the lost paradise of Araman.

Booklist 43:242 Ap 1 '47

"When one remembers the ease and clarity of some of Lamb's earlier books, such as the 'March of the Barbarians,' it seems unfortunate that the dialogue in this novel should be so incredibly stilted and most of the characters stock. . . But Lamb still writes well and vividly of the history and archaeology of this part of the world, of Asiatic landscape, of Eastern cities and of Kurdish tribesmen." Clare Jaynes

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p9 Mr 23 '47 340w

Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '47

"The story is rich with beauty—with detail—with symbolism."
+ Kirkus 15:140 Mr 1 '47 160w

"Imaginative romance that makes some contribution to the history of that section. Recommended." Katharine Shorey
+ Library J 72:387 Mr 1 '47 90w

"After a brave start 'A Garden to the Eastward' peters out into cryptic bypaths. Mr. Lamb's intentions are of the best, but his invention fails to keep pace so far as interest is concerned. The book is not worthy of the man who wrote so brilliantly of Genghis Khan, Tamerlane, Alexander and a score of others." P. J. Searles
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Mr 9 '47 500w

"A novel of windy splendors and splendid purpose, a novel with more mission than magnetism, a half-alive novel with a fully live message. . . The idea is a noble one, and it is eloquently expressed. But somewhere in the preaching of it Mr. Lamb's story gets away from him. The 'immense power' emanating from Araman becomes anti-climactic and confused. Didacticism takes over the drama." Charles Lee
+ N Y Times p10 Mr 9 '47 500w

"Mr. Lamb is so convincing about his Near East that as long as he sticks to fact, or even conjecture, he is good. Unfortunately, he is bent on dragging in a love affair between his paper-thin major characters and becomes more engrossed in it than the reader is likely to be."
+ New Yorker 23:98 Mr 8 '47 190w

Reviewed by Edith James
San Francisco Chronicle p12 Mr 23 '47 400w

"For those who enjoy Lamb, it is good provender, although a trifle indigestible." Linton Wells

Sat R of Lit 30:18 Mr 8 '47 800w
Wis Lib Bul 43:98 Je '47

LAMONT, WILLIAM DAWSON. Principles of moral judgment. 225p $4 Oxford 47-3880

170 Ethics 47-3880

"Dr. Lamont is anxious that ethics should be as factual a study as possible. He rejects the view that part of the business of a moral philosopher is to discuss what ethical standards ought to be followed, on the ground that whatever standards are actually followed are ipso facto taken as supreme, so that there is no higher principle by which they might be judged." Times [London] Lit Sup

"Let no one looking for light summer reading reach for Lamont. Let anyone willing to think seriously about morality spend hours on him." E. S. Brightman
+ Christian Century 64:831 Jl 2 '47 800w
Times [London] Lit Sup p94 F 15 '47 1250w

LAMPMAN, BEN HUR. Wild swan, and other sketches; il. by Quincy Scott. 205p $2.75 Crowell 47-11333

A volume of short stories and sketches by the associate editor of the Portland Oregonian. The stories include anecdotes of Him and Her, an old couple living upriver and reputed slightly "teched"; others tell of the old lady who lived at the end of the car line with only her old gray cat for company; and there are five about Uncle Sylvester and his adventures in heaven.

Kirkus 15:443 Ag 15 '47 130w

"Warm, human feeling, familiarity with their folkways, speech and natural surroundings characterize these sketches of the country people of the Pacific Northwest. . . Here are whimsy, mysticism, humor, allegory and beast fable in lyrical prose with no false notes. Not everybody's dish and to be taken in small doses, but definitely a talent to be enjoyed by some." B. B. Libaire

+ Library J 72:1266 S 15 '47 130w

"Mr. Lampman's writing, whether it is a story built of poetic fancy or a sketch of human beings caught in moments of laughter or poignancy, carries the flavor of the country he knows. Especially is this true of the twelve sketches written about 'Him and Her,' . . . Somehow, the poetry and the feeling inherent in the characterization of these people are more moving than the self-conscious poetic prose with which Mr. Lampman weaves the tales of fantasy in this volume." Rose Feld

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24
N 30 '47 450w

"All in all, this is a charming collection of tales and sketches, written in a light vein which skirts many provocative ideas seldom encountered at this level. A beautiful allegory permeates the most ordinary situations, transmuting them into the speculative." Marguerite Young

+ N Y Times p12 D 7 '47 500w

LAMSA, GEORGE MAMISHISHO. New Testament origin. 104p $2 Ziff-Davis

225 Bible. New Testament—Criticism, interpretation, etc. 47-1891

"The author's aim is to inform the western world that Christianity is an eastern religion and the New Testament an eastern book written by the easterners for the use of their own people in the language they spoke. He argues that, since Jesus and his disciples were easterners preaching to the Jews, Assyrians and Syrians it was natural for them to be inspired to preach and to write in the language of their own people, Aramaic." Churchman

Christian Century 64:742 Je 11 '47 40w

"The material in this volume is strongly supported by the internal evidence, and by the testimonies of popes, patriarchs, and biblical authorities. The author speaks and reads Aramaic, the language which Jesus spoke, just as an American reads and speaks English. Here is a book for everyone who wants to know where and why the New Testament was written, and who were its authors." Alfred Price

+ Churchman 161:19 My 1 '47 300w

LAMSON, MARY DEPUTY. Gardening with shrubs and small flowering trees. 295p il $3 Barrows

635.976 Shrubs Agr47-88

"The text and many lists are a guide to the study of shrubs—size, color, shape, and appearance at various seasons—and their selection for most effective grouping around the house, along walls, as hedges, or in other locations. It is a suggestive book on the use of shrubs for the home gardener and does not give technical descriptions. Only a short chapter on actual planting and care." Booklist

Booklist 43:181 F 15 '47

"Strikes a new and welcome note in books on this subject. Perhaps the author's long experience as a practicing landscape architect has given her a deep understanding of what home owners need to know about the theme she writes on, along with an unusual ability to impart that knowledge simply and convincingly; perhaps she just has a natural knack of presenting this kind of story so that it makes sense. In any event, she has done an excellent job of organizing her material and presenting it with a clarity that is in marked contrast with the rather erratic confusion so apparent in the majority of preceding volumes that deal with the selection and uses of ornamental shrubs and trees." R. S. Lemmon

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20
Mr 2 '47 140w

LANCASTER, BRUCE. Scarlet patch. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 477p $3 Little 47-2060

A story of the foreign-born volunteers who fought on the Union side during the Civil war. The book covers the eastern battles of the first years of the war.

Booklist 43:255 Ap 15 '47

Reviewed by Charles Leavelle

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Ap 20 '47
480w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '47

"Absorbing reading, good history, good adventure, good romance."

+ Kirkus 15:132 Mr 1 '47 280w

"Well worth reading." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 72:639 Ap 15 '47 80w

"Bruce Lancaster's new historical novel is a long, well constructed, generally interesting and at times exciting story built around the service of the foreign-born volunteers who fought for the preservation of the Union in the American Civil War. . . 'The Scarlet Patch' has value as a novel of action if not of character; it treats an interesting and neglected aspect of our history; the battle scenes are effective, and the readers who have come to respect Mr. Lancaster's skill as a historical novelist through his 'Guns of Burgoyne' and 'Trumpet to Arms' will not be disappointed." Coleman Rosenberger

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10
Ap 27 '47 550w

"Bruce Lancaster has written the best novel of the Civil War which this reviewer has ever read. He has put into it research as profound as that which marked Freeman's monumental works on Robert E. Lee, yet it is free from pedantry or laborious historical asides. The reader senses—as did the man in the ranks—the timidity of McClellan, the incompetency of Pope, and the uncertainty of Meade when he was rushed into command only ten days before Gettysburg." Hoffman Birney

+ N Y Times p5 Ap 20 '47 600w

Reviewed by Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p12 My 4 '47
70w

Springf'd Union p4 Je 11 '47 150w

Wis Lib Bul 43:82 My '47

LANDAU, MARK ALEKSANDROVICH (M. A. ALDANOV, pseud). Before the deluge; tr. from the Russian by Catherine Routsy. 561p $3.50 Scribner

47-6370

"This book covers the period from January 11, 1874 to March 1, 1881 in European and particularly in Russian history. Prince Otto von Bismarck, the Chancellor of Germany, Czar Alexander the Second and his family, Richard Wagner, Liszt, Karl Marx, Victor Hugo, Dostoevsky, Bakunin, the anarchist leader, Disraeli, and many other leading figures of the time walk through the pages and stop and talk. . . The central story is the assassination of Alexander the Second by Russian terrorists." Sat R of Lit

Reviewed by Henry Shapiro

Atlantic 181:127 Ja '48 500w

Reviewed by G. V. Bobrinskoy

Chicago Sun Book Week p13a D 3 '47
380w

"The novel is fine, full of truth, and timely." T. M. Longstreth

Christian Science Monitor p18 N 13 '47
650w

Reviewed by Mason Wade

Commonweal 47:179 N 28 '47 420w

Kirkus 15:407 Ag 1 '47 170w

"Too disconnected and too thin a plot for enjoyment. Inspid happy ending."

— Library J 72:1374 O 1 '47 70w

"One reads 'Before the Deluge' not for action and excitement but for its leisurely discursiveness, its subtle and richly hued characterization, its distillation of a period." Rose Feld

LANDAU, M. A.—Continued

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6
O 19 '47 800w

"Fascinating new novel by the author of 'The Fifth Seal.' . . In a book of this size, of course, there are minor flaws: the reviewer cannot help noting vernacular anachronisms on the part of the translator. But few current novels offer so much entertainment and stimulation." Charles Lee

+ — N Y Times p1 O 5 '47 1100w

"As fiction . . . is overlong and weighted down with irrelevancies, a fantastic number of characters, and a confusion of incidents.
As an ironic survey of a critical period in European history, however, it is so absorbing that anyone interested in the philosophical background of modern politics will probably not want to miss it."

+ — New Yorker 23:109 N 1 '47 80w

"It is a costume piece. It is history based on meticulous research but served on the golden platter of fiction in a form that gives the novelist considerable freedom. . . All the events are narrated in authentic detail yet with a light touch. The only episode in the book which has excitement is an operation on a Russian official performed by a surgeon brought from Vienna for the purpose. The placid atmosphere of easy living and bored loving recreates the old Russia before the Revolution, before the deluge." Louis Fischer

Sat R of Lit 30:16 O 18 '47 600w

LANDES, RUTH. City of women. 248p $3 Macmillan

299.6 Negroes in Brazil. Negroes—Religion.
Folklore, Negro 47-3896

Popularly written account of the author's observations and experiences during an anthropological field trip in Bahia and Rio de Janeiro in 1938 and 1939.

"It is because Miss Landes had an excellent routine anthropological training that her book has its commendable aspects. It is, however, because she had no more than the usual anthropological training that her work has such regrettable deficiencies, and that she experienced the personal difficulties that marked her stay in Brazil, of which she tells. However, if her book brings us to the realization that our obligations toward students we send into the field are more than to equip them to handle just the immediate field problems they are to study, this will add to the value of the scientifically valid data that are to be found in this work." M. J. Herskovits

+ — Am Anthropol 50:123 Ja '48 1600w

"This book and the one by Oliver La Farge are among the best studies of the mingling of Christianity and paganism. Miss Landes' has perhaps the greatest popular interest." W. E.
Garrison

+ Christian Century 64:656 My 21 '47
320w

"Ruth Landes' present book is in a more popular vein than that customarily associated with Ph.D. dissertations and scholarly research monographs. . . Miss Landes lived in the midst of this strange religion (until she was asked to leave by the minions of the government).
She relates her experiences in a thrilling manner." W. P. Sears

+ Churchman 161:18 S 1 '47 140w

"A visual, sympathetic record of this particular cult, necessarily circumscribed in interest."

+ Kirkus 15:183 Mr 15 '47 120w

"This tourist account by an anthropologist of a field trip to Brazil is devoted in the main to 'candomblé' one of a number of fascinating African survivals in the Western hemisphere.
. . . Throughout the book Miss Landes's interests tend to center rather on the more sensational aspects of candomblé. It is this unfortunate susceptibility to striking surface expressions and imperviousness to sub-surface forces that is the basic shortcoming of 'The City of Women.'" Virginia Mishnun

+ — Nation 165:128 Ag 2 '47 700w

Reviewed by B. D. Wolfe
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10
Ag 24 '47 600w

"Scholars so often take refuge in the jargon of their science that it is gratifying indeed to find one, an anthropologist, who has written an entirely readable book, richly documented, on the folk life of Brazil." Gitel Poznanski

+ N Y Times p22 Ag 3 '47 700w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Jl 13 '47
230w

Reviewed by J. J. Honigmann
Social Forces 26:227 D '47 440w

Reviewed by J. F. Santee
Social Studies 39:39 Ja '48 450w

Reviewed by Kathryn Close
Survey 83:294 O '47 360w

LANDHEER, BARTHOLOMEUS. The Netherlands in a changing world; a series of essays. 224p $3 Roy pubs.

949.2 Netherlands—Civilization. Reconstruction (1939-)—Netherlands 47-4270

A series of essays embodying the author's reflections upon returning to Holland after the war. He touches upon the political, cultural, and economic life of the Netherlands, and the Netherlands East Indies; discusses religion and politics since the separation of Church and State; has a chapter on Holland's place in the world. The author was born and educated in Holland, and is now with the Netherlands Information Bureau in America. Bibliography.

"A clarifying portrait, with no regional or personal flavor."

+ Kirkus 15:249 My 1 '47 160w

Reviewed by A. B. Lindsay
Library J 72:731 My 1 '47 140w

"The effectiveness of Mr. Landheer's work is somewhat weakened by a style which often reads like a bad translation. The book also abounds in typographical errors, the most alarming of which, by confusing Prussia with Russia, extends the possessions of the latter state to the border of Mr. Landheer's native land." G. A. Craig

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16
S 7 '47 550w

LANDIS, PAUL HENRY. Social policies in the making; a dynamic view of social problems.
554p il maps $4 Heath

301.153 Social problems. U.S.—Social conditions 47-3816

"Designed to orient youth to the major social forces operating in modern society and show how they affect individual adjustment and social problems. It is an analysis of contemporary social problems as they emerge from the experience of man in a rapidly changing culture which roots deeply in a more stable past.
Emphasis is placed on problems of our time not merely for the purpose of describing symptoms of maladjustment but rather in order to present the social forces that have caused them to emerge in their present form and to point out ways in which these forces may be employed to ease adjustment. . . In style the book is designed for the college student in the lower division who is usually escorted through one of three courses: social problems, social pathology, or social science orientation." (Pref) Chapter bibliographies. Visual aids. Indexes

Reviewed by F. N. House
Am J Soc 53:236 N '47 300w

"This is a splendidly conceived book, which, it appears to the reviewer, scarcely succeeds in living up to the promise of its title. . .
Although there are scattered throughout the book many suggestions of improvements that might be made in our society, Landis finds it hard, even in those chapter sections devoted to constructive measures, to be specific. . . The language is simple. The student is confronted with a minimum of theory. The book should stimulate the thinking of students of advanced high-school or junior-college level, and inform them about many of the problems of modern society." W. C. Neely

+ — Social Educ 11:380 D '47 450w

"This book seems to have several merits. The style is simple, direct and lucid. The concepts used are relatively few and there is unusual freedom from needless and confusing academic jargon. . . . On the negative side, it seems that there will be numerous sociologists who will be disquieted by several aspects of Landis' book as a teaching tool. First, the reader gets little feeling for the ideological context of social problems definition and treatment, little awareness of the sharp and vital value clashes within which social problems and social policies have their being. . . . Second, the avoidance of definition-making may have been overdone. . . . Third, simplification may be overdone when the chapter on 'class interests' is handled solely in terms of the struggle of organized labor with capital-management." J. F. Cuber

+ — Social Forces 26:235 D '47 1050w

LANDIS, PAUL HENRY. Your marriage and family living. 373p il $2.20 McGraw 392.5 Marriage. Family 47-1365

"This book is written in the belief that preparation for marriage is a proper responsibility of the high school. . . . About one fifth of the book is devoted to study of the family institution: its forms in other societies, changes in its economic and social functions, and contrast between rural and urban families. The main body of the book considers the problems of mate selection, marriage adjustment, and parenthood. . . . Various family crises are discussed: the 'empty nest,' death, and divorce, both in their social setting in our American society and in their effects on mates and children. A final chapter suggests ways of improving family life; better mate selection, regular employment opportunities, social security, provision of adequate medical care, diet, and housing." (Social Educ) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 43:249 Ap 15 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '47

"This volume is a valuable addition to the growing literature dealing with family life. It should have the thoughtful attention of teachers as a major reference for adults, college students, and advanced high school pupils." Lucile Alexander

+ J Home Econ 39:522 O '47 220w

"The book is well grounded in both family research and sociological theory. It refers to almost every topic conceivably related to the problems of marriage and the family, and the viewpoint is progressive. It is, however, written in an elementary fashion, and the conclusions are often presented dogmatically. Its use should stimulate discussion beyond its own materials, which the teacher will have to be prepared to guide constructively." W. C. Neely

+ — Social Educ 11:189 Ap '47 400w

"A good book. However, I feel that it could have been a much more satisfactory book if greater care had been exercised in putting it together." D. S. Klais

+ — Social Forces 25:477 My '47 850w

"The tone of the book is optimistic, but it is based on social facts and the reality of family life in the United States today, presented in a way which stimulates thinking and judgments and provides data for discussions and decisions." Esther McGinnis

+ Social Studies 38:281 O '47 230w

LANDON, MRS MARGARET DOROTHEA (MORTENSON). Anna and the king; il. by Margaret Ayer. (Asia press bk) 250p $2.50 Day

915.93 Thailand—Social life and customs. Leonowens, Mrs Anna Harriette (Crawford). Mongkut, king of Siam 47-4076

A new version of Anna and the King of Siam (Book Review Digest 1944) re-edited for ages twelve to sixteen. Political episodes are cut; several of the more distressing incidents are omitted; and the language has been simplified.

Booklist 43:349 Jl 1 '47

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold

Christian Science Monitor p4 Jl 31 '47 250w

"Whether or not they have seen the motion picture about Anna, girls will enjoy the romantic experiences of the young woman who influenced materially the recent history of an Oriental country as it passed from ancient customs to those of modern times." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:267 Jl '47 140w

"Editing has been judicious except for a few unnecessary word substitutions. Colorful picture of the court and personalities of the main characters remain vivid. Margaret Ayer's charming drawings have been retained. Recommended for all young people's collections because of the scarcity of material about Siam and general excellence of this version." Clara Adams

+ Library J 72:963 Je 15 '47 80w

Sat R of Lit 30:35 Jl 12 '47 50w

LANDOR, WALTER SAVAGE. Shorter poems; sel. and ed. by J. B. Sidgwick. 91p $1.75 Macmillan 521

Selections from the shorter poems of this English classical poet. "All you have in this volume is an introduction which is a masterpiece of compression (the whole essence of Landor in twelve pages). 180-odd short poems, and fewer notes put in only when and where they will do the most good." (N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R)

"The book is thin (91 pages), exquisitely printed in a simplicity almost impossible to imitate outside of England, and edited with delicate taste by an editor who is a master of his theme and yet displays no tiresome erudition. He writes with the precision of a scholar who knows all about his subject and also knows how to say the few things which are the best to be said, without heavily hinting at all that he is leaving out."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 Jl 27 '47 400w

"The reviewer thinks that Mr. Sidgwick might well have included many poems whose absence is almost shocking. Where are the noble lines to Robert Browning, as fine a compliment as one great poet ever paid another? . . . One wonders on what principle 'On Goethe's Epigrams,' 'A Back-Biter,' 'A Poet Sleeping' were chosen. Perhaps Mr. Sidgwick thinks we ought to catch Homer nodding now and then. At any rate Mr. Sidgwick loves Landor and regrets that so few nowadays know him. If his anxieties are justified, then the creatures deserve it. For not to have grown aware of that delicate grandeur is its own pitiful reward." Leonard Bacon

Sat R of Lit 30:34 Ag 2 '47 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p64 F 1 '47 3400w

LANDY, A. Marxism and the democratic tradition. 220p $2.50 Int. pubs.

335.4 Socialism. Democracy 46-11975

"The story of the struggle for democracy in the western world, according to the author, is the story of the advance of Communism." Foreign Affairs

"Unfortunately Mr. Landy does not address himself directly to the point. The first three quarters of his book are taken up with a rather well-written, but necessarily cursory, summary of European and American history, in the course of which the middle-class revolutions which ushered in the period of representative government are subjected to the characteristically Marxist interpretation. It is not my purpose to quarrel with the interpretation, but only to point out that there is nothing particularly new about it. . . . Only in the last chapter of the book does Mr. Landy actually get down to the matter at hand." Hilden Gibson

+ Am Pol Sci R 41:152 F '47 440w

LANDY, A.—Continued

"Landy's book is of interest for those anxious to read a study of the rise of modern democracy written from a Communist-Marxist point of view." Waldemar Gurian

Am Pol Sci R 41:1028 O '47 300w

Reviewed by G. F. Thomas

Ann Am Acad 252:116 J1 '47 650w

Foreign Affairs 25:519 Ap '47 30w

LANE, CARL DANIEL. How to sail. 267p il $3 Norton

797.124 Sailing 47-30154

"A complete handbook of the art of sailing for the novice and the old hand." (Subtitle) Gives information on storage, insurance, stranding, jury rudders, making sail, signals, and symbols. Glossary of sailing terms. Index.

Booklist 43:220 Mr 15 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p8 Mr 9 '47 150w

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '47

Library J 72:321 F 15 '47 10w

New Yorker 23:103 Mr 8 '47 60w

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Mr 23 '47 80w

LANE, FERDINAND COLE. Mysterious sea. 345p $3 Doubleday

551.46 Ocean 47-30276

"A general book about the sea; modern scientific viewpoint, chapters on how the seas began, boundaries, contours, currents, tides, waves, plant and animal life, feathered migrants, farming and mining the seas, ships, shipwrecks, charts, lighting the seas, the seas and climate, oceans of ice, islands, capes, trade routes, oceans in a changing world." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 43:285 My 15 '47

"The author is not only an authority on oceanography; he has also taught journalism at the University of Georgia. Blending these talents, he has produced a fascinating book. He writes lucidly and tersely, stacking an impressive number of facts without ever becoming tedious." Serrell Hillman

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ap 13 '47 220w

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 J1 '47

"Very good reading."

+ Kirkus 15:49 Ja 15 '47 190w

"Of value as replacing older titles on this vast subject and as leading the reader to more scientific works. Recommended." H. A. Wooster

+ Library J 72:527 Ap 1 '47 70w

"This is a discriminative, sound, and absorbing volume on the ocean. It bears the same relation to a text book that Fowler's 'English Usage' does to a dictionary, and I can offer no higher praise." William Beebe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 Ap 13 '47 700w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:34 Ap '47

"I am rather alarmed that as a third-rate oceanographer I should still be able to pick out a considerable number of inaccuracies and inadequacies. On the other hand, these shortcomings are in detail, and the general approach of the book is sound. We have needed some popular treatment of oceanography, a much-neglected but expanding subject in the United States. Mr. Lane writes with great feeling for his subject, and with vigor." G. R. Stewart

+ N Y Times p3 Ap 13 '47 800w

"An unevenly organized and written (and sloppily indexed) book of oceanic lore, by a marine biologist and explorer who has unfortunately tried to cram into some three hundred pages a whole encyclopedia of the sea. The finished product is tantalizing and often puzzling. . . . A good enough repository of interesting and odd information, but that's about all."

+ New Yorker 23:114 Ap 19 '47 140w

Reviewed by Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p19 My 11 '47 70w

LANE, MERVIN L. How to sell life insurance. 250p il $3.75 Prentice-Hall

368.3 Insurance, Life 47-1805

"How sales are made by tried, successful methods based on sales experience, presented in readable form. Uses case history method of illustration. Approach through direct mail with letters and post-sale service conclude the volume." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 43:284 My 15 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:814 My 15 '47 60w

LANE, WHEATON JOSHUA, ed. Pictorial history of Princeton. 208p il $6 Princeton univ. press

378 Princeton university 47-6787

"Nearly 500 pictures presenting all angles of activity from the founding of the college in 1746 to the end of the bicentennial celebration." School & Society

"The present volume resembles, in part, a glorified class-book, but the early and middle years of the institution are substantially represented by historically valuable pictures and facsimiles of documents as well as by concise text." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 64:1337 N 5 '47 280w

Current Hist 13:357 D '47 40w

New Yorker 23:114 N 1 '47 100w

School & Society 66:302 O 18 '47 30w

LANEY, AL. Paris Herald; the incredible newspaper. 334p $3 Appleton-Century

071 New York herald tribune (European edition) 47-11001

A history of the Paris Herald, starting with its founding by James Gordon Bennett in 1837, and carrying it thru its many trials and tribulations to the fall of France in 1940. The author was the night editor of this "peculiar American manifestation in the heart of Paris" for eleven years. Index.

Reviewed by C. W. Morton

Atlantic 131:124 Ja '48 420w

Booklist 44:82 N 1 '47

Reviewed by John Pickering

Chicago Sun Book Week p8 O 26 '47 300w

Reviewed by F. G. Smith

Commonweal 47:305 Ja 2 '48 900w

"An oddity in newspaper history, the Herald's career is adequately, not brilliantly, handled."

+ Kirkus 15:455 Ag 15 '47 120w

"Book will appeal not only to those who enjoy journalism, but to those who have known and loved Paris." M. A. Johnson

Library J 72:1372 O 1 '47 70w

"In this excellently written history Mr. Laney has carried off the difficult task of bringing to life a paper in several transformations from 1837 to 1947. He has put the good old Paris Herald finally to bed. And there she is." Whit Burnett

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 N 16 '47 900w

"Mr. Laney provides an excellent close-up of the office he knew. . . . He also furnishes a good Herald's-eye view of the pre-war Paris scene, back to the life and times of the fabulous James Gordon Bennett, who raised The Paris Herald to be a plaything ruled by his whim. But his book is at its best when dealing with Mr. Laney's contemporaries, the men he met daily for their 'duration.'" J. W. Curley

+ N Y Times p31 N 2 '47 600w

"His book is fairly entertaining, even though its humor tends to be intramural."

+ New Yorker 23:113 N 1 '47 70w

"Al Laney has written a superb critical history of a world-famous newspaper. Except for an occasional dubious superlative, there is nothing wrong with the book." John Rackliffe

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:74 D 6 '47 750w

LANGDON, GRACE. Home guidance for young children; a parents' handbook. rev ed 357p il $4; educ ed $3.20 Day

649.1 Children—Care and hygiene. Children—Management 47-1367

This revised edition of a work first published in 1931 (Book Review Digest 1931) contains a new chapter, School Days.

Booklist 43:332 Je 15 '47

"The information is presented in easy non-technical fashion and is well within the grasp of any mother's reading capacity. The book is well indexed for reference for any mother who has time to consult it in any one of the many crises which arise in day-to-day family life. This is a good book to have in the home library if you are a parent who has time to read." K. M.

+ Canadian Forum 27:119 Ag '47 100w

"The whole book emerges as a comforting and comfortable philosophy of parenthood."

P. L.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 Ap 6 '47 150w

LANGDON-BROWN, SIR WALTER. Some chapters in Cambridge medical history. 119p $1.75 Macmillan

610.71142 Cambridge, England. University. Medical school [Med46-172]

"The contents, which for the most part have formed the subjects of communications to the History of Medicine Section of the Royal Society of Medicine, do more than paint the portraits of those, from John Caius to Clifford Allbutt, who have shaped the great medical school at Cambridge. They give a broad picture of the University over the past four hundred years, its reaction to events in the greater world and its steady progress and development." Times [London] Lit Sup

School & Society 65:447 Je 14 '47 40w

Reviewed by H. H. Bashford

Spec 177:222 Ag 30 '46 700w

"The author has an engaging style, and his modest book deserves widespread attention from those for whom history is an essential background to a fuller understanding of the present."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p418 Ag 31 '46 230w

LANGER, ROBERT. Seizure of territory; the Stimson doctrine and related principles in legal theory and diplomatic practice. 313p $3.50 Princeton univ. press

320.126 Annexation of territory 47-4392

"The Stimson doctrine of 1931 denied diplomatic recognition of territorial changes effected by force or threat of force. . . Mr. Langer has studied in detail the relation of territorial seizure to the making and unmaking of states, to the League of Nations, and to diplomatic practice during and since World War I, with a briefer survey of related facts in nineteenth century history." Christian Century

"Mr. Langer's history of the failure to use non-recognition to discourage aggression is the most interesting and useful part of his book. He makes no attempt, however, to penetrate the political forces which caused the failure. In his conclusion he says only that 'the fixation of appeasement developed in the statement of the League Members a mental process which caused the sense of a legal duty of non-recognition to wither away.' There is no analysis of the whole complex of economic, military, and domestic political factors which produced appeasement. He is concerned with non-recognition almost exclusively as a matter of international law, and his book should be taken for what it is. The background must be filled in from other sources." J. L. McCamy

Am Pol Sci R 41:796 Ag '47 750w

"Full credit is due Mr. Langer for his comprehensive assemblage of materials on the subject and his clear analysis of the issues that it involves." W. P. Maddox

+ Ann Am Acad 254:179 N '47 600w

Christian Century 64:715 Je 4 '47 130w

"Although it carries all the marks of a doctor's thesis, this examination of the Stimson Doctrine, which overrates the value of 'non-recognition' as a weapon in diplomacy, is a valuable survey. It digs out a lot of interesting facts about the diplomatic double-crosses during the last two decades." J. S. R.

+ Commonweal 46:197 Je 6 '47 100w

Current Hist 13:34 Jl '47 50w

"While the author's discussion of the legal aspects of recognition and non-recognition enlightens the problem very little, the book has considerable value in bringing together the practice in chronological order and in indicating the trend of the last century and a half. It provides evidence of progress toward realization of the Roman thesis that wrongs cannot create rights." Quincy Wright

+ — Harvard Law R 60:1186 S '47 1350w

"Numerous and lengthy quotations from original documents in text may serve the cause of scholarly exactness, but do not make for fluent reading. Value of work lies more in well-organized compilation of material than in much original thought on topic. Recommended for special libraries for international relations, history and law." H. H. A. Bernt

+ Library J 72:636 Ap 15 '47 130w

"While designed primarily for specialists in international law and international relations, the volume is clearly written in nontechnical language and should be of interest to a wider public."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:286 S '47 360w

LANGER, WILLIAM LEONARD. Our Vichy gamble. 412p $3.75 Knopf

940.532273 U.S.—Foreign relations—France. France—Foreign relations—U.S. World war, 1939-1945—Diplomatic history 47-2068

"History of American relations with France from June 1940 to the assassination of Admiral Darlan in December 1942—the period of our unpopular but expedient Vichy policy. The author, professor of history at Harvard and former OSS official, had access to secret files of the State Department, the OSS and the army. His history, while authorized by the State Department, is quite independent in its judgments and evaluations." (Library J) Index.

"An outstanding diplomatic historian here turns his hand to a readable, much-needed, and sober account of the cause of the hottest foreign policy controversy in recent years—our relations with the tainted Vichy régime in France from 1940 to 1943. In spite of an unobtrusive air of defensiveness, this is not an official apology. For the most part, Mr. Langer lets the facts unfold whatever logic there was in the government's policy. To his experience as chief of the Research and Analysis Branch of the OSS, the author has added a fine combing of sources ordinarily veiled for years after the event, and conversations with many principals. The alacrity with which this material has been made available is a good sign; it is also a tribute to the scars left by critics." R. C. Snyder

+ Am Pol Sci R 41:795 Ag '47 700w

"One may legitimately quarrel with Langer's estimate of Secretary Hull—not his Vichy policy but the caliber of the man and his actual role as Secretary of State—of William Bullitt, and some others; but these are only minor blemishes in a work of notable scholarship, courage, and integrity." H. E. Barnes

+ — Ann Am Acad 254:180 N '47 700w

Booklist 43:270 My 1 '47

LANGER, W. L.—Continued

Reviewed by A. M. Schlesinger, Jr.
Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ap 20 '47
900w

Reviewed by Charles Gratke
Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 7 '47
1100w

Current Hist 12:581 Je '47 110w
Foreign Affairs 25:697 Jl '47 170w
Kirkus 15:147 Mr 1 '47 170w

"A factual, scholarly record, enlivened by the drama of the events it covers, it will bring about a large measure of acceptance of our 'sensible, purely opportunist policy' with Vichy. Recommended." G. D. McDonald.
+ Library J 72:527 Ap 1 '47 120w

"As an inside story, the book is extraordinarily timely, since it reveals that 'our Vichy gamble' was the first of a series in which the present Athens gamble seems likely to take an even more important place. It gives a factual account, readable, entertaining, exciting, frequently depressing, of how and why Washington chose and clung obstinately to Pétain, Darlan and the Vichy fascists instead of de Gaulle and those Frenchmen for whom freedom meant emancipation from fascism as well as from the Germans. As narrative, the book has the virtues of excellent polemical journalism and the defects of partisan propaganda, since the author, while using much new material, omits or subordinates much old material. . . Except in its account of the Colonel Solborg affair, which is grossly unfair, the final portion of the book, on the preparation for the North African invasion and the landings themselves, makes fast, exciting reading in the best cloak-and-dagger tradition." Percy Winner

+ New Repub 116:32 Ap 14 '47 2750w

"A challenging, vigorously written work in which Mr. Langer seeks to dispel the misunderstandings, refute the criticisms and set forth the aims and the achievements of 'Our Vichy Gamble.' . . Whether one agrees or not with his thesis, it is incontestable that Mr. Langer has made a monumental historical contribution. While for years it will probably remain an indispensable source for all students, it is an immediate 'must' for every one who recognizes the obligation to know what he is talking about before he enters on a dispute about our French policy." Leo Gershowy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1
Ap 13 '47 1200w

"A completely fascinating account. . . This reviewer would like to say at the outset that Professor Langer's book absorbed him utterly, taught him some things he hadn't known, but, on balance, erased none of the doubts. A lot of hard, honest work went into this book, and it will create a stir in the measure that people still care about the Vichy-North Africa business. I can't help a strong feeling, however, that it will convert nobody to Mr. Hull's side who wasn't already converted." Eric Sevareid

+ N Y Times p1 Ap 6 '47 1400w

"Professor Langer undertook this study of our relations with Vichy France 'as a dispassionate scholar, not as an apologist.' All relevant materials in the State Department were made available to him and he has given us an interesting and well-documented account. He has also given a more than generous interpretation to many incriminating facts." C. A. Micaud

+ Pol Sci Q 62:595 D '47 1250w

"Mr. Langer reaches his conclusions after reviewing masses of unpublished documents in the files of the State Department and the Office of Strategic Services, and in President Roosevelt's and Admiral Leahy's personal dossiers. . . He quotes communications between the French Embassy in Washington and Vichy's foreign minister, and he has talked with the principal actors who played their roles in Washington, in Vichy, and in North Africa. With a sure touch and a mastery of detail that was overwhelming, he keeps the reader from being confused and has written a story which is always readable and sometimes quite colloquial." Lindsay Rogers

+ Sat R of Lit 30:13 My 3 '47 1600w.

"Historian Langer has had access to such a wealth of unpublished material (State Department dispatches, OSS files, letters by Roosevelt, Hull, ex-Ambassador Leahy, et al.) that his book is of first importance in its field, even for those who do not share his outspoken conclusions."

+ Time 49:108 Ap 14 '47 650w

U S Quarterly BkL 3:287 S '47 280w

Reviewed by H. R. Rudin
Yale R n s 37:172 autumn '47 550w

LANGLEY, DOROTHY, pseud. See Kissling, D. H. R.

LANGTON, EDWARD. Satan, a portrait; a study of the character of Satan through all the ages. 128p il $3.75 Macmillan 235 Devil [46-4210]

"What Dr. Langton really gives is a history of theories about Satan, with some concluding evaluations of the concept of a personal devil. The author is an eminent British scholar who has written other books on the history and literature of demonology, angelology and witchcraft. This volume makes copious use of biblical and rabbinical sources, contains a wealth of curious and forgotten lore from ancient and medieval times, and digests the opinions of modern theologians about evil spirits. He finds that the concept of Satan dropped out of mind for most modern thinkers, or was definitely excluded from their belief, as the impression came to prevail that man was upward bound in the evolutionary process and that the evil in human nature was only a residue from his animal inheritance, not yet entirely cast off but ultimately to be." Christian Century

Christian Century 64:527 Ap 23 '47
280w

"So far as this reviewer knows, it is the most comprehensive book on the subject, and the best. Dr. Langton canvasses all the literature that has anything to offer, and presents his findings in a thoroughly scholarly yet very readable fashion. . . This is a book which should be in the possession of every clergyman, and in every seminary library." F. J. Moore

+ Churchman 161:16 Ap 15 '47 190w

Reviewed by George Gordh
J Religion 27:294 O '47 500w

Reviewed by W. J. H. Sprott
New Statesman & Nation 31:345 My 11
'46 700w

San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ap 27 '47
100w

LANHAM, EDWIN MOULTRIE. Politics is murder. 236p $2.50 Harcourt 47-12191

Detective story.

Booklist 44:135 D 1 '47

New Repub 117:28 N 24 '47 90w

"Mr Lanham tells of fairly rough events in wicked Manhattan, yet he does not, praise be, employ that standard hard-boiled lingo that most of the boys use on comparable material. He writes a simple, unaffected prose, probably the best medium for puzzles." Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p26 N
23 '47 130w

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun Book Week N 14 '47 90w

Reviewed by Donald Barr
N Y Times p28 D 7 '47 500w

"The Lieutenant is shaping up well as an addition to the gallery of recurrent dicks."
+ New Yorker 23:115 N 1 '47 80w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p19 N 9 '47
100w

"First-rate."
+ Sat R of Lit 30:41 O 25 '47 50w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal
Spring'd Republican p10B N 20 '47
120w

Wis Lib Bul 43:176 D '47

LANKS, HERBERT CHARLES. Adventure in Central America; with il. by Gladys Lanks. 169p $2.50 McKay

47-1831

Two boys, twin brothers, are taken by their grandfather on a tour of the Central American countries. For grandfather it was a business trip, a secret mission for the United States government, but for the boys it was adventure, seeing and learning about the people and the lands they inhabit, with a bit of mystery and intrigue thrown in.

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold

Christian Science Monitor p13 Ag 28 '47 230w

"Will be useful for school supplementary reading, but not popular." E. E. Frank
Library J 72:646 Ap 15 '47 70w

"Mr. Lanks, who wrote 'By Pan American Highway Through South America,' not only knows what these boys will experience but has the gift of making other boys take part. They move quickly, but stay long enough to catch, with interested young eyes, characteristics of the country, ways of life and differences of terrain. . . The story is not a school-book, but if I were a teacher trying to lift Central America out of the map and make it come alive for my class I should be glad to find this book in the school library." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ap 20 '47 360w

LAPHAM, ROGER FULMER. It's in your power. 207p $2.50 Essential bks.

613 Hygiene. Psychology, Applied Med47-363

A New York city physician writes chapters on such subjects as choosing your life goal, the common cold, intelligent use of alcohol and tobacco, exercise, insomnia, fear, sex, marriage, religion, etc. No index.

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '47

Kirkus 14:475 S 15 '46 90w

"His wisdom is insufficient to give much help on any of [his] subjects and his book is superficial, platitudinous, poorly written and superfluous. Not recommended." G. W. Wakefield

— Library J 71:1624 N 15 '46 110w

"Dr. Lapham preaches harmony and balance; he is a commonsense consultant."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 F 2 '47 110w

"Dr. Lapham doesn't promise to make you a genius in ten easy lessons or a superman with ten simple exercises. He does manage to compress into a slim volume a remarkable amount of common-sense advice on how to go about getting a decent human share of health and happiness." H. M. Davis

N Y Times p21 F 2 '47 490w

LAPIERE, RICHARD TRACY. Sociology. 572p $3.75 McGraw

301 Sociology 46-7352

"In this new book the author's purpose has been to produce an introduction to sociology which will be readable and meaningful for the beginning student. The text presents the varied special fields and approaches of contemporary sociology as an integrated story; it does not, however, present a system of sociology, nor is it a 'social problems' text. The emphasis throughout is on the dynamics of social structures—the instability of forms of social life. A new feature is the analytic dissection of society into its component systems: technologies, ideologies, and organization, in an attempt to demonstrate the interdependence of the various elements of society." (Publisher's note) Supplementary bibliographies. Indexes.

"The book is interestingly, provocatively written. I judge that bright students will like it and that it will have rather widespread use." F. N. House

+ Am J Soc 52:468 Mr '47 750w

"The La Piere book commends itself to the attention of energetic instructors. . . The book will be hard to teach. But serious attention to the matter, because the book itself is so serious and mature, should prove more than rewarding. The very adequate supplementary bibliographies will render the technical aspects of introducing sociology somewhat less tedious than usual." Melvin Tumin

+ Am Soc R 12:240 Ap '47 450w

Reviewed by V. H. Whitney

Social Forces 25:345 Mr '47 1450w

LARDNER, JOHN. It beats working; foreword by Carl Van Doren; il. by Willard Mullin. 253p $3 Lippincott

796 Sports

47-30777

"A collection of those entertaining excoriations of celebrated sporting figures that Mr. Lardner has been writing for Newsweek during the past seven or eight years. In a disarming preface, the author answers a question that may have occurred to some of his readers: How do the subjects of his essays feel about being roughed up in this way? He doesn't think they mind very much." New Yorker

Booklist 44:85 N 1 '47

Reviewed by Tom Siler

Chicago Sun Book Week p5 S 14 '47 330w

"Lardner is one sports writer who can write. He has taste, judgment, knowledge, intelligence and style—an equipment which sets him above and beyond the great mass of his sports-writing colleagues. Clearly, he likes sports, but it is equally clear that he knows very well that sports are not the main purpose, or the most admirable interest, of the human race." Stanley Walker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 S 21 '47 550w

"If there's anything deader than yesterday's newspaper, it's the account of a sports event the day before, a sad fact attested by many sports anthropologists. Lardner escapes this fate by writing about people, lightly, literately and winningly. He is undated, too, perhaps because he writes of sports once a week, which he admits 'is very pleasant to be able to do, rather than never.'" John Horn

+ N Y Times p4 S 21 '47 900w

New Yorker 23:123 S 13 '47 80w

"Very few people, of whatever following, would deny that this collection of Mr. Lardner's shrewd and merry pieces represents humorous sports writing at the top of its form. . . These pieces were designed to be read a week apart, and, though edited and revised for book form, they tend to grow soggy in the lump. The author beats the reviewer to the draw by recognizing this fault in his opening chapter, which struck me as the best in the book. . . The rest of the book is written in a style which can be very entertaining in small doses but gets monotonous in large ones." Jack Iams

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:25 S 13 '47 550w

LARIAR, LAWRENCE, ed. Best cartoons of the year, 1947; being a sel. by the artists themselves, of the best cartoons they drew for Liberty [etc]. 128p $2.50 Crown

741.5 Caricatures and cartoons

Cartoons selected from Collier's, Saturday Evening Post, Liberty, This Week, etc., representing the work of some of the country's top cartoonists during 1947. Includes humorous brief biographical sketches of the cartoonists.

"As a group, their humor is broad and uncontaminated by social significance. In tabloid autobiography, most of them say that they are happily married and we hope their wives are the same." Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 D 7 '47 270w

LARIAR, LAWRENCE—Continued

"They are all good and they cover everything under the sun. And the short word portraits of the artists represented are very funny, too." Allan Worth

+ San Francisco Chronicle p4 N 30 '47 80w

LAROM, HENRY V. Mountain pony and the pinto colt; il. by Ross Santee. (Whittlesey house publication) 202p $2 McGraw

47-12093

Andy Marvin of Mountain Pony (Book Review Digest 1946) comes back to his uncle's Wyoming ranch after a winter at school in the East. He and his cousin Sally and some horses get themselves mixed up in a mystery in this western story for grades six to eight.

Booklist 44:175 Ja 1 '48

Kirkus 15:505 S 15 '47 90w

"Your give-me-another-story-about-a-horse group will be delighted with this book. Ross Santee's illustrations are excellent. Recommended for general purchase for children's rooms." M. D. Read

+ Library J 72:1694 D 1 '47 80w

"Henry V. Larom, former head wrangler at the famous Valley Ranch, knows horses and ranch life. In this exciting, fast-moving and authentic story of the Wyoming Rockies, he has packed all the suspense and action that we have come to associate with the old-fashioned, bronco-busting West, yet the setting is actually the West as it exists today." H. B. Lent

+ N Y Times p28 D 14 '47 180w

LASKER, EMANUEL. Common sense in chess; rev. by Fred Reinfeld. rev ed 152p $1.50 McKay

794.1 Chess 47-318

A revised edition of a work that has long been a classic in the field. Originally the book embodied the contents of "twelve lectures given before an audience of London chess players in the spring of 1895." In the words of the Preface by Lasker, "It may be regarded as an attempt to deal with all parts of a game of chess by the aid of general principles. The principles laid down are deduced from considerations concerning the nature of Chess as a fight between two brains, and their conception is based on simple facts."

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 D 20 '46 50w

Reviewed by Dana Brannan

N Y Times p33 Ja 26 '47 70w

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ja 12 '47 60w

LASKIER, FRANK. Unseen harbor. 319p $3 Lippincott

47-31262

Novel of the seamen and officers manning a British merchant steamer shortly after the close of the war. The tension between the men grows steadily worse as the story progresses, the end is a collision and death for all but two of the crew.

Booklist 44:69 O 15 '47

"A full-bodied, robust story... For men especially." J. W. Rogers

Library J 72:1270 S 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by Lincoln Colcord

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p19 N 9 '47 600w

"All this is melodrama, and it has the obvious faults of melodrama. The writing is at times florid; the author frequently fails to see that action is significant not in itself but for its revelation of character. Nor is the attempt to show the many facets of the shipboard situation by shifting the point of view altogether successful... Nevertheless, 'Unseen Harbor' is an absorbing story. Mr. Laskier has an excellent ear, a quick sense of humor, a good eye for detail." Arthur Foff

+ N Y Times p24 S 14 '47 500w

"For a first novel it is an extremely good performance, well worth reading, and leaving one with an interesting bit of speculation—whether the author will follow the indicated melodramatic line or tighten up his technique and turn out to be a serious novelist." Fletcher Pratt

+ Sat R of Lit 30:41 N 8 '47 360w

"Strictly masculine. It's rough and tumble, salty and violent, rife with the brutality and degradation of men... This is stark realism, afloat and ashore, yet 'Unseen Harbor' has touches of beauty and even tenderness." D. E. B.

+ Springfield Republican p10B O 5 '47 180w

LASSER, JACOB KAY. Business tax guide, 1947; containing practical ideas for running your business tax-wise and a complete guide to business operation and taxes. 218p pa $2 Simon & Schuster

336.243 Corporations—Taxation

"This aid to making business tax returns also points out tax-saving opportunities in the conduct of business." Booklist

Booklist 43:199 Mr 1 '47

"Businessmen and those who advise business houses will find this a practical guide and check list in all tax matters. The book is well indexed and cross-referenced."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 23 '47 30w

LATHROP, DOROTHY PULIS. Angel in the woods [pictures by the author]. 47p $2 Macmillan

47-11818

A Christmas story about the adventures of a little toy angel which flew out of the window into the woods to bring Christmas joy to the little animals there.

Booklist 44:156 D 15 '47

Reviewed by B. J. Thompson

Cath World 166:239 D '47 100w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 24:37 Ja '48 80w

"Tender somewhat sentimental little story—but the Christmas spirit and Dorothy Lathrop's exquisite pictures of small creatures (35 of them) more than justify it. A special Christmas item."

+ Kirkus 15:578 O 15 '47 120w

Reviewed by M. F. Cox

Library J 72:1784 D 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 N 16 '47 180w

"Beautifully written, this story for 4 to 7 years olds is instinct with the spirit of giving." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p50 D 7 '47 160w

+ Sat R of Lit 30:32 D 13 '47 290w

LATOURETTE, KENNETH SCOTT, ed. The gospel, the church and the world. (Interseminary ser) 229p $1.50 Harper

261 Church. Christianity. Sociology, Christian 47-1342

"In the third volume of the Interseminary series the contributors consider the meaning of the Christian gospel, the relation of the gospel and the church to society, and suggestions for making the gospel and the church more relevant in human affairs. Further reading at the end of each chapter." (Booklist) No index.

Booklist 43:216 Mr 15 '47

"It is a rich little book and will certainly stimulate discussion in any interseminary conference. It will also broaden the horizons of the reader's mind." G. G. Atkins

+ Christian Century 64:431 Ap 2 '47 490w

Reviewed by C. L. Willard
Churchman 161:17 Je 1 '47 220w

"The book contains many excellent ideas and incorporates much common sense, but there is so much that is absurd that it discredits the rest for thoughtful people. No dogmas are discarded or discredited; rather they are rendered innocuous by platitudinous and meta-physical phraseology. Santayana's comment after reading Hegel's Phänomenologie des Geistes may be aptly applied to this book: 'It had seemed to me that myth and sophistry there spoiled a very fine subject,' " H. B. White
— + Crozer Q 24:258 J1 '47 700w
U S Quarterly Bkl 3:249 S '47 100w

LATOURETTE, KENNETH SCOTT. History of Japan. 290p il $4 Macmillan 952 Japan—History 47-2168

"The volume is a revised edition of one published first in 1918 under the title The Development of Japan [Book Review Digest, 1918]. It brings the story down to February 1946." (Christian Century) Index.

Reviewed by T. A. Bisson
Am Hist R 53:178 O '47 280w
Booklist 43:333 Je 15 '47
Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Ap 20 '47 90w

"Professor Latourette knows his Orient both from long residence there and from long study of the literature concerning its history and institutions, and for more than thirty years he has been writing books about it which the interested public will not allow to go out of print. . . . For those who want to learn as much about Japan's past as can be learned from one volume, in order to understand her present and make a sensible guess as to her possible future, this is the book."

+ Christian Century 64:495 Ap 16 '47 110w

Reviewed by W. P. Sears
Churchman 161:17 Je 1 '47 150w

"An attractive short work . . . [which] is competent and reliable if not particularly striking in viewpoint or original in style. Considering the book's brief compass it is indeed informative."

+ Commonweal 45:652 Ap 11 '47 70w
Current Hist 13:34 J1 '47 30w
Foreign Affairs 26:232 O '47 20w
New Statesman & Nation 34:458 D 6 '47 120w

"As a source book for students, or as an introduction for the curious, the book retains everything of its original excellence. It is crisply written and covers Japan from its mythical era until the very real times of today." C. J. Doughty

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 My 18 '47 300w

LATTIMORE, ELEANOR FRANCIS. Jeremy's Isle; il, by [the author]. 123p $2 Morrow 47-31079

Tells the story of a happy summer when Jeremy, aged seven, who lived on a South Carolina plantation, learned to swim and row a boat. That meant that he could make the trip of exploration to a small island nearby, an island named for Jeremy's grandfather. Ages six to nine.

Booklist 44:38 S 15 '47
Chicago Sun Book Week p4a N 19 '47 70w

"Miss Lattimore writes easily and intimately of Southern plantation life in the Low Country of Carolina today and of the happy relationship between children and older people, as well as between Jeremy and his loyal Negro companion. Her pictures are well fitted to make the story more real." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:440 N '47 120w
Kirkus 15:465 S 1 '47 80w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Sussdorff
+ Library J 72:1278 S 15 '47 70w

"This simply told story of children and their vacation activities will be useful to young readers who are beginning to read real books." Phyllis Fenner

+ N Y Times p47 N 30 '47 100w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét
New Yorker 23:145 D 6 '47 60w
Sat R of Lit 30:46 N 15 '47 50w
Springf'd Republican p10B N 16 '47 90w
Wis Lib Bul 43:155 N '47

LATTIMORE, OWEN, and LATTIMORE, ELEANOR (HOLGATE). China; a short history. new rev ed 218p maps $3 Norton
951 China—History 47-1881

A revised edition of a textbook formerly published under the title The Making of Modern China (Book Review Digest 1944, 1945).

Booklist 43:258 Ap 15 '47
Foreign Affairs 26:232 O '47 20w

"The Lattimore book is a brief history, a broad description, and a sound analysis of China and the total Chinese situation." + N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p25 Ap 6 '47 220w

"The work is still remarkably successful in describing the course of the World's Oldest Living Civilization in so few pages without losing clarity or becoming too superficial, but, for American readers, a book on Chinese history must pretty much stand or fall on the contribution it makes to our knowledge of the current state of a great and sorely troubled land, whose future is inevitably entwined with ours. Here the Lattimores are successful without losing their impressive air of cool objectivity." Richard Watts

+ Sat R of Lit 30:16 My 10 '47 800w
Social Studies 38:288 O '47 10w

LAUER, HENRI, and others. Servomechanism fundamentals. 277p $3.50 McGraw 621.8 Servomechanisms 47-2280

"The purpose of this book is to introduce the engineering student and the practicing engineer to the principles underlying the theory of servomechanisms. It offers a complete derivation of the basic properties of servocontrol devices and systems, and their direct relation to the simple physical principles that govern their operation. Working formulas, curves, and diagrams are also given, together with many practical examples, exercises, and problems, similar to those encountered in the field. Particular emphasis is placed on the transient analysis of simple servomechanisms." (Publisher's note) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 71:1627 N 15 '46 60w
N Y New Tech Bks 32:18 Ja '47

"Since the nature of the subject is inherently complex, this book will be understood completely only by a reader with a technical education in which adequate attention has been given to mechanics, electricity, and the associated practical applications of mathematics. An electrical engineer or a physicist having a broad experience with the mechanics of machines should be especially interested."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:318 S '47 220w

LAUGHLIN, JAMES. Skiing east and west. See Fischer, H., il.

LAUGHLIN, JAMES, ed. See Spearhead.

LAURSON, PHILIP GUSTAVE, and COX, WILLIAM JUNKIN. Mechanics of materials. 2d ed 422p il $4 Wiley

620.11 Strength of materials. Strains and stresses 47-1279

"Rewritten to include improvements and additional topics, this textbook sets forth principles essential for an understanding of machine and structural design. 625 problems, many based on actual well-known engineering structures and machines. Attention is given to outlining principles which govern the determination of allowable stress." (Library J) Index.

LAURSON, P. G.—Continued

Eng N 139:136 J1 10 '47 40w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:390 Mr 1 '47 60w

LAUTERBACH, RICHARD EDWARD. Danger from the East. 430p $3.75 Harper

950 East (Far East)—Politics 47-11715

"A report on Japan, Korea, and China. . . Mr. Lauterbach thinks that one of the most serious dangers in the East today is excessive fear of the Soviet. He belittles the influence and effectiveness of the Chinese Communists; more aid and guns to Generalissimo Chiang, he feels, will solve nothing. The major portion of the book is an excellent review of the occupation of Japan under General MacArthur." (New Yorker) Index.

Booklist 44:170 Ja 1 '48

Reviewed by D. G. Dowling

Chicago Sun Book Week N 27 '47 500w

"What gives the book its chief value is that Mr. Lauterbach likes people. The Japanese peasant with whom he talks at length, huddling over a small charcoal brazier; the Manchurian laborers crowding forward to plead for peace when they are visited by one of Marshall's 'truce teams'—here are the very voices and gestures, the human warmth and familiar heartbreak, of the little people of the East." Robert Peel

+ Christian Science Monitor p22 N 20 '47 450w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Horn Bk 24:67 Ja '48 60w

"This is the most important book Lauterbach has done. It has the vividness of fine reporting, characteristic of his These Are The Russians, the human touches of his Through Russia's Back Door, and scholarship, objectivity and yet enough of the crusading zeal that is evidence of growing maturity."

+ Kirkus 15:493 S 1 '47 210w

"Highly recommended for all libraries." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 72:1267 S 15 '47 130w

Reviewed by J. K. Fairbank

Nation 165:600 N 29 '47 1800w

New Repub 117:25 N 24 '47 1500w

"In 'Danger From the East' Mr. Lauterbach has shown what a first-class journalist can do when, after covering the ground, seeing things and talking with people for himself, he is given the time to reflect, to read not only in his subject, but all around it, and to work over his material until he can make it stand up under seminar discussion and criticism by experts." Owen Lattimore

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 N 23 '47 1450w

"The sections on Korea and China, although helpful, suffer because the surer motives and methods of the Soviets are not examined with the same sharp instruments used to dissect our policy failures. . . The reader must supplement this highly provocative and important book by turning to the daily newspapers for political analyses of the Far East in relation to the growing, undeniable Soviet-American clash of interests." Robert Shaplen

+ N Y Times p4 N 23 '47 1350w

New Yorker 23:142 N 29 '47 160w

Reviewed by Marvin Sargent

San Francisco Chronicle p22 D 7 '47 1000w

"Let it be said at the outset that Lauterbach's book is one of the most brilliant reporting jobs done since the end of the war. And further that it is a happy blend of expert and sensitive story-telling, keen analysis, and a deep feeling for history." Mark Gayn

+ Sat R of Lit 30:11 N 29 '47 1000w

LAUTERBACH, RICHARD EDWARD.

Through Russia's back door [il. with author's photographs]. 239p $2.75 Harper

914.7 Russia—Description and travel 47-1224

"Early last summer [the author] received a transit visa that gave him permission to cross Russia on the trans-Siberian railroad from Vladivostok to Moscow—a twelve-days' journey—and to leave Russia by airplane to Berlin. . . A trained reporter, he had served in Moscow as correspondent for the Luce publications during the war. He knows the language. He can make excellent photographs, many of which are reproduced in this book. . . Most of 'Through Russia's Back Door' is composed of an interesting and detailed record of Mr. Lauterbach's six-days' voyage in a Russian ship from Shanghai to Vladivostok and his twelve-day's journey in the trans-Siberian express. He adds a chapter on Moscow as he saw it after an absence of two years, another chapter of comment on American-Russian relations and an appendix of recent Russian declarations bearing on that theme." (N Y Times) Maps on end papers. No index.

Booklist 43:203 Mr 1 '47

"Most of it is excellent reporting on what—as far as a foreigner can learn—Russians think and say. It contains 32 pages of excellent photographs taken all the way from Vladivostok to Siberia—evidence that the iron curtain is not without its peepholes." F. S. Marquardt

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p11 F 9 '47 450w

Reviewed by Henry Sowerby

Christian Science Monitor p14 F 15 '47 700w

Foreign Affairs 25:708 J1 '47 50w

Kirkus 14:614 D 1 '46 250w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 72:223 F 1 '47 140w

"The former Moscow correspondent of Time and Life has written a short and unpretentious work that is chiefly a straightforward record of a recent postwar journey he made from Shanghai to Vladivostok on a Russian ship, and from Vladivostok to Moscow on the Trans-Siberian Express. Despite its brevity and modesty, its moderate, reasonable thinking on Russo-American relations merits a wide hearing." Richard Watts

+ New Repub 116:34 F 17 '47 800w

"A lively and warm-hearted book which is full of good reporting, without any pretense at deep thinking about Russia's problems and its relations with the rest of the world." V. M. Dean

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 F 9 '47 650w

Reviewed by Brooks Atkinson

N Y Times p6 F 9 '47 1600w

Reviewed by Marvin Sargent

San Francisco Chronicle p11 F 23 '47 1150w

Reviewed by Edgar Snow

Sat R of Lit 30:26 Mr 22 '47 1450w

Springf'd Union p6 J1 12 '47 180w

"The book will be found of general interest especially for its reflections of the Soviet scene and Soviet citizens, and for its portrayals of Soviet bureaucracy, red tape, and censorship. Also of interest are the author's own informal but very good photographs, with which the volume is illustrated."

+ U S Quarterly Bk1 3:237 S '47 240w

Wis Lib Bul 43:66 Ap '47

Reviewed by P. E. Mosely

Yale R n s 36:535 spring '47 180w

LAUTERPACHT, HERSH. Recognition in international law. 442p $5.50 Macmillan

341 Recognition (international law)

[47-5343]

"There are only very few branches of international law which are of greater, or more persistent, interest and significance for the law of nations than the question of Recognition of States, of Governments and of Belligerency. . . In the present book I have attempted to show that Recognition is essentially a part of international law—as distinguished from international politics—not only in the matter of some of its incidental consequences, such as the legal effects of recognition and non-recognition, but also with regard to the primary aspect of its function. . . . The greater part of this book has grown out of articles and notes which have appeared in various periodicals and publications." (Pref) Index.

"The whole book is closely reasoned and one trick of style is impressive, the use of double and treble adjectives, as 'momentous, decisive, and indispensable function.'" N. E. Manchester Guardian p3 J1 29 '47 330w

"One more testimony to the high reputation of its learned author and is as important an addition to the literature of international law as all his other writings. It is the more welcome because of his close investigation of the acute controversy among international jurists that the doctrine of recognition has provoked. . . . Of necessity, only a bare outline has here been given of the most important points in the book. For the rest, it may be taken for granted that every international lawyer will include it in his library, and it can be recommended to any layman interested in the topic."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p436 Ag 30 '47 1050w

LAVERTY, MRS MAURA. Cookbook; with a section on diet by Sybil Le Brocquy; decorations by Louis Brocquy [Eng title: Cookery book]. 149p $3 Longmans

641.5 Cookery 47-3601

The Irish novelist has supplied this cook book with prefatory notes and comments, mainly reminiscent of her own childhood. Many recipes are for typical Irish dishes, some are from Spain, and one chapter: Quick cooking, gives hints on what to do with canned soups, meats and vegetables.

Commonweal 46:197 Je 6 '47 100w

"The author does the remarkable, gives you some good reading along with a host of good cooking suggestions. The recipes and food suggestions are good, some of them genuine, creative contributions to better cooking—a result that always comes from the pen of a good cook." A. D. Faber

+ N Y Times p19 Ag 3 '47 90w

"All the recipes are of a simplicity (even a frugality) that makes our American cook-books seem embarrassingly lavish."

New Yorker 23:72 J1 19 '47 60w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p12 Je 3 '47 123w

LAVERTY, MRS MAURA. Liffey lane [Eng title: Lift up your gates.] 231p $2.50 Longmans

47-30392

Chrissie Doyle had committed what she felt was an unforgivable sin, she had sold the food can that Sister Martha had lent her. During the hours while Chrissie is wrestling with her problem, the story tells how Chrissie came to sell the can and includes anecdotes of other residents of the Dublin slums where Chrissie lives. In the end Chrissie finds a better solution for her problem than the one she had worked out.

Booklist 44:17 S 1 '47

"Liffey Lane seems to be the Irish equivalent of a 'soap opera.' This is not meant to be complete disparagement. The book has some merit. A grim yet compassionate picture of the Dublin slums emerges from its pages. The author has a real understanding of human nature out of which she fashions a gallery of well-wrought characters. . . . It is a pity that an author of Maura Laverty's caliber could not find a more fitting and artistic medium for her talents."

+ Cath World 165:572 S '47 200w

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Ag 31 '47 370w

"Miss Laverty knows the people of whom she writes and she describes them with love and skill; her latest novel is as absorbing as human misery can be." J. D. Kernan

+ Commonweal 46:534 S 12 '47 130w

Kirkus 15:345 J1 1 '47 160w

"In spite of being sentimental to the core we recommend this story . . . because it has warmth and richness and an understanding of all sorts of humans that is most convincing." M. H. Zipprich

+ Library J 72:1108 Ag '47 80w

Reviewed by Paul Bloomfield

Manchester Guardian p3 F 28 '47 170w

Reviewed by Thomas Sugrue

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Ag 31 '47 750w

Reviewed by Nona Balakian

N Y Times p22 O 5 '47 500w

"You may be moved, though probably not deeply, by this picture of a genuinely sweet little girl, but, to tell the truth, Miss Laverty's brief novel would be just another sugarplum without her appealing use of the lovely Irish speech."

New Yorker 23:66 Ag 30 '47 70w

"Miss Laverty knows the mind and heart of a child and makes a thing of beauty out of a sordid Dublin slum background." Edith James

+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 Ag 31 '47 100w

"This young Dublin writer is a born storyteller, but she can be cloyingly sentimental, and she can dish out characters as tritely conventional as the down-and-outer who quotes Shakespeare and the writer who exults in his sense of his power over words. . . . When she is writing from observation, describing a woman cooking or the Lane Communist shooting off his gob, she writes with insight, and the charm of true simplicity. It is only in invention . . . that she grows sentimental and melodramatic. She has the courage of her emotions and a gift for expression." Horace Reynolds

+ Sat R of Lit 30:17 S 6 '47 550w

Reviewed by D. S. Savage

Spec 178:378 Ap 4 '47 220w

Wis Lib Bul 43:153 N '47

LAVERY, EMMET GODFREY. Magnificent Yankee; a play in three acts [with a foreword by Arthur Hopkins]. 119p il $2 French 812 Holmes, Oliver Wendell, 1841-1935—
Drama 46-11862

Play based on the thirty year period which Oliver Wendell Holmes spent in Washington, during the years between the two Roosevelt administrations.

Booklist 43:130 Ja 1 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p2 Ja '47

LAVIN, MARY. At Sallygap, and other stories. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 348p $2.75 Little 47-1334

Collection of twelve short stories of Irish life, five of which appeared in her volume Tales From Bective Bridge (Book Review Digest 1942). Contents: At Sallygap; The nun's mother; The will; The haymaking; The green grave and the black grave; Sarah; The sand castle; A wet day; Brother Boniface; Love is for lovers; A cup of tea; A happy death.

Booklist 43:242 Ap 1 '47

Reviewed by Nelson Algren

Chicago Sun Book Week p8 Mr 9 '47 280w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Johnson

Commonweal 45:498 F 28 '47 400w

Kirkus 15:7 Ja 1 '47 90w

"Mary Lavin is a creative talent of the first order. . . . These stories have the strength that Irish writers draw from observation of a people whose language and emotions are close to enduring problems. These characters have not taken on the veneer that conceals the emotional struggles of other comparable groups in the Western World. At first glance, they have a strange 'primitive' quality which is belied by the subtlety of the analysis. The Mrs. Latimers, Roberts and Elias, Father Gogarty and Brother Bonifaces are everywhere. Mary Lavin has brought them to life in stories which remind us of that truth." W. A. S. Dollard

LAVIN, MARY—Continued

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4
+ F 16 '47 1000w

"Miss Lavin's prose drags; it's repetitive—which is a pity indeed, for she is equipped with the writer's most essential qualification: some thing to say." James Stern

N Y Times p12 F 9 '47 550w

"Twelve distinguished short stories. . . The title story and one about the reflections of a worldly woman whose only daughter has just become a nun are perhaps the most penetrating of the collection."

+ New Yorker 22:97 F 8 '47 50w

"Miss Lavin writes with a lovely lilt. She deals reverently with fundamentals. Her prose is as polished, as neat, as perfectly detailed as a Dutch interior. Subtle imagery and colorful word choices etch her pages vividly. Sad as is man's lack of vision, we are willing listeners to this persuasive voice reminding us of that lack." C. M. Brown

+ Sat R of Lit 30:32 Mr 15 '47 470w

Wis Lib Bul 43:69 Ap '47

LAVRIN, JANKO. Dostoevsky; a study. 161p
$2 Macmillan

B or 92 Dostoevskii, Fedor Mikhailovich
47-2774

"A critical interpretation of Dostoevsky's novels, prefaced by an admirable biographical sketch. Professor Lavrin, who wrote a similar study of Tolstoy last year, shows how Dostoevsky infused his fiction with his own inner turbulence and how, after a painful study of himself, he broke new ground in his exploration of the unconscious and set things up for Freud and the modern psychological novelists." (New Yorker) Index.

Booklist 44:10 S 1 '47

Reviewed by Marie Seaton

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ag 3 '47
500w

Reviewed by Alfred Werner

Christian Century 64:828 Jl 2 '47 390w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 14
'47 110w

"Compact study which should provide valuable aid to those studying Russian literature, whether they are reading Dostoevsky for the first time, or rereading Crime and Punishment, The Brothers Karamazov, The Idiot, etc."

+ Kirkus 15:22 Ja 1 '47 250w

"Lavrin gives only brief sketch of his hero's life, too brief for needs of the uninitiated as well as the real student. . . Volume interesting throughout, but helpful only in libraries in which Dostoevsky biographies by Carr, Simmons or Troyat are available." F. E. Hirsch

Library J 72:459 Mr 15 '47 80w

"Professor Lavrin's book, which subjects the five later novels to a careful scrutiny of plot, as well as a thorough analysis of character motivation, is interesting and illuminating. It does not especially attempt to fix Dostoevsky's historical position with regard to the main body of European literature, nor does it calculate in any formal manner his influence upon succeeding writers of renown; but as an introduction it is provocative." Paul Henissart

+ Nation 165:22 Jl 5 '47 750w

"The book is written in a sluggish, graceless style that frequently obscures rather than illuminates its subject. Since the novelist has himself done a superlative job of stating and examining his metaphysical problems, a direct study of the novels is preferable to a reading of Mr. Lavrin's interpretations." Stephen Stepanchev

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p26
Mr 23 '47 750w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn

N Y Times p4 Ap 6 '47 850w

New Yorker 23:116 Mr 22 '47 80w

Reviewed by E. J. Simmons

Yale R n s 36:763 summer '47 500w

LAVRIN, JANKO. Introduction to the Russian novel. (Whittlesey house publication) 253p $2.75 McGraw

891.7309 Russian fiction 47-11383

This study covers "the whole range of Russian fiction from its early origins in the eighteenth century up to and including the second world war and after. The last novel dealt with is Konstantin Fedin's 'First Joys,' published in Russia in 1946." (N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R) The author is a professor of Russian and Slavic studies at the University college in Nottingham, England, and is a British subject, tho of Yugoslav birth. Index.

Booklist 44:130 D 1 '47

"Measures up to the finest standards of literary history. It is compact, readable, informative and up to date." Joshua Kunitz

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p21
N 2 '47 470w

Reviewed by E. J. Simmons

N Y Times p34 N 23 '47 750w

"On the whole, the volume is a useful and well informed, although neither original nor penetrating, outline of the development of Russian prose." D. F. White

+ Sat R of Lit 30:13 N 15 '47 800w

LAWRENCE, DAVID HERBERT. Portable D. H. Lawrence; ed. and with an introd. by Diana Trilling. (Viking portable lib) 692p $2
Viking

828

47-30029

This volume contains eight short stories or novelettes: The Prussian officer; Tickets, please; The Blind man; Two Blue birds; The Lovely lady; The Rockinghorse winner; The Princess; The Fox; excerpts from The Rainbow, and Women in Love; a dozen poems; travel sketches; letters; and a number of essays and critical writings.

Booklist 43:187 F 15 '47

Reviewed by M. D. Luhan

Chicago Sun Book Week p8 F 9 '47
650w

Kirkus 14:567 N 1 '46 160w

Reviewed by W. H. Auden

Nation 164:482 Ap 26 '47 400w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p28
F 9 '47 110w

"In making her selection Mrs. Trilling has been guided as by a diviner's rod, to what was most vital in Lawrence; the real springs. We are given not necessarily the 'best' of Lawrence, but necessarily the most relevant. Relevant to what? To his genius; to the tensions and conflicts thrust up out of his nature into his art; to his relation to time. This book may or may not reinstate Lawrence; it should insure his being freshly and fairly judged—and indeed, one may ask, in the very freshness is fairness not likely to be inherent?" Elizabeth Bowen

+ N Y Times p4 F 9 '47 1250w

"This is a perfect introduction to Lawrence, since it contains enough variety to convey the conflicting nature of his genius."

+ New Yorker 22:71 Ja 4 '47 70w

LAWRENCE, HILDA. Death of a doll. 310p
$2.50 Simon & Schuster

47-30124

Detective story.

Booklist 43:207 Mr 1 '47

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p8 F 23 '47
200w

"Highly capable, commendable."

+ Kirkus 14:627 D 15 '46 80w

"For all its slickness, this is a sad comedown from The Pavilion," E. H.

New Repub 116:40 Mr 10 '47 140w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22
F 23 '47 270w

"Hilda Lawrence's mystery stories are something to write home about—if there is a mystery fan in the home who insists on top-drawer stuff. . . Miss Lawrence writes with a deft and humorous hand. She points up even minor characters with casual but deadly accuracy. But her prime talent is for evoking—gently but insistently—a stifling atmosphere of terror, which puts you in a state to leap out of your chair at the sudden pounding of a radiator pipe. . . The only time out for catching your breath in this story of brooding terror is when antic humor cracks the gloom."

Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p18 F 23 '47 500w

"A distinguished book," Anthony Boucher
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Mr 2 '47
100w

"Superfine."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:26 Mr 1 '47 40w

LAWSON, ROBERT. At that time; with decorations by the author. 126p $2.50 Viking

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 47-11395

Reminiscences of the author's boyhood, the days—or years—between what he calls the "kitten stage" of childhood and the time when the youth becomes an adult.

Booklist 44:89 N 1 '47

Kirkus 15:510 S 15 '47 250w

"Charming reminiscences of boyhood. . . Not important, but recommended for all over twelve who like nostalgic thoughts of youth." G. E. Cartmell

+ Library J 73:49 Ja 1 '48 40w

"In its detachment and its humor this is like R. H. Davis's 'Tree Toad.' It is a man's memory of the problems and the joys of boyhood. It is so well told, however, that it will probably amuse and interest boys as much as it will their elders."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:59 N 15 '47 40w

LAWSON, ROBERT. Mr Twigg's mistake [il. by the author]. 141p $2.50 Little 47-31415

Mr Twigg, the scientist who put vitamins into Bites, the breakfast cereal, made a mistake one day and put all the vitamins which should have gone into thousands of packages into just one. What that one package did for General de Gaulle, a puny sickly mole being cared for by Squirt Appleton, is the subject of this gayly hilarious and fantastic tale.

Booklist 44:117 N 15 '47

Kirkus 15:467 S 1 '47 170w

"Robert Lawson at his hilarious best. Some of the humor may hit over the child and strike his elders, but child and adult can enjoy this book together." S. J. Johnson

Library J 72:1543 N 1 '47 60w

"It moves through episodes of what Lewis Carroll knew as 'logical nonsense'—such as the General's ploughing up the garden from below—to the climax in which he locates an oil well, goes up on the gusher, and is last seen happily floating on a cloud. What I like best about it is the way people talk, for they all talk like Mr. Lawson at his best, and that, like the walrus-sized mole, really is noticeable. It can be administered at practically any age. I'd say from ten up." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10
N 16 '47 430w

"Mr. Lawson's story is exciting, moving, always gay and witty, and a better satire on advertising than 'The Hucksters.' Mr. Lawson's pictures are dramatic, concrete, and use space and line to perfection. This book, as I said, is for everybody; it is better than Vitamin X." Marjorie Fischer

+ N Y Times p5 N 16 '47 150w

"This is a book for all ages, particularly recommended to parents. One longs to share it immediately with boys and girls, to watch their eyes as they listen to the story, to hear their chuckles as they look at the illustrations."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:42 N 15 '47 450w

Wis Lib Bul 43:155 N '47

LAWTON, GEORGE. Aging successfully. 266p $2.75 Columbia univ. press

179 Old age. Mental hygiene Med47-357

Handbook for the person who is growing older and wants to do it intelligently. Some of the aspects studied are: How old is "old"?; A woman grows older; A man grows older; In youth prepare for age; Jobs after fifty; Love at maturity; Can age and youth be friends?; A philosophy for maturity; To invite trouble after fifty. No index.

"Are you growing older? Do you pretend that growing older is something that happens to someone else, or are you willing to accept the ultimate fact? If you want to 'get on' successfully, this book is a good prescription administered to you in mild and tasteful dosage." C. E. Shepard

+ Am J Pub Health 37:608 My '47 160w

"The book is written in nontechnical language. It is a handbook of guidance based upon Dr. Lawton's wide experience as teacher and counselor to the old. The chief criticism is that it is very loosely organized." R. S. Cavan

+ — Am J Soc 53:234 N '47 180w

Booklist 43:151 Ja 15 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 D 15 '46
70w

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '47

"In a most interesting and vigorous style Dr. Lawton treats almost every conceivable phase of the problem. His book is a veritable mine of illustrations, countless suggestions, panaceas, quotations, and abbreviated case studies. Its very style of composition, entirely unusual among books in this field, is such as to produce the effect upon many readers for which the arguments of the book contend. Indeed, the style will be much more effective in this respect than the arguments, for this reviewer finds it impossible to avoid questioning the underlying intention of the book." D. R. Hunter

+ — Crozer Q 24:275 Jl '47 600w

"Helpful in its reports from old age clinics, from recreational centers, businesses that have used old people, this is a compilation of actual records and cases. Not only for the individual, but for workers in homes, members of families, etc."

+ Kirkus 14:444 S 1 '46 120w

"A frank, very readable and somewhat profound analysis of the minus and plus sides of middle and old-age, full of sound advice, though here and there over-simplified. Recommended to readers over forty who can take plain talk and benefit from it." Rudolph Hirsch

+ Library J 71:1805 D 15 '46 70w

"Among guides to growing old, of which so many have appeared in the United States, this stands out not only because it is the best but because it is written by one whom any old person would call a young man."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p23
My 25 '47 470w

"'Aging Successfully' should be read by those who are going to be old, as well as those already advanced in years. Especially valuable is the author's discussion of the problems of the man who has worked hard all his life so that he can retire in his 'old age,' without planning what he will do when there is no more job. . . There is much plain talk in this book, and valuable talk for those who will take it. . . This is an important book—more important in this reader's opinion than popular tracts on how to live with your neurosis." F. G. Slaughter

+ N Y Times p14 Ja 5 '47 550w

Wis Lib Bul 43:17 Ja '47

LAY, MARGARET REBECCA. Ceylun. 313p
$2.75 Rinehart

47-1015

Novel based on life on a Georgia plantation about 1900. The heroine is beautiful, alluring Ceylun Lithoway, from an impoverished aristocratic family, and the hero is Brev Shore, a successful planter. In order to save the family from bankruptcy Ceylun marries Brev, as a business arrangement. It takes a near-lynching to save the marriage.

"If you want Faulkner, Caldwell and Jesse Stuart all in one book, together with a dash of Margaret Mitchell, well, here, it is." Olive Carruthers

Chicago Sun Book Week p11 Ja 26 '47
140w

Kirkus 14:581 N 15 '46 150w

"Well written. Very readable. Recommended." E. S. Brown
+ Library J 72:161 Ja 15 '47 80w

"Both the love story and racial crime crisis are expertly developed, but the link between them is arbitrary. The author has two themes that do not quite mesh when they meet. She also has a family of mountaineers so bawdy that Tobacco Road folks may have to take a back seat." Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22
F 2 '47 230w

"A native of Georgia, now teaching school in Seattle . . . has chosen the sure-fire subject of pursuit in wedlock and has expounded it gustily in a narrative that is as economical as it is extrovert. She has braced it well with virile verbs and pungent Southern phrases, and larded it with local color—but the formula imposes strict limitations, and 'Ceylun,' which is about as subtle as a dig in the ribs, amounts to little more than a zealous variation on the theme of the chase." M. M.

N Y Times p16 Ja 26 '47 400w

LAYTON, MARK, pseud. See Rush, W. M.

LEA, DOUGLAS EDWARD. Actions of radiations on living cells. 402p il $4.50 Macmillan 612.014481 Radiation—Physiological effect.
Cells 47-1706

"College text giving an account of certain of simplest and fundamental action of X-rays and radioactive radiation on living cells and killing of cells by radiation. Body of book discusses effects of radiation on viruses and on genes and chromosomes of higher cells. For physicists interested in biology as well as for biological investigators and others. Graphs and tables." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:531 Ap 1 '47 50w

"The book is addressed chiefly to persons with scientific training who have an interest in this subject but are not specialists in it."

N Y New Tech Bks 32:16 Ja '47

LEARY, JAMES CORNELIUS, and others. DDT and the insect problem. 176p il $2.50 McGraw

632.951 DDT (insecticide) 46-22874

"Story of this new insecticide, its history, military use, chemistry, mode of action, toxicology, its possible formulations and methods of disposal. Bibliography." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by M. D. Hollis

Am J Pub Health 37:468 Ap '47 140w

Booklist 43:164 F 1 '47

"The Food and Drug Administration of the Federal Security Agency, not the Department of Agriculture, has set a tentative tolerance to 7 p.p.m. of DDT on apples and pears only, but not on other fruits or on vegetables. Neither the physical chemist nor the manufacturer of aerosol bombs will accept the definition of aerosols on page 53. These are minor faults, however, in an interesting account of the great damage done by insects. . . . A very readable book which will prove useful to those seeking an over-all picture of the potentialities and limitations of one of the most publicized chemicals in recent years." R. C. Roark

+ — Chem & Eng N 25:1542 My 26 '47 250w
Cleveland Open Shelf p3 Ja '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1715 D 1 '46 20w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:62 O '46

LECKEY, WAYNE CHARLES, ed. Your home and how to build it yourself; comp. and ed. by Wayne C. Leckey and the editors of Popular mechanics magazine; drawings by Roy B. Brown. [104p] il pa $3 Pop. mechanics

690 Building. Dwellings

47-4746

"Practical book on how to build his own house for the man handy with tools. Actual experience of one man who with one inexperienced helper did his own work with the exception of the plumbing, wiring, plastering, excavation and laying the foundation, which required outside workmen. Illustrations show operations." Library J

Booklist 44:7 S 1 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1113 Ag '47 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:28 Ap '47

LECOMTE DU NOUY, PIERRE. Human destiny. 289p $3.50 Longmans

110 Teleology. Religion and science. Evolution 47-1523

"Dr. Du Nouy, who is a former associate of the late Dr. Alexis Carrel, and who is best known in this country for his remarkable book, 'Biological Time,' attacks materialism and enthrones man as a goal that creation, specifically evolution, sought to achieve. Whereupon he pleads with man to utilize the spiritual powers with which he has been endowed to save himself from inevitable disaster. Neither the plea nor the argument is wholly new, but both are presented with an eloquence and a sincerity that cannot fail to impress." N Y Times

Booklist 43:303 Je 1 '47

Reviewed by J. Line

Canadian Forum 27:69 Je '47 210w

"Human Destiny is, in many respects, a great book. While the main thesis which it expounds is not as novel as some of the printed testimonials would seem to indicate, it is an important thesis, and its restatement in clear, simple language which takes into account the most recent developments of scientific research should serve a very useful purpose." C. H. Patterson

Christian Century 64:431 Ap 2 '47
950w

"This is not an easy book to read; it makes great demands upon the reader's logical and philosophical training and upon his ability to follow a frequently devious course of argument." K. M. Chworowsky

Churchman 161:17 Ap 15 '47 180w

"Father Gerald Walsh has written that the book seems 'the most remarkable essay in natural theology attempted by any scientist of our age.' It is not for me to say whether this judgment is correct. I can only add that I have read every word of it with gratitude and a sense of personal enrichment." G. N. Shuster

+ Commonweal 45:475 F 21 '47 700w

"Almost any thesis can be presented in perfectly logical manner if suitable postulates are granted. But du Nouy does not even attempt a logical presentation. He leaps gracefully from one unproven assumption to another in perfectly dogmatic fashion. . . . Of a half-dozen scientific associates who have examined this book, only one was willing to read more than the first half. They felt that the material was uninteresting and repetitious. This reviewer recommends the book only to those who enjoy reading a smattering of miscellaneous scientific information without particular reference to the bearing this information may have on the general scheme of things." Eugene Ayres

— + Crozer Q 24:353 O '47 700w

"This is not simple reading, but engrossing to the average intelligence willing to plough the furrows of truth."

+ Kirkus 15:60 F 1 '47 210w

Reviewed by R. J. Hurley

Library J 72:223 F 1 '47 110w

"What is obvious is that 'life' and 'evolution' need much more 'explaining'; what is not obvious—to me—is that Noll's hypothesis 'explains' anything at all. Skeptics will not be convinced; believers need no convincing; and the clergy will seize upon this work of a scientist to lend added support to their preachings." Benjamin Harrow

Nation 164:282 Mr 8 '47 550w

"The most conspicuous attribute of his book is its utter lack of feeling for men at the same time that it professes an often noble credo for man. . . . It is this absence of a true Christian spirit which makes so much of what appears in these pages grandiloquent and insincere, if not indeed pernicious. The manner of proof, the slaying, with a great flourish, of arguments already dead, the verbosity, the weighty tone, the rapturous flights do not modify this impression. . . . Some of the things du Noll has written are true; it is scarcely possible to pour out so much and say nothing. But the remedy for the world's agony is not in these pages." J. R. Newman

— New Repub 117:25 Jl 28 '47 2500w

"The book is facing both ways: a truly universal religion in the making, the ultimate goal of man's creative evolution; and a return to the exclusive, historical, organized, dogmatic, infallible religions. But the work is far from indifferent. The chapters do not cohere, but many of the paragraphs are excellent." Albert Guerard

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Mr 23 '47 1550w

Reviewed by Waldemar Kaempffert

N Y Times p3 F 23 '47 1500w

Reviewed by B. W. Kunkel

Sat R of Lit 30:15 Mr 8 '47 750w

School & Society 65:351 My 10 '47 40w

Reviewed by E. C. Lindeman

Survey G 36:302 My '47 1050w

"Many Christian divines will hail this book because it aims to provide for their theology a sufficient basis in science. They, and the general reader, must watch thoughtfully for the points at which the author passes beyond experimental fact into conjecture."

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:142 Je '47 320w

LE CORBUSIER, pseud. See Jeanneret-Gris, C. E.

LEDBETTER, ELMER E. Peace by thinking. 486p $3.50 Bloch, S.J.

301 Peace, Social sciences, Philosophy 47-30563

"The author of this book is an active business man whose avocation, we are told, has been philosophy. His objective is to find the cause and cure of war. The approach is by a consideration first of the nature of man and his universe, a recognition of man's success in discovering the universal laws of physical nature, and the observation that man has lagged in his discovery of the 'cosmic laws of conduct.' These laws, three in number, are declared to be: self-interest; interdependence; freedom. Incorrect thinking about these things is the root of all evil." (Christian Century) Index.

Christian Century 64:1337 N 5 '47 280w

"The author writes violently and does say a good many good things, such as his bitter attack upon the principle of 'peace by force.' He says everything emphatically. He finds fallacies everywhere. Maybe he is right. But while his approach is different it does not appear to be new, and the crucial question still remains—how to get wrong thinkers to think right." H. H. Wagner

Springf'd Republican p10B N 16 '47 270w

LEE, ANDREW, pseud. See Auchincloss, L.

LEE, CLARK GOULD. One last look around. 295p $3.75 Duell

950 East (Far East). Reconstruction (1939-)—East (Far East) 47-4271

"An angry protest against our policy of backing the imperialistic claims of Britain, Holland and France in Singapore, Siam, Java and French Indo-China, and against our own reactionary interest in Japan, China and the Philippines. Mr. Lee is bitter about our Army, Navy and Air Force and such men as Mark Clark, Spaatz and Bedell-Smith. He thinks that the Japanese were right when they told their fellow Asiatics that 'their only hope of freedom lay in fighting against white dominations.' After seeing what atomic bombs did to Japan the author feels that their manufacture should be prevented." Library J

"A journalistic swan song that contains some good reporting, some offhand conclusions and more than the average amount of the cynicism that is supposed to be a newspaperman's stock-in-trade. Lee's earlier book, 'They Call It Pacific,' contained the first good account of the campaign in which the United States lost the Philippines. Partly because he is no longer blazing new ground, his latest book fails to live up to the earlier one." F. S. Marquardt

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Je 8 '47 500w

"Some of these postwar stories are memorable largely because of the escapades of the newsmen who took active part in them. And some of them are quite over-shadowed by Mr. Lee's impressive accumulation of antipathies. Few spectacular developments or personages in the Far East recently escape criticism. . . . Yet, while there may be some doubt as to the author's unbiased perspective, his experience as a roving newsmen is broad." H. S. Hayward

+ — Christian Science Monitor p18 Je 13 '47 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 S '47

"The most exciting and disturbing book on what is happening since V-J Day in the Pacific. . . . An angry—and an absorbing book." Kirkus 15:51 Ja 15 '47 210w

"An important, controversial book. Recommended for all libraries." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 72:806 My 15 '47 130w

"Lee has not been content to write merely a fast-moving narrative. The jacket copy calls him a man of 'passionate convictions,' and it is obvious that he has a great deal on his mind. Unfortunately, in his attempts at evaluation and explanation rather than straight reporting, his passion tends to confuse his logic and his highly colored style sometimes seems a little glib." A. L. Goodman

New Repub 117:27 Jl 28 '47 650w

"Bitterness is the keynote of the entire book on post-war Asia, bitterness combined with complaints about everything from cowardly Frenchmen to the atomic bomb, misplaced levity, peevishness and overweening conceit. . . . Except for the native ruler of Bikini and one or two others it is hard to find any one whom the author really liked and respected. . . . 'One Last Look Around' is written in lively fashion and covers a good deal that has not previously been revealed; it is a fascinating, though unbalanced, account of post-war Asia." P. J. Searles

— + N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 Je 8 '47 750w

"There may be other books written with more heat. There may be other authors who have laid about them with greater abandon. But 'One Last Look Around' is at or near the top of any such collection. Clark Lee had a full head of steam generated when he sat down to record his ideas about how the war was fought and the news censored. . . The chapters where Mr. Lee is taking a full swing at the brass and the gold braid will be enjoyable reading for many retired war correspondents." Foster Hailey

LEE, CLARK GOULD—Continued

N Y Times p5 Je 22 '47 550w

"'One Last Look Around' is in many ways a bitter book, but it is also a book to make a lot of people think." J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p18 My 27 '47 950w

LEE, MRS EDNA L. (MOONEY). Web of days. 276p $2.75 Appleton-Century

47-2710

A historical novel of Georgia in post Civil-war days. The chief character, and the narrator of the tale, is Hester Snow, a Yankee school teacher who comes to the Le Grand plantation to act as governess to the young son of the house and becomes involved in the fortunes of the strange family.

Booklist 43:310 Je 1 '47

Reviewed by George Dillon

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 My 18 '47 310w

Kirkus 15:140 Mr 1 '47 180w

"A pity Somerset Maugham has used the title 'The Mixture as before' as it tags this book and its many predecessors so aptly. . . All these make a commercial but not unusual product. It will satisfy those who read spicy historical romances to see how the plot comes out. Recommended." Anne Whitmore

Library J 72:733 My 1 '47 80w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p26 My 25 '47 160w

Reviewed by James MacBride

N Y Times p12 My 25 '47 330w

Reviewed by Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p10 Je 29 '47 120w

"As we read Mrs. Lee's story of a hired governess on a post-Civil War plantation, we are reminded of a hundred things we have read before. Echoes of 'Jane Eyre' and of 'Rebecca' sound, with other echoes, in our ears. But alas, the book has not the depth of the former, nor the mystery of the latter, and is, after all, just a conglomeration of very familiar phrases and people and plots." N. G. Chaikin

— Sat R of Lit 30:44 Je 21 '47 380w

Wis Lib Bul 43:118 Jl '47

LEE, JOSHUA BRYAN. How to hold an audience without a rope. 280p $3 Ziff-Davis 808.5 Public speaking 47-3398

Discussion of the art of public speaking and the influencing of the audience by the choice of the right word. The author was head of the speech department of the University of Oklahoma for sixteen years, and is a former senator from Oklahoma.

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '47

"There's stimulating and concrete advice on beginnings and endings. An excellent book in its field."

+ Kirkus 15:256 My 1 '47 100w

"If you have never experienced the secret urge to sweep the Kiwanis Club off its collective feet by a brilliant and witty extemporaneous speech, you need not read Josh Lee's handy manual for orators. If you have felt such a yearning for the unattainable you will enjoy his book. Perhaps you will profit from it." H. B. Hinton

N Y Times p29 Je 22 '47 350w

LEE, LAURIE. The sun my monument. 58p $2 Doubleday 821 47-30888

The first publication in the United States of the poems of a young British poet, who has "shaken himself free from the tunelessness and gloom that afflicts so many of his contemporaries." (New Yorker)

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 S 21 '47 20w

Kirkus 15:424 Ag 1 '47 100w

Reviewed by Fleming MacLiesh

N Y Times p8 D 21 '47 600w

"A sparkling and gay impressionism is the principal characteristics of these lyric poems." + New Yorker 23:106 S 20 '47 50w

"Withal, the style is of our time—for Laurie Lee has not 'snorted in the seven sleepers' den' while modern poetry has been aborning. His association with advance-guard publications is one warrant of that. Another is his constant use of the metaphysical image. . . The fact that Laurie Lee, who in another age might have been simply a pleasant pastoral poet, is writing metaphysical poetry, need not be charged to fashion." G. P. Meyer

+ Sat R of Lit 30:23 S 6 '47 1000w

LEE, LEONARD. Twisted mirror. 182p $1.98 Ziff-Davis 47-6187

Mystery story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p43 O 10 '47 50w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p32 O 26 '47 80w

"Clichés abound in the prose as well as in the creation of character. Mr. Lee has parlayed his clichés into an amusing tale." Jack Glick

+ — N Y Times p32 N 2 '47 160w

"Pleasant item with nice people, good dialogue, lots of punch." E. D. Doyle

+ San Francisco Chronicle p26 O 5 '47 70w

"Average."

Sat R of Lit 30:45 N 1 '47 50w

LEE, UMPHREY. Render unto the people. 164p $1.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury 261.7 Church and state in the U.S. Church and education 47-5073

This volume, containing the Cole lectures delivered at Vanderbilt university in 1946, is devoted to a discussion of the relationship between religion and state—in particular the Protestant church and the American democracy. Contents: The question at Dayton; The rule of the majority; Religion and the public schools; Religion in higher education; Religion and politics; Conformity and dissent, Index.

"Dr. Lee's thinking is careful, even cautious, and the reader will feel that he is under the guidance of a judicious mind that is more concerned to preserve the democratic process and to maintain the essential liberties than to gain advantage for any group or special interest."

+ Christian Century 64:973 Ag 13 '47 180w

"This is an important book for all Protestants to read. President Lee deals with the problem of church and state not in the abstract, legalistic terms of the church versus the political government. Instead he handles the concrete, sociological problems of the relation of the Protestant churches to the majority opinions of the people who, in the democratic state, determine the actions of the government. . . One could wish that in so thoughtful and well-documented a book more attention had been given to the literature on public opinion from A. V. Dicey to Lasswell, since this is the author's key to the problem. Such a discussion would have strengthened the general argument of a timely and courageous volume." E. E. Aubrey

+ — Crozer Q 25:84 Ja '48 500w

LEEMING, JOSEPH. More fun with puzzles; drawings by Jessie Robinson. 149p $2.50 Lip-pincott

793.73 Puzzles 47-31414

"Puzzles of every kind for everybody, for fun and mental gymnastics; problems with coins, counters and matches; brain twisters, mathematical and number puzzles; pencil and paper problems; cut-out and put-together puzzles; anagrams and word puzzles." Sub-title

Booklist 44:102 N 15 '47

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold
Christian Science Monitor p16 D 18 '47
230w

"This volume will provide excellent entertainment for children and adults." B. W. Bell
+ Library J 72:1474 O 15 '47 70w

LEES, HANNAH, pseud. See Fetter, E. H.

LEESON, SPENCER. Christian education. 258p $5 Longmans

377 Religious education. Education—Great Britain. Education—Aims and objectives 47-5621

This book contains "eight lectures delivered before the University of Oxford, in the year 1944, on the foundation of the Rev. John Bampton, Canon of Salisbury." (Subtitle) In his Foreword the author says: "My object has been to proclaim the necessity, in all education that is worth the name, of a central purpose; to state what I believe to be the Christian purpose in education; to review English education as it is to-day in the light of that same purpose; and to suggest a programme and a policy for the Church of England in the exercise of her teaching office." Index.

"There are few corners of the educational field into which Canon Leeson does not penetrate. Though uncompromising in his orthodoxy, he exhibits throughout a tolerant and sympathetic attitude towards those who will not be able to accept his full dogmatic position. He writes with eloquence, and sometimes with emotion. His sincerity and conviction impart an impressive power to his words, and he has made a timely and most notable contribution to the literature of his subject." M. L. Jacks

+ Hibbert J 45:378 J1 '47 1450w

School & Society 66:288 O 11 '47 20w

"Canon Leeson wears his immense scholarship with easy grace, and though his arguments are unadorned with that wealth of metaphor which, in some contemporary theological writing, distracts without illuminating, they compel the reader to go eagerly forward." John Garrett

+ Spec 179:250 Ag 22 '47 900w

"Christian Education is conspicuous alike for its comprehensiveness, its fervour and its fair-mindedness. It discusses the central purpose of education, gives a history of religion in English schools, and describes the current movement of opinion and the problems with which the Church is now faced. The historical sections are in general admirable... When, however, we come to the fifth lecture on 'The Content of Christian Education,' we are conscious of a change of tone: the lecture turns into a sermon, and a sermon in which the reader has an uneasy feeling that language is sometimes used more as an opiate than as an instrument of thought."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p354 J1 12 '47
1200w

LEFFINGWELL, ALBERT (DANA CHAMBERS, pseud). Rope for an ape. 256p $2.50 Dial press 47-2348

Mystery story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p9 Mr 23 '47
80w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p25
Ap 13 '47 140w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p32 Ap 13 '47 90w

"Fast and tough, but rather shaky in motivation."

— New Yorker 23:116 Mr 22 '47 80w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p10 Ap 6 '47
70w

"Flashy."

Sat R of Lit 30:34 Mr 29 '47 40w

LEGGETT, WILLIAM FERGUSON. Story of wool; with a foreword by Sylvan I. Stroock. 304p il $5 Chemical pub. co.

677.3 Wool trade 47-18146

"Written by an expert in the textile field [this book] deals with the historical background of wool, sheep and the wool textile industry throughout the world. It does not cover techniques of wool processing. Has a few chapters on Cashmere and Angora goats, camel, vicuna and alpaca. Bibliography. Not illustrated." Library J

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:892 Je 1 '47 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:20 Ja '47

LE GRAND, pseud. See Henderson, Le G.

LEHMANN, ROSAMOND (MRS WOGAN PHILLIPS). Gipsy's baby, and other stories. 192p $2.50 Reynal

47-762

Collection of five short stories, all of which have appeared in England in New Writing. Contents: The Gipsy's baby; The Red-haired Miss Daintreys; When the waters came; A Dream of winter; Wonderful holidays.

Booklist 43:185 F 15 '47

Reviewed by E. B. Knight

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 F 2 '47
230w

Christian Science Monitor p14 F 1 '47
480w

Kirkus 14:601 D 1 '46 190w

"Miss Lehmann writes easily and lightly, but with overtones and undertones that evoke a wide range of emotions." Charles Marriott
+ Manchester Guardian p3 My 3 '46 60w

Reviewed by Henry Reed

New Statesman & Nation 31:323 My 4
'46 180w

"The five stories in Miss Lehmann's new book, 'The Gipsy's Baby,' have the same limpidity, choice imagery and loving craftsmanship for which her writing has stood since 'Dusty Answer,' published some eighteen years ago, placed her high on the list of England's most sensitive women writers. In these stories Miss Lehmann again catches the timbre of young personalities, echoes their words, suggests their thoughts and displays without flushed emotionalism her knowledge of their hearts." Virgilia Peterson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3
Ja 19 '47 800w

"Although Miss Lehmann probes deeply into impulse and motive, at no point does she uncover the stirring growth inherent in the process of change. Hers are lovely records of a sensitive beauty-loving mind. But the underlying symbolism is of frustration, not renaissance. Once again we have watched all the Lehmann talents working to make small perfections, remote and separate from the huge blundering experience of humanity. Again we have fallen under the spell of a creative energy in love with the irrecoverable past." Isabelle Mallet

+ N Y Times p5 Ja 19 '47 900w

LEHMANN, ROSAMOND—Continued

"Five delicate sketches, in which the elusive lights of childhood are caught and held for a moment. . . The material is provocative and Miss Lehmann has made much of it; that she has not made more is cause for disappointment."

+ — New Yorker 22:77 F 1 '47 100w

Reviewed by Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p10 Mr 16 '47 100w

"Miss Lehmann has a happy, poetic power with words; her humour is subdued and can be very accurate, and all her writing gives an impression of a benevolent spirit haunted by a sense of the fragility of ordinary human happiness. She conveys this very well—the lurking hurt in simple scenes, and the poignant brightness of memory. All these stories may well give pleasure to sensitive readers, though for my part I felt a slight, unlucky touch of what I can only call Miniverishness in the last, long one called Wonderful Holidays and here and there in the others. But The Redheaded Miss Daintreys is a perfect beauty in its genre." Kate O'Brien

+ Spec 176:436 Ap 26 '46 200w

"Miss Lehmann is possibly at her best in writing about children, and the five stories in 'The Gipsy's Baby' all consist very largely of a record of things seen through the eyes of children or experienced in their mind and imagination. The children's talk is always, or nearly always, very good—live, humorous, consistently and revealingly in character—and is nicely balanced against the thought and observation, which as a rule is much more broken in flow and less explicit in quality of the grown-ups."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p185 Ap 20 '46 750w

"Serene, gentle, mildly humorous, these five stories are exceedingly moving in a quiet way." Orville Prescott

+ Yale R n s 36:576 spring '47 60w

LEHMANN-HARTLEBEN, KARL. Thomas Jefferson, American humanist. 273p il $4.50 Macmillan

B or 92 Jefferson, Thomas 47-6068

"In this analysis of Jefferson and his work the author, professor of Fine Arts at New York University, gives a clear account of the debt this famous American owed to the classical world and shows how the thought and words of Jefferson reflected the influence of Greek and Roman writing. His versatility and complete grasp of various tasks and works is stressed and related to his prodigious reading." (Library J) Indexes.

Booklist 44:150 D 15 '47

Kirkus 15:452 Ag 15 '47 170w

"Recommended for general purchase." W. A. Kalenich

+ Library J 72:1190 S 1 '47 70w

"Mr. Lehmann's book is of limited value. As a 'precis' of the information available to Jefferson it is excellent, for the author knows his classics and he has studied Jefferson, too, but a flicker of doubt remains that he knows what made Jefferson important." G. W. Johnson

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p26 N 9 '47 750w

"This penetrating essay, urbane in style, rich in erudition, is by far the most comprehensive and satisfying analysis yet made of Jefferson's lifelong contemplation of ancient civilization." J. P. Boyd

+ N Y Times p9 N 16 '47 1150w

"Woodrow Wilson said that Jefferson's immortality 'does not lie in any one of his achievements, but in his attitude toward mankind.' Mr. Lehmann's book goes far toward explaining the sources and nature of that attitude." L. N. Butterfield

+ Sat R of Lit 31:12 Ja 10 '48 900w

LEHRMAN, HAROLD ARTHUR. Russia's Europe. 341p $3.75 Appleton-Century

949.6 Balkan states, Europe—Politics, Communism—Europe, Russia—Foreign relations 47-6977

Starting out as a pro-Soviet liberal, the author, a free-lance journalist with assignments from PM and other liberal papers, spent part of 1945-1946 in a trip thru middle Europe and the Balkan countries. This book contains the story of his disillusionment with Russia and the Russian-dominated governments in south-eastern Europe as well as his criticisms of Anglo-American policies in the same region.

Booklist 44:170 Ja 1 '48

Reviewed by David Karno

Chicago Sun Book Week D 9 '47 450w

Kirkus 15:589 O 15 '47 380w

"So far as I know, this is the first time anyone has attempted to piece together the whole story of Southeastern Europe since the war. Mr. Lehrman does tell that story, and his book will be useful, at least as an interim history. Eventually, it may be hoped, someone with the background and sophistication of a Hugh Seton-Watson will give us a more definitive history." Russell Hill

+ — Nation 165:683 D 20 '47 950w

"This is not an objective account of what is happening in eastern Europe nor in any sense a reasoned analysis of the problem created by Russian policy. It is a highly personal book with a curious admixture of the author's own experiences and more general discussion which often seems to place what happened to Mr. Lehrman and what happened to some Yugoslavian or Romanian political movement on the same level of importance. It is choppy and episodic in its treatment." F. R. Dulles

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p48 D 7 '47 1000w

"Much of his evidence is impressive, but the book is hastily written, badly organized, and seriously weakened by generalizations."

+ — New Yorker 23:94 D 20 '47 190w

"Russia's Europe," while told in narrative form, is an authoritative, enlightening, and notably honest report. Without whitewash or emotionalism it contains a tremendous number of fundamental facts about Eastern Europe's 'silent battleground.' Anyone who has not been there since the war cannot hope to understand what next develops east and southeast of Vienna without first having read this unusual book. I have not seen a document on this subject to compare with it." Leland Stowe

+ Sat R of Lit 30:10 D 27 '47 950w

LEICHTENTRITT, HUGO. Serge Koussevitzky, the Boston symphony orchestra and the new American music. 199p $3 Harvard univ. press

785 Koussevitzky, Sergei Alexandrovitch. Boston symphony orchestra A47-96

This book contains some biographical material on the conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, but for the most part it is made up of essays on the achievements of the orchestra and its influence on American musical life during the period of Koussevitzky's leadership.

Reviewed by Alexander Williams

Atlantic 179:154 Ap '47 300w

Booklist 43:165 F 1 '47

Reviewed by Felix Borowski

Chicago Sun Book Week p5 D 22 '46 330w

"Dr. Leichtentritt's comments on Koussevitzky as a conductor have a slightly official tone; they are appreciative rather than critical." L. A. Sloper

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 4 '47 240w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '47

"Serge Koussevitzky" actually is a brief, well-informed and entertaining history of American music." M. C. Hastings

+ N Y Times p33 My 4 '47 800w

"The book is scholarly, but not too technical or abstruse for the average music lover." J. B. + San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ja 26 '47 120w

Theatre Arts 31:79 My '47 110w
Times [London] Lit Sup p248 My 24 '47 240w

LEIFFER, MURRAY HOWARD. The layman looks at the minister. 160p il $1.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury

250 Pastoral work 47-819
"The author, a sociologist teaching at Garrett, does not give merely his own opinions. His 'layman' is the composite of more than a thousand, all Methodists, who replied to a questionnaire as to what they liked and disliked about ministers, and how much. Seventy questions, a choice among five graded answers to each, and a scoring system made it possible to reduce to a statistical statement the preferences and aversions of the laity toward ministerial qualities and practices. The statistics are interpreted, for the benefit of those with less mathematical minds, and interesting individual replies are quoted." Christian Century

Christian Century 64:145 Ja 29 '47 110w

"One misses the contribution of an interpreting mind such as one finds in the Yale Lectures on Preaching and the books of Henry Sloan Coffin. The result is a collection of ingredients, but they have not been fused in one mind so that one may see the ideal preacher in action and life." A. C. Baldwin
Crozer Q 24:189 Ap '47 150w

LEIGH, MICHAEL. Comrade forest. (Whittlesey house publication) 339p $2.75 McGraw 47-3062

A story of Russian guerrillas in the late war. "This story is based on fact, on the story of the heroic Soviet woman guerrilla-fighter, Liza Ivanovna Chaikina. It is not, however, an exact portrayal of the heroine, though the facts, as related, follow closely her epic story." (Note)

Reviewed by Serrell Hillman
Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Je 22 '47 280w

"A story about Russian guerrillas, with no great literary value . . . provides, nonetheless, a certain excitement and emotional quality." + Kirkus 15:136 Mr 1 '47 110w

Reviewed by W. A. Kalenich
Library J 72:733 My 1 '47 50w

"Michael Leigh is an Irishman now living in England, but he has successfully projected himself into the Russian war situation and achieved a narrative of heroic deeds and flagrant villainies. He has assimilated the Soviet manner and attitude so completely that 'Comrade Forest' is in most respects indistinguishable from the current novels that come to us out of Russia." Stephen Stepanchev
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 Je 1 '47 500w

"'Comrade Forest' is not only a top-drawer war novel. As a story of the resistance of the Russian people it stands shoulder to shoulder with Konstantin Simonov's 'Days and Nights.'" John Bicknell

+ N Y Times p20 My 18 '47 500w

"There is not only hate and violence in this book, but love, too, and compassion, a fine warmth for the earthy goods of life and the irrepressible humor of healthy people, and, above all, a tale that moves like the Burlington Zephyr when it's highballing." Ira Wolfert
+ Sat R of Lit 30:17 My 10 '47 950w

Reviewed by Walter Allen
Spec 176:672 Je 28 '46 130w

Times [London] Lit Sup p281 Je 15 '46 180w

LEIGHTON, CLARE VERONICA HOPE (MRS HENRY NOEL BAILS福德). Tempestuous petticoat; the story of an invincible Edwardian. 272p $3.50 Rinehart

B or 92 Leighton, Marie (Connor) 47-30125

A picture of the author's mother, who was a writer of thrillers for Lord Northcliffe's Daily Mail and other papers which flourished in Edwardian London.

Booklist 43:204 Mr 1 '47

Bookmark 8:13 My '47

"In this recollection, Clare Leighton is writing in an intensely personal fashion about her own family, but she has done a considerable service to the King her mother adored, for we are just far enough away to begin to appreciate the full flavor of his age, and one can hardly read these pages without experiencing an intense and lasting interest in the romantic society for which the philandering Prince of Wales became a symbol." J. W. Rogers

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p1 F 23 '47 1150w

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '47

"From the superabundance of detail emerges a vivid picture of the woman and her times. There is a lack of that humor that made Clarence Day's portraits of his father and mother an irresistible parody of a period." Kirkus 15:23 Ja 1 '47 220w

"Miss Leighton writes with charm and without inhibition for all to read. Recommended." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 72:317 F 15 '47 110w

"The book is graphically written, with sharp strokes, almost repellent candor and cold humor. It might have been written for a psychoanalyst. It fascinates rather than entertains. It convinces me, finally, that sex appeal is a mystery and that ours is an age of progress and delicacy." Ernestine Evans

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Mr 2 '47 1150w

"In a full-bodied and delightful character study of an indomitable woman Clare Leighton has attained as well a fine and flavorsome appraisal of the Edwardian era. . . . Clare Leighton's portrait of her mother could well hang in the gallery next to Clarence Day's portrait of his father." Nancy Ladd

+ N Y Times p24 F 23 '47 800w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 Mr 2 '47 550w

"'Tempestuous Petticoat' is witty, timelessly gay in the glow of gaslight, and as romantic as the the Parma violets Mrs. Leighton loves." C. M. Brown

+ Sat R of Lit 30:17 My 17 '47 430w
Time 49:99 Mr 3 '47 500w

LEIGHTON, DOROTHEA (CROSS), and KLUCKHOHN, CLYDE. Children of the people; the Navaho individual and his development. 277p il maps $4.50 Harvard univ. press 970.3 Indians of North America—Children. Navaho Indians 47-3884

"This study of the Navaho individual and his development was written as a part of the Indian Education Research Project undertaken jointly by the Committee on Human Development, the University of Chicago, and the U. S. Office of Indian Affairs." School & Society

Reviewed by Walter Dyk

Am Anthropol 50:103 Ja '48 800w

"There is a wealth of accurate information here for readers who are interested in the Indians of the Southwest—and no dearth of significant observation which offers thought-provoking parallels and contrasts to child life in other American communities." J. T. Fredrick

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p9 Jl 20 '47 150w

LEIGHTON, DOROTHEA—Continued.
School & Society 65:431 Je 7 '47 40w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman
School & Society 66:331 O 25 '47 180w

"Judged as a whole, Children of the People provides a good deal of insight into Navaho culture and personality. It is interestingly written and splendidly illustrated, and it is worthy of careful consideration as an effort to merge psychological and anthropological methods." Mischa Titiev

+ Social Forces 26:105 O '47 1250w
Wis Lib Bul 43:140 O '47

LEIPER, HENRY SMITH, ed. Christianity today; a survey of the state of the churches. 452p $5 Morehouse

270.8 Church history 47-30478

"Clergy and laymen alike will be interested in these authoritative first-hand reports from forty-two nations or areas on the state of the Christian Church. This survey, sponsored by the American Committee for World Council of Churches, will supply the knowledge so necessary for fuller international cooperation of churches—co-operation which is imperative in an atomic age." (Library J) No index.

"From whatever point of view one approaches this volume, it is a valuable contribution to knowledge in regard to the present state of religion and the churches (Roman Catholic excepted) throughout the world. Specifically, it is important source material with reference to the actual resources with which the World Council of Churches will begin business when it completes its organization in 1948." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 64:1110 S 17 '47 1250w

"This comprehensive survey, especially if read with a good atlas or a globe at hand for reference, will do much to cultivate among Christians an intelligent world-mindedness." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 64:1521 D 10 '47 140w

"Recommended for every library." O. G. Lawson

+ Library J 72:1104 Ag '47 130w

Reviewed by Chad Walsh

N Y Times p30 N 16 '47 700w

LEMARCHAND, JACQUES. Parenthesis; tr. from the French by Louise Varèse. 217p $2.50 Knopf

47-1628

A translation of a French comedy of manners. A young Frenchman returns to his home town after ten years in Paris. He meets again the girl he jilted ten years before, and has an uncomfortable time with his conventional family, and finally takes the train back to Paris.

"An ambling story, composite of moods and sensory values, almost Joycean in word flow. While Lemarchand reveals a leaning towards existentialism, Parenthesis is in no way a novel in that genre. Its occasional sombreness is lightened by a charming gift of humorous phrase."

+ Kirkus 15:106 F 15 '47 180w

"Anti-romantic to the point of acerbity, exquisitely economical and full of mockery, Mr. Lemarchand's brief novel creates with seemingly casual touches a devastating portrait not only of his hero but of the background from which he has escaped, the aspirations and disgust, the anguish of a not otherwise remarkable person who elects to face the truth about himself and about human existence." Iris Barry

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 Ap 13 '47 470w

"Louise Varèse has done a competent, witty translation of Lemarchand's 'Parenthesis,' and in spite of the 'good guys' and 'honeys' who crop up from time to time, some of the French flavor gets through alive. Certainly there are enough cocottes, stagnant canals and Gallic touches to keep a pre-war tourist satisfied. Dominique, protagonist of this fragrant comedy of manners, is a familiar enough figure—just another tortured neurotic running away from himself toward his youth. . . While hero and author sort themselves out, the reader may have an uneasy time. . . Ultimately we are in no mood to humor Dominique about his lovely broken idyll." Isabelle Mallet

+ N Y Times p14 Ap 6 '47 430w

"M. Lemarchand makes it clear that he has very little interest in his hero, but, having decided to report on these three days, he does so in an adroitly satiric style, which is only occasionally marred by a breath of archness. The book can't be called a novel; it gives the impression of being no more than a clever exercise M. Lemarchand has done to show how supple his fingers are. They're very supple."

+ New Yorker 23:114 Mr 22 '47 140w

"Lemarchand writes prose that is bright and shiny as a bubble, it is also just as empty. . . The publishers, however, have given this porous book some handsome typography and one of the best translators in the business: Louise Varèse." Alfred Kay

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ap 13 '47 220w

LEMON, HARVEY BRACE. From Galileo to the nuclear age; an introduction to physics; phot. by the author; drawings by Chichi Lasley. rev 2d ed 451p $5 Univ. of Chicago press

530 Physics A46-6075

New edition of a textbook on physics which first appeared in 1934 (Book Review Digest 1934). "In the twelve years that have elapsed since the first edition of this book was offered to nonprofessional students and to the public, the boundaries of physical knowledge have been vastly extended. Items in the first edition, like the neutron tentatively mentioned in a footnote, have become firmly established in atomic architecture; contrariwise, nuclear structures, believed in 1934 to be composed of electrons and protons, have been entirely abandoned in view of new evidence; and proton-neutron composition has taken their place. . . The later chapters that come close to the border line of knowledge have been advanced with it, largely by re-writing and considerable additions of things undreamed of even seven years ago. Here and there in earlier chapters, where the longest shadows of coming events reached back, minor alterations have been made—the most difficult part for the author." (Pref to second edition) Index.

Booklist 43:258 Ap 15 '47

Reviewed by Brian O'Brien

Chem & Eng N 25:3530 N 24 '47 290w

"There are many excellent textbooks on physics, but here is one which can be put into the hands of a student who wants to master the subject by individual study; or, in fact, a book which will keep the ordinary cover-to-cover reader fascinated while he adds to his store of knowledge. . . This is the type of book one would expect from a great teacher who believes in enticing his students to seek for knowledge because the search is fascinating, not because they've got to take some sort of a technical course to work off a degree requirement in the natural sciences." H. B. N.

+ Christian Science Monitor p17 F 15 '47 550w

Current Hist 12:239 Mr '47 40w

Reviewed by James Stokley

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p33 My 4 '47 130w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:35 Ap '47

"In Professor Lemon's book, the emphasis is primarily on phenomena, secondarily on their interpretation in terms of simple models, and hardly at all on the great internal simplicity of physics, the interrelation of seemingly unlike phenomena, and the nature and power of the deductive scientific method. . . Though Galileo's name appears in the title of this book, between the covers physics is dealt with in a more or less didactic way, like American history. This is done almost without recourse to mathematics, the language of physics. In my view, physics cannot be understood or described in terms of 'everyday language' and without mathematics. . . Reviewers of the first edition of this book were enthusiastic about it, one learns from the publisher's quotes on the jacket. If I have seemed to be something less than enthusiastic about the second edition, it is because I feel that the value physics has for the general reader, or for the non-specialist, lies in its basis of deductive reasoning." L. N. Ridenour

Sat R of Lit 30:15 F 8 '47 1000w

LENANTON, MRS CAROLA MARY ANIMA (OMAN). Nelson. 748p il $5 Doubleday

B or 92 Nelson, Horatio Nelson, 1st viscount 46-8255

"A mammoth biography of the one-eyed, one-armed English naval hero which traces in microscopic detail his personal and professional career, which at times takes issue with previous books about him, which uses not only standard sources but also material from Nelson's own letters and from accounts of contemporaries. Here is the boy who chose his career for himself, who, in spite of the influence of his uncle, Captain Suckling, proved the importance of his decision by his record of a speedy rise in the service. Then the man, pursued by ill-health, pursuing his dream of duty to his country; faithful in his marriage but losing his heart forever to Lady Hamilton. The many years a national hero, his devotion to his little daughter, Horatia, his deep concern over his dear Emma even in the drama of his death." Kirkus

"The merits of Miss Oman's work are many. She has probably examined more Nelson manuscripts than any previous writer and has used them with intelligence and discrimination. Her critical handling of the more familiar printed Nelsoniana represents scholarship of the highest order. Her canvas is broad, her treatment comprehensive. . . Despite these undoubted accomplishments Miss Oman can be criticized on three counts. First and foremost, she has failed to make her subject live. . . The diplomatic and naval themes both suffer from the same want of sharpness and meaning. . . Her narrative, moreover, is badly handicapped by the unbelievable omission of all charts, maps, diagrams, and statistics to illustrate the triumphs of England's greatest admiral. In short, there is nothing in this book for the naval historian." R. W. Leopold

+ — Am Hist R 53:101 O '47 750w

Booklist 43:168 F 1 '47

"This new biography of England's great naval hero is in the tradition of the large English biographies of the nineteenth century. It has dignity and amplitude. It is a portrait of a person; it is also an account of an age. . . Miss Oman, who has three other biographies to her credit, has written a biography which it will be difficult to supersede. It will be much used and much enjoyed. She succeeds in recreating not only the events of an heroic life, but also the valiant spirit which has inspired Englishmen for over 150 years." Horace Reynolds

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 F 21 '47 500w

"This is a wholly admirable portrait: written with an exquisitely light touch and full of often very amusing details. Mrs. Oman is at her best in her climaxes: the great battles are detailed with the same scrupulous, yet magnanimous touch, that their hero himself must have had in planning them. Here is humor . . . but above all, there is ample majesty. Here an heroic life is capitally told." Anne Fremantle

+ Commonweal 45:355 Ja 17 '47 1250w

"None of the lustre of his career is lost in the telling, none of the gossipy details of his long romance, and the whole, though sometimes bogged in circumlocution, is a monumental work of re-creation."

+ Kirkus 14:288 Je 15 '46 180w

Manchester Guardian p3 O 21 '47 300w

"Miss Oman describes the campaigns and battles with superb fidelity. The book has several defects. Miss Oman, sometimes obscuring the forest with trees, swamps the reader with multitudinous details not kept in relative importance. Surely an inventory of furnishings at Merton is not as deserving of attention as the tale of a battle that saved England. Everything is in the book, but too much on the same level of attention. Furthermore, there is practically no background of affairs and little interpretation of men and events. But these are minor criticisms and can be overlooked, for 'Nelson' is a memorable study, full-scale, illuminating, based upon extensive and thorough research. Objective, comprehensive and completely satisfying, it will be indispensable to students of naval affairs and genuinely pleasing to all who want a full-bodied biography." P. J. Searles

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 D 8 '46 1750w

"Miss Oman has completed in this book a very thorough and painstaking piece of research; its large bulk displays on every page the results of enlightened and conscientious labor. The true historical method is everywhere in evidence; every fact put forward is backed by written contemporary evidence, motive is weighed against motive, and the reader cannot harbor for a moment a suspicion that any possible source of information has been neglected. It is a biography in the monumental tradition, and it is hardly fair to hint that it has the defects of a monument." C. S. Forester

+ N Y Times p3 D 15 '46 2200w

"Nelson himself shows through only in occasional flashes; Lady Hamilton is a much better realized character. Despite its being overweight, the book is in many ways an excellent piece of work."

+ — New Yorker 22:96 D 21 '46 90w

"To the biography of Horatio Nelson, Carola Oman has brought a careful training in the techniques of historical research, a considerable familiarity with the period of the Napoleonic wars, a disciplined and patient industry, and a fluent and polished literary style. Her year-by-year narrative of Nelson's life is always readable, scholarly, and adult; it makes a critical use of a vast range of source material, including some which has hitherto not been readily accessible. Her 'Nelson' comes nearer being 'definitive' by the accepted standards than anything now in print. What is lacking is a sharp focus of interest." Garrett Mattingly

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:33 F 15 '47 550w

Reviewed by G. P. Griggs

Spec 179:630 N 14 '47 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p544 O 25 '47 1250w

LENDER, CHARLES FRANKLIN, Pirates on the Ohio; a tale of the brig St Clair and the indomitable Commodore Whipple; il. by George Avison. 196p $2 Howell, Soskin

Whipple, Abraham—Juvenile literature

47-4659

Story of pioneer days in the Midwest, for older boys and girls. Two boys decide to make the trip from Marietta to New Orleans as hands on a flatboat, to earn money to pay off the family mortgage.

"Story is based on fact and brings history alive to the reader. Paper and print are fair. Recommended for older boys and girls." C. W. Field

+ Library J 72:1115 Ag '47 80w

Springf'd Republican p18A O 12 '47 120w

LENGYEL, OLGA (MRS NICHOLAS LENG-YEL). Five chimneys, the story of Auschwitz. 213p $3 Ziff-Davis

940.547243 World war, 1939-1945—Prisoners and prisons, German. World war, 1939-1945—Atrocities 47-5322

"Horrible though Buchenwald was, Birkenau-Auschwitz was an even more ghoulish product of Nazi perversion. The young woman, Olga Lengyel, to whom we owe this first detailed description of that death camp, is of Hungarian descent. After the Nazis had marched into Rumania in 1944, the Lengyels—the husband a Jew and a famous surgeon, she a Christian and a former medical student—were arrested and separately shipped to that camp of horrors." (N Y Times) Dr Lengyel was killed but his wife, appointed to the camp "hospital" managed to survive.

LENGYEL, OLGA—Continued

Booklist 44:12 S 1 '47

Reviewed by J. O. Supple
Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Ag 3 '47
210w

Christian Science Monitor p18 N 15 '47
120w

+ Kirkus 15:362 J1 1 '47 120w

Reviewed by Henrietta Buckmaster
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ag
24 '47 380w

Reviewed by Alfred Werner
N Y Times p16 Ag 3 '47 290w

"A surprisingly dispassionate account of life in the Nazi murder camps at Auschwitz and Birkenau. . . The Nazis need no further indictment, but this book satisfies a human curiosity about the curriculum of a businesslike, man-made hell and about the mentality of the persons who administered it."

New Yorker 23:63 Ag 2 '47 140w

"A stark account of life in a Nazi extermination camp in Poland, known as Auschwitz or Oswiecim, this book is more moving than earlier descriptions of the death camps because it is vividly articulated, not by a sympathetic observer, but by one of the few who survived the horror. It deserves careful reading by all who consider thorough denazification of Germany impracticable." C. G. Uhr

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ag 3 '47
1300w

Reviewed by S. D. Padover
Sat R of Lit 30:9 Ag 2 '47 800w
Springf'd Republican p14B N 2 '47 210w

LENSKI, LOIS (MRS ARTHUR COVEY).
Judy's journey [il. by the author]. 212p $2.50 Lippincott

47-4504

Story of a family of sharecroppers who left their leaky Alabama shack and followed the crops, first down to Florida and then up the coast to New Jersey. They all longed for a home of their own and Judy longed for permanent friends. Before their goal was reached the family had had many bitter experiences, but some happy ones. For ages ten to twelve.

Booklist 44:21 S 1 '47

Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun Book Week N 29 '47 90w

"Miss Lenski has built up her background with her usual meticulous care, her lithographic illustrations are accurate as well as beautiful and her characters are real and human and appealing." A. T. Eaton
+ Christian Science Monitor p13 S 11 '47
240w

Churchman 161:17 D 1 '47 40w

"Lois Lenski's new book is one of her best."
A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:356 S '47 90w

"There is sadness and insecurity, but Lois Lenski has the wisdom and the balance to see that there is adventure, excitement, promise, fulfillment, even where there is insecurity and too hard work. The migrants of the east have had few spokesmen. This story—though intended for nine to twelve year olds, has a lot for their elders as well. Excellent American scene material for school libraries. A beautiful book with some of the best drawings Lois Lenski has made."

+ Kirkus 15:338 J1 1 '47 150w

"The sad and insecure life of the migrant workers is pictured, but there is adventure, excitement, and fulfillment, too. One of the best of Miss Lenski's regional stories. Will prove useful for material on the American scene, farm units, and democracy. Good story for girls from ten to twelve." M. M. Smith
+ Library J 72:1114 Ag '47 90w

"The story is as realistic as the sensibilities of young readers will permit an author to be. But if we are to tell children about our migrant workers at all, it isn't fair to strew sugar on the facts. Miss Lenski doesn't; her facts keep their harsh flavor. What sweetens her story is the way in which the family whose fortunes she follows develops in character in spite of—partly because of—what happens to them." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 S
14 '47 550w

"This is one of Miss Lenski's most important and moving stories. It hasn't quite the delicate artistry of Doris Gates' 'Blue Willow' but like that book it speaks in memorable tones, in terms which 8 to 12-year-olds will understand, of the struggles and hopes of the unpossessed." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p41 O 5 '47 230w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét
New Yorker 23:150 D 6 '47 80w

Reviewed by Yvette Schmitt
San Francisco Chronicle p6 N 30 '47
130w

Sat R of Lit 30:46 N 15 '47 50w

Wis Lib Bul 43:135 O '47

LENSKI, LOIS (MRS ARTHUR COVEY). Surprise for Davy. [48p] il $1 Oxford

47-30935

Picture-story book for young children. It is all about Davy's fourth birthday.

Reviewed by Martha King

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 S 21 '47
40w

Kirkus 15:500 S 15 '47 70w

"The format is too small for practical use in a children's room, but it can be used for entertaining at the picture story hour for young children, and also in a parents' room." B. W. Bell

Library J 72:1278 S 15 '47 60w

Reviewed by R. A. Gordon
N Y Times p42 N 16 '47 80w

"Here is a good book for a fourth birthday."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:48 N 15 '47 50w

LENT, HENRY BOLLES. Eight hours to solo. 134p il $2 Macmillan

629.1325 Aeronautics—Juvenile literature
47-3180

An account of how sixteen-year-old Andy Stewart learned to fly solo after eight hours of dual instruction.

"There is no plot, only straight reporting about the lessons—but it is very superior reporting with natural dialogue and expert characterization. It places little emphasis on 'the wild blue yonder,' and a great deal on solid, sensible mechanics." Jane Cobb

+ Atlantic 179:130 Je '47 110w

Booklist 43:312 Je 1 '47

"Call it fiction or non-fiction—as you will—but the substance of it is factual, a simple honest little job for the air-minded youngster who wants to learn to fly but isn't ready for technical jargon."

+ Kirkus 15:101 F 15 '47 90w

"Intricacies of flight instruction are clear, concise and accurate and are woven skillfully into the plot. . . Format is excellent; paper is rather heavy, print large and clear, binding will stand hard usage. Good photographs and diagrams do much to explain the working parts of a plane. Recommended for high school age." M. I. Ross

+ Library J 72:895 Je 1 '47 70w

"In this book are the things to be learned, the tricks, the pitfalls, the 'ten commandments' of safe flying, woven into a little story that even has suspense, especially when Andy, the 16-year-old beginner pulls a few 'boners.' Mr. Lent's informal training course might serve a student as a piece of valuable homework and again as a manual of sorts, particularly with the excellent diagrams and the photographs." Austin Stevens

+ N Y Times p32 Je 8 '47 230w

Wis Lib Bul 43:100 Je '47

LENTFOEHR, FLORENCE MAE. See Thérèse, Sister.

LEONARD, CHARLES L., pseud. See Heberden, M. V.

LEONARD, WILLIAM NORRIS. Railroad consolidation under the Transportation act of 1920. 350p $4 Columbia univ. press

335 Railroads—U.S.

A46-3771

"This book is a study of the history and causes of the failure to achieve consolidation under the 1920 Act. The author concludes that the Interstate Commerce Commission was lacking in both drive and necessary knowledge during the critical early years of the Act, nullifying the good features of its original master plan and leaving the field to unhealthy consolidation by financiers. Almost equal blame is thrown on the unwillingness of railroad leaders to take even the most obvious steps. No attempt is made to carry the story beyond the 1940 Transportation Act and to consider the present situation of the railroads in detail." Harvard Law R

"Dr. Leonard has furnished a penetrating analysis of administrative defeatism in the face of concerted opposition by private interests." H. W. Davey

+ Am Pol Sci R 41:368 Ap '47 370w

"There are minor errors and inaccuracies in the volume, and certain omissions. . . Yet, regrettable as such minor errors are, they detract but little from the merit of the author's research, or from an essentially clear presentation. It is the reviewer's regret that he must raise questions concerning the soundness and acceptability to the public of such a sweeping program of railway consolidation as is so strongly supported by Mr. Leonard. . . Furthermore, except as the case for grand consolidations is clear and beyond challenge, sharp condemnation by the author of the attitudes and policies of the Interstate Commerce Commission relative thereto seems both unkind and unwarranted. 'Rationalization,' be it of American railways as advocated by Mr. Leonard, or of other segments of American economy, appears unlikely to merit or to gain public approval in the proximate future." S. L. Miller Columbia Law R 47:169 Ja '47 1150w

"Scholarly study. . . With due allowance for changes in the problem, this survey may still be useful both for its history and for its analysis of the various plans for consolidation."

+ Harvard Law R 60:323 D '46 130w

LEOPARDI, GIACOMO, conte. Poems; tr. and introduced by John Heath-Stubbs. 71p $3 New directions

851

[47-6211]

The translator "who is already known for his original poetry, has attempted to bring together a collection of Leopardi's poems sufficiently representative to form an introduction to his work, in a translation whose aim is to convey to the English reader as much as possible of the poetic quality of the original. He has also written a biographical introduction, and suggests a new critical interpretation of the poet and his thought." (Publisher's note)

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy

Chicago Sun Book Week p24 Ja 5 '48 80w

New Yorker 23:143 N 29 '47 80w

"The final touchstone for the worth of translation, it seems, must be the question: Should we instantly recognise the presence of a great poet, divorced from his own tongue? In the case of Leopardi, I think we must undoubtedly answer 'No.' But that does not mean that Mr. Heath-Stubbs has not provided an excellent crib for those whose Italian has grown a little rusty." V. Sackville-West

Spec 178:214 F 14 '47 400w

LENER, ABBA PTACHYA, and GRAHAM, FRANK DUNSTONE, eds. Planning and paying for full employment. 232p $3 Princeton univ. press

338.973 U.S.—Economic policy. Unemployment 47-2178

"The discussions by a group of economists called to meet at Princeton, in the summer of 1944, under the auspices of the American Labor Conference on International Affairs, formed the background of the papers here assembled. . . There were enough varieties of opinion among these economists to make their discussions interesting. The opening paper is a summary of their agreements and disagreements. In general, the writers stress the encouragement of private enterprise (but in various ways) and do not place much reliance in a program of public works to take up the labor slack." Christian Century

"The value of the book as a helpful introduction is considerably enhanced by Albert Halasi's illuminating survey of the scope of agreement and disagreement among the contributors to the symposium." F. M. Marx

Am Pol Sci R 41:564 Je '47 550w

Christian Century 64:80 Ja 15 '47 210w

Reviewed by G. G. Higgins

Commonweal 45:547 Mr 14 '47 390w

Current Hist 12:239 Mr '47 30w

Foreign Affairs 26:224 O '47 50w

Reviewed by O. H. Brownlee

J Pol Econ 55:485 O '47 1250w

Management R 36:236 Ap '47 20w

Reviewed by George Soule

Nation 164:254 Mr 1 '47 500w

"This work, with all its faults, has filled a need. It gives us mature and serious thought on a subject that will continue to grow in importance as our everyday economic life faces major changes." J. J. Flynn

Social Studies 38:330 N '47 500w

"The symposium will command the interest of economists, but it is within the grasp of the more general reader."

U S Quarterly BkI 3:158 Je '47 220w

LENER, ADOLF R., and POSTER, HERBERT. Challenge of hate [introd. by Norman Corwin; cartoons by Eric Godal]. 96p il $2.50; pa $1 F.F.F. pubs, inc, 165 W. 46th st. N.Y. 19

325.73 U.S.—Race question. U.S.—Social conditions 47-3006

Collection of photographs intended to record "democracy's struggle against disruption and disunity," especially in the United States. The work is divided into topics, with photographs and accompanying text for each.

Churchman 161:18 F 1 '47 200w

Reviewed by Leo Shapiro

N Y Times p28 F 16 '47 300w

LENER, ALAN JAY. Brigadoon; a musical play in two acts. 138p $2.50 Coward-McCann 812

Text of the winner of the 1946-47 Critics' circle award for the best musical on Broadway. The plot is about a Scottish village which comes to life once every hundred years, and what happens when two American boys stray into it.

Kirkus 15:590 O 15 '47 20w

"Delightful reading. Recommended for comprehensive drama collections." George Freedly

+ Library J 72:1780 D 15 '47 30w

Reviewed by C. V. Terry

N Y Times p45 N 30 '47 40w

LESLIE, FRANK. There's a spot in my heart; il. by Frederick E. Banbery. 240p $2.75 Simon & Schuster

47-19427

Autobiographical novel filled with the reminiscences of a well-to-do Irish family living in New York city in the early 1900's. The charming grandfather, pious grandmother, volcanic Uncle George, McCloskey the cook, and McCloskey's dumb nephew, are some of the characters.

Kirkus 15:139 Mr 1 '47 170w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott

Manchester Guardian p3 O 17 '47 150w

"The trouble with reviewing 'There's a Spot in My Heart,' by Frank Leslie, is that you want to quote bits from practically every page. . . Either as novel or autobiography the book rings a joyous bell. . . Add to this the gift of language that is colorful, witty and moving, and the picture is complete." Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 My 18 '47 800w

Reviewed by Judith Paige

N Y Times p10 Je 1 '47 400w

"Lively and at times very amusing book."

+ New Yorker 23:116 My 17 '47 70w

"Since 'delicate satire,' 'lusty humor,' 'hilarious metaphor' have been applied—and with truth—to a few other books, there remains little but what now looks like some faded, old hand-me-downs for Frank Leslie's memoirs and anecdotes of as fey a household as has graced American letters since 'You Can't Take It With You.' What its publishers are pleased to call 'a nostalgic novel' is as mellow and potent as Napoleon brandy and thus it must be savored." Phyllis Liapes

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ap 29 '47 800w

Reviewed by A. F. Wolfe

Sat R of Lit 30:28 My 31 '47 470w

"This was an age without the wireless and the cinema, when family life was family life and could be quite engrossing, and Mr. Leslie gives a delightfully funny account of it."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p573 N 8 '47 180w

Wis Lib Bul 43:119 Jl '47

LESLIE, JEAN. Three cornered murder. 224p $2 Doubleday

47-3320

Detective story.

Kirkus 15:112 F 15 '47 60w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p30 My 25 '47 120w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p32 Ap 27 '47 140w

"Too many characters and somewhat diffuse plotting weaken a valuable political story, told with charm and the conviction of first-hand observation." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ap 27 '47 80w

"Agreeable."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:31 My 17 '47 40w

LESPARRE, JEAN NICOT. Herbs, spices and seasonings. 73p $1 Dahl pub. co, 74 W. Park pl, Stamford, Conn.

641.657 Herbs. Spices

Basic information on 97 herbs, spices, seasonings, and wines. Data includes common name, pronunciation, botanical name, brief description, source of commercial supply, and standard (and a few novel) uses. The author is a Frenchman, who is at present directing chef in Armour and Company's research kitchen. List of contents at front of book.

"A worth-while reference for home economics departments." Miriam Birdseye

+ J Home Econ 39:523 O '47 100w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ap 4 '47 110w

LESSER, ALLEN. Enchanting rebel (the secret of Adah Isaacs Menken). 284p il $3.50 Beechhurst press

B or 92 Menken, Adah Isaacs 47-3312

Biography of a famous and notorious actress of the mid-nineteenth century who won undying acclaim in the role of Mazeppa in the melodrama founded on Byron's poem. In this biography the author has attempted to clear up some of the mystery which surrounds Adah Menken's origins and early life.

Booklist 43:346 Jl 1 '47

"Her present biographer (who is always her friend) has labored earnestly in libraries and newspaper files, and has documented—in appallingly bad style that deserves a ruthless blue pencil—her career, but he never breathes life into it." Robert Halsband

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Je 22 '47 320w

"Mr. Lesser follows [Menken's] entire astonishing career with full relish for its bizarre contrasts and for the romantic bravura and egocentric energy of this second-rate actress who made herself a first-rate sensation on two continents. It is a curious story, that sheds no little light on our Victorian past, and Mr. Lesser tells it swiftly and with unction." W. P. Eaton

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 Ag 31 '47 850w

"Mr. Lesser's book is packed with interesting material on the customs, manners and theatrical and literary characters of the Eighteen Fifties and Sixties both in this country and abroad. It is a pity that in order to attain lyrical heights he occasionally indulges in phrases that are of the school of syndicated fiction." M. R. Werner

+ N Y Times p6 Je 15 '47 850w

"Mr. Lesser makes an agreeably unwholesome period piece out of the lady's story, especially when he is describing her somewhat ludicrous entanglements with Dumas père and Algernon Swinburne."

New Yorker 23:106 My 24 '47 120w

"By and large, Mr. Lesser's is not as good a book as it might have been. The author adopts an inflated style. . . It is honestly too bad that Mr. Lesser allows himself to go on like this (or that his editor allowed him to), when it is evident that he has worked hard and intelligently in the field of his fact-gathering." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 My 21 '47 700w

LESTER, MURIEL. It so happened. 240p $2 Harper

B or 92 47-3652

A continuation of the autobiography which Miss Lester began in 'It Occurred to Me' [Book Review Digest 1937]. The book begins on Christmas 1937, continues thru the war years and ends in the post-war period with the author waiting for passage to India to continue her travels in behalf of world peace.

Booklist 43:329 Je 15 '47

Christian Century 64:769 Je 18 '47 40w

"Miss Lester has had a thrilling adventure and she tells about it in engaging fashion." T. F. Opie

+ Churchman 161:17 N 15 '47 90w

"The reviewer has read this little volume with real appreciation, for through its unassuming brilliance of observation and conviction he has come to a better understanding of the mind and heart of a really great woman, and incidentally, has been moved to a new patience and seriousness in having real fellowship with those whose ways are strangely different as they pursue the purpose of the Lord of Life for needy and anxious humanity." I. M. Rose

+ Crozer Q 24:372 O '47 300w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p26
N 30 '47 140w

Wis Lib Bul 43:97 Je '47

LESTER, RICHARD ALLEN, and ROBIE, EDWARD ADAMS. Wages under national and regional collective bargaining; experience in seven industries. 103p pa $1.50 Princeton univ. Dept. of economics and social institutions. Industrial relations section

331.215 Wages. Collective bargaining 46-8303

"Sets forth as its premises that in an industrial country, the sound pricing of human services may go far to assure a sustained growth of productivity and income; and that an improvement in the art of fixing wages has become vital to a wholesome American economy." Special Libraries

"On the whole, the book is a useful contribution to the literature in the labor field." Joseph Shister

+ J Pol Econ 55:483 O '47 750w

Management R 36:123 F '47 180w

Reviewed by E. M. Herrick

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p27
O 20 '46 320w

"The authors of this study are to be commended for making a thorough study of a problem which will surely command increased attention in the near future. Their conclusions, however, seem to be based on too limited a range of experience to be regarded as definitive." R. R. Wohl

+ — Social Forces 25:480 My '47 550w

Special Libraries 38:51 F '47

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:159 Je '47 240w

LES TINA, DOROTHY. Occupation housewife. 275p $2.75 Morrow

47-31367

Traces the stumbling course of Darcie Mitchell from the time she discovers that her second marriage is not all she had hoped, until a chance to help her doctor husband brings everything into focus.

Kirkus 15:439 Ag 15 '47 120w

"Miss Les Tina writes with humor and with perception. There are many things she says about woman's place in the kitchen and in the bedroom that catch uncomfortable truths in a capsule of laughter or irony. It is in bringing her story to its conclusion that she becomes extravagant and incredible." Margaret Evans

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10
O 19 '47 300w

— San Francisco Chronicle p18 D 21 '47
50w

LE SUEUR, MERIDEL. Little brother of the wilderness; the story of Johnny Applesseed; il. by Betty Alden. 68p $2.50 Knopf

Chapman, John—Juvenile literature 47-2487

In simple narrative, after the manner of a folk tale, this book tells the story of Johnny Applesseed, the man who carried apple seeds and started apple orchards thruout the mid-western states.

"At times the attempt to achieve a folklore quality seems a little forced and the poetic prose lacks spontaneity, but the simplicity of the text and the large print bring this legendary hero to a younger and perhaps more appreciative audience than have other books. Grades 3-5."

+ — Booklist 43:313 Je 1 '47

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

Christian Science Monitor p5 Ja 13 '48
110w

"His story is a unique and appealing fragment of our pioneer history, admirably told here and illustrated with humor and vivacity." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:220 My '47 100w

"A successful retelling of an American legend."

+ Kirkus 15:218 Ap 15 '47 80w

Reviewed by J. E. Lynch

Library J 72:818 My 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16
My 11 '47 330w

"One wishes that Miss LeSueur had been equally felicitous in sustaining the folk-tale quality all the way through the version which she has written for children of the middle years. There are, indeed, passages of genuine beauty, as when in prose which reads almost like poetry, she describes Johnny in the wilderness, Johnny communing with his animal brethren, Johnny planting his orchards. She has given us, too, a sense of the mysticism of this 'St. Francis of the frontier,' as Harlan Hatcher dubbed him. But too often, in telling of his encounters with humans, she drops into a kind of supplementary reader style which jolts the reader off-balance." E. L. B.

+ — N Y Times p35 My 25 '47 150w

Sat R of Lit 30:34 My 17 '47 90w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:246 S '47 120w

Wis Lib Bul 43:84 My '47

LEVERT, LEE J. Fundamentals of naval warfare; sketches by William T. Brady. 488p $5 Macmillan

359 Naval art and science 47-3726

"Intended primarily for the general reader, this volume presents an almost complete non-technical course in naval science, touching upon naval history, naval weapons, classes of warships, types of naval warfare, engineering, communications, strategy, and tactics." (U S Quarterly Bks) Bibliography. Glossary. Indexes.

Kirkus 15:121 F 15 '47 170w

"Basically, the volume is soundly informative, but it must be read with the reservation that not all statements can be accepted as professionally accurate, and that now and then they are unsupported theories or opinions." P. J. Searles

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14
O 26 '47 600w

"It is obvious that the book is a labor of love and that a whale of a lot of work was performed in its assembly; but I must report that it is dry, and that the greater part of it is slated for readers whose contact with the sea has been meager, at best. In his endeavor to leave no wavelet unturned in his nautical exposition, the author has been overly ambitious." F. J. Bell

+ — N Y Times p12 O 5 '47 400w

"Since the book covers so large a field, it is inevitable that the treatment of some subjects is superficial. One discussion of particular value is that of the method of solving a military problem; that is, estimating a situation, reaching a decision, formulating plans, and embodying the result in an operational directive. Another passage deals interestingly with the construction of a naval base... A brief bibliography, a glossary, and ship and general indexes add to the reference value of the book."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:318 S '47 200w

LEVI BEN GERSHON. Commentary of Levi ben Gerson (Gersonides) on the book of Job; tr. from the Hebrew with intro. and notes by Abraham L. Lassen. 266p $3 Bloch

223.1 Bible Old Testament—Job 46-3020

"Rabbi Levi ben (son of) Gerson, well known by his patronymic Gersonides or by the typically Jewish abbreviation RaLBaG, flourished during the first half of the fourteenth century in Provence, at that time fulfilling its historic destiny as the medium through which the achievements of the previous centuries of Spanish Judaism were transmitted to the cultures of northern Europe. He came of a notable family and by his career richly enhanced its repute, for he takes his place among the half-dozen most eminent Jewish thinkers and writers of the Middle Ages. His commentary on the book of Job, now translated into English by Dr. Lassen, has attained a permanent place of honor in the 'rabbinic Bible.'" Christian Century

LEVI BEN GERSHON—Continued

"It is no rare work here rescued from oblivion that the translator presents to us; nonetheless he has served a good purpose in rendering it available to the reading public (unfortunately very large) for whom medieval Hebrew is an unknown tongue. . . . The present-day Hebraist will find much of interest in a study of the results attained here by his fourteenth century predecessor, both in their notable advance and in the numerous points at which the subsequent course of knowledge has shown them to be erroneous." W. A. Irwin

+ Christian Century 63:965 Ag 7 '46 700w

"The translator has done a real service in making the commentary available to the general public. Probably the best tribute to him is that, in general, one is unconscious of the fact that he is reading a translation. In a number of points, however, the wording calls for improvement." W. A. Irwin

+ — J Religion 27:150 Ap '47 1100w

LEVI, CARLO. Christ stopped at Eboli; the story of a year; tr. from the Italian by Frances Frenaye. 268p $3 Farrar, Straus

914.577 Lucania—Social life and customs 47-3385

The author, a doctor and painter, a man in his middle forties, was sent to a remote village in malarial Gagliano as a political prisoner. Life was so primitive that the inhabitants were in the habit of saying "Christ stopped at Eboli," the implication being that hope and civilization had not reached them. In the book the author describes his year among these depressed people.

Booklist 43:357 Jl 15 '47

"Dr. Levi's account of his days among these peasant folk offers a bountiful supply of colorful narrative." G. J. Wood

+ Canadian Forum 27:117 Ag '47 600w

Reviewed by Emily Schosberger

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Ap 20 '47
470w

"Carlo Levi loved these men and women and it is possible in reading his extraordinary and eloquent account to forget the dismal horror of their lives; it is possible to think of them as symbols of man's state, at its simplest, unredeemed. But that they should be living as they live, a long day's motor drive from the capital of Christendom, is surely one of the most flagrant challenges to our trust in Christian solidarity." C. G. Paulding

+ Commonweal 46:72 My 2 '47 650w

"There is charm and compassion here—for the perceptive reader."

+ Kirkus 15:95 F 1 '47 140w

"Of considerable literary distinction, this is much more than a tract for these times. Should appeal to readers of Giono and provides a necessary prelude to A Bell for Adano. Welcome antidote to Kaputt. Urged for all collections." R. E. Kingery

+ Library J 72:527 Ap 1 '47 100w

Reviewed by D. T. Bazelon

Nation 164:635 My 24 '47 600w

Reviewed by George Mayberry

+ New Repub 116:32 Ap 21 '47 600w

"It is all the more striking that this book, one of the first open counter-statements to twenty-three years of Fascist bombast, should be written out of such deep feeling for rejected human beings and with such hatred for power and insincerity. In the discipline of this writing, as in the purity of its opinions, can be felt the reaction of the new Risorgimento against the whole spirit of Fascism." Alfred Kazin

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 Ap 20 '47 1650w

"The one book that won him this sudden reputation and two literary prizes—'Christ Stopped at Eboli'—has been called in turn a diary, an album of sketches, a novelette, a sociological study and a political essay. It has more than a trait of each genre; yet it remains as hard to classify as every beautiful book, or as the man who wrote this one." Paolo Milano

+ N Y Times p1 Ap 20 '47 1750w

"'Christ Stopped at Eboli' is already a critical and popular success in both Italy and France. I can think of no success more rightly deserved. On all counts, the record of Mr. Levi's enforced stay in Gagliano, which is done in the form of an expanded diary and which has been splendidly translated by Frances Frenaye, is a remarkable one." Hamilton Basso

+ New Yorker 23:91 Ap 26 '47 1400w

Reviewed by William Hogan

San Francisco Chronicle p16 My 2 '47
470w

"A well-written account, by a sensitive and cultivated anti-fascist." L. G. White

+ Sat R of Lit 30:12 Ap 19 '47 1850w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen

Survey G 36:450 Ag '47 110w

Time 49:106 My 5 '47 1100w

LEVI, WERNER. American-Australian relations. 184p $2.75 Univ. of Minn.

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations—Australia.
Australia—Foreign relations—U.S. 47-1789

A monograph dealing with the relations, both economic and political, between the United States and Australia from the early nineteenth century to the close of World war II. Author is assistant professor of political science at the University of Minnesota. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by L. H. Laing

Am Pol Sci R 41:1237 D '47 480w

Current Hist 12:373 Ap '47 70w

Foreign Affairs 25:699 Jl '47 20w

"The serious weakness of this very good book is an obvious lack of familiarity with Australian political and intellectual realities. Nor is this weakness entirely in its handling of the imponderables that escape documentation. There are startling gaps in the bibliography. But as Australian ventures in this general field usually show a similar inadequacy on the American side, it is not to be expected that an American scholar will surmount the handicaps at one bound. His work has far more than pioneer virtues and one can only hope that it is an earnest of a continuing interest in a very important subject." C. H. Grattan

+ — N Y Times p26 Bk1 9 '47 200w

U S Quarterly BkI 3:174 Je '47 240w

Reviewed by R. H. Gabriel

Yale R n s 36:741 summer '47 650w

LEVIN, MEYER. If I forget thee; a picture story of modern Palestine; phot. by P. Goldman, Sasha Alexander, and others; based on the film My father's house. 143p $3.50 Viking 47-11955

A collection of stills from the motion picture made in Palestine for Meyer Levin's novel My Father's House. Brief text carries the story of the boy David. Together they make a story of life in modern Palestine.

Booklist 44:149 D 15 '47

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Horn Bk 24:68 Ja '48 40w

"A superb collection of 'stills.'" +

+ Kirkus 15:646 N 15 '47 100w

"The story of the boy's breakdown and rehabilitation and of the rallying of the community there to his help has psychological value, but it also provides a touching real-life symbol of the situation of the uprooted, the displaced, of the post-war world."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 N 30 '47 110w

"The excellent photos accompanying the narrative would have delighted the late Alfred Stieglitz." Alfred Werner

+ N Y Times p48 D 7 '47 140w

Reviewed by S. B. Shear

Springf'd Republican p11C D 7 '47 40w

LEVIN, MEYER. My father's house. 192p $2.50
Viking

47-30778

A novel about modern Palestine. The central character is the boy David, who ran away from Poland when his family and others were herded into the square at Cracow. His father had instructed him to meet him in Palestine. David was a long time on the way, and was in and out of a concentration camp, but eventually he reached Palestine. The boy's bitter awakening to the truth is pictured tenderly.

Booklist 44:69 O 15 '47

"Palestine is so obscured these days by power politics and empire policies that Meyer Levin in this very simple story has done a service not only for the Jewish people, but for all decent citizens of America who have no personal stake in Jewish problems." J. W. Rogers

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p1 Ag 24 '47
650w

"An absorbing and unusual book."

+ Kirkus 15:344 J1 1 '47 210w

"In spite of the poignancy of the boy's lonely and unrealized search the story is not a sad one and gives an optimistic picture of social and economic life in the Jewish settlements. Author spent last year in Palestine. Recommended." G. W. Hill

+ Library J 72:1108 Ag '47 80w

"If you break down 'My Father's House' into its original ingredients and discount, perhaps, some of its propagandist extravagances, it becomes an immensely valuable mine of information about present-day Palestine and the new refugees." F. H. Bullock

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 S
7 '47 600w

"Meyer Levin takes us imaginatively into the mind of a boy who has been through what Daavid has; but he doesn't take us very far, and he seems to tire toward the end—where the psychiatric task he has set himself becomes most difficult. But, on the other hand, the dream-like quality of 'My Father's House' gives it much of its charm and meaning." R. G. Davis

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 31 '47 850w

"Mr. Levin has lived in Palestine, close to the people of whom he writes. He has a gift for folk writing, so ably demonstrated in previous novels, which makes his version of settlement life appealing and illuminating. He also presents extremely well the particular psychiatric problems involved in reconstituting the lives of Fascism's most tragic victims." G. G. S.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 S 14 '47
250w

"A quiet, poignant, and important novel. . . Meyer Levin writes with a restraint of which I would not be capable, and a tenderness and sympathy which would clearly be unbecoming in a referee." John Woodburn

+ Sat R of Lit 30:19 Ag 30 '47 1400w

Reviewed by S. B. Shear

Springf'd Republican p11C D 7 '47 40w

LEVY, DAVID MORDECAI. New fields of psychiatry. 171p $2.75 Norton

616.8 Psychology, Pathological Med47-66

Presents some of the new fields of psychiatry, outside the psychopathic hospital, which have been used since 1920. They include child guidance, delinquency, social work, and industrial, political, and military psychiatry. The author is assistant professor of psychiatry at the College of physicians and surgeons, Columbia university. References. Index.

Booklist 44:84 N 1 '47

"Both the pastor and the psychiatrist have their distinctive contributions to make toward the solution of these problems; and there has been extensive collaboration between these two professional workers. And yet Dr. Levy, although he explores almost every other field, says not a word about it. Perhaps the reason is that this book is mainly an account of the author's own adventures, and the work of the religious counselor represents for him still unexplored territory. It would be valuable, however, to have from him the same kind of honest appraisal of work in this field as in the fields with which he deals." C. T. Holman

+ Christian Century 65:15 Ja 7 '48 550w

San Francisco Chronicle p25 N 23 '47
320w

"Particularly known hitherto for his contributions to child psychiatry, Doctor Levy here gives us interesting glimpses of further vistas of the possible contributions of psychiatry, not only to criminology, social work, industry, and the armed forces, but to politics as well." Winfred Overholser

+ Survey G 37:32 Ja '48 500w

LEVY, HARRIET LANE. 920 O'Farrell street; 11. by Mallette Dean. 273p $2.50 Doubleday

B or 92 San Francisco—Social life and customs 47-30354

Memoirs of the author's childhood spent in a well-to-do Jewish home in San Francisco, in the days before the earthquake. Altho she is over eighty, her picture of those days is clear and concise. Her later life was spent partly in France, where she went with Alice B. Toklas, and where she knew Gertrude Stein, Matisse, Picasso, and other leaders of the modern movement in art.

Booklist 43:358 J1 15 '47

Kirkus 15:210 Ap 1 '47 160w

"There is a mingling of affection and frankness as she recalls in maturity her childhood delight in the expressions of the atrocious taste of the period; her mother's unnecessary frugality, her father's integrity and utter inflexibility; her own embarrassment and sense of inferiority based on social distinctions arbitrarily set up by the Jewish members of the community." B. B. Libaire

Library J 72:886 Je 1 '47 170w

"Like an old daguerreotype, restored after half a century by loving hands to its original freshness, runs the story of the family life of the Levys and their neighbors. . . Meticulous, fascinating the detail. Sly humor glints in the telling, like mica flecking the more solid rock. . . Miss Levy, now eighty years old, has restored in this personal reminiscence a brief era in the American scene. She has presented the era with gentle amusement, sly thrusts, and with an appreciation for old days and old ways that is distilled from the enriching years." Mary Parton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4
Je 15 '47 1100w

"If Miss Levy's portrait is not consistently interesting, it is not because it lacks variety but because of a certain objective, documentary tone the author tends to assume. Her book is best when she does not leave her personal viewpoints out, when, despite emotional ties, she appraises the values of another day—as seen from 920 O'Farrell Street." Hilda Lake

+ N Y Times p12 Je 15 '47 700w

+ New Yorker 23:78 Je 21 '47 100w

Reviewed by Carolyn Anspacher

San Francisco Chronicle p22 Je 8 '47
1750w

"This is one of those books in which the parts are greater than the whole. Which is to say that many of the chapters in it, separately considered, . . . seem beautifully done. The writing is subtle and intelligent. . . What is missing, somehow, is that mysterious literary leavening agent which would have jelled all of this into an organic and living whole." N. L. Rothman

+ Sat R of Lit 30:14 J1 5 '47 270w

LEWINSKI-CORWIN, EDWARD HENRY. American hospital. (N Y acad. of medicine. Com. on medicine and the changing order. Studies) 226p $1.50 Commonwealth fund

362.1 Hospitals—U.S. SG46-293

The author "has assembled, in readable form, some interesting and historic data on the development of the hospital structure in the United States, the changes which have taken place in a comparatively short span of time, and has emphasized the important reasons which have been responsible for the increasing popularity and the rapid growth of our hospitals. Chapters are devoted to staff organization, the out-patient department, the hospital as a teaching institution, and particularly appropriate space is given to a review of the past and the prospects of the future. In connection with the latter phase, the place of convalescence, chronic care, domiciliary treatment of the sick, as well as an estimate of post-war hospital needs, receive fitting recognition." Am J Pub Health

"This book will be of great interest and value to all who are interested in the whole subject of hospital service for the American people and who may desire, in reasonable digest form, facts and figures dealing with this important phase of essential community service." C. F. Wilensky

+ Am J Pub Health 37:99 Ja '47 290w

"Administrators should find the book invaluable as a reference work. In all probability, no other single source exists where can be found such an abundance of comparative and analytical data presenting both the background of present day hospitals and the many varied problems confronting those charged with the responsibility of their successful management. Equally important, as reference material, is the listing of the author's sources of information. . . . Whether or not the reader agrees with everything the author has to say, he is certain to find this a highly informative, thought-provoking discussion of one of the most important parts of our present day economy." J. A. Hamilton

+ Survey 83:188 Je '47 450w

LEWIS, CECIL DAY. See Day-Lewis, C.

LEWIS, CLAUDIA. Children of the Cumberland; phot. by William T. Buttrick, jr. 217p $2.75 Columbia univ. press

136.7 Child study. Children in Tennessee A46-5461

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

"This is both an interesting and a significant study. Its interest lies in the sixteen pages of revealing photographs and in the use of rich life history material. Its significance lies in its light on fundamental problems of adjustment. Some may be disappointed in its lack of quantitative data. But it presents a convincing case for the point that 'studies of children should be studies of children in their life situations.' For this reason it has an important bearing on the future of research in the field of child development." H. Y. McClusky

+ Am Soc R 12:244 Ap '47 450w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '47

"Miss Lewis combines rare sensitiveness and deep insight with considerable literary skill. . . . I think Miss Lewis may have overestimated the negative influence of the lack of stimulation in the rural environment. But despite this and other limitations, the value of the book is unquestionable." A. E. Benedict

Nation 165:148 Ag 9 '47 700w

"Her comparison of children in a tragically limited environment and in a highly stimulating one is a valuable one for specialists in child care, but her vivid pictures of mountain life should give 'Children of the Cumberland' a wider reading." Lorine Pruette

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 Mr 23 '47 470w

"Although the book is repetitious, and the author tends, in the overuse of rhetorical questions, to generalize beyond her data, the case history material makes interesting reading. It is a contribution to the knowledge of two different culture-patterns within the United States, and of the possible consequences of such differences on intelligence and personality."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:82 Mr '47 350w

LEWIS, CLIVE STAPLES. Abolition of man. 61p $1.25 Macmillan

370.1 Education—Philosophy 47-2562

"Reflections on education with special reference to the teaching of English in the upper forms of schools." (Subtitle) These lectures were first delivered at the University of Durham. Contents: Men without chests; The way; The abolition of man.

Reviewed by Roger Shaw
Churchman 161:20 S 15 '47 300w

Reviewed by Anne Fremantle
Commonweal 46:193 Je 6 '47 390w

Reviewed by J. C. Scammel
Crozer Q 24:284 Jl '47 250w
Kirkus 15:62 F 1 '47 80w

"The Abolition of Man' is a continuation of Mr. Lewis's urbane crusade against the intellectual climate of the age. This time he is not on the warpath for Christianity; he leans over backward to avoid burdening his arguments with any kind of theism. He is merely out to debunk the debunkers of traditional morality. He does a good job of it." Chad Walsh

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Ap 13 '47 900w

Reviewed by G. R. Stephenson
N Y Times p22 My 18 '47 900w

"Mr. Lewis writes as well as ever; but his deliberate avoidance on this occasion of his usual spiritual and theological concerns tends to turn the Tao into something very like the Code of the Pukka Sahib." A. B.

San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ag 10 '47 100w

School & Society 65:384 My 24 '47 20w

LEWIS, CLIVE STAPLES. Miracles; a preliminary study. 220p $2.50 Macmillan

231.73 Miracles 47-30911

"Author of The Screwtape Letters in a preliminary to historical inquiry prepares readers for investigation of historical evidence of miracles. The question whether miracles occur, he believes, can never be answered by experience. C. S. Lewis himself believes in miracles. To him Christianity is the story of a great miracle. If miracles have occurred, it is because they are the very thing this universal story is about. He gives us a criterion for judging: 'our innate sense of the fitness of things,' and discusses the central miracles of Christian Faith in such a way as to exhibit their fitness." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 44:62 O 15 '47

"The arresting quality of the book is not so much in the line of argument, which has often enough been taken before, as in the author's way of doing it. In an unusual way, the style is the book, and the style is beyond characterization in the space here permitted. Epigram, paradox, bravura, analogies and audacities—a tour de force of the joie d'écrire. Carlyle once said of another writer that he was too much at ease in Zion. Lewis leaves with a possibly prejudiced reviewer somewhat the same impression." G. G. Atkins

+ Christian Century 64:1486 D 3 '47 650w

"Perhaps the greatest merit of the book lies in its strikingly original and apt analogies. Often enough the difficulties experienced in accepting Christian doctrine are merely the result of a failure to grasp the real meaning of the dogma involved. Lewis knows how to use the familiar to aid our understanding of the unfamiliar." J. D. Schell

+ Commonweal 47:259 D 19 '47 600w

"Miracles is likely to attract a good deal of attention. It is lucid and fresh in style, enlivened by an abundance of colorful metaphors, its approach to problems is novel, its solutions ingenious, and it moves on a deeper level of thought than is customary with discussions intended for general reading." M. C. Otto

+ Crozer Q 25:61 Ja '48 2100w

Reviewed by Robert Eisler

Hibbert J 45:373 Jl '47 550w

"Heartily recommended for all types of libraries." O. G. Lawson

+ Library J 72:1267 S 15 '47 100w

"This is a most valuable book; lucid, witty, and admirably argued." A. D. R.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 My 27 '47 250w

"Mr. Lewis is, as we all know, a delightful companion; he is so very readable. Those of us, however, who cannot follow him over the first hurdles, will not be moved by the rest of his argument. The people who may well be assisted in the extension of their credulity are those who have already swallowed the Divine Camel but shrink from a miraculous gnat." W. J. H. Sprott

New Statesman & Nation 33:398 My 31 '47 750w

"Most of Mr. Lewis' books have been popularizations of traditional Christianity. In 'The Problem of Pain,' 'The Abolition of Man,' and 'Miracles' he breaks new and important ground. 'Miracles' should interest—and bewilder and irritate—more readers than either of the other two. It trespasses on the private preserves of philosophers, theologians, and scientists, alike. Few readers will put it down unfinished. Many will later wish they had." Chad Walsh

N Y Times p5 S 28 '47 1050w

"It is doubtful whether even Mr. Lewis will win over the slavishly devout materialist. But it is hard to imagine the Christian (and particularly the Catholic, Anglican or Roman) who will not find his spiritual perception immeasurably deepened—at the same time that he is enjoying an entrancing literary performance." A. B.

San Francisco Chronicle p24 O 19 '47 220w

"Probably none of his books so clearly reveals his own religious outlook or gives him so congenial a scope. There are in it passages of great beauty like the description of the Incarnation and of fine insight like the affirmation of the basic actuality of God; there are also passages in which he almost reminds us of the gaiety and vigour of G. K. Chesterton. Moreover, though much of the writing is dramatic and some of the imagery far-fetched, there is less intrusion of his own speculative ideas than in his earlier writings. . . . On his own confession, he has not made up his mind about Nature, and consequently is inconsistent in his thinking. This is indeed the real weakness of his whole treatment of the subject." C. E. Raven

+ — Spec 178:566 My 16 '47 750w

"Mr. Lewis casts his net fairly wide and, under the guise of a book on miracles, offers a rational justification both of theism and of doctrinal Christianity. In so discursive a treatment some points are overlooked which would have found a place in a more analytic account.

On a more psychological plane it would seem that Mr. Lewis's book lacks a final element of persuasiveness in the absence of any consideration of recent or contemporary cases. . . . In spite of these reserves Mr. Lewis has produced an impressive book."

Times [London] Lit Sup p298 Je 14 '47 1850w

LEWIS, DOMINIC BEVAN WYNDHAM. The hooded hawk; or, The case of Mr Boswell. 312p il $4 Longmans

B or 92 Boswell, James 47-11460

"This biography of Dr. Johnson's biographer challenges the tradition fostered by Macaulay and others, that Boswell was a worthless, drunken sot and wastrel, morally and physically debauched. Lewis doesn't ignore Boswell's love for wine and women, but concentrates on his kind heart, friendliness and the fact that he did produce a literary masterpiece." (Kirkus) Index.

"The purpose is to show what manner of man James Boswell was. . . . Mr. Lewis holds, and proves, that Boswell was a considerable personality in his own right, though lamentably addicted to liquor and ladies. Another obvious purpose of Mr. Lewis is to load his narrative with as heavy a cargo of Roman Catholic propaganda and anti-Protestant innuendo as he thinks it will carry. In fact, he overloads it. . . . This aspect apart, it is a useful book, not only for its vindication of Boswell but for its many details which enter into the picture of eighteenth-century England."

+ — Christian Century 64:1554 D 17 '47 320w

Reviewed by Robert Berkelman

Christian Science Monitor p21 D 6 '47 650w

"So good, indeed, is Mr. Lewis's Life of James Boswell, that it deserves to become, in its turn, a classic." Anne Fremantle

+ Commonweal 47:375 Ja 23 '48 1800w

"Perhaps not for the general public, the literary market will be a natural for Lewis' fine writing and the subjects and materials he handles so well."

+ Kirkus 15:422 Ag 1 '47 160w

"Caviar for Boswellians." R. W. Henderson

Library J 72:1191 S 1 '47 100w

Reviewed by Peter Quennell

New Statesman & Nation 32:465 D 21 '46 240w

Reviewed by Lillian de la Torre

N Y Times p1 D 14 '47 110w

"An admiring biography of James Boswell. . . . The book is not a tract; like Mr. Lewis's 'Francis Villon,' it is a brilliant portrait of a man and his era."

+ New Yorker 23:136 N 22 '47 110w

"Nowhere in this book does the apologist for Boswell feel any compulsion to denote Johnson in order to build up Boswell. In fact, the author's admiration and affection for the Doctor are as evident as his love of the satellite who revolved around him. And not only for the famous pair—but for the age in which they lived." Herbert Askwith

Sat R of Lit 31:25 Ja 18 '48 550w

"Mr. Lewis fights hard for the essential worthiness of Boswell, but he fights a losing battle; the evidence, into which he so frequently injects the kindness of his own nature, must always turn against him. It is extremely misleading to say that Boswell 'bagged' Rousseau and Voltaire and Sterne, and in talking of Johnson's 'love' for Boswell he fails to reckon with two vital considerations—the inflated urbanity of the age and our pardonable hesitation in always believing Boswell when he is recording speeches which are strongly in his own favour. I must also quarrel with Mr. Lewis's belittlement of Malone, whose importance in the production of the Tour and the Life was absolutely decisive. Thus, I have read this book with deep and unflinching admiration but also with recurring disagreement." C. E. Vulliamy

+ — Spec 178:17 Ja 3 '47 900w

"Mr. Wyndham Lewis's book is written with such obvious enjoyment that it virtually ceases to be critical, except of the critics of Boswell. . . . He regards Boswell with indulgent affection throughout his career, and the pleasure that he takes in reconstructing the scenes of gaiety and conviviality is communicated to his readers in a corresponding gaiety of narrative."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p6 Ja 4 '47 390w

LEWIS, MRS HILDA WINIFRED. Strange story. 324p $2.50 Random house

47-4016

Called "a psychological murder story" by the publishers, this is the life story of twin sisters, middle-class English girls, who thru the years of growing up together, constantly revealing the differences of temperament and desires, finally come to the point where one murders the other, and pays a terrible price for her crime.

LEWIS, HILDA W.—Continued

Booklist 43:347 Jl 1 '47

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Jl 6 '47
230w

"An unpleasant story, well done."

— + Kirkus 15:226 Ap 15 '47 160w

"The atmosphere of horror and tragedy is so well done that it seems tangible. Excellent psychological motivation." M. H. McElfresh

+ Library J 72:960 Je 15 '47 70w

New Repub 117:29 Jl 21 '47 30w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10
Jl 6 '47 110w

"Miss Lewis' professionalism in the making of this, her ninth book, is not to be questioned. The whole quality of her current performance is indicated in the title: 'Strange Story'—obvious but provocative, daringly promising, and withal so lurid as to headline the sensational rather than the creative or literary value of the book. Of its strange and frequent sort it is first-rate. The punishment of Rose Wilder is bitterly fitting; the few glimpses of Mrs. Hedley, the would-be gracious mother of Rose's would-be fiancé, superbly malignant and damning." B. V. Winebaum

N Y Times p12 Jl 6 '47 450w

"Some readers, attuned to the hopped-up tempo of the average mystery, may complain that 'Strange Story' is fairly slow, at least in its first third. The fact is that like the more nerve-racking variety of thunderstorm it takes its own time building up, and when the debacle does come, its violence is all the more shocking. Few people, I should think, could avoid being thoroughly disturbed by this book." Angelica Gibbs

+ New Yorker 23:66 Jl 5 '47 650w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Je 22 '47
210w

"Grim."

Sat R of Lit 30:34 Jl 19 '47 30w

LEWIS, JANET (MRS YVOR WINTERS).

Earth-bound, 1924-1944. 48p $4.50 Wells college press, Aurora, N.Y.

811

47-16297

"Janet Lewis is the wife of one of California's leading poets, Dr. Yvor Winters of Stanford, and is the author of several impeccably written novels. This is the first collection of her verse in many years. It shares the virtues and the defects of the school which has grown up around Dr. Winters; conventional verse patterns, which rarely are a little strained or flat; a peculiar kind of intense contrast of very concrete image and abstract but emotively charged idea, which runs the danger of turning into a formula; a sort of stoic life attitude that sometimes slips into primness; and underneath all, great reservoirs of feeling and sensibility, even of abandon." San Francisco Chronicle

Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries

Nation 164:281 Mr 8 '47 430w

Reviewed by Ruth Lechlitner

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p26
O 26 '47 350w

Reviewed by Louise Bogan

+ New Yorker 22:140 N 30 '46 130w

"It is perhaps enough that lyric poetry be intense and passionate, however narrow in range. Nevertheless, while one is grateful for the candor, the deep tenderness and simplicity of the best of these poems, one keeps wishing that Miss Lewis would break into other areas of experience. The nursery, the quiet study, the garden, the graveyard do not provide enough material for a talent of such high order." Theodore Roethke

+ Poetry 69:220 Ja '47 900w

Reviewed by Kenneth Rexroth

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ja 12 '47
320w

LEWIS, JANET (MRS YVOR WINTERS).

Trial of Sören Qvist. 256p $2.50 Doubleday
47-2419

Story of seventeenth century Denmark. After a twenty year absence, Niels Bruus returns to claim his inheritance. Pastor Qvist, a saintly man, had been executed years before for the supposed murder of Niels. The narration goes back to tell the story of brutality and revenge which began when Pastor Qvist refused to grant the hand of his daughter to Niels' cruel brother.

Booklist 43:272 My 1 '47

"In this retelling Janet Lewis has fully realized the deep tragedy of the old tale, its profound significance, and its quite peculiar and memorable beauty. . . The sentences and paragraphs in which Janet Lewis makes her reader see and know that remote world are wholly remarkable in their ease and their vitality. Of even greater importance is the fullness with which she enables the reader to know the people of the story. We share their own understanding of themselves and beyond that a fuller understanding. All this is accomplished in a prose at once firm and sensitive, in diction most extraordinary for its un-failing precision and for a special quality best called purity." J. T. Frederick

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Ap 6 '47
240w

"A strange story, rooted in an old folk tale, skillfully written, tempered with fine Danish atmosphere, dialogue and nice characterization. . . Perhaps it is too scholarly to be pure fiction, too tangey for pure scholarship."

Kirkus 15:41 Ja 15 '47 180w

"This is a tense dramatic story, beautifully written, but not for the popular market." L. M. Kinloch

+ Library J 72:463 Mr 15 '47 80w

"To this plot, which is somewhat stereotyped in its horror and so clearly related to the old morality plays, Miss Lewis brings the green fingers of her imagination to give it a lyric quality all its own." Virgilia Peterson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p21
Mr 30 '47 700w

"Exquisite craftsmanship, a cool perfection of utterance have long been the enviable property of Janet Lewis. 'The Trial of Sören Qvist,' a novel, and the latest work to leave her hand, represents her talent at its best." Eugene Gay-Tift

+ N Y Times p12 Mr 23 '47 650w

"Miss Lewis's artfully simple prose achieves the effect of an ancient, lovingly illuminated missal, with the result that the story, despite its melodramatic incidents, remains no more than a legend—shapely, beautiful, but remote."

+ New Yorker 23:114 Mr 22 '47 80w

"A logical and dramatic story." Edith James

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Mr 30 '47
300w

"Janet Lewis has retold a true legend of Denmark in unadorned, free, and exciting prose. Here is a gruesomely fascinating story of such circumstantial evidence as to make the reader want to cry out in protest. The historical material is well organized, treated with imaginative care, and unencumbered by too much emphasis on correctness. Laid in the seventeenth century, it is visually acceptable, happily free of period paraphernalia that should so often be declared as excess wordage." C. M. Brown

+ Sat R of Lit 30:18 Ap 19 '47 500w

"Janet Lewis' setting is Denmark in the middle 17th Century and her writing as clean as a peeled twig, traces a clear outline of a dark Scandinavian story. . . The conviction of Sören Qvist on circumstantial evidence is actually a famous case in Danish legal history. In Miss Lewis' telling of it, a remote and pastoral time is presented with sunlit freshness, but her characters lack the essential irony and ambiguity of flesh & blood."

+ Time 49:112 Ap 7 '47 280w

LEWIS, JOSEPH. Thomas Paine, author of the Declaration of Independence. 315p $3 Freethought press assn.

B or 92 Paine, Thomas 47-1562

It is the author's contention that Thomas Paine must have written the text of the Declaration of Independence. "He notes similarities of style between Paine's Common Sense, especially, and the Declaration, the use of certain words like 'hath,' Paine's opposition to slavery, and other matters; and that since Jefferson and Adams could not have written it (being in thought and style incapable of it), Paine is left as the true and only author." (Am Pol Sci R)

"This claim has come up before, but not in so virulent a form. . . Mr. Lewis's arguments as to Paine's authorship hardly need refutation. . . A whole chapter is devoted to the argument that because 'hath' appears once in the Declaration, a Quaker must have written the entire document. There is much parade of the author's 'discovery' of the Adams draft, as though it had been jealously guarded as a sort of skeleton in the Adams family closet; but the Adams draft has been printed several times, and reproduced in facsimile. The only argument the author could get out of it is this: Adams used a lot of capital letters, and Paine used a lot of capital letters: hence Adams must have copied this draft from one written by Paine." S. E. Morison

— Am Hist R 52:799 Jl '47 240w

"None can question the sincerity of this disciple of Thomas Paine and Robert G. Ingersoll; nor need one question the proposition that Paine was one of the most successful of political writers. But did Paine actually write the basic draft of the Declaration of Independence? Lewis argues that Paine must have written it. . . We can all admit the importance of Thomas Paine and his influence on the course of the American Revolution without agreeing with Lewis that Paine must have written the Declaration." F. G. Wilson

+ — Am Pol Sci R 41:602 Je '47 400w

"The astonishing thesis that Jefferson had nothing to do with the Declaration save to copy down Paine's phrases, and that its sentiments and expressions were foreign to Jefferson's mind and talent, is scarcely worth comment. The author produces no single fact of importance that historians are not familiar with. His argument, laboring old materials, is an amazing agglomeration of hypothesis, inference, garbled quotations, non sequiturs and generalizations that include everything in their sweep. . . This is all relatively harmless, for it is unlikely that any serious student of history will take the thesis seriously. But it is scarcely forgivable to have the author advance the following unwarranted innuendo about the custodians of the Adams copy of the Declaration: 'The concealment from the general public of this copy of the Declaration casts grave suspicion upon those responsible for withholding it.'" J. P. Boyd

— N Y Times p22 Ap 6 '47 650w

"So forcibly and cogently does he present his case that the reader comes away pretty well convinced that Paine has been deprived of an honor rightfully his. There are, however, a number of second thoughts to be quieted before this emotional conclusion can be accepted, chief among them being the fact that Mr. Lewis's case depends entirely on internal evidence rather than external facts." R. F. H.

Springf'd Republican p8A S 21 '47 550w

LEWIS, LLOYD. It takes all kinds. 276p $3.75
Harcourt

818 47-30722

A collection of casual pieces which have appeared in newspapers and magazines during the last twenty years. The author, who has been simultaneously drama critic, amusement editor, sports editor, and sports columnist on the same paper, is a well-known contributor to Chicago papers, and a writer on the subject of American history and biography.

"'It Takes All Kinds' is the most interesting, engaging, gracefully written book I have come across in a very long time." Serrell Hillman

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Ag 24 '47 500w

+ Kirkus 15:460 Ag 15 '47 60w

"The pieces collected in 'It Takes All Kinds' were written over a period of about twenty years—for newspapers, magazines and historical publications. They are the ones which best retain, Mr. Lewis thinks, of all the short pieces he has written, the freshness of his feelings when he first put them down. It's certain that nearly everything in the book has a good, full-hearted emotional vigor." John Lardner

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 O 5 '47 600w

"An eloquent, witty and authoritative gentleman whose professional enthusiasms have been focused in equal measure on the theatre, sports and the Civil War, it is only fitting that Lloyd Lewis, in his latest work 'It Takes All Kinds,' casts gay and ironic light on some of the fabulous strays and heretics who have fitfully prospered in each of those three domains. . . Almost without exception these monographs are vivid, racy and color-splashed. They are instructive, too, since many of them have to do with characters whose note has been dulled, if not obliterated, by time and circumstance." Richard Maney

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 24 '47 800w

Reviewed by Paul Speagle

San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 5 '47 350w

Wis Lib Bul 43:138 O '47

LEWIS, OSCAR. Silver kings. 286p $4 Knopf

923.373 Mackay, John William. Fair, James Graham. Flood, James Clair, O'Brien, William Shoney 47-11258

Biographical sketches of four of the leading men who played a part in the early history of the Nevada silver mines. The men are: John W. Mackay; James Graham Fair; James C. Flood; and William Shoney O'Brien. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:106 N 15 '47

"Out of his rich knowledge of the history of the period, and of its sources, Mr. Lewis has been able to construct fascinating and essentially complete portraits of these four individuals and of their time. Those who enjoy an unusual and dramatic story, as well as students of western Americana, will find this a richly rewarding volume." R. A. Brown

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 D 30 '47 650w

Reviewed by Paul Kiniery

Commonweal 47:233 D 12 '47 420w

"Highly animated and often amusing, this is for a masculine market."

+ Kirkus 15:456 Ag 15 '47 160w

Reviewed by Keith Hutchison

Nation 166:23 Ja 3 '48 250w

"Mr. Lewis has performed a most useful work in getting together all available biographical information on the silver kings and putting it into a competent and highly readable volume. As usual, he writes with great clarity and is never once tempted by his somewhat lurid characters and era to overplay the facts. There are many illustrations from old prints and photographs." Stewart Holbrook

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 O 26 '47 850w

"Excellent portraiture. His task was not easy, for much of their career is lapped in obscurity and legend: the result is even more absorbing than the same author's 'The Big Four,' which dealt with the Central Pacific nabobs." Idwal Jones

+ N Y Times p39 O 26 '47 450w

LEWIS, OSCAR—Continued

"A four-part narrative as colorful and rich in detail—and so closely connected with San Francisco's past—as any you've ever read." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 O 26 '47
1250w

Time 50:105 O 27 '47 1150w

LEWIS, SINCLAIR. Kingsblood royal. 348p $3
Random house

47-2064

A problem novel developing the theme of racial intolerance in America.

"Not since It Can't Happen Here has he written with such indignation, such power, and such accuracy of accusation. The book is a social document rather than a work of art, a thesis which acquires life because of the case histories which have gone into it, and despite a number of rigged and stagey effects." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 179:124 Je '47 850w

Booklist 43:290 My 15 '47

Reviewed by J. W. Rogers

Chicago Sun Book Week p1 My 25 '47
1700w

"The theme might have been handled with some persuasiveness by a better writer and a better artist. Mr. Lewis has dealt clumsily with it. His story is marred by his usual heavy sarcasm and by his customary reliance upon caricatures rather than characters. His lesson in racial justice is marred by his own intolerance. His contempt for the white inhabitants is set in violent contrast to his admiration of the Negro population. His literary ineptness defeats his laudable purpose." L. A. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 My 24
'47 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '47

"A novel of such extraordinary vigor and humanity that one is inclined to put it among the major works of this great writer, along with those two or three books that first commanded the attention of the world some twenty-five years ago. . . This is not to say, by any means, that Lewis has all the qualities that belong to his greatness. The design was grandiose but it was not altogether filled in. His passion for justice and his comprehension of humanity may make us think of Goethe or Tolstoy, but the actual ectoplasm is not of their texture. In all its astonishing vigor and pungency, his prose is likely at times to weary the palate by its narrowness of range. It never sings; it cannot be made thicker or thinner, sweeter or harsher, at will; its pace or tempo, musically speaking, varies little. This is the principal limitation of a talent which otherwise towers above all others, I believe, in mature and serious novel-writing in the United States." Vincent Sheean

+ Commonweal 46:191 Je 6 '47 1400w

Kirkus 15:169 Mr 15 '47 340w

"America's leading novelist tackles America's most vexing problem with no holds barred. The result is a book of tremendous importance which shows the utter stupidity, terrible unreasonableness, sheer folly and gross injustice of racial prejudice. Sinclair Lewis' greatest book. Will have a terrific impact on the social consciousness of the nation." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 72:809 My 15 '47 100w

"It is extremely unlikely that a young banker in Grand Republic would reveal his secret or go over to the colored world as Kingsblood did. But if he did, it is all too likely, though some reviewers have maintained otherwise, that his white friends and associates would behave as badly as Lewis makes out. The device is arbitrary; the sequence that flows out of it seemed to me painfully convincing. . . His evocation of the Negro world of Grand Republic is much less successful. The love that Kingsblood develops for his new-found people is too pat, and since these passages are written out of a rational knowledge consciously acquired and imperfectly assimilated rather than out of experience unconsciously and completely absorbed, the glow of reality is missing." Margaret Marshall

+ Nation 164:689 Je 7 '47 1100w

"An angry novel about the Negro problem, with no holds barred. The fact that it will be widely distributed by the Literary Guild, plus the probability that it will be most talked about as a contribution to a further understanding of the race problem, makes it difficult to review within the usual context. For the literary-minded, then, let this reviewer merely state that it is a good bit better than the recent Lewis output, but hardly ranks with his best, and let it go at that." Bucklin Moon

New Repub 116:26 My 26 '47 1800w

"Tract or novel—it doesn't matter. Sinclair Lewis has written a book about a problem which increasingly concerns our minds and hearts and consciences. And no white man can read that book and remain undisturbed. For Mr. Lewis shows how pitifully few Americans there are who do not in one way or another take their part in our hatred, distrust, persecution and misrepresentation of our thirteen million Negro Americans. Probably there is not a single white American who will not learn a little something that he did not know before of the universality, the blind injustice and the ferocity of our hatred and fear of the descendants of the dark-skinned people our forefathers brought here by force." Rex Stout

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1
My 25 '47 1200w

Reviewed by Charles Poore

N Y Times p1 My 25 '47 950w

"Problem novels are problems for critics, too. What is to be said about Sinclair Lewis's new book, 'Kingsblood Royal'? Should we admire it because it is an effective tract, written in the best of causes; because it is angry and accurate about the indignities suffered by Negroes even here, in the supposedly open-minded North. . . Or should we throw the book aside because, though important in view of the facts it presents, it is less important as a work of fiction; because it is a long step down the ladder from 'Arrowsmith' and the four other big novels that Lewis wrote between 1920 and 1929. . . Perhaps the answer to the questions is that problem novels have to be judged by the same standards as all novels; they are good if their characters live after them. 'Babbitt' was a problem novel, in its milder fashion, and some of the satire has lost its point, but Babbitt himself was patiently brought to life, and he will be remembered longer than Neil Kingsblood." Malcolm Cowley

New Yorker 23:100 My 24 '47 1200w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 My 26 '47
700w

"People who have come to expect the surprising from Sinclair Lewis will not be disappointed in 'Kingsblood Royal.' It is the best conversation-starter since Hiroshima, and will do far more good. It will arouse fury, indignation, resentment, passion, and, above all, thought. Also it will make many reflective Americans feel a swelling pride in the courage of this irate countryman of theirs, with his unwillingness to let rottenness rot comfortably, his ironical patriotism that makes him scourge the land he so deeply loves, and his readiness—rare among writers—to say simple things so simply that no one dare misunderstand." Clifton Fadiman

+ Sat R of Lit 30:9 My 24 '47 1250w

"The story does not move too fast. It is constructed along precise rules of dramatic exposition. It ends in a flash of melodrama. Mr. Lewis is right to set it in the complacent, supercilious North rather than in the hot South, sick of northern abuse. It not only makes the story stronger, it gives northerners something to think about at home, and they need it." Alden Stevens

Survey G 36:405 J1 '47 600w

"Always good at sketching little people, Mr. Lewis manages to draw some excellent minor bigots. But in the long run, his hero does not convince. He is made to carry too heavy a load. He is what might be termed a white-baiter." Harry Hansen

— Survey G 36:449 Ag '47 250w

Time 49:104 My 26 '47 900w

Wis Lib Bul 43:98 Je '47

"Many persons who cannot tell the difference between a valiant blow struck in a good cause and literary art have hailed Kingsblood Royal as an important novel. It isn't anything of the kind, but it is good propaganda and as such deserves respect and praise." Orville Prescott
— + Yale R n s 37:189 autumn '47 500w

LEWISOHN, LUDWIG. Case of Mr. Crump.
311p $3 Farrar, Straus

47-2396

"Originally published in Paris (1926) and banned from the U.S. mails, this is the first authorized American edition of an already critically acclaimed work. Talented young musician from South Carolina comes to New York for career. He is calculatingly seduced by oldish woman who soon forces him to marry her. Trapped and harried beyond belief by one of the most loathesome, totally indigestible females ever to grace the printed page, he finally—after twelve years of shame—ends the unclean union." Library J

"Full credit on credibility; certainly unpleasant reading. Why revive it?"

— Kirkus 15:43 Ja 15 '47 130w

Reviewed by H. G. Kelley

Library J 72:463 Mr 15 '47 120w

"It reads pretty much as it did in the beginning: like a great and powerful and very bitter book. The creative surge of it still carries easily along whatever by-products of flotsam and sludge developed out of the truculent angers of that ill-assorted marriage and its aftermath. The seriousness and sincerity of Mr. Lewisoohn's treatment of his bitter theme lifts it, engulfs it, thrusts it forward in a mighty stream of emotional conviction and power. Mr. Crump was, truly, a wronged man, in the old heroic sense of Greek tragedy." F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2
Ap 6 '47 1000w

"It is an ugly picture and an unforgettable one. The reader will remember Anne as if he had been forced to live with her for years. 'The Case of Mr. Crump' is one of the most remarkable indictments of a woman in fiction, an indictment which also has a good deal to say about the indicter, and which continues, even after twenty years, to raise some very interesting questions about the relation of art to experience." E. G. Davis

N Y Times p4 Mr 30 '47 1000w

"After a generation, the story is just as horrifying—and as entertaining—as it was when the smuggled French edition fluttered the literary dovescotes of the twenties."

New Yorker 23:110 Mr 29 '47 60w

LEWITON, MINA. Divided heart. 214p il $2.50
McKay

47-30300

"The arguments and quarrels between her mother and father and the strained feeling when they were together were difficult for fifteen-year-old Julie to understand when she remembered their former joyous times together and compared her homelife to the pleasant intimacy of her friend Anne's happy family. Older girls will approve the manner in which she handled the circumstances following her parents' separation, hiding her own despair and heartbreak so that she would not add to anyone else's unhappiness and finding comfort in studying music, helping in the neighborhood nursery, and caring for her new kitten and the small apartment." Booklist

Booklist 43:311 Je 1 '47

"The author's skill and understanding of human needs keeps her from focusing too long on the unhappy scenes. The school picture is bright and the home tempo changes subtly to a reconstruction of broken life and a steady movement toward mature happiness. The fine relationship which grows between Julie and her mother has the effect of sunlight after a rain."

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p8 My 25 '47
110w

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold

Christian Science Monitor p13 O 9 '47
210w

"Shorn of sentimentality, presented in a rarely sensitive, realistic manner, this story of Julie is worthwhile on its own merits as a tender, imaginative and well-rounded tale."

+ Kirkus 15:70 F 1 '47 220w

"A tender, rather slow-moving, yet very readable story of nice people affected by a broken marriage. . . Recommended for girls 12-16." G. E. Cartmell

+ Library J 72:1041 Jl '47 70w

"Not a story for happy girls. But there is hope in it for the unhappy." M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6
Jl 13 '47 550w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p25 Je 29 '47 250w

"To this reviewer it is more a story for adults about a girl than a story for the girls themselves."

Sat R of Lit 30:34 S 6 '47 110w

Wis Lib Bul 43:135 O '47

LEY, MADELEINE. Enchanted eve; il. by Edy Legrand [tr. by Willard Trask]. [48p] $3.50
Howell, Soskin

47-3392

The enchanted eve was St. Sylvain's eve when little paralyzed Barbara was able to skate because of the power of a magician to whom she had offered her golden buttons. She skated to an old pirate ship owned by Jean des Brûlots who showed her the mirror of the world guarded by Memory, Dream and Imagination. But when given her choice of future yearly visits to the ship or the use of her limbs, Barbara chose the latter.

"Edy Le Grand's distinguished illustrations are full of the spirit of mystery and enchantment. They are on backgrounds of blue or rose, giving the pages special beauty and charm and making a perfect accompaniment to the legend of little Barbara." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:263 Jl '47 90w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore

Horn Bk 23:434 N '47 250w

"Story is of doubtful interest or value to children. Distinctive make-up—illustrations by Edy Le Grand are beautiful; blue and salmon-colored paper. Blue paper so dark that print is not clear. For large collections." M. A. Herr

Library J 72:894 Je 1 '47 100w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14
My 11 '47 430w

"No expense has been spared to make this lovely book a triumph of taste and artistry. . . The delicate, expressive pictures of the famous French artist, Edy Le Grand, weave in and around the story, which is translated from the French. It is a fairy tale with a touch of allegory and mysticism and a very real truth apparent through its elaborate devices." V. H. Mathews

+ N Y Times p20 Jl 27 '47 200w

"The story not only takes us into another country but into an atmosphere that is strange and fascinating. It is the artist, however, who gives this book its great value. The use of a heavy white ink on the pastel pages is unusual and very effective, especially in the drawing of the tall pirate ship against a soft blue sky that is bright with great white stars. The figures of the skaters in the Ice Carnival are in brown ink against rose with a line of blue sky at the top of the page. A difficult book to plan and manufacture, it leaves a deep impression and is a lovely thing to own."

LEY, MADELEINE—Continued
+ Sat R of Lit 30:34 My 17 '47 320w

LEY, WILLY. Rockets and space travel; the future of flight beyond the stratosphere. rev & enl ed 374p il $3.75 Viking

629.13338 Rockets (aeronautics) 47-1899

"Revised edition of author's Rockets [Book Review Digest 1944] includes discussion on atomic energy, radar, submarine rockets, rockets in World War II. Hitler's experiments at Peenemünde, the rocket airplane, the space rocket and the work of the late Dr. Walter H. Goddard. Fascinating story of rockets interspersed with bits of personal data on men who worked on the idea of space travel. Bibliography." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 43:362 JI 15 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:531 Ap 1 '47 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:37 Ap '47

"Mr. Ley combines a preeminent knowledge of modern rocket research with a fine knack for entertaining exposition of scientific history for the intelligent layman." A. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ap 27 '47 100w

LEYDA, JAY, and BERTENSSON, SERGEI, eds. & trs. Musorgsky reader; a life of Modeste Petrovich Musorgsky in letters and documents. 474p il $6 Norton

B or 92 Musorgskii, Modest Petrovich

47-11340

Documents, both biographical and autobiographical, on the life and works of Modeste Petrovich Musorgsky. The arrangement is chronological, beginning in 1857 and ending in 1881, the year of his death. There is a chronology; and lists of his works; of his letters; and of his works on records; a bibliography and index.

Booklist 44:183 Ja 15 '48

"The editors have done a scholarly, definitive job, fully documented, but the net effect is too formless for the general reader. They have missed an opportunity of amplifying other lives of Musorgsky by failing to set the Russian scene, of emergence from feudalism, of intensive social reforms, of fresh musical activity. Limited."

+ — Kirkus 15:564 O 1 '47 100w

"Responsible translations from the Russian make this volume of exceptional value to the Western scholar as well as to the less exacting reader. The full panoply of bibliographical appendices includes a union list of Musorgsky's letters and a selective, critical discography—perhaps the first of its kind—by Philip L. Miller." C. K. Miller

+ Library J 72:1611 N 15 '47 130w

"Tolstoy, with his usual arrogance, said of Musorgsky: 'I don't like either talented drunks or drunken talents.' Sergei Bertensson, son of the doctor who took care of Musorgsky in his last days, says he was moved to the compilation of this fascinating book in order to supply 'a long overdue answer' to Tolstoy's, and the world's, 'mistaken simplification.' . . . This book, solid and satisfying, leaves us with one wish: that we might some day hear 'Boris' and 'Khovanshchina' just as Musorgsky wrote them." Vincent Sheean

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 D 7 '47 1650w

"The compilers of the 'Reader' are to be congratulated not only on their thoroughness and devotion but on the general quality of the translation—no easy task, for Musorgsky's letter-writing style became increasingly difficult and fantastical. . . . The 'Reader' should be of profound interest not only to the professional musician but to anyone desiring a deeper understanding of a great musical genius." Mimi Wallner

+ N Y Times p9 D 28 '47 600w

LI, KUO-CH'IN, and WANG, CH'UNG-YU. Tungsten; its history, geology, ore dressing, metallurgy, chemistry, analysis, applications, and economics. 2d rev & enl 430p il $8.50 Reinhold

669.7 Tungsten

47-3146

"Revised and enlarged, this second edition, written by two outstanding authorities in the field, brings up-to-date the changes in chemical technology, metallurgy, applications and economics of this metal and its compounds that have taken place since the previous edition was published in 1943. Advances in technology made during the last war, especially those contributed by German scientists for the Nazi military machine, have been incorporated. Most of the additional material in this present edition has been included in the chapter on geology. . . . Detailed statistics on production and prices are included." (Chem Eng) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1943.

Reviewed by L. F. Yntema

Chem & Eng N 25:2850 S 29 '47 320w

"The work is a comprehensive and valuable treatise on the subject and contains an extensive bibliography, including the patent literature."

+ Chem Eng 54:280 Je '47 190w

"The importance of this strategic mineral and its vital value in the war makes this a timely book showing future possibilities in new uses. As usual in this series, the book is replete with complete references." L. A. Eales

+ Library J 72:892 Je 1 '47 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:40 Ap '47

"The work is probably the most thorough-going and complete account of tungsten in the English language."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:319 S '47 240w

LICHT, SIDNEY HERMAN. Music in medicine. 132p $3 New England conservatory of music, 294 Huntington av, Boston

780.13 Music, Physical effect of. Music, Influence of 46-18644

"Addressed to musicians, who are advised to try to help the patient only after consultation with the physician. The historical background of musical therapy is summarized and discussion covers music as treatment for both mental and physical disabilities. Many of the suggestions are for the use of music in hospitals." (Booklist) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 43:50 O 15 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 JI '47

Theatre Arts 31:79 My '47 80w

LIDDELL HART, BASIL HENRY. Revolution in warfare. 125p $2 Yale univ. press

355 Military art and science. War 47-3404

The author is a British military historian and theorist. He describes the development of modern warfare in terms of the weapons used, and discusses the modern weapons, such as the V-bomb, the rocket, and the atomic bomb, and their probable effects in future wars. It is his thesis that the atomic bomb will be ruled out by agreement in the future. Index.

Reviewed by F. S. Marquardt

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ag 3 '47 600w

Reviewed by John Broderick

Commonweal 46:20 Ap 18 '47 420w

Foreign Affairs 25:695 JI '47 30w

Kirkus 15:93 F 1 '47 90w

"Provocative of careful thinking as to the heavy requirements of preparations for survival." A. B. Lindsay

+ Library J 72:527 Ap 1 '47 110w

Reviewed by Leonard Engel

Nation 164:748 Je 21 '47 410w

"Mr. Hart's shrewdness in perceiving the real meaning and intent of Clausewitz, which have long been misunderstood, deserves compliment, but his hope for the application of logic and reason—though both may be essential to the continuance of civilization—seems a trifle naive." P. J. Searles

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p25
Ap 20 '47 330w

"Liddell Hart is back at the same old stand in this book, rationalizing and justifying the same theories—and historically calling black white. He is persuasive and sweetly reasonable in his manner of doing it—as he always has been—but his treatment is neither whole nor thorough, and neither his facts nor his opinions sustain all of his argument." H. W. Baldwin

— + N Y Times p29 My 11 '47 1000w

New Yorker 23:118 Ap 12 '47 130w

"The book contains fewer than a hundred pages; its style is workmanlike and clear, and its ideas can be readily followed by an attentive reader. . . The author develops his case with an interesting and suggestive review of the technique and manner of war. The general fairness of his bird's-eye view of military history must be admitted, even if there are points which provoke disagreement; for example, it was the British army, not the navy, which was responsible for the destructive raid on Washington. . . The importance of this book lies in the author's call to a serious study of warfare and his analysis of the problem which that study is called on to solve." S. H. F. Johnston

Spec 176:462 My 3 '46 650w

Times [London] Lit Sup p476 O 5 '46
750w

Reviewed by Alfred Vagts

Yale R n s 36:760 summer '47 900w

LIDDICOAT, RICHARD THOMAS. Handbook of gem identification; with a foreword by Edward H. Kraus. 283p il $4.50 Gemologist inst. of Am.

549 Gems

47-31359

"Discusses the most important properties of gem stones, the more common instruments used for testing them, and detailed tests and procedures for identifying gems and distinguishing between natural, synthetic and artificial gems. An excellent book for the jewelry trade and the mineralogist." (Library J) Short glossary. Index.

Booklist 44:146 D 15 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1616 N 15 '47 40w

LIEB, FREDERICK GEORGE. Boston Red Sox. 257p il $3 Putnam

796.357 Baseball. Boston. Baseball club (American league) 47-2943

History of the forty-six years of the Boston Red Sox. Some of the big names in the baseball world, who were at one time on the Red Sox are Ted Williams, Babe Ruth, Tris Speaker, and Cy Young. Illustrated with photographs. No index.

Booklist 43:286 My 15 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '47

Kirkus 15:185 Mr 15 '47 90w

Reviewed by R. M. McEvoy

Library J 72:738 My 1 '47 70w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18
S 21 '47 130w

"His prose is unpolished, but fans who read the daily sport pages exhaustively will find it acceptable. They know that 'the scoring dish' is home plate. . . Boston readers may detect some prejudice in the chapter describing the 1912 world series, which the Red Sox won from the Giants after Fred Snodgrass' $30,000 muff of a fly. Lieb was then a rookie baseball writer in New York, and he leaves no doubt of his conviction that the Red Sox were extremely lucky to beat the Giants. But Lieb is fair enough to the Red Sox on the whole. . . There is some evidence that this is a hasty job, for some minor mistakes slip by." Harold Kaese

+ — N Y Times p28 Ap 27 '47 650w

LIEBERSON, GODDARD. 3 for bedroom C.
221p $2 Doubleday

47-629

Farcical story about a college professor who is forced by circumstances (over which at least he has no control) to travel from Chicago to California sharing his Pullman bedroom with a pretty movie actress, her little daughter, and their pet dog, Emperor.

Booklist 43:185 F 15 '47

"Not since the creation of Reed Chalmers in 'The Incomplete Enchanter,' by Fletcher Pratt and L. Sprague de Camp, has there been such a professor as Oliphant Thrumm. The charming—and somewhat disquieting—thing about this whimsical tale is that it is not fantasy. It could happen. . . With this book in the stalls, you have insurance against at least one dull evening." Charles Leavelle

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p4 F 16 '47
330w

"Laced with the brattish doings of Barbara and her poodle, gatherings of other Hollywoodians, this skips farce and gentles into a quiet romantic comedy that has a pleasant sometimes bright, sparkle."

+ Kirkus 14:579 N 15 '46 160w

"A mildly amusing little comedy. . . Mr. Lieberson has a gift for light writing, marred occasionally by split infinitives. It's a slight and not too original story he tells, but it has the interest of gay characterization and dialogue." Rose Feld

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12
Ja 26 '47 550w

"Goddard Lieberson is a musician with several published compositions to his credit and the vice president in charge of Masterworks at the Columbia Recording Corporation. With much more finesse in humor and a more compassionate attitude toward mankind in general than others who have traveled the same road, Mr. Lieberson has arranged a highly entertaining journey from Chicago to Pasadena. The A. T. & St. F. should be as content with his book as the bus companies were, some years ago, with that equally delightful film, 'It Happened One Night.'" Nancy Ladd

+ N Y Times p18 F 2 '47 470w

Reviewed by Phyllis Liapes

San Francisco Chronicle p12 Mr 16 '47
450w

LIEBLING, ABBOTT JOSEPH, ed. Republic of silence [tr. from the French by Ramon Guthrie and others]. 522p $4 Harcourt 940.5344 World war, 1939-1945—France

47-30277

Articles, essays, and short stories written by members of the French underground, so arranged as to give a contemporary history of the actions of French patriots during the Nazi occupation. The editor has included some of his own stories, reprinted from the New Yorker, and has tied the whole together with his comments.

Reviewed by J. G. Heinberg

Am Pol Sci R 41:815 Ag '47 380w

"The volume under review will constitute source material for an eventual history of resistance movements, not only in France but in all of Europe." W. H. Cooke

+ Ann Am Acad 254:196 N '47 480w

Booklist 43:288 My 15 '47

"Liebling has . . . skillfully arranged his materials to form an inspiring chronicle of a great patriotic movement." Jex Martin

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p11 My 25 '47
220w

Reviewed by Garland Downum

Christian Century 64:950 Ag 6 '47
320w

Reviewed by Henry Sowerby

Christian Science Monitor p10 Je 21 '47
650w

Current Hist 13:35 Jl '47 50w

Foreign Affairs 25:701 Jl '47 30w

Kirkus 15:234 Ap 15 '47 90w

LIEBLING, ABBOTT J.—Continued

"All accounts were written during or shortly after the incidents described and will certainly hold the reader spell-bound to the finish. Recommended." W. A. Kalenich

+ Library J 72:637 Ap 15 '47 80w

Reviewed by Justin O'Brien

Nation 164:487 Ap 26 '47 320w

Reviewed by John Farrelly

New Repub 116:31 My 12 '47 700w

"A. J. Liebling, an American who loves the French people and their beautiful land, has made into an extraordinarily skillful book many excellent selections of fine modern prose which is filled with feeling and almost never marred by sentimentality." M. R. Werner

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7
My 11 '47 1100w

"A. J. Liebling, noted for his roving reporting in The New Yorker, has performed a labor of love for the Resistance of the heroic days when the flame was still flying high. It is a sad as well as a thrilling experience to look back on. As he warns, if an anthology is supposed to bring together the 'best' writings, this must be something else. He also refuses to be a historian, thus protecting himself from the charge that he did not do enough work to cover the whole subject more thoroughly. He has earned his decoration by doing more than anyone else." Theodore Draper

+ N Y Times p3 Ap 27 '47 1400w

"Mr. Liebling has done an admirable job of organization, and his running comment, which ties the selections together, is as good as anything in his book. . . The translator, Ramon Guthrie, deserves a special citation too. Between them, they have given us a remarkable record of one of the finest moments in the moral history of man." Hamilton Basso

+ New Yorker 23:103 My 10 '47 600w

"'The Republic of Silence' is an exciting book, a hopeful book, a book to be read and reread and to be remembered. Mr. Liebling, acting as what he calls a master-of-ceremonies, has brought together the words and ideas of brave men, and women, too, and children, many children, who refused to wait until it was safe to believe in those things in which Frenchmen have always believed, who would not be patient, who insisted on fighting evil at the risk of their necks. Some of those so-called liberals in this country who just now are clamming up because liberalism is not so popular any more might learn something from 'The Republic of Silence.'" Merle Miller

+ Sat R of Lit 30:17 My 17 '47 600w

Reviewed by D. C. McKay

Yale R n s 36:729 summer '47 850w

LIEBLING, ABBOTT JOSEPH. Wayward pressman. 284p $2.95 Doubleday

071 Press. Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 47-11624

"Mr. Liebling's book is built around a collection of his articles written for The New Yorker. The collection includes such well-remembered pieces as the one about the Associated Press's monumental scoop on the German surrender, and the subsequent handing of its correspondent Edward Kennedy to the wolves; the story of how the Sun stands still; the late Fiorello La Guardia as a columnist, and others as penetrating and readable. But something has been added: thirty thousand words of Mr. Liebling's own history as a newspaperman, lessons and impressions since the early Twenties." (Sat R of Lit) Reading list.

Booklist 44:144 D 15 '47

Reviewed by Roland Sawyer

Christian Science Monitor p16 D 1 '47
800w

Kirkus 15:524 S 15 '47 150w

Reviewed by Richard Watts

New Repub 117:27 N 17 '47 1000w

"Mr. Liebling has a real value to those newspapers on which he centers his attention. If 'The New Yorker' did not give him such a good forum, the New York newspapers might well endow him. He makes plenty of missteps and blunders, he is occasionally a wayward critic, but he is a helpful adjunct of the press." F. L. Mott

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 D
28 '47 750w

"Mr. Liebling's book can be (and I hope will be) read by the general public if for no other reasons than that it contains anecdotes told by a master raconteur. . . But it is because Liebling is a thoughtful and knowledgeable critic of the press that the book should be read thoughtfully by equally knowledgeable publishers and editors, and even by the advertising and business office men who take their work as something more than a manufacturing and merchandising job." Courtenay Terrett

+ N Y Times p42 N 30 '47 800w

"Joe Liebling will probably never become a teacher in a school of journalism, although if he does, I want to be among the first to enroll for the full course. But he is, and will be, among the most competent and amusing critics of the American press; his pointed and caustic comments will set a lot of people to thinking about the daily press, that ink-stained old party they've been seeing around every day and taking pretty much for granted, short-comings and all." Don Hollenbeck

+ Sat R of Lit 30:34 N 8 '47 1100w

LIEFERANT, HENRY, and LIEFERANT, MRS SYLVIA (SALTZBERG). Seven daughters; drawings by Allen Pope. 127p $2 Coward-McCann

47-30222

Joe Hill, a sturdy and prosperous farmer, and his Sabina had everything to make them happy, except one thing—they had no son. There were seven little daughters to be loved and cherished, but to Joe Hill the lack of a son was a grievous cross, and he forbade his wife to let the little girls wear dresses. So they went to school and even to church in overalls. Nobody could change Joe's mind, until tragedy overtook them.

Booklist 43:255 Ap 15 '47

Kirkus 15:43 Ja 15 '47 110w

"Good characterization and straight-forward style combine to make a story with a haunting appeal. Recommended." R. P. Tubby

+ Library J 72:463 Mr 15 '47 70w

"The Lieferants tell the story of the Hills with warmth and humor. It makes a beguiling little book that is likely to linger in your memory." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p21
Mr 30 '47 450w

Springf'd Republican p10B S 28 '47
120w

LIEPMANN, HANS WOLFGANG, and PUCKETT, ALLEN E. Introduction to aerodynamics of a compressible fluid. 262p il $4 Wiley

629.1323 Aerodynamics. Compressibility
47-2378

"First English scientific textbook for graduate courses on the subject, a study of compressibility effects in aeronautical engineering and related fields such as turbine design. Part I, One-dimensional Motion, concerns basic compressibility phenomena, under simple geometrical conditions entailing little mathematics. Part II, Two- and Three-dimensional Motion, concerns more difficult phases and involves more mathematics." (Library J) References. Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:390 Mr 1 '47 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:26 Ap '47

"This book, which has been developed from a series of lectures undertaken for the purpose of instructing engineering employees of various airplane manufacturers, will serve as an excellent introduction to the subject. . . Although clearly written and addressed to graduate students, the book requires for its complete comprehension a high order of familiarity with mathematical notation and processes."

+ U S Quarterly BkI 3:213 Je '47 320w

LILLARD, RICHARD GORDON. Great forest. 399p il $5 Knopf

634.9 Forests and forestry—U.S. U.S.—History Agr47-28

When Europeans first came to America, the "great forest" covered nearly all the eastern part of the continent and large portions of the west. In this book, the author, following a roughly chronological order, reviews the history of the forest and considers its influence on the ways of life, the manners and customs, the politics, the wars, the economics and the labor relations of the inhabitants of the United States. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:63 O 15 '47

+ Kirkus 15:329 Je 15 '47 230w

"Interesting history of country from unusual focus. Appendix lists trees, wood uses, etc. Useful for reference." D. F. Lucas

+ Library J 72:1267 S 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by Howard Doughty
Nation 166:49 Ja 10 '48 400w

Reviewed by George Soule
New Repub 117:27 D 1 '47 60w

"Mr. Lillard has done an immense amount of research and produced a readable and most interesting book. This reviewer's chief objection is that the author patently wrote the book to prove a thesis, namely, that timber, all timber, should belong to the Federal government. . . . But if the reader will bear in mind the author's obvious tendency to prove the worst about the lumber industry—and I am not defending all its acts by any means—he will get from this book an excellent account of what the forests have meant to America." Stewart Holbrook

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 O 5 '47 800w

"'The Great Forest' shows a considerable advance in maturity and skill over Professor Lillard's previous 'Desert Challenge.' A teacher at the University of California, he is performing a service in bridging the gap between scholarship and the general reading public. His is courageous and generally successful grappling with a colossal subject." G. R. Stewart

+ N Y Times p12 N 16 '47 500w

"A sad and embarrassing tale for Americans. . . . The style is not technical, but the book is amply documented."

+ New Yorker 23:110 O 4 '47 100w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p12 O 6 '47 650w

Springf'd Republican p10B O 5 '47 30w

LILLIE, AMY MORRIS. Stephen, boy of the mountain; il. by Nedda Walker. 189p $2.50 Dutton

47-1530

"The story of a Greek boy who lived in the city of Caesarea Philippi in Palestine in the lifetime of Jesus. He is healed by Jesus and goes with his Negro slave, Nila, to Tyre and then to Capernaum where they meet Nathan of an earlier story by Mrs. Lillie." Sat R of Lit

Booklist 43:228 Mr 15 '47

Christian Century 64:272 F 26 '47 40w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 23:218 My '47 120w

"Told with dignity and simplicity. . . . Good book for religious teaching in homes and Sunday schools." M. F. Cox

+ Library J 72:392 Mr 1 '47 80w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 My 11 '47 400w

"Occasionally in reading a book, one pauses to reread and savor a sentence or a paragraph so concisely stated that it mirrors one's own thoughts and expresses ideas that are hard to put into words. No one needs or appreciates a book of this calibre more than a thinking boy or girl of 9 to 12. 'Stephen, Boy of the Mountain' is such a book." V. H. Mathews

+ N Y Times p22 Mr 2 '47 240w

Reviewed by M. G. Davis

+ Sat R of Lit 30:42 Mr 8 '47 80w

Wis Lib Bul 43:85 My '47

LIN, YU-T'ANG. Gay genius; the life and times of Su Tungpo. 427p il $3.75 Day

B or 92 Su Shih 47-11617

Biography of Su Tungpo (1036-1101) one of the great men of the classical Chinese civilization. Not only was he a poet, he was also painter, magistrate, engineer, writer, philosopher, alchemist, and public health authority. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:106 N 15 '47

Reviewed by R. B. Nye

Chicago Sun Book Week N 25 '47 450w

"This is a most enjoyable book by a gifted and poetic Chinese writer about another Chinese writer whose greatness has kept him, in a way, a contemporary of all great Chinese writers for nearly a thousand years." Pearl Strachan

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 N 18 '47 600w

Kirkus 15:565 O 1 '47 210w

"An amazing, fascinating study. . . . A superlative book! Undoubtedly a must!" R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 72:1538 N 1 '47 130w

"The sentiments are often intriguing, but to this writer the presentation of them is not stirring. . . . A scholarly Chinese friend who has read this book tells me that it is the result of a phenomenal amount of painstaking research and that it would undoubtedly have been pronounced a fine piece of work by China's exacting critics if it had been done in their language—and that is something that can rarely be said of books about China in English." Rodney Gilbert

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 N 16 '47 1500w

"Let it be said at once that Dr. Lin Yu-tang could hardly have chosen a more inept title for a book on Su Tung-po than 'The Gay Genius.' He was never gay in any modern sense of the word, and no one could have been less like a wag. . . . But it would be the greatest injustice to criticize the book for its obvious faults. . . . All these things could be said of this life of Su Tung-po, yet this is certainly the best book Dr. Lin has written. It is doubtful whether there will ever be a better introduction in English to the life and times of [the] poet." Robert Payne

+ — N Y Times p10 N 23 '47 800w

"For [his] accomplishments we have to take Dr. Lin's word, since Su Tungpo's charm and writings do not come through very well in translation, to say nothing of his waggishness. The author's description of eleventh-century Chinese life, on the other hand, is pleasantly done."

+ — New Yorker 23:139 N 22 '47 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 30 '47 500w

"'The Gay Genius' will find a secure place on the shelves of the students of China, both as a monumental study of Su Tungpo, and the story of an historical feud on which there is little material in English. But, unhappily, Dr. Lin has failed to infuse Su Tungpo with enough vitality and sparkle to draw a wider audience." Mark Gayn

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:92 D 6 '47 700w

Time 50:105 N 3 '47 500w

LINCOLN, ABRAHAM. Uncollected works; his letters, addresses and other papers; assembled and annotated by Rufus Rockwell Wilson; v. 1, 1824 to 1840. 655p $5 Primavera press

308.1

(47-30301)

"Much Lincoln material has come to light since the publication of the final edition of the 12-volume Nicolay and Hay Complete Works in 1905. Some of this is in the Herndon collection which was acquired by the Library of Congress in 1941. Other items have been discovered by the researches of many Lincoln scholars. Still others will be found in the Robert T. Lincoln collection which was bequeathed to the Library of Congress and will be available for use in July 1947, in time for inclusion in later volumes of the present series. Dr. Wilson, who has written books about Lincoln and about the American frontier, plans four large volumes which will constitute a supplement to Nicolay and Hay." Christian Century

LINCOLN, ABRAHAM—Continued

Booklist 43:325 Je 15 '47

Christian Century 64:656 My 21 '47
280w

"Into this book Mr. Wilson and those who have assisted him have put a great deal of hard work. To recognize this effort, certainly expended with the best intentions, with praise of the result would be gratifying. As it is, it would be misleading to recommend it unreservedly except to those students whose interest carries them into the technical aspects of Lincoln's professional career." P. M. Angle

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20
Ap 27 '47 550w

"The compiler, a lifelong student of Abraham Lincoln, prefaces each year's documents with a well-written and scholarly summary of the period. Prodigious research has been necessary to calendar so many legal documents, and it seems safe to say that ten or twelve more volumes may be required to list Lincoln's legal cases during the subsequent twenty years of his active practice. This is a big undertaking for any compiler, but scholars have catalogued Napoleon's works in equally minute detail, and Lincoln—let us hope—will be the bigger man in history." Jay Monaghan

+ N Y Times p5 My 4 '47 750w

San Francisco Chronicle p21 My 18 '47
370w

LINCOLN, FAY STURTEVANT. Charleston; photographic studies; foreword and captions by E. Milby Burton. [79p] $5 Corinthian publications, inc, 114 E 32d st, N.Y. 16

720.9757 Charleston, South Carolina—Historic houses, etc. 47-858

Collection of seventy-three photographs of houses, churches, gardens, gate houses, etc. of Charleston, South Carolina.

"Mr. Lincoln, best known for his superb camera studies of Colonial Williamsburg, has captured the peculiar charm of Charleston in these masterly photographs."

+ Cath World 165:189 My '47 170w

Christian Science Monitor p14 F 15 '47
300w

"If Mr. Lincoln has taken infinite pains with these photographs, opening his lens at exactly the right time of day, and waiting hour upon hour for that particular moment when no automobile or pedestrian breaks in upon the scene, his publishers are to be equally congratulated on the extreme care with which they have reproduced his work. The book is a masterpiece of printing; of the photographer and of the pressman. 'Charleston' is the ideal gift book for all splendid occasions." Wayne Andrews

+ Commonweal 45:328 Ja 10 '47 240w

LIND, ANDREW WILLIAM. Hawaii's Japanese; an experiment in democracy [sponsored by American council, Inst. of Pacific relations]. 264p il $3 Princeton univ. press

325.252 Japanese in the Hawaiian islands
A47-16

"This authoritative book skillfully handles the touchy question of a large social minority group. It proves, with statistics and documents that the Japanese in Hawaii committed not a single act of sabotage either before or after December 7, and that they are not only worthy and valuable citizens, but normal human beings who work hard for a fair share of freedom from intolerance." Library J

"Hawaii's Japanese is well written and has a good index. It has appeared when there is still considerable interest in those problems stirred up by the war. We hope that the Hawaiian sociologists find it possible to publish shortly detailed studies of life in the Islands during the war." F. E. LaViolette
+ Am J Soc 53:158 S '47 650w

"Sound sociological method has apparently been applied to the collection and analysis of the evidence. Field work on the project was begun in 1942, and conscious attempts were made to collate contemporary evidence on group attitudes toward socially significant events and developments. There is no indication that the author has had access to confidential reports of investigations conducted by military and naval intelligence agencies or by the F.B.I., but it is not likely that such material would have affected the basic conclusions. Dr. Lind carefully distinguishes the various facets of the question, handles each with intelligence and skill, and has produced a well-written and sympathetic study stressing the problems of mutual and reciprocal adaptation of peoples of differing racial origins on the Hawaiian scene." H. A. Steiner

+ Am Pol Sci R 41:371 Ap '47 380w

Reviewed by J. F. Embree
Am Soc R 12:245 Ap '47 600w

"The author, who has carried on research in race relations in Hawaii for the past twenty years, had a rare opportunity to observe at first hand an intensive social experiment provided by World War II. . . Dr. Lind has given us an excellent evaluation of the Hawaiian experiment." W. C. Smith

+ Ann Am Acad 251:203 My '47 410w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Chicago Sun Book Week p8 Ja 26 '47
150w

"This authoritative review of democratic racial relations in Hawaii is one in which all America should take pride, and which Americans should remember in the continued efforts to reduce and eliminate intolerance on the mainland, whether it crops up in racial, color, or religious aspects. Professor Lind's work is a sociological study and a valuable source-book; it is written on the basis of much original research during 1941-45 by the Department of Sociology at the University of Hawaii of which Professor Lind is chairman. He, himself, has lived in the islands for 20 years." R. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Ja 23 '47 550w

Current Hist 12:238 Mr '47 60w

Foreign Affairs 25:700 Jl '47 40w

Reviewed by Anne Whitmore
Library J 71:1624 N 15 '46 120w

"'Hawaii's Japanese' is more than a sociological report; it is a revealing human document portraying the disillusion, loss of face, uncertainty, frustration, sacrifice and triumph of a group of which we demand absolute loyalty, while denying them complete equality in our political, social and economic life. Dr. Lind has made an interesting and authoritative contribution to our better understanding of race relations." N. B. Beck

+ N Y Times p28 Mr 23 '47 500w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Mr 23 '47
250w

Reviewed by Bradford Smith
Sat R of Lit 30:21 Je 7 '47 420w

Reviewed by Oitsuchi Masuoka

Social Forces 25:455 My '47 1150w

Social Studies 38:96 F '47 10w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:83 Mr '47 200w

Wis Lib Bul 43:137 O '47

LINDENOV, CHRISTOFFER. The first Triple alliance; tr. and ed. with an historical introduction by Waldemar Westergaard. 528p $6 Yale univ. press

940.22 Triple alliance, 1668. Great Britain—Foreign relations—Denmark. Denmark—Foreign relations—Great Britain 47-3557

Collection of letters of the Danish envoy to England, 1668 to 1672, written while he resided in London, not long after the signing of the Triple Alliance between England, the Netherlands, and Sweden. "The envoy also has an open eye for significant measures pending before Parliament, particularly matters concerning revenue and parliamentary privilege. Court gossip is by no means neglected. The impression given is that Lindenov was an industrious, ingenious, and intelligent reporter." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Index.

"The book is source material, plus backstairs chatter about the ladies to make it entertaining."

Current Hist 12:582 Je '47 70w

"Well-edited publication recommended especially for scholarly libraries." F. E. Hirsch + Library J 72:528 Ap 1 '47 140w

Times [London] Lit Sup p519 O 11 '47 900w

"The volume should be of great value to students of European diplomacy and English history, who, but for this work, would probably not even know of the existence of these letters."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:259 S '47 240w

LINDMAN, MAJ JAN (MRS MAJ LINDMAN-HULTEN). Snipp, Snapp, Snurr, and the big farm [27p] il $1.25 Whitman, A. 47-3781

Picture-story book about the three little Swedish boys and their cousin Elsa, and what happened the summer the boys spent on Elsa's father's farm.

Reviewed by Gertrude Andrus

Library J 72:324 F 15 '47 40w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Mr 9 '47 110w

LINDOP, AUDREY (MRS DUDLEY LESLIE). Fortune my foe [Eng title: In me, my enemy]. 311p $2.75 Harper 47-1579

"A first novel in the English tradition showing the influence of past generations on the heroine, who at forty-five has decided to commit suicide. But these plans miscarry and she eventually finds adjustment and happiness." Library J

"It is a little difficult to relate the capable Clare after her attempted suicide to the futile woman she was before it, and the psychological explanations while satisfying her do not seem adequate to me. Nevertheless, both the 19th century family life section and Clare's later life are unique and interesting stories, full of action, and the two are welded into one novel with a high degree of technical skill." Dorothy Sparks

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ag 3 '47 360w

"The drama and romanticism of the handling make this compelling—in its genre. (But it's not the answer to the demand for wholesome romance.)"

Kirkus 14:606 D 1 '46 170w

Library J 72:225 F 1 '47 40w

"Melodramatic but not morbid." Lisle Bell N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22 Ap 20 '47 200w

"A part-bawdy, part-Victorian family chronicle that is more rewarding in individual scenes than for its complete meaning." Hilda Lake

N Y Times p12 Mr 16 '47 500w

"I was willing to accept the things that happened to this unfortunate family, but I wanted to know more about why they had happened and what went on inside the Durreys and Vetches to account for their unusual conduct. Had such explanations been given it might have been possible to liken 'Fortune My Foe' distantly to the beginning of a 'The Forsyte Saga,' but as the history of these generations has been recorded it is merely a lean, year-by-year account of an extraordinarily unlucky family." Constance Curtis

— Sat R of Lit 30:28 F 22 '47 500w

LINDUSKA, NOREEN. My polio past. 205p $2.75 Pellegrini & Cudahy

616.83 Infantile paralysis Med47-2432

In 1943 the author was beginning her career as a writer, and was to be married within a month, when she was stricken with polio. Her illness and her struggle to recover are described in this informal and often witty book.

Booklist 44:84 N 1 '47

"This book should be read by all who have had polio, all parents of persons who have polio. . . It is a book of humor, inspiration and hope." R. L. Dicks

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Ag 31 '47 300w

"A distinctly personal, lightly (but not flipantly) toned account of one girl's long siege against infantile paralysis. . . An authentic, informal, non-literary record of an experience." + Kirkus 15:388 Jl 15 '47 170w

"A lively and informal little book that asks no pity and earns your interest, liking, and respect." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 O 5 '47 200w

"'My Polio Past' will be an inspiration to many who are incapacitated for any reason and a delight to those who escape such adversities. The author, though still in her twenties, writes skillfully and with humor." R. D. Dinsmore

+ N Y Times p41 O 26 '47 290w

LINGG, ANN M. Mozart: genius of harmony; il. by Helen Frank. 331p $3 Holt

B or 92 Mozart, Johann Chrysostom Wolfgang Amadeus 47-92

"A full biography that begins with his infancy and childhood in Salzburg, tells of his success in Munich, Vienna, Paris, and London as a child-pianist and composer and the triumphs and disappointments of his later life." Sat R of Lit

Booklist 43:172 F 1 '47

"A charming life of Wolfgang Mozart and a critical estimate of his works." B. L. Conway + Cath World 166:188 N '47 250w

"One of the most loved of all composers, Mozart's story has been often told. The present volume appealing to mature readers contains a compelling account of artistic circles in 18th century Austria and of Mozart's important contributions to the development of the sonata, the symphony and the opera. Valuable lists of his works are included." A. M. Jordan + Horn Bk 23:45 Ja '47 80w

"An exhaustive biography of the great composer, mature and very informative. One gets a sense of the life of the times in all great courts and metropolitan centers, and of the customs and manners of the people of the petty kingdoms of Austria, Prussia, etc. where Mozart spent his life. The place of the artist in the patronage system is sympathetically told, and the man, Mozart, emerges, not as a child of sun and light, but as one who struggled to achieve a livelihood and some modicum of security to work out his artistic problems." + Kirkus 14:545 N 1 '46 80w

"Well written and told with an enthusiasm and warmth that will inspire the reader to a deeper appreciation and understanding of this great artist as few biographers have in the past. . . Recommended for ages 12-16." Sara Robinson

+ Library J 72:168 Ja 15 '47 80w

LINGG, ANN M.—Continued

"Miss Lingg's 'Mozart' shows loving acquaintance with Vienna such as only a notice of that ever-alluring city can attain, and an understanding of his background, his life and above all, the compositions that were his life, grounded in her university studies there."

M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10
F 2 '47 250w

+ Sat R of Lit 20:71 N 9 '46 50w
Wis Lib Bul 43:37 F '47

LINK, ARTHUR STANLEY. Wilson: the road to the White House. 570p il $5 Princeton univ. press

B or 92 Wilson, Woodrow 47-3554

"For the past several years Arthur S. Link, as a student and as a member of the Department of History at Princeton University, has been working on a new biography of Woodrow Wilson. . . Not only has he had access to the complete collection of Wilson papers in the Library of Congress and to Mr. Baker's invaluable collection, but he has used at least eight other collections in the same archives, as well as papers and letters from fully a half-dozen other libraries, and many New Jersey newspapers which are no longer extant. The research combines to give us a new picture of Woodrow Wilson as college president, as political thinker, as politician, as Governor of New Jersey and as candidate for the Presidency." N Y Times

"The whole political story, indeed, is minutely told, with excellent handling of detail. But Wilson himself, that strange complex of inheritance and background and training and character and emotion, is curiously missing from many of the pages. It will be difficult for those coming fresh to the subject to understand why this Wilson became what he did become. However, the quality of the man is revealed more clearly toward the end of the book, and Wilson, the leader, will, it is to be hoped, come completely alive in the next volume. Students of Woodrow Wilson and his period will do well to pay attention to this book, and to watch for its successor." K. E. Brand

+ — Am Hist R 53:130 O '47 1050w

Reviewed by E. S. Brown

+ Am Pol Sci R 41:778 Ag '47 850w

Reviewed by R. F. Nichols

Ann Am Acad 253:222 S '47 550w

Booklist 43:329 Je 15 '47

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Je 1 '47
650w

"If, in a few places, the sheer weight of the author's scholarship becomes oppressive and almost dull, there are many chapters that sparkle with minutely accurate description, flashing narrative, and characterizations that are three-dimensional. As a scholarly portrayal of the key period in the life of one of our great national leaders, this is an important contribution to our historical literature. As top-notch interpretive biography, this should prove rewarding to any intelligent citizen who is concerned with America's past and future." R. A. Brown

+ — Christian Science Monitor p10 Ji 12 '47 950w

Reviewed by M. A. Fitzimons

Commonweal 46:290 Ji 4 '47 550w

Current Hist 12:583 Je '47 50w

Foreign Affairs 26:225 O '47 40w

"The first volume of Professor Link's new life of Woodrow Wilson is a model of political biography. Thorough, accurate, objective, and readable, it gives the first full account of Wilson's life in politics up to his election to the Presidency in 1912. . . Dr. Link is a critical biographer, not basically unsympathetic with his subject, but no cultist or rhapsodist; and his dry recognition that his leading figure indulged in ambiguities and contradictions is refreshing in a day when a synthetic conception of 'folk hero' has made it impossible to see some past political leaders for their halos. Historians and the general public alike will await the remaining volumes of Dr. Link's biography with enthusiasm." A. M. Schlesinger, Jr.

+ Nation 165:49 Ji 12 '47 270w

"Mr. Link has set up a work that must be consulted by every one who writes hereafter on that part of Wilson's career. Technically, it is of a high order of excellence. Its scholarship is impressive, yet it is written lucidly and forcefully. It is thoroughly documented, yet not repetitious. . . The result is a narrative that is comprehensive and detailed, but that flows steadily. . . Yet the book has its limitations. It is the biography of an intellect, not that of a man." G. W. Johnson

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3
My 11 '47 1150w

"Link has served the cause of history well by his dispassionate, objective analysis. It is crowded with new material—letters long hidden, diaries never before quoted, old newspaper files long neglected. Mr. Link has well achieved his purpose of writing a scholarly, complete and systematic account of the years of Wilson's life between 1902 and March 4, 1913. If often he writes too professorially and gives too little of the color and personality of the hundreds of people who crowd his pages, the dramatic quality of his material outweighs this fault. His volumes on the New Freedom and the Great Betrayal will be eagerly awaited." Karl Schriftgiesser

+ N Y Times p5 My 4 '47 2250w

Reviewed by D. S. Muzzey

Pol Sci Q 62:615 D '47 1150w

Reviewed by Edgar Sisson

Sat R of Lit 30:15 Je 7 '47 1000w

Spring'd Union p9 Ji 23 '47 800w

"Readers with solid tastes, who like biographies to be long and informing, will be pleased at the scope of this book and will look forward to the several volumes which presumably are to follow. . . But there is a staleness to old campaign oratory, which can be misleading. Here are the words spoken, but they do not evoke the response now which they did then. The reader, unless he exercise considerable care, will tend to become slightly bored, and contemptuous of the last generation of Americans." R. A. Newhall

+ — Survey G 37:33 Ja '48 550w

Time 49:114 My 12 '47 650w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:259 S '47 340w

"In every sense of exhaustive research, ingenious attack, and lucid exposition of political relevancies, this is distinguished history, and a splendid beginning of a work larger than young scholars frequently have the courage to undertake. Yet the volume does have a weakness on the side of 'biographical study.' Wilson's Southernism, his Calvinism, his sense of moral law, his preoccupation with the qualities of leadership, Link duly mentions. But he does not assimilate them at full value into his story." C. A. Barker

+ — Yale R n s 37:150 autumn '47 900w

LINK, HENRY CHARLES. Rediscovery of morals; with special reference to race and class conflict. (Am. mercury bk) 223p $2.50 Dutton 301.1532 Social ethics. Race problems.

Class distinction 47-1803

A discussion of what is wrong with the world of today and its people, and what can be done about it. Emphasis is placed on race and class conflict, and the author advocates a return to Christian morality to combat present-day problems. Bibliography. No index.

Reviewed by Wendell Johnson

Chicago Sun Book Week p1 Mr 2 '47
330w

"This book will be hailed as epoch making, cursed as reactionary, praised as profound, and scorned as superficial. Paradoxically enough, it has all these virtues and faults. The net impact upon the reader, however, is good. This is a book that needed to be written and therefore deserves to be read." Carl Kreider + Christian Century 64:559 Ap 30 '47

750w

Reviewed by McAlister Coleman
Churchman 161:16 Ap 15 '47 420w
Kirkus 14:618 D 1 '46 180w

"A passionate and at times a trenchant plea. . . . Intended for the popular reader." R. P. Morris

Library J 72:317 F 15 '47 40w
Management R 36:501 S '47 30w

"It is everlastingly true that we need everywhere men of good will, that education must deal with morals, that religion must present ethical imperatives as worked out in terms of a truly social gospel, and that all the political legislation and administration in the world will be ineffective if not backed by the trained and alert conscience of the people. Dr. Link is right—a moral revival is the challenge of these times." J. H. Holmes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18
Mr 9 '47 650w

"The world is looking for clear, simple and persuasive moral leaders. But neither on the basis of prose style nor philosophical system (so far as I comprehend them) does Dr. Link supply the want." H. M. Jones

N Y Times p7 Mr 9 '47 320w

"In his discussion of race conflict Dr. Link makes not only a skilled analysis but wholesome suggestions for procedures toward correction. When it comes to discussion of the class struggle his prejudices in behalf of management and against organized labor become woefully apparent." G. E. Shipley

Sat R of Lit 30:12 Mr 1 '47 380w
School & Society 65:93 F 1 '47 30w

"Dr. Link's book is a very mixed dish. There are some wholesome viands in it; but with regard to many of the opinions he serves up one may very well remember the familiar anecdote of the waiter in a railroad restaurant, who, responding to the request of the weary traveler for some eggs and a few kind words, brought the eggs and announced: 'Here's the eggs, and here's the few kind words—don't eat 'em.'" W. R. Bowie

Survey G 36:305 My '47 700w
Wis Lib Bul 43:50 Mr '47

LINKLATER, J. LANE, pseud. See Watkins, A.

LINKLETTER, ART. People are funny; introd. by Bing Crosby [il. by Reisie Lonette]. 273p $2.50 Doubleday

791.4 Radio programs 47-31232

The master of ceremonies of the radio program People Are Funny here records some amusing experiences with the people who have appeared on his programs.

Booklist 41:85 N 1 '47

"Humor and human interest on a fairly elemental level, this is not assured amusement." Kirkus 15:416 Ag 1 '47 90w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p55 D 7 '47 170w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 3 '47
550w

LINTON, RALPH, and LINTON, ADELIN SUMNER (BRIGGS) HOHLFELD. Man's way from cave to skyscraper; il. by Raine Renshaw. 185p $2.50 Harper

572 Anthropology. Civilization—History 47-31180

Outlines the evolution of man for ages twelve to sixteen. It tells of "the devious roads he has traveled during the centuries in which he has been changing from a creature living in caves to a builder of towering skyscrapers and soaring airplanes and a maker of atomic bombs, which are capable of forcing him to take to the caves once more." (p. 1) Index.

Booklist 44:115 N 15 '47

Reviewed by M. B. King

Chicago Sun Book Week N 8 '47 50w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 24:47 Ja '48 110w

Kirkus 15:399 Ag 1 '47 80w

"A lively, informal style and some humor combine with scientific information to make this an excellent anthropology book for young people. . . . Probably will not appeal to many students but will be valuable for the library in a school endeavoring to develop an understanding of other peoples." F. L. Morrison

+ Library J 72:1476 O 15 '47 100w

Reviewed by Eleanor Breed

San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 16 '47
80w

"This is a fascinating book for young people and for their elders. . . . It is, of course, a valuable reference book, well indexed and authenticated. It is, too, a book to read thoughtfully and with an increasing interest and pleasure. The drawings are accurate presentations of ancient records—simple line drawings that, taken with the text, tell a vivid and deeply important story."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:57 N 15 '47 200w

Wis Lib Bul 43:178 D '47

LINTON, RALPH, and others. Arts of the South seas. 199p il $5 Museum of modern art.
709.9 Art—Oceania. Art, Primitive 46-25247

"Popular presentation and interpretation of primitive art. . . . The book covers the four great divisions of the South Seas—Polynesia, Micronesia, Melanesia, and Australia. Native art is presented in all its forms, especially wood carving, and illustrated with two hundred plates, including four in color, selected from collections throughout the United States. More than an analysis of the art in its own terms, the text explains the cultural functions and meanings of the various art objects, and amounts, actually, to a series of excellent thumbnail ethnographic accounts of the principal islands and island groups. Many of the plates, also, show the uses of objects." U S Quarterly Bkl

"The variety and richness of these arts of the South Seas are abundantly illustrated by 200 plates, with four full-page color drawings made with great fidelity by Miguel Covarrubias." H. L. Shapiro

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p17
Ag 25 '46 700w

"The first systematic presentation of the rich art achievements of the Pacific area, this extremely attractive volume will appeal to the general reader."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:125 Je '47 160w

LIPPERT, FREDERICK G. Accident prevention administration. 159p il $2.25 McGraw

331.823 Accidents—Prevention. Factory management 47-2963

"A practical and readable guide to industrial safety in all its aspects—how a well-conceived accident prevention program can help [the plant executive], what it involves, and how to set up and administer it. The book presents the proper steps in the organization and operation of a plant accident prevention program, including a detailed treatment of the collection and evaluation of accident data, training and follow-up, union participation, designing a policy and procedure, etc." (Management R) Index.

Booklist 43:325 Je 15 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1716 D 1 '46 60w

Management R 36:301 My '47 140w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:26 Ap '47

LIPPMANN, WALTER. Cold war; a study in U.S. foreign policy. 62p $1 Harper

327.73 U.S.—Foreign policy. U.S.—Foreign relations. Russia—Foreign relations, Europe—Politics 47-11716

Taking as his base of operations the anonymous article "The sources of Soviet conduct" which appeared in Foreign Affairs for July 1947, Mr Lippmann reviews and criticizes the foreign policies of the United States as they are revealed in that essay (known to represent the views of the State Department) and in the so-called Truman Doctrine. The material in this book first appeared as a series of articles in the New York Herald Tribune.

"The Cold War is written in excellent temper. It is as lucidly argued as a problem in mathematics. The author succeeds in lifting his discussion far above the level of heated polemics." J. H. Powers

+ Atlantic 180:138 D '47 900w

Reviewed by DeWitt John
Christian Science Monitor p16 N 21 '47 450w

Kirkus 15:589 O 15 '47 420w

Reviewed by Bjarne Braatoy
Nation 165:652 D 13 '47 750w

Reviewed by Joseph Barnes
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 Ja 4 '48 850w

"Lippmann's book, containing newspaper columns previously published, is in no sense a 'literary contribution,' but comes more within the realm of thoughtful journalism. Its value is current rather than permanent." C. L. Sulzberger

+ N Y Times p3 N 30 '47 1800w

"The controversy between Mr. Lippmann and 'Mr. X' of the State Department has aroused such widespread interest that the publication of the former's syndicated articles on Russian-American relations in book form is doubly welcome. . . Mr. Lippmann is always lucid and persuasive. His criticism of the policy of containment and the Truman Doctrine appears to me to be entirely valid, and certainly we should exhaust every effort in trying to reach an agreement with Russia. But his own program, which he characterizes as simple and necessary, seems somehow to be over-simple." F. R. Dulles

+ Sat R of Lit 30:11 N 22 '47 1000w

Reviewed by Walter Taplin
Spec 179:780 D 19 '47 360w

LIPS, JULIUS ERNST. Origin of things; il. by Eva Lips; with contributions by A. Kameny. 496p $5 Wyn

572 Society, Primitive. Civilization—History 47-3945

"A sort of secular 'Golden Bough,' or at least an attempt at it, by an exiled German anthropologist. It is an inquiry into the first efforts of man to make homes and cook food, to play games, to transport himself over land and water, and to get animals and inanimate objects to do his work for him." (New Yorker) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 43:341 Jl 1 '47

Kirkus 15:207 Ap 1 '47 120w

Reviewed by Keith Hutchison
Nation 165:320 S 27 '47 270w

"The best chapters are those dealing with primitive technology. . . Some of the less practical aspects of human existence are also covered effectively and entertainingly. . . Unfortunately, these good qualities are offset by certain glaring deficiencies. In his desire to provide satisfactory escapism the author has carried us back into something suspiciously like the Garden of Eden. . . A second and more serious fault is the author's constant carelessness and inaccuracy in the use of material." Ralph Linton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 S 28 '47 650w

"The tendency to overstate is a general fault of this book. It does not enhance the author's effort to achieve a popular style; but it does intrude upon an otherwise scientific study. The impressive assembly of material which Dr. Lips has brought together in this volume represents a large effort. The reader can be left with little doubt concerning the vastness, variability and yet similarity of man-made institutions and human drives." Gitel Poznanski

+ N Y Times p24 Je 15 '47 700w

"The mass of odd facts the author presents about our forebears' ingenuity is staggering and much of the book is fascinating, but the writing is often elementary and nearly eaten away by clichés. Many helpful little drawings."

+ New Yorker 23:126 Je 7 '47 100w

"One feels at times, indeed, that Dr. Lips has been too simple. For more often than not he is content merely to describe primitive parallels to contemporary life and to avoid drawing conclusions. Nevertheless, his volume should be of interest to the general reader who will be glad to learn that even primitive societies have their cycles of inflation and deflation, that a form of Communism was practiced in the early ice age and that lipstick was a feminine necessity long before the days of Cleopatra." A. F.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 Je 22 '47 200w

LISS, JOSEPH, ed. Radio's best plays [pref. by Norman Corwin]. 383p $3 Greenberg

792 Radio plays 47-4908

Contents: The fall of the city, by Archibald MacLeish; The airborne, by Marc Blitzstein; Many a watchful night, by J. M. Brown and H. M. Teichmann; The face, by Arthur Laurents; October morning, by Millard Lampell; The empty noose, by Arnold Perl; Western star, by S. V. Benét; Daybreak, by Norman Corwin; The last speech, by Lou Cooper and others; The story they'll never print, by Erik Barnouw; The last Inca, by Morton Wishengrad; The big road, by Norman Rosten; Farewell to Altamont, by Thomas Wolfe and Elizabeth Lomax; Helen Keller, by Ethel Deckelman; The little one, by Al Morgan; Story of Gus, by Arthur Miller; The hitch hiker, by Lucille Fletcher; Fourth of July picnic, by John Faulk; Sometime every summertime, by Fletcher Markle; Rebirth in Barrow's inlet, by Joseph Liss.

Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Jl 13 '47 90w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '47

"Clearly, the selections peter out toward the end. But you can't have everything between one pair of book covers. Here you will find enough drama worth reliving. There are also interesting commentaries about radio, written by Corwin, Liss and by nine or ten of the other contributors." Saul Carson

+ N Y Times p18 Ag 17 '47 900w

Reviewed by Paul Speegle
San Francisco Chronicle p11 Jl 27 '47 250w

LITCHFIELD, PAUL WEEKS. Industrial republic; reflections of an industrial lieutenant; il. by Fred Ludekens. 201p $4 Burrows brothers co, 633 Euclid av, Cleveland

331 Industrial relations. Goodyear tire and rubber company. Akron, Ohio 46-20784

The first section of this book, by the chairman of the board of the Goodyear tire and rubber company, is a reproduction of his book The Industrial Republic, published in 1919. "In it our industrial economy was examined and remedies suggested for some of the ills then existing." (In explanation) "The second section of Mr. Litchfield's book draws the flowsheets, specifies the equipment, and presents the operating manual for his company's pilot-plant experiment in industrial management. . . Section three recites the facts of the retrogression in labor-management relations that followed the enforced abandonment of the Goodyear plan in 1935 and the substitution of the government-sponsored industrial union (CIO). . . Section four restates the problem. . . The book concludes with a new blueprinting of the 'industrial republic,' a democratic system of industry, patterned after our constitutional form of government, but one that has now been proved through 16 successful years by the Goodyear Co." Chem & Eng N

Reviewed by R. L. Dodge

Chem & Eng N 25:264 Ja 27 '47 500w

"As might be expected from a writer of such broad practical experience, the book is studded with pithy economic observations." Chaplin Tyler

+ Chem Eng 54:296 Ap '47 600w

LITERARY prizes and their winners [Anne J. Richter, editor]. 119p $3 Bowker

807.9 Rewards (prizes, etc). Literature

"An enlarged edition of a book formerly published as Famous literary prizes and their winners [ed. by Bessie Graham, Book Review Digest 1935]. Literary awards established in Europe, the U.S., and Latin America, with lists of the winners and contests and fellowships open." Booklist

Booklist 43:189 F 15 '47

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:218 Je '47 120w

LITTAUER, VLADIMIR STANISLAS. Be a better horseman; an il. guide to the enjoyment of modern riding; with 230 phot. by Bert Clark Thayer. 251p $7.50 Essential bks.

798.2 Horsemanship

Reissue of a book first published in a limited edition in 1941. In question and answer form, following an imaginary pupil and teachers thru a course of instruction, the author discusses problems arising in hacking, schooling, and hunting.

"Inevitably the dialogue seems a bit 'contrived'—as the dramatic critics like to say—and there is a tendency to be long-winded. But, after all, Captain Littauer is no Plato. And there is no doubt that he knows his business. Photographs by Mr. Thayer illustrate every step of the process, and Mr. Thayer also knows his business." H. I. Brock

+ N Y Times p29 My 25 '47 110w

New Yorker 22:98 D 21 '46 90w

LITTLE, CONSTANCE, and LITTLE, GWENYTH. Black goatee. 221p $2 Double-day 47-1626

Mystery story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p9 Mr 2 '47 40w

Kirkus 15:15 Ja 1 '47 70w

"Those Littles have had themselves a romp over the housing shortage, letting the quips and corpses fall where they may in a wacky offering that jells in spots." Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 Mr 16 '47 140w

"A farce comedy combined with an uncommonly baffling mystery. It may even help you to forget your own housing problems." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p34 F 23 '47 190w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p13 Mr 16 '47 40w

"Quaint."

Sat R of Lit 30:44 Mr 8 '47 40w

LIVEZEY, WILLIAM EDMUND. Mahan on sea power. 334p il maps $3.50 Univ. of Okla. press

B or 92 Mahan, Alfred Thayer. Sea power.

U.S.—History, Naval 47-2156

"An evaluation of Admiral Mahan's theories on sea power and its effect on history. Mahan made many converts among his fellow-Americans and his writings had a decisive influence on the naval philosophies of the late Kaiser and the Japanese expansionists. . . The author of this study disagrees with Mahan's theories at times, but he is more often pretty respectful." New Yorker

"A well-organized, clearly written book. But it cannot be said that he has introduced any significant advance or change in the previous understanding of his subject. The defect is not entirely attributable to Mr. Livezey. Mahan is, after all, no Homer Lea to be plucked from oblivion." E. E. Morison

+ Am Hist R 53:76 O '47 750w

"Author has done a splendid job of avoiding repetition. The style is clear and firm—only in one respect annoying. Constant reference to Mahan as the 'sea-power exponent,' or '... advocate,' or '... mentor,' etc., smells too much of the thesaurus. . . On the whole, this volume will be a welcomed addition to the library of anyone interested in America's imperialist expansion." J. A. Isely

+ Ann Am Acad 252:133 Jl '47 400w

Booklist 43:308 Je 1 '47

Reviewed by M. P. Sharp

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 My 18 '47 360w

"In the last chapter of the book, the author essays an appraisal of Mahan's concepts in the light of present-day developments. While interesting, his conclusions in general are not convincing, as he frequently ventures into matters beyond his abilities." F. L. Oliver

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 16 '47 750w

"The study of a great military theorist, especially when prepared with such skill, clarity and wealth of information, is invaluable in these decades of bitterly contesting ideologies and ambitions. Mr. Livezey has performed a service of real worth." P. S. Searles

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 Ag 3 '47 800w

"[Mr Livezey] tries to give us an analysis and chronicle at the same time—which may be an impossible task; and the situation becomes one requiring, in effect, that the reader be repeatedly briefed on Mahan's ideas, which have already been discussed in a cursory way, before he is allowed to watch Roosevelt and Senator Lodge at work. The result is all the more disappointing when one considers that the author has had access to a mine of unpublished letters and private papers of Roosevelt, Lodge, John Hay, McKinley, Mahan, and other public figures; and yet the book finds time for such trivia as the fact that Mahan 'used the notebook rather than the loose-leaf system for note-taking.' Mr. Livezey labors the chronicle and repeats the analysis, always with an array of impedimenta, such as footnotes referring to innumerable articles by persons living and dead, which seems somewhat more elaborate than the occasion demands." Joseph Horrell

+ N Y Times p21 Je 15 '47 750w.

New Yorker 23:115 Mr 22 '47 140w

"Lacking in previous writing on Mahan has been a clear, analysis of his fundamental doctrines and of their present validity, in view of the development of land transport, new weapons, and other vastly changed aspects of war. This Mr. Livezey has adequately supplied, particularly in his final chapter, 'Mahan Yesterday and Today.'" Allan Westcott

+ Pol Sci Q 62:455 S '47 700w

"The book is an excellent piece of unbiased critical writing as well as an accurate summation of all Mahan's concepts and theories. It is, in short, an interpretation as well as a critical appraisal, and as such fills a real need. The list of Mahan's writings, which is included, is complete and provides a useful guide for anyone who desires to follow at first hand the development of the Mahan theories. The bibliography, while large, is not exhaustive."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:175 Je '47 180w

LIVINGSTON, ARMSTRONG, and STEIN, JOHN G. The murdered and the missing. 242p $2.75 Stephen-Paul

364.9747 New York (city). Police department. Missing persons bureau. Crime and criminals—New York (city) 47-20477

The experiences of Captain John G. Stein in his career as patrolman, detective, and head of the Missing persons bureau. They are based on case material taken from the files of the Homicide squad and the Missing persons bureau.

LIVINGSTON, ARMSTRONG—Continued

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9
Je 1 '47 240w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p19 J1 27 '47 360w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher
San Francisco Chronicle p26 Je 8 '47
90w

"Good, factual account of M. P. B. functions, personalities, and case histories; occasionally over-dramatized but brimful of stranger-than-fiction yarns."

Sat R of Lit 30:30 Je 14 '47 50w

LIVINGSTONE, SIR RICHARD WINN. Some tasks for education. 98p $1.50 Oxford

370.1 Education. Teaching [47-18522]

Four lectures delivered at the University of Toronto in the autumn of 1945. In them the author discusses some modern problems and suggests means of solving them and the part education must play in the solution.

"The book itself is an infinite enrichment of contemporary thought. Like any other work of fine art, its potency is what it enables us to do for ourselves." Lucien Price

+ Atlantic 180:132 O '47 250w

School & Society 65:384 My 24 '47 20w

Springf'd Republican p10B S 28 '47
120w

"More than once the reader is reminded of the value of an intensive study of at least one subject, so as to learn 'the meaning of knowledge' and what precision and persistence is needed to attain it. . . . The lecture on 'Education and the Training of Character' vindicates Arnold as 'the greatest figure in English education' and the British boarding-school as 'hitherto the finest factory of citizenship in existence.' These and other opinions, all vividly and elegantly expressed, will not invariably command assent; but the whole discussion is stimulating and enlightening in a high degree."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p377 J1 26 '47
900w

LIWSCHITZ-GA, K. MICHAEL, and WHIPPLE, CLYDE COLBURN. Electric machinery. 2v 290:576p il v1 $4; v2 $6.50 Van Nostrand

621.313 Electric machinery 46-7430

"A textbook for undergraduate courses in electrical engineering. The author has discussed fundamental electrodynamic principles and then has demonstrated their applications to a-c and d-c motors and to transformers. A good deal of information is presented in the two volumes, and some of it should be of interest to the graduate engineer. The book is based on the author's three-volume work published originally in German between 1926 and 1934, but the material has been extensively revised to bring it up to date and adapt it for American use. There are worked examples and numerous problems at chapter ends." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 71:1129 S 1 '46 70w
N Y New Tech Bks 31:60 O '46

LLOYD, CHRISTOPHER. Lord Cochrane, seaman, radical, liberator. 222p il $4.50 Longmans

B or 92 Dundonald, Thomas Cochrane, 10th earl of A47-34

Biography of Thomas Cochrane, Earl of Dundonald, who began his career as a frigate captain in the English navy. He later earned the title of "the sea wolf" for his service in the British navy, and his services in Chile, Brazil, Peru and Greece. As a radical M.P. he was a supporter of the cause of reform, and as an inventor he pioneered in the field of chemical warfare. Bibliography. Index.

"Mr. Lloyd gives us a plain, objective story. He is brisk and to the point. He sums up impartially, and neither glosses over his hero's weaknesses nor allows his sympathies to influence his estimate of Cochrane's enemies. . . . The battle pictures are stirring without being confused; and the complexities of Cochrane's nature are well brought out." Eric Forbes-Boyd

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 J1 26
'47 800w

"Mr. Christopher Lloyd has written with elegance and good sense. . . . Erratic, ingenious (the inventor, for example, of the smoke screen), and impulsive, Cochrane is an odd and interesting historical character, though not an important one; and he deserves the competent biography Mr. Lloyd has given him." A. J. P. T.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Je 17 '47
250w

"Mr. Lloyd's short biography gives an admirably clear and impartial account of the remarkable vicissitudes in the life of this roving sea-captain." Ralph Partridge

+ New Statesman & Nation 34:114 Ag 9
'47 950w

Times [London] Lit Sup p388 Ag 2 '47
1100w

LLOYD, CHRISTOPHER. Pacific horizons; the exploration of the Pacific before Captain Cook. 188p il maps $3 Macmillan

990 Oceania—Discovery and exploration. Pacific ocean [46-8139]

"The author, an Englishman who has spent much time at this kind of thing, tells the story of the Pacific's early explorers—the men before Cook who set the problems Cook so brilliantly solved. Illustrated with plates from old maps, the book supplies a fascinating background for modern reading about the Pacific." San Francisco Chronicle

"Though he adds little if any new detail to the history of Pacific explorations, Mr. Lloyd retells an ageless story with clarity, grasp and a fine determination to let epic facts speak for themselves. His quiet style is nicely suited for descriptions of awesome feats of endurance aboard wooden vessels so small and cranky that seafaring people of today would scarcely dare venture in them to drag for scallops on the Georges in midsummer. There are cross-references throughout the text which do much to enliven the flow of information and create a unified picture." E. B. Garside

+ N Y Times p30 Ja 11 '48 550w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 J1 24 '47
600w

LLOYD, JOHN ARTHUR THOMAS. Fyodor Dostoevsky. 324p $3.50 Scribner

B or 92 Dostoevskii, Fedor Mikhailovich

47-4243

A biography of the great Russian novelist which is also a psychological study. The author, an English scholar and author, stresses the fact that Dostoevsky's own life was very like the lives of the people in his novels. Index. First published (1912) under title: A Great Russian Realist (BVoook Review Digest, 1912).

Booklist 44:35 S 15 '47

Reviewed by Henry Rago

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 J1 6 '47
360w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 14 '47
110w

Reviewed by Anne Fremantle

Commonweal 46:148 My 23 '47 260w

Kirkus 15:113 F 15 '47 180w

"Very readable and rather thorough biography of Dostoevsky. Book does not fill a gap for there are enough good life stories of Dostoevsky around. However, since the enthusiasm for Lloyd's hero will hardly ever decrease, there would be ample justification to add this competent and appealing volume to the shelf of Dostoevsky literature which should be available in any good public or college library." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 72:459 Mr 15 '47 110w

Reviewed by Eleanor Clark
Nation 164:493 Ap 26 '47 900w

Reviewed by Ivan Roe
New Statesman & Nation 33:381 My 24 '47 300w

"The very impulse to defend Dostoevsky, the man, from his attackers has betrayed Mr. Lloyd; it has lured him into giving space to all the charges leveled against the novelist, and then into groping for justifications or explanations. The result is that we seem constantly to be seeing Dostoevsky at his worst or weakest. . . . Fortunately for his biographer, he was also a novelist, and his books, unlike his life, yield motives and patterns, submit to explanation. Some of the relationships between his life and his writings will probably remain forever obscure, but these pages do manage to make clear how he utilized [his own] profound-ly affecting experiences." Milton Rugoff

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12
Ap 20 '47 650w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn
N Y Times p4 Ap 6 '47 410w

"Mr. Lloyd's biography is worth reading, if for no other reason, because it does deal with materials which are of intrinsic value. As a story of the Russian novelist's life it is fairly comprehensive." A. F.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 My 18 '47
150w

Reviewed by D. S. Savage
Spec 178:562 My 16 '47 600w

Springf'd Union p3 S 16 '47 250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p478 S 20 '47
390w

Reviewed by E. J. Simmons
Yale R n s 36:762 summer '47 500w

LOBANOV-ROSTOVSKY, ANDREI. Russia and Europe, 1789-1825. 448p $5 Duke univ. press

947.07 Russia—Foreign relations 47-30958

"This volume gives the account of the important role played by Russia in the affairs of Europe during and after the crisis produced by the French Revolution and the Napoleonic era. . . . The part played by Russia in Europe has been dealt with mainly within the framework of general European histories. The object of this book is to give an over-all picture of the role of Russia during a crisis in European history which is strikingly similar to the great storm out of which the world is now emerging and to tell the story from the angle of Russia's action." (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by John Cournos
Commonweal 47:44 O 24 '47 1300w
Current Hist 13:293 N '47 70w

LOCKE, E. WYNTON. See Barnes-Austin, E. H. S.

LOCKRIDGE, FRANCES LOUISE (DAVIS) (MRS RICHARD LOCKRIDGE). Adopting a child [written] with the assistance of Sophie van S. Theis. 216p $3 Greenberg

362.73 Adoption 47-11003

"The author wrote this book with the assistance of New York's state Child Placing and Adoption Agency. It represents the point of view of the official social agency charged with protecting the child's interests and also that of persons who may consider becoming foster parents; moreover, to a rather remarkable degree it represents the point of view of the child." (Christian Century) An appendix contains a list of adoption agencies in the United States. Index.

Booklist 44:83 N 1 '47

"This book gives information, wise counsel and many detailed case records."

+ Christian Century 64:1303 O 29 '47 180w

Christian Science Monitor p4 N 22 '47
210w

Reviewed by H. G. Marchese
N Y Times p38 N 16 '47 320w

LOCKRIDGE, RICHARD, and LOCKRIDGE, MRS FRANCES LOUISE (DAVIS). Think of death. 272p $2.50 Lippincott

47-2226

Detective story.

Booklist 43:360 J1 15 '47

"The fact that the Lockridges have set this down with a delicacy and restraint not common in the sort nowise conceals its familiarity. And their delicacy does defeat itself in being so exceedingly fine spun that the proceedings seem a good share of the time to be running past in slow motion." James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ap 20 '47
320w

"Satisfactory."

+ Kirkus 15:46 Ja 15 '47 90w

"This lively item shows that when the Lockridges cut loose from the Norths they still do all right. Customers who are not too, too devoted to Pam and Jerry should be willing to settle for Ann and Marty, at least, temporarily." Will Cuppy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24
Mr 30 '47 210w

"The Lockridges have done it again, this time with a new cast of characters, all of whom are intimately involved in the plot. . . . Seldom have we read a detective story so expertly integrated or with characters so skillfully portrayed." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p36 Mr 30 '47 190w

"In spite of a neat plot, this story probably will be less satisfying to most readers than the light-hearted doings of the Norths."

New Yorker 23:112 Mr 29 '47 120w

"Full-bodied characters and a convincingly delicate sense of the impact of murder provide an object lesson in the revitalizing of a familiar situation." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ap 13 '47
120w

"Grade-A sleuthing."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:34 Mr 29 '47 50w

LOCKWOOD, MRS SARAH (MCNEIL). Fistful of stars. 335p $3 Appleton-Century

47-31413

The scene of this story is a mining and lumber town in northern Wisconsin in the 1880's. The chief characters are Lint MacVey, a young lumber man and his pretty, gently reared young wife Emily.

Booklist 44:69 O 15 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 O 26 '47
60w

"Good storytelling, convincing characterization—and a vigorous, robust sense of the times, the place, the people."

+ Kirkus 15:478 S 1 '47 210w

"An interesting story except when the novelist pulls all the emotional stops and pedals too hard." Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24
N 23 '47 90w

"This first novel is a happy combination of history, romance and character. Since the last ingredient is so rare in fiction nowadays, Miss Lockwood deserves special commendation." Judith Paige

N Y Times p28 N 23 '47 290w

Wis Lib Bul 43:153 N '47

LOEW, EDGAR ALLAN. Direct and alternating currents; theory and machinery. 3d ed 748p il $5 McGraw

621.313 Electric currents. Electric machinery 46-7829

New edition of a textbook first published in 1934 with a second edition in 1938 (Book Review Digest, 1934, 1938). "Thirty new pages of text and 17 new illustrations bring the subject matter up to date." (Booklist)

Booklist 43:135 Ja 1 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 71:981 Jl '46 70w

LOEWENGARD, HEIDI HUBERTA (FREYBE) (MARTHA ALBRAND, pseud). Whispering hill. 266p $2.50 Random house

47-3207

Portrait of a beautiful, proud, domineering woman, whose husband had first loved and then rejected her. After his death Norah Sedley devoted herself to their son, until the son fell in love with the daughter of the woman Norah's husband had loved. Then events took a more sinister turn.

Booklist 43:347 Jl 1 '47

"Poverty of soul, pressure creating pressure, the power of self-deception—good ingredients for a feminine novel with the pull of competent handling."

+ Kirkus 15:41 Ja 15 '47 180w

"Chief characters are well drawn. Story moves quickly, is entertaining and should appeal. Recommended." M. P. McKay

+ Library J 72:461 Mr 15 '47 80w

"'Whispering Hill' faces up to its implications, ending in tragedy for the very good reason that no other conclusion would be honest as fiction or defensible as art. Miss Albrand is a thorough craftsman and no apologist for her sex." George Conrad

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10
Je 29 '47 410w

"Provided you can accept the caprices of Mrs. Sedley's husband as plausible, along with the picture of a mother-dominated boy who suddenly asserts himself, Miss Albrand gives you more than your money's worth. She writes excitingly and reveals skill and craftsmanship in the simultaneous telling of two love affairs. Beyond that, she knows how to set a scene with deceptive tranquillity, how to bring doubt and suspense into the atmosphere, and gradually sharpen the tension toward a climax." Thelma Purtell

+ N Y Times p22 Je 15 '47 290w

LOEWENSTEIN, PRINCE HUBERTUS. The eagle and the cross. 280p $2.75 Macmillan

47-2842

Sequel to the author's The Lance of Longinus (Book Review Digest 1946). It is the story of an Irish prince, Marcius, who carries the holy spear of Longinus as a gift to the Emperor Tiberius, and with it the beginnings of the Christian gospel to Rome.

"Seeming anachronisms abound. . . Yet it is a colorful and ingenious tale written by one whose devout Roman Catholic convictions are never far beneath the surface of his narrative." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 64:926 Jl 30 '47 310w

"The story moves along smoothly and holds the interest, although one has the impression that the author's chief concern is with the setting and not with the characters in the story. Although the author is a Catholic there is no reason why other Christians should not enjoy this book as much as his co-religionists." + Kirkus 15:64 F 1 '47 190w

"Beautiful and flowery prose, but involved. Fine delineation of Roman life and customs. Will appeal to the deeply religious, especially during Lenten season." L. R. Etzkorn

+ Library J 72:529 Ap 1 '47 70w

"The author modernizes his antique world with talk of asphalt roads, shower baths, sleeping cars, a two-ocean navy and newspaper correspondents who write books on international affairs. If this is overdone, it may be just as well; it is easy to forget that every age is 'modern'—though seldom unique. A pleasant, easily read account of a distant time, told from a distinctly presumptive point of view. 'The Eagle and the Cross' will not disappoint those who have enjoyed the author's earlier stories." N. K. Burger

+ N Y Times p17 Je 29 '47 240w

Reviewed by Edith James
San Francisco Chronicle p11 Ag 31 '47
150w

"The objective of the book is spiritual significance, and something must be allowed for the necessities of making the religious experience of those days comprehensible to the modern reader. . . It might do for Rome of 1947, but for 1 A.D., no, no, Prince Hubertus. Before you write that threatened sequel you had better put in a little time looking into the manners, customs, and physical equipment of the world where your people live; otherwise your readers won't believe a word you say no matter how important it may be." Fletcher Pratt

+ Sat R of Lit 30:27 Jl 19 '47 500w

Wis Lib Bul 43:119 Jl '47

LOFTS, MRS NORAH (ROBINSON). Silver nutmeg. 368p $3 Doubleday

47-31097

Banda, an island in the Dutch East Indies, in 1656, is the scene. It was a time of great fortunes made by the Dutch merchants, and Dutch and English were struggling for the control of the islands. The story is of a wealthy Dutch merchant, his bride who was brought to him from Holland, and the part they played in a native uprising.

Reviewed by P. L. Adams
Atlantic 180:140 O '47 450w

Booklist 44:32 S 15 '47

Reviewed by Olive Carruthers
Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ag 31 '47
270w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 S '47

"Lots of color and drama and romance, but the pace slows down and the final impression is of solidly written, over-caparisoned yarn." + Kirkus 15:344 Jl 1 '47 260w

"Perfect for hot weather. Recommended for small library purchase." F. A. Boyle
+ Library J 72:1108 Ag '47 80w

"This novel has inventive richness; it is, in romantic idiom, entirely credible and for a long novel it is discreetly short." Harold Brighouse

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 30 '47
210w

"An unashamedly dramatic yarn. Against the current psycho-interpretations of history, 'Silver Nutmeg' seems almost brazenly easy to read. . . Miss Lofts keeps everything moving in orderly dramatic sequence to a climax of fireworks. But she never stints or cheats on characterization. Her actors are the good substantial figures who belong to romantic fiction. Since the book is built on facts its ending has the ring of truth rather than the sentimental illusion of perfect happiness." Isabelle Mallet

N Y Times p7 Ag 31 '47 550w

"In a foreword, the author confesses that she knows little or nothing of either the nutmeg trade or the East Indies; nobody, though, can accuse her of not knowing a great deal about the tastes of the lending libraries." New Yorker 23:66 Ag 30 '47 80w

"An engrossing story, the more exciting and colorful because it is fact, with only its personalities drawn from its author's imagination. As characters they lack the subtlety and delicacy of delineation which so distinguished Miss Lofts's previous book, 'Jassy,' but subtlety and understatement were perhaps crowded out in this book by its superabundant drama, its swiftness of action, and the complications of its plot. Hammock readers are cautioned herewith to tie themselves in, or they will tumble out from sheer excitement." S. H. Hay

+ Sat R of Lit 30:16 Ag 23 '47 700w

Reviewed by Kate O'Brien
Spec 179:348 S 12 '47 270w

Times [London] Lit Sup p449 S 6 '47
390w

LOGAN, ANDY. Fifth ave. See Stein, F.

LOGAN, MRS MILLA (ZENOVICH). Bring along laughter. 247p $2.50 Random house 818 47-561

Sketches of life in a Serbian family living in San Francisco early in the present century. Some of the episodes are reprinted from magazines. The author is one of the youngest members of the gay, heterogeneous group of homesick Dalmatians, Bosnians, Herzegovinians, and Montenegrins who made up this "family."

Booklist 43:182 F 15 '47

Bookmark 8:9 My '47

Reviewed by William Lipscomb

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Mr 2 '47
470w

Christian Science Monitor p11 F 21 '47
420w

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '47

+ Kirkus 14:570 N 1 '46 120w

"Good for restoring faith in 'the common man.' Recommended," L. R. Miller

+ Library J 72:74 Ja 1 '47 60w

"Mrs. Logan has exploited extraordinary material, but because of the slight exaggeration of her style, and her unwillingness to leave any of the teeming characters out, one feels jostled in the crowd. Even so, I felt warm and glad to be among these Serbian-Americans enjoying their funerals, so practical about their weddings, and so little needing anything but tradition to give them advice about their public and private lives, every family providing its own soap opera, every Grandma full of medical and other advice." Ernestine Evans
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14
F 2 '47 900w

"Milla Zenovich Logan's Serbians don't have the sweetness-and-light coating of Saroyan's Armenians or the quiet faith of Esther Forbes' Norwegians, but they are a good deal funnier." Joseph Wechsberg

N Y Times p37 Mr 2 '47 500w

"If you like simple, unaffected writing, and if you relish meeting, occasionally, groups of people of a kind you've never known before, then 'Bring Along Laughter' should please you very well on both counts." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 10 '47
700w

LOMAX, JOHN AVERY. Adventures of a ballad hunter; sketches by Ken Chamberlain. 302p $3.75 Macmillan

B or 92 Ballads, American 47-30155

"John Lomax is America's foremost ballad hunter. Where other men collect sheet music, books, prints or dollars, he has collected the living folksong, naked on the lips of the singer. He began gathering folksongs when he was a small boy, and I dare say he's still at it out there in Dallas, Tex., at the age of 80. Five books and phonograph records of 10,000 tunes preserve the songs he has picked up around chuck wagons, up hollers and down in river bottoms, on levee and railroad, in the saloons, churches, and penitentiaries of the South and Southwest. Now he has put down in another book his adventures while collecting these songs." (N Y Times) No index.

"With his son Alan to help, and with the incredibly beautiful singing of his famous convicts, Lead Belly, Iron Head, Clear Rock, and Lightnin', to prove his discoveries, this doughty Texan has done more than any other American to revive and preserve the folk music of this country. His is the saltiest, singiest autobiography of our time: its character and color, its dialect and melody, come straight from the heart of our people." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 179:146 Ap '47 800w

Booklist 43:222 Mr 15 '47

Christian Science Monitor p10 Mr 8
'47 600w

"Interesting and amusing material keep the book from being 'high brow,' and it is good reading for anyone attracted by regional American literature—and a good many others."

+ Kirkus 14:585 N 15 '46 160w

"The stories behind the songs he has found are important contributions to the appreciation of native balladry while the colorful personalities who sang for him make a memorable cast of characters in a book almost any reader will find fascinating. Highly recommended." G. D. McDonald

+ Library J 72:159 Ja 15 '47 100w

"John Lomax was born to listen—and to tell. Like one of the black boys who once sang to him, he has 'a dancing mind.' It knows at once the value in humor and wisdom of a song or a tale or a single monosyllabic riposte. This book is the story of his life. It is told as simply as a folk ballad. As one reads he knows the author. John Lomax has led a happy life, doing what he likes to do." Carl Carmer

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1
Mr 9 '47 650w

"One of the things I like about this book is its sincerity. Nothing in it tastes synthetic. These people really existed, said and did and sung these things. If anybody ever did, John Lomax really heard America singing." Horace Reynolds

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 2 '47 650w

"This book is the story of the years in which Lomax did his collecting, of how he found enthusiasm in many places, genuine support and specific help in others, people everywhere who were eager to contribute to his researches. It is a purposely high-lighted book that Mr. Lomax has written and it is the better for that." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 F 20 '47
900w

Reviewed by A. N. Williams

+ Sat R of Lit 30:17 Jl 19 '47 750w

"This is a vivid and appealing book of a colorful and fruitful life. It deserves reading for insight into an important form of expression of American ideas. It should be widely recommended to encourage others to complete and extend in their own communities the work begun by Lomax of collecting and preserving evidences of social history." W. G. Tyrrell

+ Social Educ 11:239 My '47 320w

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:149 Je '47 240w

Wis Lib Bul 43:81 My '47

LOMBARD, MRS HELEN CASSIN (CARUSI). While they fought. 322p $3 Scribner

975.3 Washington, D.C.—Social life and customs, Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 47-2267

"Behind the scenes in Washington, 1941-1946." (Subtitle) The author is a Washington newspaper woman, and a good many of her anecdotes are about prominent personalities in the capital during the war years.

"Helen Lombard, says the book jacket, 'sweeps back the curtain around Washington in wartime and discloses what could not be told before.' Well, maybe. . . There is the frequency of misspelled names. It's hard to give credit for an all out effort for accuracy when one finds such names as those of the President's personal physician, the head of the WAC and a film star among the several spelled incorrectly. Maybe it would have been better all around if Miss Lombard had let that curtain alone." Thomas Daffron

— Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Ap 27 '47
230w

"Nearly all the stories are discreditable and nearly all are undocumented. Miss Lombard has an aptitude for malicious innuendo . . . but the book is fairly harmless until the end, when she makes some grave, and also undocumented, charges against the Roosevelt administration and the War Department. If she really thinks that these stories are true, they hardly belong in so irresponsible and frivolous a book."

LOMBARD, HELEN CASSIN—Continued

— New Yorker 23:107 Ap 5 '47 120w

— San Francisco Chronicle p24 Je 8 '47 100w

LONG, AMELIA REYNOLDS. Murder by magic. 252p $2 Phoenix

47-15793

Detective story.

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p34 F 16 '47 150w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher
San Francisco Chronicle p20 F 16 '47 50w

"Detective takes unconscionably long time to spot glaring clue to spiritualistic didos. Submerged coffin business rather casually handled. Finish limp."

— Sat R of Lit 30:42 F 15 '47 50w

LONG, MRS EULA LEE (KENNEDY). Far-away holiday; il. by [the author]. 63p $2 Morrow

47-31098

Story of a little Mexican girl who wanted to be helpful and made a bad mistake with her first salad. In the making of a flower wand to carry in the fiesta procession she was more successful. For first to third grades.

Booklist 44:38 S 15 '47

Reviewed by Martha King
Chicago Sun, Book Week p6 S 14 '47 70w

Commonweal 47:157 N 21 '47 60w

Kirkus 15:466 S 1 '47 120w

"A splendid story for younger children to acquaint them with Mexican child life; valuable especially because of its easy-reading vocabulary and large, clear type. Recommended." Marian Webb

— Library J 72:1198 S 1 '47 70w

"This pretty little story of the ups and downs of a very little girl's ambition to be self-reliant will have much to show little North Americans how little girls in Mexico live, but it has also something to show parents." M. L. Becker

— N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 O 12 '47 290w

"Little girls will like the familiarity of this simple, warm story. Its large, well-spaced type is easy to read and the black and white illustrations are an integral part of the book. And, too, the youngest reader will learn something of Mexico's customs." Phyllis Fenner

— N Y Times p35 S 7 '47 140w

Sat R of Lit 30:46 N 15 '47 20w

Springf'd Republican p14B N 2 '47 90w

Wis Lib Bul 43:133 O '47

LONG, MRS GABRIELLE MARGARET VERE (CAMPBELL). So evil my love, by Joseph Shearing [pseud.]. [Eng title: For her to see]. 270p $2.50 Harper

47-31024

A novel of suspense in which a missionary's widow visits a wealthy friend in London, and discovers a rich field of excitement in which blackmail, murder, and retribution figure.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p35 O 17 '47 320w

"Again a mystery novel with atmospheric amplification and elegance of execution."

— Kirkus 15:320 Je 15 '47 160w

"While the author's treatment of this famous British murder case of the 1800's is not up to the standard set in the superb and haunting Airing in a Closed Carriage, this is a skillful tale of malice and suspense." E. H.

— New Repub 117:33 O 20 '47 90w

"What has Joseph Shearing done but cook up a truly splendid criminal romance out of the Roushhead masterpiece, 'Malice Domestic, or the Balham Mystery,' embroidering it at all points right up to a conclusion more suitable for fiction than the real life account provided." Will Cuppy

— N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p17 S 21 '47 140w

Reviewed by Florence Crowther
N Y Times p14 D 14 '47 500w

"Excellent suspense stuff, done with typical Shearing care."

— New Yorker 23:107 S 20 '47 120w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p13 S 21 '47 100w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p14 O 9 '47 850w

"Brilliant."

— Sat R of Lit 30:32 S 20 '47 40w

LONG, JULIUS. Keep the coffins coming. 214p $2 Messner

47-18595

Mystery story.

"More or less palpitating pulp."

Kirkus 15:46 Ja 15 '47 90w

"It is going to be an awful bore cleaning up after all those messy killings. Ho hum!" Isaac Anderson

— N Y Times p25 Ap 6 '47 140w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher
San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ap 15 '47 90w

Sat R of Lit 30:46 Je 21 '47 40w

LONG, MANNING. Dull thud. 222p $2.50 Duell

47-30556

Detective story.

Kirkus 15:228 Ap 15 '47 100w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20 Ap 20 '47 100w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p30 My 11 '47 140w

"All right for those who like conversational and brisk jobs."

New Yorker 23:115 Ap 19 '47 80w

"There are many mystery-mongers whom I highly esteem for various weighty reasons; but there are few indeed who are more sheer fun to read than the brusquely ironic Manning Long." Anthony Boucher

— San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ap 20 '47 100w

"Good fun."

— Sat R of Lit 30:30 Je 14 '47 50w

LONGSTREET, STEPHEN. Three days. 265p $2.75 Messner

47-16773

The three days were the days when the battle of Gettysburg was being fought. The story is told as a series of personal events and human emotions, of the people both military and civilian, who were involved in the battle.

"The idea is good, but the author destroyed much of its effectiveness by crowding his pages with too many people. Many of them appear briefly for a page or two, and either get killed or speak their lines and disappear. . . . On the merit side, the book has some finely written passages. The descriptions of wounds, filth, food and death are done with gusty realism. In general the discussion of the battle conforms to standards of historical accuracy and reflects careful research." T. H. Williams

— Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Mr 23 '47 230w

"Some of the incidents emerge as effective vignettes; the curt, candid style is trying in some of the others. A disappointing book for those who expect a good story from Stephen Longstreet, or who are keyed up by the advertising."

Kirkus 15:38 Ja 15 '47 170w

"Often raw and brutal, frequently marred by high-flown passages which seem out of place, it has moments of pathos and beauty. Many will be acutely conscious of the lack of plot and a unified cast of characters." J. W. Rogers
+ — Library J 72:388 Mr 1 '47 80w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p28
My 11 '47 160w

"For all his candid-cameras and his few occasional glimpses of sharp note, Mr. Longstreet has failed to bring the battle into meaningful focus. And he has offered but meager comprehension of what people actually did. That is because he is not only forever losing his characters in the rush but he is swaddling them heavily in rhetoric when he grabs them for a momentary look. And, although he admits to emotions and prejudices of his own, he seems to be purposely partisan in his presumptively 'objective' view. His persistently contemptuous descriptions of 'the Rebels' as a mangy, looting horde sound strongly of predisposition, and his ridicule of Gen. Harry Heth, a distinguished and able Confederate officer, does no credit to his boasted scholarship." Bosley Crowther

— N Y Times p35 Ap 13 '47 700w

New Yorker 23:117 Mr 15 '47 80w

"If you are interested in the Civil War at all, you'll enjoy 'Three Days,' even though it never does wrap up its scattered parts into an integrated whole. The characters, with the exception of those lifted from history—Lee, Meade, Hampton et al—have as little conscious end or motivation as the ants on the burning log in 'A Farewell to Arms.'" Edward McQuade

San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ap 6 '47
850w

LONGSTRETH, THOMAS MORRIS. Hide-out.
233p $2.50 Macmillan

47-6454

Adventures of a young lad, Reuben Downs, in Concord in the 1840s, the days when the railroads were first proving themselves serious competitors of the stage-coach. Among the characters John and Henry Thoreau are prominent figures, while Daniel Webster, Emerson and Hawthorne are in the background.

Booklist 44:156 D 15 '47

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold

Christian Science Monitor p16 D 18
'47 210w

"Mr. Longstreth has never written a better book than this in which he recreates vividly the pattern of life in Concord, Massachusetts, one hundred years ago. . . But Morris Longstreth has done more than write a good story, for he introduces the Emerson household and the Thoreau family, especially the two sons John and Henry, who have shown true friendship to a lonely boy, in a series of warm and realistic pictures that reveal their human, lovable side. He has given young people a real sense of the period." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 24:40 Ja '48 160w

Kirkus 15:431 Ag 15 '47 170w

"Well written, colorful adventure story. . . Exciting moments abound, but somehow they fail to add up to an exciting book." M. B. Snow

+ — Library J 72:1786 D 15 '47 60w

"An interesting story with a good historical background."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:61 N 15 '47 90w

LOOK (periodical). Abe Lincoln and his times, 1809-1865 [pictures and text] by the editors of Look and Enid La Monte Meadowcroft. (Look picture bk) 89p il maps $2.50 Crowell
B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham—Juvenile literature 47-30009

A collection of photographs and drawings, many of them made in Lincoln's lifetime, illustrating his life and times. The pictures are connected with simple text. For grades four to eight.

Booklist 43:158 Ja 15 '47

Reviewed by Martha King

Chicago Sun Book Week p16 F 9 '47
90w

"The pictures are well selected to cover the different periods of Lincoln's life but the reproduction is poor. 'Abe Lincoln and His Times' can be used as supplementary material." A. T. Eaton

Christian Science Monitor p13 Ap 24
'47 180w

Kirkus 14:613 D 1 '46 160w

"The text is brief and simply worded; in general the book will be useful not only in the home circle but to schools." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9
D 22 '46 90w

"Well reproduced in good size and with every detail sharply clear, [the pictures] are quaint, amusing and remarkably informative. Customs and costumes of a bygone day and the settings of daily living are always of interest to inquiring children. . . The accompanying text, somewhat in the style of an old-fashioned school reader, is a little out of key with the spirited pictorial matter. However, it does present the essential facts, it is kept to a minimum and it is easy reading." N. B. Baker

+ — N Y Times p4 N 10 '46 140w

LOOK (periodical). It's fun to look and feel your best. (Look picture bk) 95p pa $1.25
Watts, F.

646.7 Beauty, Personal Med47-1052

"A handbook in pictures, charts and text for women who want to be happier and more attractive—adapted from articles appearing in Look magazine, by the editors of Look." Booklist

Booklist 43:208 Mr 1 '47

San Francisco Chronicle p14 F 23 '47
40w

LOOK (periodical). Look at America: New England [prepared] in collaboration with Mary Ellen Chase: one of the Look at America regional volumes. 393p $5 Houghton

917.4 New England—Description and travel

"A handbook in pictures, maps and text for the vacationist, the traveler and the stay-at-home." (Subtitle) Index.

Booklist 43:328 Je 15 '47

Kirkus 15:362 Jl 1 '47 50w

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8
Ag 10 '47 380w

Reviewed by Lewis Nichols

N Y Times p6 Jl 13 '47 820w

"Like the others in the series, this volume is a treasure-house of pictures (color and black and white photographs) and condensed text and captions. Naturally no single book can get everything in; but these volumes in the 'Look at America' series succeed in high lighting the regions they cover and doing this with surprising success. . . It is for the Introduction and the fine photographs that the book will be cherished by many a New Englander far from home."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Je 2 '47
650w

"The book is filled with one of the finest collections of photographs—both black-and-white and natural color—ever assembled of the New England region. It is not weighted down with heavy, detailed text. The words are brief, and simply descriptive information on some of New England's more popular resort areas." L. F. Morris

+ Sat R of Lit 30:24 Ag 16 '47 310w

Springf'd Union p4 S 5 '47 180w

Wis Lib Bul 43:96 Je '47

LOOK (periodical). Look at America: the central Northwest; in collaboration with Wallace Stegner. 393p il $5 Houghton

917.8 West—Description and travel

This "handbook in pictures, maps and text for the vacationist, the traveler and the stay-at-home" covers Idaho, Montana, North and South Dakota, Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado, Wyoming, Utah, and Nevada. Similar in format to others in this series. Index.

Booklist 44:49 O 1 '47

"Highly recommended where picture material is needed." Margaret Ward

+ Library J 72:1383 O 1 '47 90w

"The photography is superb and well chosen, and if I quarrel with the occasional use of heavy filters which distort our Western light, creating black skies and Hollywood clouds, I must be out of step with the times, because everybody seems to go in for it. In his intuitive introduction Mr. Stegner gives at once a personalized and broad statement of what this part of the West is about." T. H. Ferril

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p19 O 5 '47 450w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 20 '47 450w

Wis Lib Bul 43:152 N '47

LOOK (periodical). Look at America: the Midwest [prepared] in collaboration with Louis Bromfield. 392p il $5 Houghton

917.7 Mississippi valley—Description and travel. Ohio valley—Description and travel

"A handbook in pictures, maps and text for the vacationist, the traveler and the stay-at-home." (Subtitle) The states covered are Michigan, Indiana, Ohio, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, Illinois, and Missouri. Contains a list of annual events in the Midwest. Index.

Booklist 44:171 Ja 1 '48

Reviewed by John Drury

Chicago Sun Book Week p6A D 3 '47 250w

"Many excellent photographs, some beautifully colored. While not intended for children, text is not difficult, and book will be very useful in children's collections and schoolrooms, since interesting material on this section of the country is very scarce." E. E. Frank

+ Library J 73:50 Ja 1 '48 70w

"If pictures can truly tell a story, do more than suggest it, these assembled from the pages of 'Look' tell the Mid-West's tale, and if words can truly collaborate with pictures, Louis Bromfield has succeeded. Bromfield knows the Mid-West and feels it and can express its spirit and variety and depth and scope: the Mid-West is his fiber and blood and the meat he feeds on when he is good; and his introductory over-all essay is as sound as the color-photos which adorn it." E. B. Davis

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 D 14 '47 340w

Wis Lib Bul 43:152 N '47

LOOK (periodical). Look at America: the South; in collaboration with David L. Cohn. 393p il $5 Houghton

917.5 South—Description and travel

"Covers the southern and south Atlantic states from Virginia to Louisiana and is uniform in format and make up with the other volumes in the series. Includes short list of cities and towns, with population, and a recreational directory of each state." Booklist

Booklist 44:49 O 1 '47

Kirkus 15:499 S 1 '47 90w

"The whole volume suffers from a lack of imagination and a timid and conventional approach. . . By contrast, a few arresting photographs stand out in the collection. Pete Martin's photographs of cotton workers and Joe Clark's photographs of mountain people are done with skill." Coleman Rosenberger

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22 N 9 '47 550w

"Local patriots will, in some cases, deplore the omission of a local shrine, the slighting of a local tradition—and a few errors have crept in. . . But such minor boners are few and are, perhaps, the inevitable result of the absentee editing of a regional volume. Here is certainly a generous sampling of a sprawling, diverse and appealing section of our country." N. K. Burger

+ N Y Times p18 O 26 '47 700w

"As in all volumes of this series the coverage, while it doesn't pretend to be complete, is intelligently high lighted, and unless the visitor to the South wants minutely detailed information (which the WPA State guides will furnish), this is the kind of book from which to plan a trip and with which to take it." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 S 30 '47 700w

"If the only reason for this book were to print David Cohn's introductory essay publication would be entirely justified. Mr. Cohn succeeds in being a loyal native son, an objective appraiser, and an urban, charming, and amusing writer all at the same time. The late Blondin's stroll on a wire strung above Niagara Falls seems casual in comparison. This essay should be read and weighted by every reader who sincerely desires to understand the South. As for the volume itself, it is a handsome and not very useful picture guidebook." Carl Carmer

+ Sat R of Lit 30:28 O 18 '47 260w

LOOK (periodical). Look at America: the Southwest. 393p il $5 Houghton

917.8 Southwest—Description and travel

A book of photographs and some text, about the American Southwest by "The Editors of Look in collaboration with Paul Horgan, widely known Southwest writer who has checked the text for accuracy and provided an introduction to the volume. Guide book and picture book in one, it contains hundreds of admirable photographs of the region, together with maps, suggestions on what to see, and condensed blocks of text in which is supplied, by sections, an adequate chunk of general information. An appendix provides further detailed listings of cities and towns, information on recreational areas, a calendar of events and so on." (San Francisco Chronicle) Index.

Booklist 43:253 Ap 15 '47

Kirkus 15:362 Jl 1 '47 50w

"The text, written admittedly for the traveler, reads like a travel folder and is of secondary value to the excellent photographs. Not a first purchase for small collections, but useful where picture material is needed." Margaret Ward

Library J 72:647 Ap 15 '47 70w

"The book is mostly pictures, as might be expected from its sponsorship, and there are some striking ones. . . There is just enough text to tie down the pictures; and most of it has a glib, documentary character, the words marching in orderly fashion off into the sunset. This general effect, however, is somewhat relieved by a gentle, human introduction by Paul Horgan, one of the most perceptive and least strident of this region's historians." Max Baird

N Y Times p26 Ap 27 '47 550w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Mr 19 '47 600w

Wis Lib Bul 43:66 Ap '47

LOOK (periodical). Oil for victory; the story of petroleum in war and peace. (Whittlesey house publication) 287p il $3.50 McGraw

338.476655 Petroleum industry and trade. World war, 1939-1945—Transportation

47-39

Story of oil in war and peace, told in text and pictures, with stress upon the work of the men who met the need for oil in World war II. Index.

Booklist 43:164 F 1 '47

Bookmark 8:6 My '47

"Largely pictorial—but with a surprising number of facts and figures—the book presents an accurate and moving account of the story behind the problems of oil transportation, research and development of new products, and industrial expansion." J. F. Cosgrave

+ Chem Eng 54:295 Ap '47 200w

Foreign Affairs 26:225 O '47 30w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:390 Mr 1 '47 60w

"This is a brisk story of the oil industry's share in winning the war, enlivened by an excellent selection and intelligent arrangement of pictures." L. L. Engelking

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p19 F 2 '47 700w

Reviewed by Ruth Teiser

San Francisco Chronicle p22 Mr 30 '47 250w

Springf'd Union p4 Ap 3 '47 150w

LOOK (periodical). Story of the FBI; with an intro. by J. Edgar Hoover. 286p $3.75 Dutton 351.74 U.S. Federal bureau of investigation. Criminal investigation 47-2218

"The official picture history of the Federal bureau of investigation." (Subtitle) The subjects covered are the training of candidates for the position of G-man; the reenactment of some famous cases broken by the FBI; and the work of the FBI during the war. Index.

Booklist 43:268 My 1 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 My 18 '47 110w

Kirkus 15:27 Ja 1 '47 160w

"Most of the text in this book is a rehash of cases familiar to every newspaper reader who feels there is enough blood and thunder in real life without going to fiction writers for it. Such readers may find more interest in the chapters devoted to the careful selection and training of the F.B.I.s special agents and in the account of the organization's war-time work as protector of internal security." Edward Angly

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 My 18 '47 1200w

"The story is Rover Boyish and gives a completely non-critical biography."

— New Yorker 23:107 My 24 '47 50w

Reviewed by Paul Speegle

San Francisco Chronicle p23 My 25 '47 190w

LORAC, E. C. R., pseud. See Rivett, E. C.

LORCA, FEDERICO GARCIA. See Garcia Lorca, F.

LORD, DAVID. The ravager. 258p $3 Fell 47-2410

"[This novel] is about love and death and cruelty in the lives of Mexican villagers, and a bandit who is sometimes the instrument, sometimes the victim, of all three." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

"Mr. Lord is overfond of his repetitive rhythms, but the narrative is robust and moving." Lisle Bell

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22 Ap 20 '47 190w

Springf'd Republican p10B Ja 4 '48 70w

LORD, RUSSELL. Wallaces of Iowa. (Life-in-America ser) 615p il $5 Houghton 920 Wallace family 47-1788

"In outward form this is a chronicle of the three Wallaces—Uncle Henry, founder of what became Wallace's Farmer; Harry Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture under Harding and Coolidge; and the controversial Henry Wallace of our day. But actually the book is much more than this. It is a story of the development of the Middle West from 1870 to the present day, and of the dirt farmers, editors, preachers, agricultural-college experts, and legislators who molded country life in that area. It is the history of agriculture's long fight for fair treatment in a nation increasingly dominated by urban industrialism; a fight which began with the Grangers and Populists, ran down through the McNary-Haugen crusade and achieved victory in the New Deal measures." (N Y Times) Index.

"A well-written, informative book. . . Although The Wallaces of Iowa is a far better book than Frank Kingdon's An Uncommon Man: Henry Wallace and 60 Million Jobs, it lacks the warmth and insight that only unrestricted access to personal correspondence can afford. The complete and truly meaningful story of the Wallace family can be written only when personal letter files are open to researchers." Walter Johnson

+ — Am Hist R 53:187 O '47 400w

Reviewed by J. G. Kerwin

Am Pol Sci R 41:1019 O '47 600w

Booklist 43:254 Ap 15 '47

Reviewed by James Hearst

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Mr 30 '47 700w

Christian Science Monitor p16 Mr 29 '47 650w

Current Hist 12:582 Je '47 70w

"Fortunately, the author doesn't put [the Wallaces] on a pedestal. He paints them human, with the foibles and weaknesses of human beings and never does he attempt to glorify them at the expense of truth. The Wallaces of Iowa is a story that is important in America, during this past three generations, and is an excellent, and, at times, thrilling history of the men who have played such an important part in our success of achievement."

+ Kirkus 15:213 Ap 1 '47 170w

Library J 72:321 F 15 '47 40w

"Russell Lord's book on the Wallace family is also a rich narrative of American agriculture over the last seventy years, a fascinating account of an era in which American farmers have struggled to make their adjustment to a swiftly growing industrialism. This is perhaps its most important contribution. It is a big book, smoothly and ably written, crowded with story and anecdote, and peopled with the men and women who have made modern American farm life." P. A. Waring

+ Nation 164:491 Ap 26 '47 800w

"Although the narrative is sympathetic, it is written with detachment and the reader comes to understand that mixture of high respect and occasional exasperation with which Franklin Roosevelt—who played politics by ear—regarded his non-smoking, teetotal Vice President, who sometimes seemed politically tone-deaf." R. L. Strout

+ New Repub 116:33 Mr 24 '47 1300w

"Mr. Lord has handled his thorny problem with skill and prudence. He is friendly to the Wallaces, but his friendship is no blind adulation; it is based on definite reasons which he explains clearly. If the reasons do not appeal to the reader, he is at liberty to reject them and form a different opinion of his own. In any event, he has the facts set out in vigorous yet temperate language, stripped of rhetorical ornament yet at times attaining an impressive eloquence." G. W. Johnson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 Mr 23 '47 1800w

"Mr. Lord has written a book as important as it is absorbing." Allan Nevins

+ N Y Times p1 Mr 23 '47 1650w

"Around the story of these three lives, the author, a friend and co-worker of the present Henry Wallace, has written a history of American agriculture during the last hundred years. An objective and admirably correlated book."

+ New Yorker 23:105 Ap 5 '47 120w

Reviewed by J. D. Black

Pol Sci Q 62:613 D '47 800w

LORD, RUSSELL—Continued

"Sometimes tedious, occasionally over-admiring, but always honest biography of a family that represents this country at its best." Merle Miller

Sat R of Lit 30:27 Ap 12 '47 1100w

Social Studies 38:282 O '47 500w

Reviewed by P. A. Waring
Survey G 36:360 Je '47 650w

Time 49:102 Mr 24 '47 700w

"Of value to students of agricultural history and agrarian politics, it will be of interest, also, to those interested only in good portraiture."

+ U S Quarterly BkI 3:260 S '47 220w

Wis Lib Bul 43:68 Ap '47

LORIMER, FRANK. Population of the Soviet Union: history and prospects. 289p maps $4 Columbia univ. press

312 Russia—Population

"This book presents a summary and analysis of the available data on population movements in the territory now known as the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. Aided by Dr. Myron K. Gordon, Dr. Lorimer has brought together the information available in the Russian language, as well as in English, and thus presents a comprehensive picture of the birth, migration and mortality movements which have enabled the greatest of the Slavic nations to dominate one sixth of the earth's surface, and the non-Slavic peoples living thereon. This picture of population movements is presented against a rich and skillfully drawn background of the basic economic, geographic and cultural factors which made possible the tremendous growth of Russian population from pre-Czarist to modern times." Pol Sci Q

"Dr. Lorimer's detailed meaty monograph on the population of the Soviet Union is particularly timely and significant. By a happy combination of selection and analysis of detailed figures available from past censuses and other sources, and bold, yet skillfully executed estimates and extrapolations from scanty data on changes and probable future trends, he succeeds in presenting a balanced comprehensive picture of the trends and structure of the population of the Soviet Union. . . The statistical and cartographic presentations are excellent. . . The Bibliography of five hundred and twelve items (mostly in Russian) should prove useful to all students of population changes and of the Soviet Union." C. D. Harris

+ Am J Soc 53:68 Jl '47 1950w

"Dr. Lorimer has done the English-speaking world a genuine service in bringing out this study on the population of the Soviet Union. It is a real contribution to the understanding of the position of the Union in the modern world. . . I regard this as a book of first importance, both because of the importance of the subject, and because of the excellence of the treatment. It maintains the high standard of scholarship we have come to expect of Dr. Lorimer. The League of Nations under whose general sponsorship it was undertaken, and the Office of Population Research at Princeton which was in immediate charge, are to be commended for having made this study possible." W. S. Thompson

+ Am Soc R 12:127 F '47 750w

Reviewed by N. S. Timasheff

+ Ann Am Acad 250:149 Mr '47 340w

Geog R 37:679 O '47 1350w

Reviewed by O. J. Frederiksen

J Pol Econ 55:368 Ag '47 750w

"In a period when the flood of sensational books on Russia has reached its crest, the appearance of a scholarly volume dealing with that country subjects that publication to the risk of inattention resulting from public craving for the more exciting styles to which it has been accustomed by earlier writers. It is to be hoped, however, that Dr. Lorimer's work does not suffer this fate since within its covers lies more fundamental information about the past, present and future of the Soviet Union than in a baker's dozen of hastily rewritten correspondents' or diplomats' diaries." Harry Schwartz

+ Pol Sci Q 62:126 Mr '47 800w

"Perhaps only those who have worked with Soviet statistics can fully appreciate the author's ingenuity and courage, his infinite patience and caution. The book is of great value not only as a contribution to our understanding of the Soviet Union and its population, but as a demonstration of methods and techniques that can transform a mass of incomplete, ambiguous, and contradictory data into a clear and scientific study of population. It should be made available to Soviet officials and statisticians to convince them of the need for full and honest reporting of available statistical material. It will be an indispensable aid to all members of the UNO, and should serve to stimulate higher standards of statistical reporting from all nations." Nadia Danilevsky and Alice Davis

+ Social Forces 25:347 Mr '47 2050w

"This substantial volume . . . is an admirable illustration of the achievements and the limitations of modern demographic science; and the limitations cast no slur on its utility once they are recognized and admitted, as they are by all scientific demographers. It also shows that demography can be quite as valuable to the historian as to the political or economic planner. While the sections of the work relating to 'prospects' cannot go beyond well-informed estimates of what will happen on various more or less plausible assumptions and enlightened guesses about the factors likely to shape developments, the historical sections make a real contribution to the understanding of the recent past."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p200 Ap 26 '47 2050w

LOUCHHEIM, MRS ALINE BERNSTEIN.

5000 years of art in western civilization; with an introd. by Francis Henry Taylor; and a foreword by Alfred M. Frankfurter, 199p il $4 Howell, Soskin

709 Art—History. Art—New York (city)

47-951

"Limiting herself to works of art housed in New York City and further, in good part, to those for which plates were already available, the managing editor of Art News defies criticism with this capsule of art from the Sumerians to Shahn. Accompanying the illustrations—some handsome, others so small as to be useless even as record—are a running historical account divided into the standard groupings and an almanac that starts with '3500 B.C.: Pre-Dynastic period in Egypt' and ends with '1946: Peace treaty meeting in Paris.'" (Theatre Arts) Index.

Booklist 43:220 Mr 15 '47

Bookmark 8:7 Mr '47

Commonweal 47:156 N 21 '47 50w

"Good volume for occasional or sustained reading." A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 72:889 Je 1 '47 70w

"Considering the extreme breadth of the material, Aline Louchheim has kept the text readable, and not incoherent in haste. It is a pioneering work in a field that will see great strides in selection and reproduction, and it is a superior New York guidebook which does not just catalogue art in the abstract but makes it a personal experience." W. G. Dooley

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 23 '47 700w

Reviewed by W. E. Parker

San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ap 13 '47 550w

School & Society 65:286 Ap 19 '47 20w

Spring'd Republican p5B S 14 '47 180w

Theatre Arts 31:80 Ap '47 120w

Wis Lib Bul 43:78 My '47

LOUGHLIN, DAVID CULBERSON. Helix. 242p $2.50 Harper

47-3824

A first novel. It tells the story of three men who took the S.S. Cape Harting on a wartime run from Staten Island to West Africa. They were Al Seligman, an old-timer who did not quite meet the requirements for his new assignment; Ed Greenwater, a lanky country boy with a natural aptitude for engines; and Jessup who could read a blueprint but could not always apply his knowledge.

"It is not a pleasant novel, but it is a compelling story, carefully and competently told. In it David Loughlin catches, better than all but a few writers before him, the feeling of fragile Man standing alone and afraid in a world he never made." Clinton Textor

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Je 22 '47 439w

"A certain brutal realism, a sensitive feel for machines and ships, this is for a conditioned, mechanically-minded male audience, still curious about specialized accounts of the war on the cargo front."

Kirkus 15:173 Mr 15 '47 170w

"A story as amusing as it is thematically important. Unhappily, Mr. Loughlin allows his theme to disintegrate in a series of flash-backs and excursions up and down the African coast, so that 'Helix' becomes a cross between 'The Hairy Ape' and Stevenson's 'Travels With a Donkey.' Even so, it is an extremely readable guide to the terrors of an engine room. If you have ever wondered what happens when a boiler loses its head of steam or the vacuum drops in the turbine, or why a ship will go faster in cold seas than in warm, 'Helix' will give you the answers. It is these momentous intricacies, rather than the sea itself, which confront the crew of the Cape Harting and make the book a witty allegory on the fallibility of the machine. At 26, Mr. Loughlin has written a first novel far above the average." David Dempsey

+ -- N Y Times p17 Je 29 '47 410w

New Yorker 23:79 My 31 '47 110w

"The story is well composed. . . It is only as fulsome in its excellent mechanical expositions as its characters make necessary, a proportion between actors and scene of action that can be mechanically described as a turbine-job in emotional power. Of them all, it is Jessup who most truly follows the spiral of the tale, with his superior officers showing irregular wakes as they diverge and converge upon his course; which makes it more exact to describe the story as the convolution of Jessup's ego. This first novel can be approved as fine engineering, in and on the main." J. R. H. Couse.

+ Sat R of Lit 30:39 Je 21 '47 450w

"Helix has color, imagination and technical savvy, plus a grandiose, elusive, Moby Dick-like theme."

+ Time 49:112 Je 9 '47 420w

LOUIS, JOE. My life story. 188p il $2.75 Duell B or 92 Boxing 47-30240

"After a brief sketch of his early life, most of the book is devoted to recollections of Louis' training and fights—with round by round accounts of the 23 he has fought to defend his title of World Heavyweight Champion. Reveals him as unassuming, extremely likable, giving plenty of credit to his trainers and others who helped him on his way to fame. Ends with plea for better racial understanding and cooperation." Library J

Booklist 43:271 My 1 '47

Kirkus 15:56 Ja 15 '47 170w

"Recommended." R. O. Bostwick

+ Library J 72:393 Mr 1 '47 100w

"Mr. Louis and his amanuenses have carried modesty a little too far. According to 'My Life Story,' Louis always was 'lucky' to win a fight—or knock out a man in the first round. . . It is usually 'we' who won a fight, not the hard fists and tremendous punching power of Louis himself. All the other clichés of word and deed are here in abundance, too. . . The reader constantly is awaiting a chapter, even a paragraph, that would reveal a little more of the man. They do not come."

— N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p36 My 11 '47 490w

"There is no question in the world that Joe Louis is a more interesting fellow than the book called 'My Life Story' would have you believe. I have read a good many 'autobiographies' of heavyweight boxing champions. They all managed at least to suggest a little something of the flavor, the individuality and the complexity of their heroes. Chester L. Washington and Haskell Cohen, the official haunters of the Louis manuscript, have kept it trite and unrevealing almost to the point of inanity." John Lardner

— N Y Times p33 Ap 13 '47 400w

"In spite of the fact that the author gives credit to two newspapermen for 'editorial aid,' the publisher says this autobiography is 'told in Louis' simple narrative form.' Well, it's simple, all right; there is hardly a passage that couldn't have been written by a reasonably well-informed sports writer assigned to ghost the story of Joe Louis. The appended album of photographs is more diverting."

New Yorker 23:99 Ap 26 '47 80w

Wis Lib Bul 43:81 My '47

LOVELACE, MAUD (HART) (MRS D. W. LOVELACE). Betsy was a junior; a Betsy-Tacy high school story; il, by Vera Neville. 248p $2.50 Crowell

47-11043

This latest story about Betsy, Tacy, and Tib finds them in their junior year in high school, concerned with sororities and boy friends. The time is the early 1900's. For girls of ten to fourteen.

Booklist 44:115 N 15 '47

Kirkus 15:468 S 1 '47 80w

"The story is well written, wholesome, and entertaining. Will be popular with girls ten to fourteen. Illustrated by Vera Neville." E. E. Frank

+ Library J 72:1115 Ag '47 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p32 N 16 '47 300w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p43 O 26 '47 190w

LOVERIDGE, ARTHUR. Tomorrow's a holiday (Kesho siku kuu). 278p il $3 Harper

B or 92 Naturalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Tanganyika territory—Description and travel 47-4259

A sequel to the author's Many Happy Days I've Squandered (Book Review Digest 1944). It describes two more safaris in Tanganyika Territory, the one-time German East Africa, between the two World wars. Map on endpapers. Index.

Kirkus 15:183 Mr 15 '47 120w

"To learn how an expert zoologist carries on his work in the field, one could scarcely choose a better book than this." J. P. Chapin

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Je 22 '47 550w

"As usual, his wild animals and reptiles are engaging personalities, written about with enthusiasm and integrity, by a naturalist who continually marvels because he is doing what he likes most in the world and is being paid for doing it." Eugene MacHamus

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ag 3 '47 110w

Wis Lib Bul 43:140 O '47

LOWER, ARTHUR REGINALD MARSDEN. Colony to nation; a history of Canada; with maps by T. W. McLean. 600p $5.50 Longmans 971 Canada—History

"Professor Lower (United College, Winnipeg), adds to the general history of Canada his interpretations of her political, economic and social problems through the years. Written in narrative style, historical fact is blended with comment and deductions to make an entertaining as well as instructive volume." (Current Hist) Index.

"The present reviewer, not a professional and expert historian, knows fairly well the public affairs of Canada for the last twenty-five years. He found it necessary to enter

LOWER, A. R. M.—Continued
certain caveats in his mind against the Lower interpretation of that period. His bet is, therefore, that in earlier periods, similar caveats would be entered by the expert. But, this having been said, there can be nothing but praise for the book, provided always that the reader is prepared to believe that another and contrasting interpretation of events may still be possible." G. V. Ferguson

+ — Ann Am Acad 253:202 S '47 420w

"Colony to Nation is hardly so much a history of Canada as a series of reflections upon the history of Canada; the element of commentary is more prominent than that of chronicle, and the author, though always ready to instruct is less anxious to inform. . . . This book has an impish quality which does not necessarily improve it as history but does make it good reading. . . . However, we must remark that this book is a pretty monumental piece of carelessness. Its style sometimes slips . . . it is sometimes careless in its use of sources . . . and it crawls with irritating typographical errors to the extent of being no credit to Canadian publishing. . . . Such slovenliness is an unnecessary and regrettable blemish on a useful and stimulating book which materially enriches the literature of Canadian history." C. P. Stacey

+ — Canadian Hist R 28:194 Je '47 1800w

+ Current Hist 13:34 Jl '47 50w

Reviewed by J. B. Brebner

Pol Sci Q 62:462 S '47 700w

LOWREY, MRS JANETTE (SEBRING). The bird; pictures by Carlos Mérida. 32p $2 Harper 47-31244

Story of a little bird who flies into an attic window, and has a series of adventures before he finally escapes from the house and the enemies within it, out into the blue sky, the sunshine, and the soft breezes of springtime.

"In this offering, the text really has distinction. From books of such caliber, children get impressions of vocabulary and style instead of a mere repetition of their own colloquial patterns. The illustrations by the Mexican artist, Carlos Mérida, are interesting and unusual." B. J. Thompson

+ Cath World 166:238 D '47 80w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 24:39 Ja '48 60w

Kirkus 15:547 O 1 '47 80w

"There is some fine writing and the illustrations have a simple distinction, but on the whole the story seems much ado about little. . . . Words and sentence structure are difficult for even eight- and nine-year-olds." M. B. Snow

+ — Library J 72:1474 O 15 '47 70w

"Pictures as bright and beautiful as these predispose an eight-year-old to read the story, in which he will find present entertainment and quite possibly future strength. For it is one of those tales that, without the direct attack of a fable, enter the mind through what happens to a single creature and linger there because it might happen, in other terms, to anybody like that." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 N 16 '47 290w

"There is here a flavor reminiscent of some of Anderson's tales but this is not an imitation, having a strength and richness of its own. Not all children of 5 to 8 will catch immediately its significant overtones, but they will respond to its high suspense and the color of its prose. Carlos Mérida, the Guatemalan artist, has provided illustrations which are a trifle droll for the spirit of the story, but pleasingly executed." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p13 D 28 '47 190w

"The story is for older children than its format implies. It is a beautifully worded little drama with a happy ending. The drawings, in black-and-white and in color, are interesting but are not quite in the spirit of the story."

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:54 N 15 '47 60w

LOWRIE, DRUCELLA. Standard book of sewing. (Halcyon House publication) 237p $2 Garden City pub. co.

646.4 Sewing 47-31157

Simple, detailed instructions designed for both the beginner and those experienced in sewing. Partial contents: Sewing equipment; Elementary sewing; Patterns; Fabrics; Dress-making; Dress decoration; Sewing for children; Simple tailoring; Re-styling and re-making; Sewing for the home. Index.

Booklist 44:63 O 15 '47

Spring'd Republican p10E N 16 '47 120w

LOWRY, MALCOLM. Under the volcano. 375p $3 Reynal

47-1776

Novel based upon the life of an ex-British consul. The action takes place in Mexico on a feast day. Geoffrey Firmin who is rapidly drinking himself into complete stupor, rouses himself enough to indulge in "remembrance of things past" when he discovers the return of his divorced wife and his half-brother, Hugh. But he is unable to combat the dark forces within himself. The first chapter takes place one year later than the main action.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks

Atlantic 179:144 My '47 420w

Reviewed by William Lipscomb

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Mr 16 '47 300w

"If Mr. Lowry would sieve out his style a bit, and prune the abandoned, brilliant image, I think he would not be just an 'interesting' author of promise, but an outstanding writer." Elizabeth Johnson

Commonweal 45:523 Mr 7 '47 450w

"Their casual, veiled conversations, wandering soul searchings, are high-lighted against the Mexican setting, and the effect, sometimes with a brilliance, is a delirium of phantoms. For sophisticates."

Kirkus 14:608 D 1 '46 180w

Reviewed by J. W. Rogers

Library J 72:320 F 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott

Manchester Guardian p3 S 12 '47 300w

"Whatever its weaknesses, 'Under the Volcano' has a vigor and impact that have been missing in home-grown British fiction for some time. Large, 'ambitious,' and immensely sad, marred by a specific failure of vision and at times by a more irritating subjectivity of treatment, the book would compel respect if only for its more than occasional skill and for the conglomerate wealth of perceptions that has gone into it. Luckily there is also a fine central perception to keep the book from falling apart." Eleanor Clark

+ — Nation 164:335 Mr 22 '47 1200w

Reviewed by George Mayberry

New Repub 116:35 F 24 '47 1000w

"[Mr. Lowry's] style is—one says it with all respect—out of Djuna Barnes by Henry James. As for method, he uses almost every technical device known to the experimental novel, and he uses them with great skill. The book has obviously been worked over and over with the most prolonged and loving care until every possibility of symbolism that situation and setting allow has been fully brought out. In the end, so much symbolism seems to come a little too pat; and, while it makes for an agonising concentration of the tragedy, together with the other factors of characterisation, style and method it makes also for an inescapable impression of pastiche." Walter Allen

+ — New Statesman & Nation 34:455 D 6 '47 650w

"One other novelist in this century, James Joyce, has brought into his fiction such primary experience. . . . It would be no service to Mr. Lowry to push the comparison further. He is a young man, and his very exuberance of style, the delight he takes in writing and has taken in the writing of others, points the difference between his talent and a talent that we contemplate as fully integrated and matured. . . . Mr. Lowry writes with superb vigor and dash and he creates, through his style no less than through his acute capacity for sensuous observation, a novel of opulent texture and consequently resonant meaning." Mark Schorer

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2
F 23 '47 1000w

"It is cause for rejoicing when one encounters a novel which achieves a rich variety of meaning on many levels, which is written in a style both virile and poetic, which possesses profundity of insight, which is, in short, literature. All this applies to 'Under the Volcano,' a book which ought to be read by everyone who can be moved by an honest and passionate approach to human experience. . . But these obscurities in an otherwise exciting and beautiful book are in themselves provocative of worthwhile discussion. 'Under the Volcano' may well be the best novel of the season." H. R. Hays

+ — N Y Times p5 F 23 '47 1000w

"Mr. Lowry is passionately in earnest about what he has to say concerning human hope and defeat, but for all his earnestness he has succeeded only in writing a rather good imitation of an important novel."

New Yorker 23:97 F 22 '47 100w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 F 24 '47
650w

"I have never before used the word in a review, and I am aware of the responsibility upon me in using it, but I am of the opinion, carefully considered, that 'Under the Volcano' is a work of genius. Ladies and gentlemen: this magnificent, tragic, compassionate, and beautiful book—and my neck." John Woodburn

+ Sat R of Lit 30:9 F 22 '47 1050w

"In spite of its many defects, I must testify that Under the Volcano, if not the most successful is certainly the most interesting, the most perceptive and the most promising novel it has fallen to my lot to review so far this year." D. S. Savage

+ — Spec 179:474 O 10 '47 300w

Time 49:114 F 24 '47 700w

"In spite of its theme, the last day in the life of a dipsomaniac, Mr. Lowry's book is neither morbid nor of minor significance. If there is morbidity here, it is akin to that of Elizabethan tragedy, born of an involved and passionate interest in the secrets of the fall of man. So strong is the light which the author directs upon his central character that the shadow it casts is one of tragic dimensions."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p477 S 20 '47
390w

Reviewed by Orville Prescott

Yale R n s 36:767 summer '47 460w

LOZIER, REINHARD VICTOR. Pointers for parents [drawings by Alice Rovinsky]. 141p $2 Lippincott

649.1 Children—Care and hygiene Med47-155

Simply written manual of child care, with its brief instructions plainly outlined so that the book can be easily consulted in an emergency. Considers such subjects as feeding, sleep, teeth, exercise and play, illness, and discipline. The author is a California pediatrician.

"The book is too sketchy to be very helpful to parents in solving their problems. As a sole book on child training in a home it would be useless; as one of a group of books on the subject it probably would not be consulted very often except for the very excellent chapter on teeth and the amusing and plentiful illustrations which appear throughout." K. M.

Canadian Forum 27:119 Ag '47 130w

"Simply written instructions make the book easy to read and easy to refer to when needed."

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p4 F 2 '47
50w

"Despite some sound health and developmental suggestions, there is much in this simplification of baby-childhood problems that will offend those upholding current ideas. Dr. Lozier is arbitrary when it comes to discipline, to punishment, to toilet and habit training, and on what in modern terms would be considered on the wrong side of the fence in his rigid adherence to perfect performance by certain ages, in his lack of recognition of differences in individuals, whether babies or children. Slightly in the Prussian school, and his scarehead leads make one sorry for the child raised by this book."

— + Kirkus 14:568 N 1 '46 90w

"Presents clear, simple answers for just about every child raising problem you might think of, including one or two which might never occur to you unless you read the book." Phyllis Liapes

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ja 19 '47
400w

School & Society 65:152 F 22 '47 20w

LUBBOCK, PERCY. Portrait of Edith Wharton. 249p $3 Appleton-Century

B or 92 Wharton, Edith Newbold (Jones)
47-31175

A study of the American novelist written by an English friend, which presents her mainly as she appeared to her European friends, and to Henry James and Howard Sturgis, two other American literary exiles. Index.

Reviewed by Ellery Sedgwick

Atlantic 180:170 N '47 360w

Booklist 44:49 O 1 '47

"To paint the portrait, Mr. Lubbock blends reminiscent sketches, written at his request by friends of Mrs. Wharton, and unifies the whole work with his own distinction; though, through the omission of quotation marks, he does not always make it quite clear who is doing the writing. . . Since her writings constitute the sunset of the genteel era and since she herself was every inch a genteel lady, the painter of her portrait was chosen well: Mr. Lubbock is every inch a cultured gentleman. His style is leisurely, rhythmic, suave." Robert Berkelman

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 O 21 '47
550w

"This volume is a highly personal, highly romanticized biography, built from personal reminiscences, letters to the author and so on. One gets an impression of oppressive gentility, wit and charm—of slow-motion Victorian elegance. And only rarely does a live personality come through—and never in rounded terms. The 'portrait of Edith Wharton' still needs to be done."

Kirkus 15:488 S 1 '47 150w

"Not an essential book for all libraries, but must not be missed by readers who loved The Reed or Paul Bourget's Disciple." K. T. Willis

Library J 72:1267 S 15 '47 140w

Manchester Guardian p3 O 7 '47 180w

"For caginess and omission this book is only equaled by André Gide's 'Journal,' and one is forced to remark that it is very hard indeed to see Mrs. Wharton clearly for all the profusion of politeness and good prose." Anthony Bower

Nation 165:508 N 8 '47 800w

"For Lubbock's part, he writes with an exquisite discretion that matches his fine, courteous style, and the resultant tone is one of awe mixed with a determination not to say any more than he has to, and to admit as little as possible on what he has to say. . . From the book, however, we gather not so much a deliberate qualification of this impression as hints that this is only a partial portrait." John Farrelly

+ — New Repub 117:31 S 29 '47 950w

"If we ask the question 'what impression would this book make on anyone who had not known Edith Wharton personally?' the answer seems to be: an unsympathetic character, efficient, domineering, mondaine, restless and stuck-up (if that be the right translation of collet monté) to the last degree. Of course, that was not Mr. Lubbock's intention; and in the last two chapters he includes references to Mrs. Wharton's charities and to her happy relations with younger people which are meant to set the balance right. But they didn't." Kenneth Clark

LUBBOCK, PERCY—Continued

New Statesman & Nation 34:394 N 15 '47 1000w

Reviewed by Lloyd Morris

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 S 28 '47 1500w

"Mr. Lubbock's portrait is ambivalent. Admiration and affection are spiced with malice, witty and deserved. . . Only once does pressure of strong resentment slip control and tear the fabric. In the chapter discussing Mrs. Wharton's services in World War I, Mr. Lubbock tries to maintain discrimination. But his attempt to play off the French critic, Charles du Bos, against Edith Wharton is false and he could hardly have intended that the second part of the chapter undermine, as it does, the first. Such blemishes are few in a book beautifully wrought, especially toward the end, where we watch time and grief not so much discipline as refine a remarkable spirit." W. B. C. Watkins

+ — N Y Times p3 O 5 '47 700w

"Will be read with fascination by anyone interested in its subject. It is the first important memoir of the novelist that has been published since her death; and it is a literary performance of some distinction—not the usual sketch by a friend, but a real portrait, carefully composed and with every brush stroke studied. . . But the American end of the story is largely left a blank. You cannot even see the port of New York . . . where Edith Wharton was born, which did as much to mold her mind as Europe . . . and which she so brilliantly reflected in her work." Edmund Wilson

+ — New Yorker 23:101 O 4 '47 1800w

"This book is exactly what its title states—no more, no less—and within its narrow limits as perfect a piece of writing as has been done in our decades. It is not a true biography; it is not a literary critique; it is a portrait of notable character and personality such as was written more often in the eighteenth century than today." H. S. Canby

+ Sat R of Lit 30:17 O 25 '47 1100w

"This is no 'made' biography, no mere record of events; it is something more, even, than a brilliant portrait of a brilliant and highly civilized woman. It is, in the fullest sense, a Book. Firm and shapely, it stands complete in itself: a work of art." V. Sackville-West

+ Spec 179:532 O 24 '47 900w

Times [London] Lit Sup p11 Ja 3 '48 800w

Wis Lib Bul 43:173 D '47

LUCAS, BARBARA. Anna Collett. 303p $2.75 Houghton

47-31176

The love story of an English farmer's wife and an Italian prisoner of war, who worked on the farm. They are both Catholics and eventually Anna realizes the impossibility of divorce and remarriage.

Kirkus 15:372 J1 15 '47 160w

Reviewed by Rayner Heppenstall

New Statesman & Nation 31:474 Je 29 '46 80w

"Fine and highly credible story of one Englishwoman in war time. . . Along with a close psychological study of Anna goes plenty of satisfyingly solid supporting material. . . Miss Lucas, like her uncle and her grandmother, writes extremely well." F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 S 28 '47 500w

"Miss Lucas, who is a niece of E. V. Lucas, and a granddaughter of Alice Meynell, writes with directness and simplicity. Her language, except for an occasional barbarism is plain and clean. But the crucial lifelessness of her story infects even this virtue, so that the simplicity seems flatness of language without flavor." A. S. M.

N Y Times p12 D 21 '47 700w

"The writing is banal; the love scenes read like excerpts from a novel by a solemn child."

— New Yorker 23:113 S 27 '47 80w

"Miss Lucas has a cool, sardonic style and a flair for the rendering of the actual, the war-time scene, encounters in pubs, hitch-hiking. Her minor characters are very good indeed, observed with perception and expressed with felicity. Only her heroine is wrong. . . For all its good qualities, [the novel] is soft at the centre with a false romanticism." Walter Allen

+ — Spec 179:98 J1 26 '46 130w

"Miss Lucas has a clever and colloquially sophisticated touch—the lighter decorations of the tale are often amusingly done—and there is a note of candour in the analysis of Anna's desperation of mind that does not lack effect. But the power of imaginative persuasion is absent. The depths of the novel, indeed, are shallower than they need or should have been."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p305 Je 29 '46 420w

LUCAS, CARY. Unfinished business. 244p $2 Simon & Schuster

47-4995

Kenneth Marsh went to Mexico to sell pumps and almost immediately found himself involved in a subversive plot against the Mexican government. His lovely Irish-Mexican secretary and the FBI got mixed up in it too, before Ken fought his way out.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p11 J1 20 '47 100w

Kirkus 15:294 Je 1 '47 90w

"A lovely Irish-Mexican girl, the FBI and a villain modeled on a cross between Pete. Lorre and Sidney Greenstreet are cleverly worked in to heighten the suspense. Fun for all." E. H.

+ New Repub 117:31 Ag 18 '47 60w

"Look for the strictly political whodunit any minute now. This is almost it." Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 J1 13 '47 140w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p27 J1 13 '47 150w

"A vivid, vigorous, solid novel packed with realism, excitement, acute perception and deft dialogue. Anybody in the market for what may prove to be the American Ambler?" Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p22 J1 13 '47 110w

Sat R of Lit 30:31 Ap 9 '47 40w

LUCAS, CURTIS. Third ward, Newark. 238p $2.50 Ziff-Davis

46-8619

"The author is motivated by a genuine awareness of social injustice, an acute sensitivity to the nuances of the bitter racial conflict in an industrial society. . . The Third Ward is the slum district relegated to the Negroes. Mr. Lucas has used the story of a young girl (blighted by her psychological reaction to the brutal murder of her childhood friend by a white man) and her patient, ambitious husband as a vehicle to carry his social indictment. They rise to happiness and fall to tragedy as a result of the continual struggle between white and black." N Y Times

"Mr. Lucas writes in anger and no doubt from good intentions, but so much drab violence is self-defeating as material for fiction." Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22 F 2 '47 140w

Reviewed by Frederick Brantley

N Y Times p16 D 15 '46 200w

LUCAS, MRS DIONE NARONA MARGARIS. Cordon Bleu cook book; drawings by Phoebe Nicol. 322p $3 Little

641.5 Cookery, French 47-1479

A manual of French cooking adapted to American materials. The author is a graduate of l'Ecole du Cordon Bleu in Paris, has her own school in London, and in 1942 came to New York to open a Cordon Bleu restaurant. Glossary. Index.

Booklist 44:7 S 1 '47

Reviewed by C. S. Hurley

J Home Econ 39:524 O '47 200w

Kirkus 15:21 Ja 1 '47 160w

"Mrs. Lucas is an extraordinarily skillful cook and a distinguished teacher, which makes it disappointing that this book is so pretentious. Her technique of cooking is faultless and she has much that is valuable to say about pastry making, omelettes, egg cookery in general, and many other fine dishes. Still, by refusing to consider, even occasionally, the excellence of simplicity, she proves herself a not wholly successful interpreter of French cuisine."

New Yorker 22:103 F 15 '47 130w

"Like all French cook books, this one goes all out for veal recipes and is strong on poultry and fish. The chapter on soups is particularly good, too, and the dessert section is almost worth the price of the book if only for its reminder that chocolate and rum are natural partners. But you'd better examine 'The Cordon Bleu Cook Book' for yourself if you're interested in fine cooking. You'll find, I believe, that it's the real thing, not one of those 'cute' books about food, of which there are far too many." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 F 4 '47 550w

LUCAS, ERIC. Voyage thirteen; il. by James L. Wells. 128p $2 Int. pubs.

47-3548

Two boys belonging to the United States maritime service, join the crew of the John Smith, an ammunition ship making her thirteenth voyage. Premonitions of danger are well borne out but in the end the ship returns home safely with the two young greenhorns developed into experienced and hardy seamen.

"Excellent writing."

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p6 My 25 '47 70w

"At times the incidents seem more forced than in Swamp Fox Brigade, but the writing is good enough to hold it up."

+ Kirkus 15:129 Mr 1 '47 160w

"Hair-raising adventure for the older boy who likes sea stories; good characterization of the various members of the crew, showing the effect of their personalities on Rusty's growing up. Recommended." Elizabeth Burr

+ Library J 72:895 Je 1 '47 90w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 My 25 '47 380w

Reviewed by Frances Smith

N Y Times p27 Je 15 '47 200w

Wis Lib Bul 43:101 Je '47

LUCAS, JANNETTE MAY. Big Brewster family; a story of Plymouth in 1623; il. by Mabel Betsy Hill. 165p $2 Lippincott

46-8273

Plymouth Colony in 1623 furnishes the background for this story for fourth and fifth grades. It is the story of Humility Cooper and Henry Sampson, both orphans, taken into the Brewster family.

Booklist 43:174 F 1 '47

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

Christian Science Monitor p12 My 27 '47 240w

"The names of the characters are nearly all historical and the impression of early Pilgrim days, made through incidents of daily living, with children having many duties, is a truthful one. By Humility's care for her one acre of land we feel the importance of the planting of the corn, five kernels to a hill, and realize the help rendered by friendly Indians. This is a good story of colonial days and the illustrations are in keeping with the time."

+ Horn Bk 23:115 Mr '47 100w

+ Kirkus 14:325 Ag 15 '46 90w

"Quiet, rather stiff story which would be useful historical background for children in fourth and fifth grades." Isabel McLaughlin

Library J 72:324 F 15 '47 70w

LUCAS, JASON. On bass fishing. 288p il $4 McBride

799.1758 Bass fishing

Agr47-326

Information and suggestions on how to "catch more bass in hard-fished water," by the angling editor of Sports Afield. No index.

Booklist 44:64 O 15 '47

Reviewed by Herman Foster

N Y Times p24 Ag 10 '47 250w

LUCAS, WILLIAM O. (WILLIAM VAN NARVIG, pseud). East of the iron curtain. 361p $3 Ziff-Davis

947.084 Russia—Politics and government

47-573

"This is an alarming book about the Soviet Union by a man of mixed parentage, now an American citizen, who was born, brought up, and spent over half of his life in Russia. He fought with the Russian armies during World War One and underwent the Russian Revolution. Since then he has made long visits to the country of his birth. Although his ostensible purpose is to explain the 'dual nature' (native good nature and maniacal xenophobia) of the Russian people, he obviously feels toward them about as Lord Vansittart does towards the Germans. In his view they are incurably hostile to the Western democratic world and any refusal by Western democrats to face this fact can lead only to disaster." Sat R of Lit

"If you want to become convinced that the civilized world is teetering on the brink of an abyss, with the Russian bear waiting for an opportunity to push it over read Van Narvik's book." F. S. Marquardt

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Ja 26 '47 130w

Christian Science Monitor p16 F 8 '47 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p5 Mr '47

Current Hist 12:237 Mr '47 100w

Foreign Affairs 25:703 Jl '47 50w

"It has become fashionable again for publishers to include one such book as this about Russia on their lists. Such a thoroughly unreliable work if written on any other subject could never have found its way into print. . . Definitely not recommended." Toby Cole

— Library J 71:1713 D 1 '46 110w

Reviewed by F. R. Dulles

— N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p27 Mr 23 '47 950w

"'East of the Iron Curtain' ought to be read by all Americans who, observing the more accommodating Soviet attitude at Lake Success, might be tempted prematurely to decide that harmony between Moscow and the democracies is just around the corner." E. A. Mowrer

Sat R of Lit 30:11 Ja 18 '47 1500w

LUCCOCK, HALFORD EDWARD, and BRENTANO, FRANCES, eds. Questing spirit; religion in the literature of our time; associate editors, Robert E. Luccock and Lowell Brentano. 717p $5 Coward-McCann

820.8 Religious literature—Collections. American literature—Collections. English literature—Collections 47-11182

An anthology of prose and poetry selected from the writings of 20th century British and American authors.

Booklist 44:102 N 15 '47

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 64:1522 D 10 '47 140w

"I was glad to see that Dr. Garrison included the volume in his list of selected books on religion for 1947. I apologize for not getting this review in before he had to send that list to press. But perhaps if it is twice said in these columns that the book is something extra special, and would have been worth its price even before inflation set in, more of those who would find it a dividend-producing investment will buy it." Paul Hutchinson

+ Christian Century 65:16 Ja 7 '48 500w

"Mechanically, the book is an admirable piece of work. . . . As far as content is concerned, the Catholic reader will find it hard to wax enthusiastic over 'The Questing Spirit'. Despite the inclusion of some half dozen Catholic authors, such as Chesterton, Belloc, Meynell and Kilmer, the general tone of the book is a widely 'liberal' one—and a vague sort of liberalism at that. To the reader who himself has firmly founded convictions, there is a pitiable lack in so many efforts to find a faith, with no other guide than one's personal feelings and emotions." L. J. Trese

Commonweal 47:180 N 28 '47 300w

Kirkus 15:572 O 1 '47 250w

"The well-chosen authors represent Jews, Protestants, Catholics and agnostics, the well-known and the obscure, the profound and the humorous. Recommended." L. R. Miller

+ Library J 72:1267 S 15 '47 130w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 N 16 '47 270w

LUDER, WILLIAM FAY, and ZUFFANTI, SAVERIO. Electronic theory of the acids and bases. 165p $3 Wiley

541.37 Acids. Bases (chemistry). Chemistry. Physical and theoretical 46-7819

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

"The discussion is clear, interesting, and well documented. The treatment is kept as elementary as possible. An author index, supplementing the adequate index of subjects, would have enhanced the value of the volume as a reference. This book clarifies a complex subject and is highly recommended to all who are interested in the generalized theory of acidity and basicity." R. G. Bates

+ Chem & Eng N 25:460 F 17 '47 350w

"Here is an elementary presentation of a too frequently neglected theory of modern chemistry, the electronic theory of acids and bases first proposed by G. N. Lewis in 1923. A recast of the original theory in view of more precise knowledge of atomic orbitals and the nature of valence serves to emphasize its fundamental correctness." G. F. Kinney

+ Eng N 54:301 My '47 200w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:58 O '46

"The presentation is elementary, yet sufficiently broad and thorough to be of interest to all types of chemists. The treatment is based upon a series of original papers previously published in chemical journals, combined with new materials and admirably organized."

+ U S Quarterly Bk1 3:104 Mr '47 240w

LUDLUM, STUART D., ed. Great shooting stories; il. by Ted Placek. 303p $3 Doubleday

799.2 Shooting. Firearms 47-3904

"Mr. Ludlum, who has a scholarly and at the same time practical preoccupation with firearms, whether used in wars, shooting matches, duels, hunting game or what not, has here collected samples of outstanding shooting stories from the early days down to fairly recent times. In certain fields, where he was able to find no adequate bit of literature, he has ably filled in with an essay of his own." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

Booklist 43:343 J1 1 '47

Kirkus 15:153 Mr 1 '47 80w

"For any one interested in shooting—and a great many persons are, whether they know much about it or not—this collection, which has variety and sometimes charm and excitement, should give much pleasure and some profit." Stanley Walker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p26 My 11 '47 650w

"Riflemen will want and should have this book. They might object to the absence of any technical description of the weapons used by the hunters and target shots of the last century, but there will be no screams until the rather unnecessary glossary is reached. To define Springfield as 'an army rifle' and Winchester as 'a lever action repeating rifle' is to invite howls which only a rereading of Scofield's 'The Old Master' will quiet." Hoffman Birney

+ N Y Times p29 My 4 '47 500w

New Yorker 23:127 Je 7 '47 90w

LUDWIG, EMIL. Othello; tr. from the German by Franz von Hildebrand. 308p $3 Putnam 47-11559

A retelling of the story of Othello. In it Othello is still the Moorish admiral, married to the fair Venetian, Desdemona. But the part of Iago is replaced by German agents, and the handkerchief becomes a letter.

Booklist 44:184 Ja 15 '48

"Ludwig's story, developing at a moderate pace, does not share the tense crescendo of Shakespeare's play. It is nevertheless a well told romance. And, despite an uninspired translation it succeeds in capturing the reader's interest." Emmett Dedmon

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p6 N 2 '47 180w

"I confess that I approached this with a conviction that I'd not find it interesting—and I was pleasantly disappointed. It is a gripping and magnificent story, bearing only slight relationship to the version used by Shakespeare, and going back to the same contemporary sources."

+ Kirkus 15:586 O 15 '47 340w

"Living figures like Titian, Tintoretto, Aretino, Sansovino and Monteverde, play very important parts in the story. And the way Ludwig tosses their dates around shows anything but reverence for the complex actualities of God's great design. . . . Ludwig tells his story with the practiced ease of a successful popular writer and journalist. But in its imaginative conception of late-Renaissance Venice and the story of Othello and Desdemona, it is thoroughly cheap." R. G. D.

+ N Y Times p18 N 9 '47 900w

LUETKENS, MRS CHARLOTTE. See Lutkens, C.

LUMPKIN, KATHARINE DU PRE. Making of a Southerner. 247p $3 Knopf

B or 92 South—Social conditions. Negroes 47-312

Autobiography of a Southern woman, which provides also a picture of the South itself during Civil war times and up to the present, for though she is a comparatively young woman, Miss Lumpkin's father was a Civil war soldier at the age of fifteen. Brought up to regard the tenets of the slave-holding class as sacred, the author traces the course of her own breaking away from some of her early beliefs.

Booklist 43:164 F 1 '47

Bookmark 8:13 My '47

"In a calm ladylike (southern style) manner, Miss Lumpkin tells her readers how the South got that Way. . . Perhaps the message and the facts would have been more clearly conveyed if the author had written either an autobiography or a sociological treatise. As it stands the book is actually a combination of both, with the autobiographical pattern at times so submerged that the work resembled a case history of one whose mind had been poisoned by racial intolerance. . . The real value of the book rests in the fund of information it contains about the origin of discriminatory practices in the South." Michael McLaughlin

Cath World 165:188 My '47 450w

"She has written the story of her section and her generation, and not merely the richly-remembered and vitally developed record of a girl named Lumpkin who followed the North Star, but has not ceased to look back South with as much affection as fear." Jonathan Daniels

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Ja 19 '47 650w

"One rises from a reading of her book with a hopeful feeling. Through the eyes of such Southerners as Miss Lumpkin, surely the South will see how to deal with the problem of making its economy serve the need of all men justly and amply." Horace Reynolds

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Ja 25 '47 650w

"It is a beautiful and true book, a faithful record and a reasoned recommendation." Broadus Mitchell

+ Commonweal 45:650 Ap 11 '47 600w

"A highly personal approach to social issues which may be read by a market which would automatically ignore more scholarly, didactic material."

+ Kirkus 14:612 D 1 '46 190w

"This is a provocative book, well worth the time of Northerners and of general readers aware of potential dynamite in current American conflicts." H. S. Taylor

+ Library J 72:74 Ja 1 '47 120w

"To those who do not live in the South much of it will seem shocking and gauche and brutal. To Southerners like myself her childhood memories seem only too familiar. . . There is little in Miss Lumpkin's book about this ambivalence and little about sex or sin. As a social scientist, she may feel that these are not her field. As a human being, I doubt if it is so easy to escape their clutches. Her method, factual description of overt behavior, begins here to show its limitations. . . Yet she tells an interesting story and tells it honorably and it is worth the reading. The book places itself on a shelf with the works of other honest social scientists who have written about the South, Raper and Reid, Vance, Powdermaker, Charles Johnson, to all of whom we owe a debt of gratitude." Lillian Smith

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 F 2 '47 1250w

"Every Southerner sharing such a past will be stirred by Miss Lumpkin's recollections of her childhood; and likewise, the non-Southerner's knowledge of the South will be immeasurably enriched. Her impressions gained in the Nineteen Hundreds of the Confederacy, for which her father was a master planner, are tender without being sentimental, amusing though mocking and tinged with an inescapable pride without which the tale would lack reality. Crystal clear becomes the pattern of her generation's thinking, so immersed in the past, so guided by the patriarchal despotism of its war-hallowed elders, so determined that the South should be led by 'safe' men and that disenfranchisement and separateness of race must be forever maintained. . . But 'The Making of a Southerner' has more importance than its account of how one Southern woman outgrew her background. Her faithful, penetrating and sympathetic evaluation of the background is itself a guide, book to the understanding of southerners." Hodding Carter

+ N Y Times p3 Ja 12 '47 1350w

"Her graceful story points up the enormous difficulties in the way of changing human prejudices—even so fundamentally untenable a one as race superiority."

+ New Yorker 22:86 Ja 25 '47 110w

Reviewed by Paul Flowers

Sat R of Lit 30:13 Mr 29 '47 800w

Springfd Union p4 Ag 15 '47 190w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen

Survey G 36:165 F '47 1750w

"It is one of the many merits of Miss Lumpkin's admirable book that she makes intelligible the process of educating a Southern woman, of a distinguished family, into regarding Negroes as real human beings; that the sight of the sad and silent Negroes working as a free labour force in the fields shook Miss Lumpkin's conviction of the rightness of the stereotype of the happy life on the old plantation. The Making of a Southerner is a new Up from Slavery, seen from the other side, moving and most enlightening."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p474 S 20 '47 370w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:150 Je '47 240w

Wis Lib Bul 43:54 Mr '47

LUNDBERG, EMMA OCTAVIA. Unto the least of these; social services for children. 424p $3.75 Appleton-Century

362.7 Children—Charities, protection, etc. 47-4653

Explains the present-day status of social service work for children, and gives suggestions for the extension and improvement of the work. The book contains biographical sketches of twenty personalities in the field. Reading list. Index.

Reviewed by F. P. Delancy

Am Pol Sci R 41:1034 O '47 380w

Reviewed by S. A. Queen

Am Soc R 12:731 D '47 800w

"This book contains an immense amount of material and will become an excellent reference for social workers and for legislators interested in a better development of child welfare programs. It lacks formal organization, but will be most useful as collateral reading for any course in social problems." G. B. Mangold

+ Ann Am Acad 254:214 N '47 440w

Booklist 44:46 O 1 '47

"Miss Lundberg emerges infrequently from her clearly defined reporting. However, the repetition of her essential thoughts on the causative and curative aspects of what's wrong with the heritage of today's childhood hammers home with the insistence of truth. . . Those sketchily informed as to the problems facing social service for children in the wake of the war years will find frightening reality in the realization of the road ahead. They will be encouraged by Miss Lundberg's comprehensive understanding of the situation which leaves her with a firm faith that much good can be accomplished in the not-too-distant future." H. M.

N Y Times p16 S 7 '47 470w

School & Society 65:464 Je 21 '47 20w

Reviewed by Dorothy Hutchinson

Survey 83:294 O '47 550w

"The book will interest social workers, teachers, and general readers; it makes clear that the foundations of a democracy rest upon the well-being of its children."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:295 S '47 240w

LUNDBERG, FERDINAND, and FARNHAM, MARYNIA L. FOOT. Modern woman: the lost sex. 497p $3.50 Harper

396 Woman 47-1037

"Illness of western civilization diagnosed as epidemic neurosis resulting from displacement of women from their maternal role in home and society. Authors attack feminism as desire of neurotic women to imitate men—the concept of Freud. They advocate widespread psychoanalysis, public education to revalue women's traditional activities, subsidies to mothers, taxes on bachelors, replacement of

LUNDBERG, FERDINAND—Continued
spinster schoolteachers by married mothers, education of women in 'feminine' rather than 'masculine' subjects." Library J

"The book is written with quiet good humor and a number of shrewd insights. Questioning the value of modern sex literature, the authors point out the feelings of inadequacy often resulting from the popular insistence on the husband's insuring physical response from his wife and the frustration over his failure to do so. In many respects the book tempers extreme views inculcated by pseudoscientific literature of the past two decades." A. W. Green

+ Ann Am Acad 251:187 My '47 460w

"This volume is symptomatic because it is a frank and complete acknowledgment of the thorough bankruptcy of our age with no punches pulled. . . . Intellectuals will enjoy reading it. However, a word of warning must be said; we definitely do not offer it to the library of St. Agnes High or as family readings. The psychoanalytical part renders it unfit for that purpose. On the other hand, to the graduate student with a critical mind it offers much valuable information." Erik v. Kuehnelt-Leddihn

Cath World 165:181 My '47 900w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Hawes

— Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ja 12 '47 280w

"Validity here is quite destroyed by vituperation, woman here is derogated whether as Hausfrau, career woman, or mother, her worthlessness explored to an excess which is neither socially, nor medically credible. Physician, heal thyself."

— Kirkus 14:568 N 1 '46 190w

"Much interesting material, but their conclusions will be rejected as reactionary by many liberals. Rather dogmatic and sensational presentation. Should be supplemented, if purchased, by books presenting other viewpoints." A. I. Bryan

Library J 72:74 Ja 1 '47 140w

"Mixing hazy sociology with dubious psychiatry, Modern Woman: The Lost Sex, expounds the old prejudices about women with glib assurance. In a wordy presentation that is both ponderous and frivolous, the authors develop the theme that 'contemporary women in very large numbers are psychologically disordered and that their disorder is having terrible social and personal effects involving men as well as women in all departments of their lives.' . . . What strikes me most about Modern Woman: The Lost Sex, is its cruelty. After all, most of what we know about women and their share of the suffering in the world is universally human and not specifically female. This book de-humanizes the whole question and treats women in a way that is belittling, unfair and fundamentally untrue. Its central fault is a total lack of social imagination." Frederic Wertham

— New Repub 116:38 F 10 '47 800w

"Dr. Farnham and Mr. Lundberg surely did not write their book exclusively for psychiatrists. As a member of the lay public, I can only say that I found it intensely disturbing—which I am sure to the more doctrinaire will label me as a neurotic. But that man, including woman, so pitiful and so glorious, should be categorized, reproached and stigmatized solely on the performance of his or her reproductive system, seems to me to omit many important points." Dorothy Van Doren

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 F 9 '47 1350w

"Perhaps most puzzling of all are the sixty pages devoted to a savage attack on the feminist movement. Yet the authors have already asserted that all the disasters which confront us (including wars, neuroses, and the destruction of the home) are themselves due to changes in belief and technology which have been developing since the Renaissance. They state, explicitly, that women's battle for 'rights' was as empty and as understandable as men's battles for political rights to compensate them for their loss of spiritual status. Given this historical interpretation, it seems rather unfair to hit with every verbal missile in the dictionary the helpless and mistaken victims of a movement which began centuries before the authors were born. First to label a group as victims and then excoriate them as false prophets and criminals, reveals a confusion which runs through the whole book." Margaret Mead

— N Y Times p18 Ja 26 '47 1000w

"The primary flaw in the undertaking is one which no amount of statistical information or terminological claptrap can remove. The problem is not that of either modern woman or modern man considered in isolation, but, precisely, the relationship between the sexes." A. F.

— San Francisco Chronicle p21 F 16 '47 130w

"This is the best book yet to be written about women—a large opinion, the arguments for which may be found only by reading the treatise itself; any manageable review can merely suggest a few of them. Never before have certain of the basic laws of psychology been applied so discerningly to women, and to our civilized predicament; nowhere, so far as I know, have these particular laws been described in a way more understandable to the average reader; and among all the books upon this subject with which I am familiar, none has analyzed as effectively the falseness of modern premises concerning women and the relation of men and women, or the terrible consequences to society which have multiplied like bacteria around the original errors. . . . This book has faults. It might have contemplated the social implications of Freud's 'death wish' with great effect. It might valuably have considered Jung's broad theory of instinct. It could have interpreted the suicidal mania of every culture by applying the law which shows how and why social organisms must destroy themselves at least to the degree that they obfuscate or frustrate creative functions amongst individuals." Philip Wylie

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:13 F 1 '47 2000w
Springf'd Union p4 Je 6 '47 420w

LUNDBERG, GEORGE ANDREW. Can science save us? [based on his Walker Ames lectures at the Univ. of Washington, 1945]. 122p $1.75; pa $1 Longmans

301 Sociology. Science—Methodology 47-1558

"Presents the possibility of applying scientific methods in the correction of social problems in the hope of bringing about a better society." (School & Society) Index.

"The treatment of the scientist in his dual rôles of researcher and citizen is especially timely; and equally so is the excellent analysis of the function and content of general education in a scientific age. Though the subject of this little book by its very nature invariably provokes many caveats from trained observers of social phenomena and laymen alike, it is so compelling that every political scientist should familiarize himself with Professor Lundberg's distinguished affirmation of faith. The book deserves a wide audience." L. J. Lee

+ Am Pol Sci R 41:605 Je '47 250w

"The chief criticism of Professor Lundberg's book is that he has not himself fully realized how much science has to contribute, how incisive some of that contribution is, and the situationally contained nature of the resistance to science that arises because of that incisiveness. . . . Professor Lundberg seems to have maximized his pet tools and the technician who limits himself to using them, until they have become, for him, the full body of science, and to have maximized the 'science' which results into a full-bodied world view. . . . With these qualifications, the book is stimulating, useful, and sometimes approaches brilliance. It deserves thorough and thoughtful reading." J. W. Woodard

Ann Am Acad 252:158 Jl '47 600w

Reviewed by Hans Morgenthau
Ethics 57:217 Ap '47 550w

Kirkus 14:618 D 1 '46 90w

"The world is bewildered by the confusion of materials and the enormity of the powers that physical science has given us, yet it has little understanding of what science is and what it means. The dawn will not come until the successful methods of physical science are used to analyze human behavior and to solve social problems. The world is now ready for this step. Dr. Lundberg's little book will be of great importance in showing the way." Gerald Wendt

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 Mr 30 '47 850w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:57 J1 '47

School & Society 65:96 F 1 '47 20w

Reviewed by J. O. Hertzler

Social Forces 26:100 O '47 700w

Social Studies 38:185 Ap '47 550w

"This little book is closely but clearly written. It presents a positive intellectual program with tremendous implications for the gropings of this age. Those who miss reading it will overlook something very important." B. J. Hovde

+ Survey G 36:703 D '47 400w

U S Quarterly BkI 3:184 Je '47 240w

LURIE, SAMUEL. Private investment in a controlled economy, Germany, 1933-1939. 243p $3 Columbia univ. press

332.67 Investments. Germany—Economic policy 47-3169

"Deals with the problem of investment by private industry under conditions of a completely controlled economy. It is an analytical case study, based upon original sources, of the developments in Germany between 1933 and 1939, the peacetime phase of the Nazi regime." (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by K. E. Poole

Ann Am Acad 253:227 S '47 250w

"Though Dr. Lurie's style is a trifle turgid at times, his study is well documented from original sources, coherently organized, and carefully presented. It deals with an important subject which ought to be of interest to the layman as well as the professional economist." R. R. Wohl

+ — Nation 165:149 Ag 9 '47 550w

LUSTGARTEN, EDGAR MARCUS. One more unfortunate [Eng title: A case to answer]. 202p $2.50 Scribner

47-11093

A London prostitute is murdered in her Soho lodging in a brutal manner suggesting a new "Jack the Ripper." The trial of a respectable business man charged with the crime is the main business of the novel.

"It has been ably planned and neatly executed in a sardonic edging as it views the judge, the barristers, the man's wife and the girl's father, as well as some evidence that never comes to court. But it has little that is novel and nothing like the substance of (to name only one other novel wound about a trial) Raymond Postgate's 'Verdict of Twelve.'" James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week O 24 '47 140w

Kirkus 15:408 Ag 1 '47 110w

Reviewed by Paul Bloomfield

+ Manchester Guardian p3 O 24 '47 240w

"[This] is a triumph of literary craftsmanship. But the author presents us with a mis-carriage of justice and not the solution of a crime. The sine qua non of detection is a strait-waistcoat of artificiality, which is intolerably irksome to a spirited writer, who prefers to choose his own harness and not have it imposed on him. If Mr. Lustgarten absconds from crime in his next work, who shall blame him?" Ralph Partridge

+ New Statesman & Nation 34:374 N 8 '47 150w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18

O 12 '47 180w

"As a story of a murder trial this is a masterpiece. All the persons concerned, the lawyers on both sides, the witnesses, the judge, and many others, excepting only the jury, are skillfully portrayed. But until the moment when the verdict is pronounced we have no inkling of what impression the testimony and the arguments have made upon its members. And this is as it should be for in no other way could the suspense have been so well maintained." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p43 O 12 '47 320w

"A first-rate job, recommended even for those who dislike fictional trial scenes."

+ New Yorker 23:128 O 18 '47 80w

"The Scribner people seem pretty proud of this item and they've plenty of reason to be. It is certainly the most brilliant crime story of the week, probably of the month, possibly of the year." E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p27 O 19 '47 70w

"This powerful, original, often disturbing first novel about an English murder trial will appeal alike to discriminating devotees of the whodunit (though this is no pattern puzzle) and to those readers who place human values above plot manipulation in their rare excursions into crime fiction." Howard Haycraft

+ Sat R of Lit 30:22 O 25 '47 750w

LUSTIG, HARRIET, and LUSTIG, LAUR-ENCE. Young folks' cook book; il. by [the authors] [32p] $1.50 Citadel

641.5 Cookery—Juvenile literature 47-696

"A gay picture book in color with some simple recipes for things that little boys and girls can cook for themselves and eat—safely and with pleasure." Sat R of Lit

"Recommended for all ages." C. W. Field

+ Library J 72:324 F 15 '47 60w

Sat R of Lit 30:44 Mr 8 '47 30w

LUTKENS, MRS CHARLOTTE. Women and a new society; with 14 pictorial charts in colour . . . and 70 photographs. 128p $2.50 Essential bks.

396 Woman [A46-5629]

"The text is strong for progress and tells what women have gained: that she has had to pay for progress Mrs. Lutkens is also well aware. Photographs of then and now show at a glance whether the cost has been excessive. These pictures cover not only work but play, not only conduct but clothes, as the text runs swiftly through years the middle-aged remember. Originating in England, the work is on so broad a scale it fits the American scene as well." (N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R) Reading list.

"The series of distinctively illustrated books edited by L. John Edwards under the general title of 'The New Democracy,' employs a special method of demonstrating and driving home its statements. Especially when comparisons and contrasts are involved, as they must be in making programs for tomorrow, photographs on facing pages can do more than print to get a meaning into general circulation, while the famous Isotype pictorial charts dramatize statistics. In this case the result is both dramatic and useful."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 Mr 9 '47 190w

"Apart from its feminist limitation, Mrs Lutkens' book contains valuable evidence of the vast human progress achieved in the last generations."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p416 Ag 31 '46 420w

LUTZ, HAROLD JOHN, and CHANDLER, ROBERT FLINT. Forest soils. 514p il $5.25 Wiley

631.4 Soils

Agr47-92

"In this textbook, designed primarily for university courses in forestry, the forest soil is pictured as a living entity organized in accordance with its environment, populated with millions of organisms living in an equilibrium of minerals, light, and air, each contributing to the living whole, with the forest a part of this community, drawing nutrients from the soil and returning nutrients to it. From principles to facts is the method of development used. . . The fauna of the forest are treated according to their relation to the forest floor. The flora are likewise discussed from the point of view of their functions as living parts of the soil. From the analysis and synthesis of the forest soil in all its attributes of mineral and organic components, its orderly arrangement of horizons, and the mutual adjustment between soil and tree, the text moves to soil classification. And classification links soil and climate." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Index.

LUTZ, HAROLD JOHN—Continued

Booklist 43:237 Ap 1 '47

N Y New Tech Bks 32:18 Ja '47

"Scientifically explicit as well as functionally adequate, this textbook should be useful to undergraduates and graduates, and a source of information to conservationists. The many references—over 1,000—serve as an invaluable aid to anyone pursuing byways to their original sources."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:92 Mr '47 240w

LUXON, NORVAL NEIL. Nile's weekly register; news magazine of the nineteenth century. 337p il $5 La. state univ. press

051 Niles' weekly register 47-30723

"Many a reader of this volume will think back with nostalgia to his graduate student days when he was introduced to that fascinating historical miscellany known as Niles' Weekly Register, and began to cite from it in the footnotes of his earliest faltering efforts in historical scholarship. Dr. Luxon has waded through the many volumes of this historical depository for the period from 1811 to 1849, to give us a clear picture of the methods, the aims, and the contents of this unique news magazine, and biographical sketches of its four editors." Ann Am Acad

"As a revised doctoral dissertation the work of Professor Luxon comes to an end with a good critical essay on authorities. The book is well written and not strikingly suggestive of the typical dissertation as understood by the cynic. It is a good account of 'an honest chronicler,' which this reviewer would like to make required reading for certain of our American journalists and publishers today." H. C. Nixon

+ Am Pol Sci R 41:1246 D '47 350w

"Both journalists and historical scholars will find this book a valuable addition to their libraries. A word should also be said in praise of the Louisiana State University Press for a good and attractive job of publishing." Carl Wittke

+ Ann Am Acad 254:175 N '47 480w

LYNCH, STANISLAUS. Echoes of the hunting horn; il. by Olive Whitmore. 181p $4 Devin-Adair

799.2 Hunting—Ireland [46-18164]

Essays on steeplechasing and fox hunting in Ireland. Includes chapters on the Dublin horse show.

"Mr. Lynch writes naturally and without the frequent condescension of the accomplished horseman. His gusto and enjoyment are contagious as only an Irishman's can be in telling of his favorite sport. The author's humorous affection for his subject endears it and him even to the uninitiated." Elizabeth Johnson

+ Commonweal 47:260 D 19 '47 230w

"Mr. Lynch describes delightfully, and obviously from firsthand knowledge. . . Illustrated with lively wash drawings."

+ New Yorker 23:147 D 13 '47 80w

LYON, MARGUERITE (MRS ROBERT LYON)
Hurrah for Arkansas! from razorbacks to diamonds. 296p il $3.50 Bobbs

917.67 Arkansas—Description and travel 47-3306

A resident of Arkansas, who has traveled all over the state writes of its towns and villages, the country itself, and its people.

Booklist 43:329 Je 15 '47

"For vacations, [Mrs. Lyon] can recommend, she says, all the northwestern part of Arkansas from the Missouri to the Mena—and there are so many tips for travelers, that her volume seems almost the work of a Chamber of Commerce." Marguerite Young

N Y Times p7 Je 15 '47 330w

Springf'd Republican p18A O 12 '47 210w

Wis Lib Bul 43:96 Je '47

LYONS, AGNES CLAIRE. Invitation to Boston; a merry guide to her past, present, and future; phot. by Samuel Chamberlain; maps by Chadbourne & Wilcox. 258p $3.50 Barrows
917.4461 Boston—Description 47-11134

Guidebook to Boston which concentrates on the historic side of the city and some of its near neighbors. Photographs by Samuel Chamberlain. Index.

Booklist 44:171 Ja 1 '48

Kirkus 15:594 O 15 '47 100w

"This 'Invitation to Boston' is written in so sprightly and sparkling a manner that it infects one with the desire to rush right off and see the fascinating place for one's self. This is what a travel book should do, and so very seldom does." Frank Merwin

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 N 23 '47 150w

"By means of her sprightly style, Miss Lyons has succeeded in holding the reader's interest no matter how well she knows by heart all that her pages contain—pages frequently and pleasantly interrupted by early maps by Chadbourne & Wilcox and the good photographs of that tireless photographer of the New England scene, Samuel Chamberlain." Claire McGlinchee

+ N Y Times p5 D 28 '47 400w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 D 14 '47 220w

LYTLE, ANDREW NELSON. Name for evil. 215p $2.50 Bobbs

47-30393

A man and his wife take over a run-down Southern mansion, intending to restore it and the land which goes with it. But a miasma of evil seems to haunt the place, which eventually becomes partially embodied as an earlier owner who had died many years before. The end is tragedy.

"The blending of insane fantasy and actual fact work into a highly macabre adventure tale."

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ag 10 '47 50w

"Limited appeal." M. P. McKay

Library J 72:1108 Ag '47 80w

"There are good things in the book. The oppressive atmosphere of the ruined country is appropriate to the events of the story, and the incidents are skillfully disposed to build suspense. But the 'horror' is described rather than conveyed, and is not sufficiently associated with the commonplace which would beguile the reader's attention and assist his credulity." John Farrelly

+ New Repub 117:31 Ag 25 '47 320w

"The tale ends in tragedy, the implications of which are left deliberately indefinite in a tantalizing but effective manner. This novel is haunted and haunting, even if its ghosts are only figments of a tortured imagination." Iris Barry

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Ag 10 '47 310w

"Mr. Lytle's Poesque conceit goes wan after the first carefully-chiseled paragraphs, and lumbers on forever thereafter." C. V. Terry
— N Y Times p17 Ag 17 '47 140w

"An ambitious ghost and horror story which does not quite achieve what it attempts."
Edmund Wilson

New Yorker 23:97 S 20 '47 360w

"Miasma of evil surrounds old southern mansion in what may be either a ghost story or the study of a mind's disintegration. Which-ever it is it is recounted in some of the most distinguished bad prose that I have ever met with." Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 10 '47

70w

Sat R of Lit 30:24 Ag 23 '47 40w

M

M. THERESE, SISTER. See Thérèse, Sister

MAASS, JOACHIM. The weeping and the laughter; tr. by Erika Meyer, 340p $3 Wyn 47-11081

Portrays the character of each member of a German family. Mr. Tyllmann is murdered, and the investigator learns the private stories of the wife and three sons; and the degrees of love and hatred that have bound the family together.

"The extravagance and distortion of emotion here, pursued with Teutonic thoroughness, alienates rather than attracts."

Kirkus 15:442 Ag 15 '47 160w

"The investigation of Mr. Tyllmann's murder furnishes psychological portraits of each member of his family which are as capably done as any in contemporary fiction. It is verbose and elaborate but these appear to contribute to the satisfying sense of completeness experienced upon finishing the narrative." E. F. Nichols

+ Library J 72:1470 O 15 '47 100w.

"When Mr. Maass takes cognizance of the concrete world, it is often clear and vivid poetry. The suggestive beauty that marked his earlier novel, 'The Magic Year,' is here at its best in the descriptions of Hamburg—the street scenes, the warehouses, the slums, the waterfront. When Mr. Maass writes like that, you almost forgive him the tortuous path which he and the Tyllmanns have led you." Patricia Hicks

— + N Y Times p20 N 9 '47 600w

MACARTNEY, CLARENCE EDWARD NOBLE. Preaching without notes. 186p $1.75 Abingdon-Cokesbury

251 Preaching 46-7141

"The title does not mean preaching without preparation. The contrary. It calls for more preparation. Only one of the six chapters, or lectures, is devoted to that specific theme. The others deal with other aspects of the preacher's task and, in a sense, with the ways in which he may prepare himself to preach without notes—or even with them." Christian Century

Christian Century 63:1185 O 2 '46 60w

"A glance at the books recommended for the preacher reveals that the twentieth century does not exist for the author except as an apostate generation to be brought back to God by a 'Recall to Gospel Preaching.' No modern student, no modern reader, would give the list a second glance; it is archaic and parochial. The results of such limited reading and thinking are obvious in the suggestions about 'The Preacher and his Illustrations' and 'Bible Biographical Preaching.'" R. E. Keigh-ton

— Crozer Q 24:93 Ja '47 150w

MCBRIDE, HENRY, Florine Stettheimer. 55p il col pl $2.50 Simon & Schuster

B or 92 Stettheimer, Florine 47-1483

"There is a story behind this book. Florine Stettheimer had not had a public exhibition of her paintings since 1916. She died in May, 1944, and the Museum of Modern Art held a Memorial exhibition of her paintings in the winter of 1946, causing a great deal of comment among contemporary artists. Many now consider her one of the finest of twentieth century painters. . . The text of the book considers all aspects of Miss Stettheimer's work. The most interesting part of the text tells of her stage settings and costumes for Gertrude Stein's opera 'Four Saints in Three Acts,' which aroused terrific interest (and controversy) when it was first produced in Hartford in 1934. Of the 40 plates, four are in color." San Francisco Chronicle

"An enchanting little book. Her pictures are reproduced, some in color and some in half-tone. They are expounded in Mr. McBride's essay with urbanity. It is impossible to imagine a better critique of her work. The facts of her art are displayed with tact, with humor, with appreciation for what Yeats would have called her 'pilgrim soul' and with a whimsicality to match her own." Betty Burroughs
+ N Y Times p16 Ap 20 '47 330w

San Francisco Chronicle p11 Mr 2 '47 320w

MCCALL, OSWALD WALTER SAMUEL. In such a night as this. 203p $2 Harper

242 Devotional exercises 47-30959

A book of devotional writings in prose and poetry. Many are based on situations described in the Bible, and are brief re-tellings of the incidents.

"Perhaps unequal, but always intriguing, this book catches one's attention by its imagery, and holds it by unusual and sometimes difficult development of poetic ideas. Not for those who like inspirational 'pep-talks' or sedative thought-capsules." M. L. Eglinton
+ Churchman 161:17 N 15 '47 40w

"If you want a new, or renewed, fellowship with the truly spiritual, read this book." R. E. Keigh-ton

+ Crozer Q 25:93 Ja '48 190w

Kirkus 15:534 S 15 '47 80w

MCCAUSLAND, ELIZABETH, ed. Work for artists, what? where? how? a symposium, by Walter Baermann and others; with summaries of three questionnaires. 194p $3 Am. artists 704 Art, Commercial, Art—U.S.

A symposium which "records pioneering industrial patronage in the words of the men who have sponsored art programs." (Publisher's note) Partial contents: The use of art in America, by Elizabeth McCausland; Artist into advertising man, by E. E. Calkins; Industrial artists-in-residence, by Lincoln Rothchild; Artist-advertiser relations, by C. H. Carter; Dictators of art, by Rockwell Kent; The book artist, by Lynd Ward; The non-commercial art market, by Hila Meadow; Government and the arts, by S. L. M. Barlow; Pepsi-Cola's competition-exhibition, by W. S. Mack, Jr; The Britannica collection, by E. H. Powell; The story of the "Arizona plan," by Bruce Mitchell.

"This book is required reading for all who are concerned with contemporary art and with its profound relationship to our daily lives. It is to be hoped that other investigations of this same type will be published." R. A. Florsheim

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ag 10 '47 430w

Reviewed by Holger Cahill

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 Ap 6 '47 700w

Springf'd Republican p5B S 14 '47 40w

MCCLEERY, WILLIAM. Wolf story; with il.
by Warren Chappell, 82p $2 Knopf 47-30394

A tale about a hen named Rainbow who is pursued by a wolf, who in turn is pursued by the Tractorwheel family. The story is supposedly told by a father to his small son, who interrupts with suggestions for the next move at important junctures.

"Excellent format and delightfully amusing illustrations add materially to the pleasure of reading a new bedtime story invented by an imaginative father for his young son." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:439 N '47 80w
Kirkus 15:392 Ag 1 '47 170w

"The pictures have a dry humor that reminds me of A. B. Frost's, the makeup of the little book is admirable, and as the story begins all over again on the last page, its usefulness can be indefinitely extended." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 N
16 '47 290w

"It is easy to imagine, from the natural conversational cadences and the impromptu unfolding of episodes, that the writing was no feat. But here is a little work of art, funny, tender and captivating. To Warren Chappell, whose cleverly scratchy pen draws Rainbow and Waldo, 'Wolf Story' also owes its attractive format." S. C. Gross

+ N Y Times p42 O 19 '47 220w

Reviewed by V. M. Bunting

San Francisco Chronicle p7 N 30 '47
150w

"It is the sort of story that will probably appeal more to parents than to children. But the illustrations will appeal to everyone. The type and the binding all are a delight."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:44 N 15 '47 40w

MCCLEINTON, MRS KATHARINE (MORRISON). Handbook of popular antiques. 244p il $2.95 Random house

708.051 Antiques 46-11863

Studies of twenty-seven groups of antiques popular today. Each chapter gives a little of the history of the subject, and points to watch for in buying. Partial contents: Tucker china, 1825-1838; Dutch and English Delft tiles; English lustre of the nineteenth century; American Victorian shaving mugs; Old glass paperweights; Pictures on glass; American fancy glass, art glass and lustres; Buttons; Pennsylvania Dutch and other American illuminated; Tinware: tôle, painted tin, pierced and blocked tin, stenciled ware. Index.

Booklist 43:129 Ja 1 '47

Bookmark 8:8 Mr '47

"It is pleasant to find a book on antiques that does not descend to too fulsome praise. Mrs. McClinton is sparing of her adjectives, but displays a keen discernment of the collector's enthusiasm and knows well the extent to which the chase he pursues is worth the riding. She shows a great many illustrations." Richardson Wright

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p38
D 8 '46 600w

"Anyone who has read the glowing accounts of Pilgrim century furniture and Sanderson & Hull silver or John Singleton Copley portraits, and then been able only to find them in Eastern seaboard museums, will welcome this sensible discussion of many small things which can still be acquired by a collector with moderate financial resources and a good eye. . . The book suffers from a very inadequate index, given mostly to proper names, and it has the haphazard structure of any anthology of antiques samplings. Within these limitations it is as good as you might find." W. G. Dooley

N Y Times p28 M 2 '47 500w

Wis Lib Bul 43:34 F '47

MCCORMICK, PATRICK JOSEPH. History of education; a survey of the development of educational theory and practice in ancient, medieval, and modern times; with an introd. by Edward A. Pace; rev. by Frank P. Cassidy. 649p $4 Catholic educ. press, 1326 Quincy st, NE, Washington 17, D.C.

370.9 Education—History. Roman Catholic church—Education 46-8394

"[This book] first published in 1915 by the Rt. Rev. Msgr. Patrick J. McCormick, rector of the Catholic University of America, has been revised and expanded by the Rev. Frank P. Cassidy, associate professor of education at the Graduate School of the university. The organization and the content, except for the addition of cultural material, are traditional. A little over a hundred pages, about a sixth of the book, dispose of the 19th and 20th centuries. . . The volume is intended for Catholic classes, but it may also be used as supplementary reading in non-Catholic institutions, because of the encyclopedic thoroughness with which some topics are treated." School & Society

"As the reviser foresees, coming educational changes will no doubt soon necessitate a further revision; but, for a long time to come, the present work will quite surely remain at the top of its class."

+ Cath World 165:478 Ag '47 170w

"The sections on American education and on Catholic education in America are rather weak. (There is a full chapter on Thomas E. Shields, but no mention of Archbishop Hughes, Bishop Spalding, or Mother Seton). . . Bibliographical references are abundant, and in several languages, although the German titles are frequently out of date and badly in need of proof-reading. The index is serviceable, even if not entirely complete." W. W. Brickman

School & Society 65:311 Ap 26 '47 300w

MCCRACKEN, HAROLD. Frederic Remington, artist of the old West. 157p il 48pl $10 Lip-pincott

B or 92 Remington, Frederic 47-11799

This volume combines a biography of the American artist with more than eighty reproductions of his work, thirty-two of which are in color. Contains a bibliographic check list of Remingtoniana and an index.

Booklist 44:182 Ja 15 '48

"Harold McCracken, a trained explorer, a Remington devotee of eminence, and an authority on every aspect of the artist's career, has prepared his biography somewhat as a labor of love but without idolatry or exorbitant sympathy. He tells the story briskly and well, without literary tricks or artifices and with an excellent sense of narrative. There is not a dead page in the book, but in order to make room for the rest of the material . . . the narrative has been compressed at times into summary passages which fail to do full justice to the richness of the episodes. . . I should like to see this volume, with its narrative text and its fine illustrations, thirty-two in color, in every American home. It is a memorial to a genuine exponent of the West, not a groomed phony or a synthetic movie hero, and it emphasizes the qualities of decision, audacity and power which we need so sorely today." Thomas Craven

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 D
28 '47 1250w

"Mr. McCracken has written an excellent biography of a remarkable and characteristically American figure. . . [His] book should be attractive not only to Remington's beloved 'boys from 10 to 70,' but to anyone with a serious interest in the West." G. R. Stewart

+ N Y Times p7 D 14 '47 450w

+ New Yorker 23:139 N 15 '47 90w

"Harold McCracken, the author, has done a commendable job on what is the first biography ever to be published of the artist. . . The volume has a wealth of handsome color plates reproducing many of the artist's finest pictures." J. E. McCarrell

+ San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 30 '47
850w

"It might as well be said at once that the reproductions of Remington's work give the book its chief interest. Mr. McCracken seems to have tried conscientiously to sketch the record of the artist's life, but Remington appears to have been too limited a personality to provide a very rewarding biography, though his life is not without some of the fascination of an adventure story." D. L. Morgan
Sat R of Lit 31:26 Ja 24 '48 900w

MCCRACKEN, RUSSELL. Mystery of Carmen the cow; il. by Susanne Suba. 31p $1 Garden City pub. co.

47-292

A toy book with cutouts of animals at the end. The picture-story which the cutouts illustrate tells how the boy Ben and his dog Scrappy solve the mystery of why Carmen the Cow came home every night without any milk.

"Suba's whimsical drawings, fresh as a breeze in spring sunshine, carry this mild, lovable mystery through the woods and around the farm till Ben traces the thief who's been stealing Carmen's milk." Martha King
+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 My 25 '47 30w

"These Slottie books deserve their popularity because they do not depend altogether upon providing animals whose parts can be punched out of the page, put together so they stand up, and then put back into the page for safe-keeping. Their claim to attention is that they tell an original sort of story about these animals. Not so hilarious as its predecessor, The Gentle Giraffe, the slight mystery in this one is real while it lasts and the colored pictures are lively." M. L. Becker
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20 My 11 '47 180w

"The story begins with a nice humor, but it drifts casually away from a real climax, so that it lacks the dash and verve of the author's 'The Elegant Elephant' and 'The Gentle Giraffe.' Susanne Suba, however, provides the 5 to 8 year olds with some fine farm scenes, expertly drawn, tastefully colored, and there are two cardboard animals in the back, waiting to be pressed out and fitted together." E. L. B.
+ — N Y Times p27 Je 22 '47 150w

MCCRONE, GUY. Red plush; the story of the Moorhouse family. [Eng title: Wax fruit]. 3v in 1 $3.50 Farrar, Straus

47-11838

A trilogy of novels in one volume. It is the chronicle of a large Scottish family during the years 1870 to 1881. The central character is Phoebe, the youngest member of the family. Phoebe, lives first on the family farm, then in Glasgow with the family of a step-brother, and then in Vienna with her young husband. The novel closes after the return of the young couple from the continent.

Booklist 44:134 D 1 '47

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 N 15 '47 450w

"Readers who were nurtured in the tradition of Jane Austen and Anthony Trollope, or more recently in that of the Forsythe Saga, can draw up their chairs and have a good time with Guy McCrone's 'Red Plush.' Even without the tradition, they can still find pleasure in the book." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 D 17 '47 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '47

"A period piece, heavily embellished with homey qualities and numerous chronicles of various parts of the clan Moorhouse, never becomes tedious. . . Cozy, satisfactory, engrossing reading for long winter evenings. You may be tempted to suggest that here is a new novel of the Walpole, Galsworthy genre—in perhaps quieter mood."

+ Kirkus 15:481 S 1 '47 200w

"It's readable and likable." E. F. Walbridge
Library J 72:1610 N 15 '47 100w

"Mr. Guy McCrone combines substance with lightness in a very human and readable story. This is primarily due to his skill as a narrator and to the revealing affection he has for his characters, but also to a diversity of scene and interest." H. I'A. Fausset

+ Manchester Guardian p3 J1 4 '47 200w

"What John Galsworthy did for the English ruling class in 'The Forsythe Saga,' Mr. McCrone, Ayshire bred and spending his youth in Glasgow, has essayed to do for the Scottish middle class of the mid-Victorian era. . . He has told well indeed the story of those prosperous, bustling times. . . Guy McCrone does a splendid job in 'Red Plush.' He is best when he maintains an even, quiet narrative tone. Neither drama nor melodrama is his forte." F. H. Bullock

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 N 23 '47 1050w

"A warm, ample, comfortable book." Horace Reynolds

N Y Times p7 N 23 '47 550w

New Yorker 23:135 N 22 '47 150w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p22 D 7 '47 1250w

"In this long narrative the story flows along like the current of a wide river, carrying the reader with it through tranquil scenes in the Scotch countryside, past Highland glens, through teeming and bustling Glasgow and past luxuriant and opera-bouffe Vienna, the gay and beautiful capital of the Empire that old Franz Joseph had built out of so many elements. . . 'Red Plush' is a book to dream over the long hours, for you cannot rush through it. It is a sedative that calms the mind and that lets you forget the ominous headlines of our own feverish and anxious decade."

Sat R of Lit 30:13 N 22 '47 1250w

"Languid family novel. . . There is an honorable tradition of family novels in English literature, but McCrone is sadly unable to muster any of the gentle, needling satire of Jane Austen or the fierce jaundice of Samuel Butler or the sensitivity to social change of John Galsworthy. Red Plush reads as if it were written by a Moorhouse himself."

Time 50:114 N 17 '47 400w

"It cannot be said that the author is entirely identified either with his period or with his characters; he remains always a little outside, sometimes explaining a shade too much. But his novel is superior to many of its kind in that it makes an attempt at serious rather than stylized characterization, and although the attempt is not altogether successful, there is in the Moorhouses, nevertheless, something of the authentic stuff of life."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p364 J1 19 '47 550w

MCCULLOUGH, BRUCE WELKER. Representative English novelists: Defoe to Conrad. 359p $2.75 Harper

823.09 Novelists, English. English fiction—History and criticism 47-161

"Designed to give the reader an understanding of the author's craft and to help him get at the secret of his power. This is accomplished by a searching study of twenty representative novelists from Defoe, Richardson, and Fielding to Arnold Bennett, Galsworthy, and Conrad. One important novel of each is examined." (Publisher's note) Selected reading list. Index.

Booklist 43:202 Mr 1 '47

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ag 17 '47 170w

"A textbook; yet many a nonacademic who 'reads for pleasure' will find new meaning in that phrase if he discovers Bruce McCullough's pleasantly-written volume. . . The present volume will reveal what too few readers understand, that the most enjoyable reading is to be had not from passivity but from intelligent co-operation with the author. As an introduction into the modes of that co-operation, Mr. Mc-

MCCULLOUGH, B. W.—Continued
Cullough's volume ought to be gratefully received." D. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 D 20 '46
480w

"His method is to subject one outstanding novel by each figure to a sustained critical analysis. It is a good method, and Mr. McCullough's insights are excellent. A better general survey of the subject would be hard to find." G. S.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 F 9 '47
200w

Wis Lib Bul 43:35 F '47

MCCULLOUGH, JOHN G. Dark is dark; pictures by Charles G. Shaw. [34p] $1.50 Scott, W.R.

47-30812

Pictures and brief text about what goes on at night, in an attempt to make night life logical for children.

Reviewed by Jane Cobb

Atlantic 180:144 D '47 70w

"It seems to me this introduces a note of fear—and then offsets it, a negative approach which makes it demand a fairly mature emotional angle. . . . The illustrations by Charles G. Shaw are effective."

+ Kirkus 15:464 S 1 '47 120w

"In a quiet, matter-of-fact manner John McCullough describes what goes on after dark. . . . He allays any fears children may have acquired about darkness. An appeal, 'Tell me about you—do you like the night?' encourages them to talk about their feelings. Drawings by Charles G. Shaw carry out the mood of the story." L. P.

+ N Y Times p42 N 16 '47 110w

MCCUNE, WESLEY. The nine young men. 299p $3.50 Harper

347.99 U.S. Supreme court 47-3711

A history of the United States Supreme Court from the time of Roosevelt's attempt to reorganize it in 1937 to the appointment of Fred Vinson as chief justice by President Truman. The story is related in great measure thru discussion of the judges who now make up the court, their personalities, their achievements, their possibilities.

"The book is an intelligent and honest attempt to combine biography and legal analysis for lay readers, and American government students will find it informative and interesting. As a rule, it is basically sound and quite accurate." O. P. Field

+ Am Pol Sci R 41:1008 O '47 550w

Booklist 43:354 J1 15 '47

Reviewed by C. H. Pritchett

Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Je 22 '47
410w

"McCune's appraisals of men, from presidents down, should be accepted as his opinion only, but he tells a lot about the Court, and tells it extremely well."

Current Hist 13:35 J1 '47 50w

"A problem in condensation and construction, the book is not helped by Mr. McCune's Time-style and chapter headings such as 'Justice Tempered With Murphy,' but is a fairly sound overall history of the present Court."

+ Kirkus 15:181 Mr 15 '47 180w

"Written with real insight into legal and governmental problems involved; interspersed with personal observations and entertaining comments, it gives a more factual, present-day account than Curtis' Lions Under the Throne. Contributes to better understanding of our least known branch of government. Recommended for law, educational and public libraries." H. H. A. Bernt

+ Library J 72:731 My 1 '47 110w

"[This work] will not add much to the popular understanding of the Court or even to the entertainment of the reader. The Nine Young Men is a journalistic endeavor to paint the portraits of the present Justices in terms of their decisions. Although written from an open-minded point of view, and in sprightly journalistic style, the book fails both as journalism and law." T. I. Emerson

+ New Repub 116:26 Je 2 '47 400w

Reviewed by H. S. Commager

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Je
29 '47 1500w

"When I first read this provocative manuscript, I suggested that it was the best piece of writing to date to bring the United States Supreme Court out of its high ether of mystery down to the level where non-lawyers might share the excitement. Upon rereading the volume, I see no reason to change this comment." M. L. Ernst

+ N Y Times p3 Je 8 '47 1950w

"A maddeningly repetitious book, written in a highly uncertain prose style; but nonetheless extremely valuable for any citizen desirous of understanding, for instance, Reed's position as swing man between two court factions." A. P. W.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ag 10 '47
120w

"This is a very sound, highly readable, and long overdue sequel to 'The Nine Old Men.'" R. S. Allen

+ Sat R of Lit 30:14 Je 21 '47 850w

Springfd Union p12 O 3 '47 280w

Wis Lib Bul 43:113 J1 '47

"The personal sketches are effective; the legal analyses are too brief and too many to do justice to the subject matter. As the result shows, it is difficult to combine the precedents and the personalities of the judges happily; the author's talents seem to be best fitted to depicting the latter." C. E. Clark

+ Yale R n s 37:139 autumn '47 700w

MCDERMAND, CHARLES. Yosemite and Kings Canyon trout, 178p il $3.50 Putnam

799.1 Trout fishing Agr47-271

Stories of fishing for various kinds of trout in the Sierra Nevada mountains of California. The book contains maps of Yosemite and Kings Canyon national parks, and information on the correct pack outfit for such a trip.

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 73:42 Ja 1 '48 20w

Reviewed by Herman Foster

N Y Times p24 Ag 10 '47 180w

"Well-written, informative and entertaining, it is the perfect reference book for those willing to go through the grind to win the prize." S. A.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ag 31 '47
250w

MCDERMOTT, THOMAS. Keeper of the keys; a life of Pope Pius XII. 267p il $2.50 Bruce pub.

B or 92 Pius XII (Eugenio Pacelli) pope

46-6685

A biography of Eugenio Pacelli, Pope Pius XII, covering his early life; his work as a Cardinal, when he served as Papal secretary of state; his elevation to the papacy in 1939; and his work during World war II, in his fight against Communism and for world peace. Illustrated. Index.

"Sympathetic and understanding biography." L. R. Etzkorn

+ Library J 71:1048 Ag '46 120w

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 23 '47
40w

MCDIARMID, HUGH, pseud. See Grieve, C. M.

MACDONALD, ALEXANDER. Design for angling; the dry fly on western trout streams; phot. by the author and his friends. 145p $3.50 Houghton

799.1755 Trout fishing. Fly casting
Agr47-209

Stories of the author's fishing experiences and adventures in the rivers of California, Montana, Wyoming, and Idaho, with one chapter on a trip to New Zealand.

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '47

"Entertaining as well as instructive."

+ Kirkus 15:51 Ja 15 '47 80w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 73:42 Ja 1 '48 30w

"Mr. MacDonald has produced a volume which, dealing engagingly with matters largely familiar, is pleasant to read." J. R. De La Torre Bueno

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20
My 25 '47 230w

"A reader looking for detailed information and description of the Western technique may be disappointed in this book, but he has been forewarned at the outset that its principal aim is the entertainment of those who are interested in trout fishing. Tips and lore are confined mostly to the chapter on fly-tying by the amateur (MacDonald makes most of his own flies on the spot to match hatches on which those particular trout are feeding) and to the final page suggesting adequate and trustworthy equipment, from rod to fishing jacket." Lee Cooper

+ N Y Times p25 My 18 '47 400w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p10 Ap 27 '47
200w

Wis Lib Bul 43:114 Jl '47

MACDONALD, MRS BETTY (BARD) HESKETT. Mrs. Piggie-Wiggle; il. by Richard Bennett. 119p $2 Lippincott

47-1875

Stories about the eccentric but lovable Mrs Piggie-Wiggle who knew such wonderful cures for all sorts of childish oddities. The stories tell how the harassed mothers turned to Mrs Piggie-Wiggle for help, and describe the original ideas which she used for the children who would not pick up toys, or would answer back, or never wanted to go to bed.

Reviewed by Jane Cobb

Atlantic 179:128 Je '47 120w

Booklist 43:260 Ap 15 '47

Reviewed by Martha King

Chicago Sun Book Week p8 My 11 '47
70w

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

Christian Science Monitor p10 Jl 15 '47
150w

"This is not a didactic book but a really funny one. It has laughs for readers of eight to ten years, who will applaud Mrs. Piggie-Wiggle's ingenuity at moments when even the best children had a bad day. Richard Bennett's skilful drawings have a present-day setting." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:213 My '47 120w

"It is a tribute to the author's skill that though these are undeniably tales with morals, the results are so hilarious and good-humored, the caricature so safe and unmalicious, that children and adults will laugh rather more than they learn, and learn more than they will admit. I shouldn't be surprised if Mrs. Piggie-Wiggle is here to stay. But I hope the next book won't be illustrated by Richard Bennett, who has a sort of grimness and datedness about his pictures that are out of key with the text."

+ Kirkus 15:127 Mr 1 '47 180w

"Read-aloud book for ages 5-9, and older children will amuse themselves and then mentally discard it as a clever satire on the rattling of the bones of adult thinking." B. W. Bell

Library J 72:739 My 1 '47 90w

"The Radish Cure and Won't-Pick-Up-Toys Cure are amusing, but the others are not exaggerated enough to be funny. Book seems to be not fantasy or nonsense but adult use of children's make-believe. Point of view is adult; choice of names surprising rather than apt. Richard Bennett's illustrations are not in key with the text. Opinions will vary about this one." E. W. Turpin

Library J 72:739 My 1 '47 80w

"Mrs. Piggie-Wiggle . . . is what some grownups might call eccentric, but all children adore her. I would have adored her myself at the age of those in this book, the trying time of life—to parents—between four and six though sometimes it lasts longer. . . . Betty MacDonald knows as much about children as she does about eggs, and enjoys them a whole lot more." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8
Mr 23 '47 430w

"There is a certain humor in the contrived situations which result from a child being allowed to do exactly as he pleases, but it is of a forced kind. Perhaps these tales gain much from being read aloud and many children of 7 to 11 will probably laugh over them, but in our opinion stories of this sort are more fun when they are made to order and each family has an invented character all its own." V. H. Mathews

N Y Times p33 Ap 20 '47 230w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét

New Yorker 23:150 D 6 '47 60w

Reviewed by Quail Hawkins

San Francisco Chronicle p11 Ap 6 '47
320w

"Should prove amusing and entertaining to children."

+ School & Society 65:214 Mr 22 '47 20w

Wis Lib Bul 43:70 Ap '47

MACDONALD, CHARLES BROWN. Company commander. 278p $3 Infantry journal

940.542 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American. U.S. Army. 23d infantry 47-31280

"Perhaps the toughest assignment in the Army was leading an infantry company in combat. The author of this book had such a job—with one tremendous additional handicap. Without combat experience he was called upon to command Company I, Twenty-third Regiment of the famed Second Infantry Division. Naturally, the veteran riflemen, machine gunners and scouts of Company I, who had fought their way from Normandy to the Siegfried Line, looked forward to Captain MacDonald's assumption of command with a certain amount of apprehension. His own anxiety was much keener. This book tells the story of the author's endless struggle to take the place of his predecessor, to safeguard the lives and welfare of his men, and to lead and inspire them in battle." N Y Times

Kirkus 15:420 Ag 1 '47 80w

"Coming at a time when post-war disenchantment over the conduct of the officer corps of the Army has manifested itself, Mr. MacDonald's book provides an honest case for the other side. This is an impressive first book." H. A. DeWeerd

+ N Y Times p32 N 16 '47 800w

"This is a simple story, told in simple language, of a tough war, and of all the zany and horrible things that went into making it the greatest war in history. There will probably be books which will do a more craftsman-like literary job in describing World War II; there may even be more lucid explanations of the strategies employed and the problems confronted in this last global battle; but nowhere, I venture to say, will there be a more honest, unassuming portrayal of the hopes and dreams and fears of a young infantry captain than is found here." A. C. Fields

+ Sat R of Lit 30:25 N 1 '47 700w

MACDONALD, ELIZABETH P. Undercover girl. 305p $3 Macmillan 940.548673 U.S. Strategic services, Office of.
World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives.
American 47-11341

The author was a member of the office of strategic services, morale operations branch, specializing in the sabotage of enemy morale during the war. Here she describes her experiences as one of the "undercover girls" in India and China.

Booklist 44:104 N 15 '47

"For a reviewer who also worked for MO during the war, although in a different theater, the book is marred by the author's strained attempts to be coy, and by slight inaccuracies in her second-hand accounts of operations in which she did not participate." W. A. Mueller
Chicago Sun Book Week p7 N 2 '47 270w

"In this gay and entertaining report which reads like a novel, Elizabeth Macdonald tells of the inner workings of OSS." Mary Batey
+ Churchman 161:17 D 15 '47 180w

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '47

"After all the nonsense we are used to hearing and reading and seeing about the work of the OSS during the war, it is gratifying to find at last a firsthand account of the adventures of a bona fide 'undercover girl.' . . . However, Elizabeth Macdonald's story, although she writes convincingly and with humor, suffers from being loaded down by details and would perhaps have gained in interest what it might have lost in length, if its eighteen chapters had been condensed into ten." Silvia Brull

+ Commonweal 47:233 D 12 '47 260w

Kirkus 15:458 Ag 15 '47 140w

"Fascinating reading. While author's style is uneven, book is always interesting. Miss Macdonald does not always hold to the 'light and humorous' she aimed at—but then, these activities were serious business." C. W. Roth
+ Library J 72:1466 O 15 '47 100w

Reviewed by Herbert Kupferberg

N Y Herald Tribune Weekly Bk R p14
N 30 '47 500w

"Mrs. MacDonald has ventured to write on the dangerous assumption that war can be fun. She is saved from the obvious pitfalls of such an undertaking, first, by taking neither her part nor that of Morale Operations too seriously—she is under no delusions about who won the war; and second, by being possessed of an excellent sense of humor. Her book is fast-paced and packed with interest. In spots it is hilarious." Cabell Phillips

+ N Y Times p32 N 16 '47 700w

MACDONALD, GEORGE. George Macdonald, an anthology [comp] by C. S. Lewis. 128p $1.50 Macmillan 828 47-3183

Following a biographical sketch of George Macdonald, there are 365 excerpts from his works.

Booklist 43:344 J1 1 '47

Christian Science Monitor p12 My 3 '47 70w

Reviewed by F. J. Moore

+ Churchman 161:20 S 15 '47 60w

"This anthology is good hors d'oeuvres, but its greatest virtue will be if it persuades a publisher to reissue what Mr. Lewis so rightly calls 'the great works' of George Macdonald." Anne Fremantle

+ Commonweal 46:124 My 16 '47 390w

"The anthology reveals a spiritual life of rare quality, a profound and penetrating wisdom, and a wonderful power of understanding and interpretation of things divine. If Mr. Lewis's book has anything like the circulation it deserves it is safe to forecast that there will be a brisk demand for Macdonald's works in the near future. One hopes that it may be met." T. W. M.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 3 '46 190w

Reviewed by C. A. Brady

N Y Times p27 J1 27 '47 750w

San Francisco Chronicle p11 J1 6 '47 110w

MACDONALD, HUGH, ed. Portraits in prose; a collection of characters. 350p $3.25 Transatlantic

920.042 Great Britain—Biography

[47-19155]

"One hundred and twenty-seven famous Englishmen and women from the twelfth to the twentieth centuries as their contemporaries saw them. Partial contents: Queen Elizabeth, by Sir John Hayward; Ben Jonson, by William Drummond; Lord Chief Justice Jeffreys, by Roger North; Charles II, by John Dryden; Sir Robert Walpole, by Lord Hervey; Mrs. Wordsworth, by Harriet Martineau; Dante Gabriel Rossetti, by T. Hall Caine; A. E. Housman, by A. S. F. Gow." Booklist

Booklist 44:67 O 15 '47

"A most seasonable pudding, full of plums, and equally enjoyable as an exhibition of insight, oddity or good writing."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p53 Ja 25 '47 600w

MACDONALD, MALCOLM. Birds of Brewery creek; il. with phot. by Arthur A. Allen and W. V. Crich. 334p $5 Oxford

598.2 Birds—Canada

47-4768

Brewery creek is near Ottawa, and in 1945 when the author served as High commissioner for the United Kingdom to Canada, his home was near that creek. This book is a month-to-month record of his observations on the birds of the region. Illustrated with photographs, some in color. Index.

Booklist 44:46 O 1 '47

"A charming and very graceful account of their comings and goings."

+ New Yorker 23:87 S 6 '47 70w

"Mr. MacDonald, who possesses a quiet sense of humor matched by his powers of observation and his writing skill, has set down his impressions of bird life at Brewery Creek, which skirts Earncliffe, the Ottawa residence of the High Commissioner. . . . [The book] is so comprehensive that most readers will wonder (as this one did) how he could gather material for it while carrying on his exacting duties in the critical year, 1945." Stanleigh Arnold

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 D 14 '47 550w

MCDONALD, ROBERT M. Divine tenement; il. by Margaret Bloy Graham. 247p $2.75 Reynal

47-4402

The story began in Mike Mooney's bar on Third Avenue. Clarissa Yearling, an artist of sorts, decided to make a painting of the bar and become famous. She was aided by some young sophisticates who bought a nearby firehouse and proceeded to do it over for a dwelling. The result is rejuvenation for the bar; perplexity worse confounded for Mike.

"A first novel, this doesn't get too far. . . . Humor which is largely exaggeration and only minimally entertaining."

Kirkus 15:177 Mr 15 '47 100w

"An amiable but very perceptive report on some recent and current fads and snobberies, this is less a novel than a collection of satirical portraits, comic enough at its best to be reminiscent of Evelyn Waugh." H. W. Hart

+ Library J 72:809 My 15 '47 70w

"While Mr. McDonald has a flair for the pointed phrase and satiric characterization, his enthusiasm for the bizarre runs away with him. His pages are too heavily peopled with extravagant humanity, with 'characters' and he too often strains heavily for effect." Rose Feld

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8
Je 8 '47 600w

"Mr. McDonald has taken some well-deserved pokes at a good many recognizable types and attitudes—but he just doesn't hit with the funny bone. Perhaps what his satire needs is a little less indignation and a little more story." Florence Crowther

— + N Y Times p19 Je 29 '47 410w

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Jl 27 '47
180w

MACDOUGALL, ARTHUR RAYMOND. Under a willow tree; il. by Milton C. Weiler. 199p $3 Coward-McCann

47-628

"Dud Dean, Maine Guide, a supposed local character speaking in dialect, spins and embroiders some anecdotes and tales of fishing and hunting. For the masculine reader more interested in fishing details than literary values." Library J

Reviewed by H. A. Wooster

Library J 71:1465 O 15 '46 70w

"If any fault is to be found with the author, it is that a single Macdougall yarn of Dud Dean (a phlegmatic down-east guide) only whets the appetite for more. Ultimately, the reader reaches the back cover long before he is ready to stop." S. A.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 Mr 2 '47
150w

MACDOUGALL, CURTIS DANIEL. Covering the courts. 713p $7 Prentice-Hall

347 Law—U.S. Law reporting. Justice, Administration of 47-1042

A textbook for students in schools of journalism who desire to become expert reporters of court news. The author is Professor of journalism in Northwestern university.

"There is nothing sketchy or journalese about the book itself. All the treatment is scholarly throughout, and the scope of subject matter comprehensive enough to win the respect of any law student." Louis Wasserman

+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 D 22 '46
170w

"It must have been a hard book to put together with such inclusiveness and balance. The author realizes that there is scarcely a statement that can be made to apply universally; even terminology may vary from one jurisdiction to another. Not only journalists but also teachers in the social sciences generally, those in criminology particularly, will find it very useful. . . . The book is nicely written, well-tempered, and splendidly indexed, with many reproductions of typical documents used in the courts. It clarifies much legal jargon. It is a volume that should be used often and gratefully by journalists, social scientists, and others. Unfortunately the price is high. Professor MacDougall deserves a hearty 'well done!'" L. M. Brooks

+ Social Forces 25:361 Mr '47 750w

MACELWANE, JAMES BERNARD. When the earth quakes. (Science and culture ser) 288p il maps $5 Bruce pub.

551.22 Earthquakes 47-30670

"Readable nontechnical book on earthquakes. Story of geologic processes in the earth, their effect upon the earth, sea and structures. Reviews 19 modern destructive earthquakes from all parts of the world. Discusses man-made earthquakes, under 'seismological engineering' and ends book with use of the seismograph. Illustrated." Library J

"The fact that only sketchy treatment is accorded engineering aspects of the subject indicates that the book is primarily introductory in character. As such, and for those who desire extensive pictorial presentation, the book will be interesting reading."

+ Eng N 139:151 N 13 '47 170w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1378 O 1 '47 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:48 Jl '47

MACFARLAND, CHARLES STEDMAN. Lyman Pierson Powell, pathfinder in education and religion; introd. by Albert Shaw. 299p $3.75 Philosophical lib.

B or 92 Powell, Lyman Pierson 47-3417

Biography of an American clergyman, a minister of the Episcopal church, well known as a writer on religious subjects and a leader of men. The author is a contemporary and a life-long friend.

Christian Century 64:742 Je 11 '47 80w

Reviewed by E. D. Canham

Christian Science Monitor p11 My 31 '47 1100w

"The friends of Dr. Powell included so many of the really great men of the last generation that his biography supplies the historian with data not obtainable elsewhere—Gilman, Gilder-sleeve, Haupt, Newton D. Baker, Woodrow Wilson, Bryce, Eliot of Harvard, Ely, Coolidge, Harper, Henry George, Freeman, and a score of others are all there. Naturally the biographer has included numerous anecdotes." C. H. Moehlman

Crozer Q 24:363 O '47 800w

Reviewed by G. O. Kelley

Library J 72:528 Ap 1 '47 90w

School & Society 65:464 Je 21 '47 20w

MC FARLAND, ROSS ARMSTRONG. Human factors in air transport design. 670p il $6 McGraw 629.1341 Airplanes—Design and construction, Aeronautics—Medical aspects 46-7361

"Design factors affecting all phases of human comfort during air travel are covered. Book is the result of studies made under auspices of several aircraft manufacturers. Includes means for minimizing pilot and passenger fatigue and operational methods for improving air-crew efficiency, developed through design and planning." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 43:237 Ap 1 '47

Library J 71:1052 Ag '46 70w

Reviewed by James Stokley

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p28
F 23 '47 150w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:55 O '46

"The book is outstanding in its emphasis upon the engineering implications of aeromedical and physiological data, and should be of permanent value to engineers and aviation physiologists as a reference work."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:110 Mr '47 240w

MC FARLAND, WILMA K., comp. For a child; great poems old and new; il. by Ninon [pseud]. 96p $2.50 Presbyterian bd.

821.08 Children's poetry 47-2711

A collection of poems, old and new and many pictures which make up a first poetry book for young children. Some of the poets included are Rachel Field, Robert Louis Stevenson, Christina Rossetti, Rose Fyleman, Eugene Field and Eleanor Farjeon. For ages four to eight.

Booklist 43:297 My 15 '47

"Miss McFarland knows exactly the kind of poems children enjoy because she's had years of editing for children." Martha King

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p8 My 11 '47
100w

"A very good first poetry book."

+ Kirkus 15:190 Ap 1 '47 90w

"Charming illustrations in color by Ninon and picture book format make this far more pleasing than the customary anthology." E. F. Clift

+ Library J 72:737 My 1 '47 100w

MCFARLAND, WILMA K.—Continued

"Going to little children at the picture-book age, this sensitive, sensibly chosen collection of verses is appropriate to this time of life and set, as it were, to the music of accompanying pictures in color." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p25
My 11 '47 140w

"Here is a most attractive and well-selected anthology for the young child." Phyllis Fenner

+ N Y Times p27 Je 15 '47 140w
Wis Lib Bul 43:84 My '47

MCGAVRAN, GRACE WINIFRED. Fig tree village. 127p il $1.25; pa 75c Friendship press Children in India 47-17302

Story of a small village of India, describing how a Christian missionary brought a new life to its people. For primary grade pupils. The author, daughter of a missionary, was born in India.

Christian Century 64:240 F 19 '47 30w

"Slight but authentic story. . . Suitable for Sunday School and church libraries and public libraries which cooperate with churches in providing books on missionary reading lists." E. T. Dobbins

+ Library J 72:393 Mr 1 '47 60w

MCGERR, PATRICIA. Pick your victim. 222p
$2 Doubleday 46-8485

Detective story.

Bookmark 8:16 Mr '47

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 D 22 '46
180w

Kirkus 14:530 O 15 '46 90w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p42
D 8 '46 230w

"Here is a mystery story with a unique approach. . . This is long range detection with a vengeance, presented in an amusing manner." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p48 D 8 '46 230w

"The material is funny, but as is so often the case with these out-of-the-ordinary items, it might have been handled just as effectively in a straightforward manner."

+ New Yorker 22:100 D 21 '46 90w

"The book would stand up excellently as a satiric novel of uplift and enterprise; the unique towhomdunit angle makes it the find of the season." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 5 '47
90w

"Get it."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:32 D 14 '46 50w

MCGERR, PATRICIA. Seven deadly sisters. 249p $2 Doubleday 47-30477

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ag 31 '47
100w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8
Ag 31 '47 150w

N Y Times p30 S 21 '47 200w

"The idea, a tricky one at best, doesn't stand up as well as it did the first time."

New Yorker 23:88 Ag 16 '47 110w

"Capital!"

+ Sat R of Lit 30:32 Ag 16 '47 40w

MACGIBBON, MRS ELIZABETH GREGG. Fitting yourself for business; what the employer wants beyond skills. 2d ed 456p $2.50 McGraw

174 Applications for positions. Occupations. Success 47-4650

Second edition of an earlier book (Book Review Digest 1941) which reflected wartime practices. "Originally written to help prewar students get the elusive first job, Fitting Yourself for Business has been reditted to perform the same service for today's beginners." (Pref to 2d ed) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:35 S 15 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:814 My 15 '47 40w

MCGINNIS, PAUL. Lost Eden. 287p $3 McBride
Cook, James—Fiction 47-3263

Historical novel of the South Seas in the eighteenth century. The hero, a young Englishman, sails with Cook on one of his long voyages, suffers hardships and injustice, and finally deserts the expedition on Hawaii. There he marries and lives a happy, carefree life until the fatal return of Cook and Cook's death.

"An instructive, exciting yarn, combining the best features of Mutiny on the Bounty and a Henty book. Recommended." E. F. Walbridge
+ Library J 72:639 Ap 15 '47 100w

"'Lost Eden' is a beguiling sequence of perils, brawls and adventure in uncharted seas. It contains just enough history to justify your enjoyment, if you are challenged." Lisle Bell

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p26
My 25 '47 140w

MCHUGH, GELOLO. Developing your child's personality. 234p $2.75 Appleton-Century 136.7 Child study. Children—Management 47-31263

"A practical book for prospective parents and those caring for very young children. Author teaches psychology at Duke University. He advocates planned rather than incidental or accidental parenthood, and stresses responsibilities as well as pleasures of child rearing. Book covers in detail rudiments of child care and training including formation of habits, sex learning, use and understanding of speech, social and emotional learning." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 44:32 N 1 '47

"For the new mother, or one not informed, this is sound, reasonable, recommendable child care counsel, which can serve as a basic book."
+ Kirkus 15:494 S 1 '47 120w

"Clearly and interestingly written on a level suitable for intelligent young adults. Recommended for purchase by college and public libraries." A. I. Bryan

+ Library J 72:1372 O 1 '47 100w

MCHUGH, VINCENT. Blue hen's chickens; poems, verses, blues. 90p $2.50 Random house 811 47-2237

"The book reveals the pagan note and wit of the classic Latins, and of John Skelton, greatly admired by McHugh. And this poet has made an art of understatement. His handling of conventional themes is unconventional except for the group of blues composed to music by Louis Armstrong and other masters of syncopation. . . The book closes with a 'Suite from Catullus.'" Sat R of Lit

Kirkus 15:235 Ap 15 '47 160w

"It is a rare pleasure to find a book of poems that has the tang of an apple off the bough, the warm sting of a good old brandy, especially if the apple tree or the brandy bottle are come upon unexpectedly and at the right hour. It was so that Mr. McHugh's book offered itself to this reader." Babette Deutsch

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3
My 11 '47 900w

Reviewed by W. A. Sylvester
Poetry 70:278 Ag '47 600w

Reviewed by Alfred Kreymborg
Sat R of Lit 30:18 My 17 '47 450w

MCHUGH, VINCENT. Victory. 546p $3.50 Random house

47-31203

A novel based on one man's adventures in the recent war. John McHallam is a writer, a civilian, and a photographer. He goes to the Pacific via Victory ship; lives thru an air attack; reaches an island which is covered with wreckage, and rescues and then loses an American seaman who has been a one-man army against the Japanese.

"The Victory has that rare and wonderful thing, the sense of the passage of time. It has the pace and texture of life, instead of the stepped-up immediacy of much contemporary fiction. It takes the reader as long to cross the Pacific as it took the Hopi Victory; one is completely identified with the sea beneath, the sky above, the great concern of war dwarfed by the personalities and trivia of life aboard." Dorothy Hillyer

+ Atlantic 180:188 N '47 450w

Reviewed by Robert Halsband
Chicago Sun Book Week N 3 '47 460w

Kirkus 15:406 Ag 1 '47 250w

"Good descriptive writing; long discursive sea talk, some rough language, familiar gripes. For men with Pacific experience but not for the gentle reader." H. A. Wooster

+ Library J 72:1194 S 1 '47 80w

"This simple tale is recounted in a prose of almost excessive leisureliness, as far as possible removed from the tautness of post-Hemingway fiction. At times 'The Victory' seems more like a chronicle than a novel, as if the author's gifts were preeminently those of a highly observant and talented diarist. . . It is a novel of the America promised us in 1776 and 1787, minus the flag-waving, minus the beat of nationalism. Its virtues are not clamorous, and it may be that they will not be recognized for some little time; but the reflective and deliberate reader will find them, and judge them worth the effort of the search." Clifton Fadiman

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3
O 12 '47 1900w

"This fifth novel of Vincent McHugh's is not a great one, nor perhaps even a good one. But it is a talented enough one to make the reader puzzle over why it isn't better. . . The conversations are too grand and, even sometimes with the lowliest of the crew, verge on intellectuality. But that unrealized intellectuality is an indication of Mr. McHugh's uneasiness. . . Yet, in major ways the book succumbs, in minor ways it is immensely interesting. Some of the subsidiary characters . . . possess intimations of true subtlety." Harvey Breit

+ N Y Times p5 D 12 '47 750w

"The book contains a high percentage of good, restrained descriptive writing, as well as some handsome tributes to our Marines and merchant seamen."

+ New Yorker 23:122 O 11 '47 160w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p14 O 21 '47 950w

"Remarkable and laborious job. . . [The preface] is as deliberately naïve and as disarming a preface as it has ever been our good fortune to read." Harrison Smith

+ Sat R of Lit 30:23 O 25 '47 1000w

MACINNES, HELEN (MRS GILBERT HIGHT). Friends and lovers. 367p $2.75 Little 47-4756

Love story in which the localities are Scotland, London, and Oxford; and the chief characters are a poor young Oxford scholar, and a well-bred young woman from a conventional family.

Booklist 44:32 S 15 '47

"Authentic glimpses of Edinburgh, London, and Oxford, together with the various minor characters give the love affair a realistic background. But Miss MacInnes is definitely more at ease and more effective in a story keyed to action than in one based on introspective emotion." Dorothy Sparks

Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Ag 10 '47 230w

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 30 '47 550w

"A facile love story, with little originality of plotting, but with a good deal more development of thought patterns than the usual story of its kind. But there is nothing recognizably Helen MacInnes."

Kirkus 15:318 Je 15 '47 210w

"Interesting; recommended for fiction readers who dote on sugary, sentimental novels." Anne Whitmore

Library J 72:1108 Ag '47 80w

"Readers who come to 'Friends and Lovers' seeking good writing, warm characterization, sympathy for the urgency and confusion of young love will find the book highly rewarding. By its very lack of obvious drama it holds deep kinship to the emotional experience of most humankind." Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2
Ag 10 '47 380w

"The grace and good breeding that made other MacInnes novels a delight have gone into this one: but, since it lacks the suspense and the compensating psychological excitement of her earlier books, its good qualities are not quite enough to sustain its thinly plotted narrative." Mary McGrory

+ N Y Times p16 Ag 17 '47 450w

"Just another light novel."

New Yorker 23:86 Ag 16 '47 120w

"The paraphernalia of the popular woman's novel is lavishly exhibited. This display is annoying because Miss MacInnes has much in her favor in this novel. She knows how to color a scene just enough to make it come alive and warm. She states the problem of young love versus economic problems with clarity. And finally, she stresses a value that needs emphasis today—that it is not the achievement of material success that counts but inner success, the striving for completion."

J. V.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ag 24 '47 420w

"For those of us who, inveterate readers of fiction, are just beginning to wonder whether we shall ever again have anything but dipsomaniac, psychologically crippled, or at least mentally disturbed heroes and heroines, this is a pleasant change. . . Seldom have two more likable young people been written about; they are just what one would like as a son or daughter." Pamela Taylor

+ Sat R of Lit 30:13 Ag 16 '47 500w

Time 50:104 Ag 18 '47 100w

Wis Lib Bul 43:153 N '47

MCINNIS, EDGAR WARDWELL. Canada; a political and social history. 574p il maps $6.50; text ed $5 Rinehart

971 Canada—History 47-31204

"The evolution of the Dominion from its founding as New France to the present, told in narrative form. Professor McInnis (University of Toronto) puts emphasis on the mixed make-up of the inhabitants and the problems of the two opposite basic nationalities. While the several wars in Canadian history are mentioned, the results of economic,

MCINNIS, E. W.—Continued
cultural, and religious trends are analyzed for their effects on the development of the country." (Current Hist) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:65 O 15 '47

Current Hist 13:355 D '47 80w

"In his extreme care to introduce and to adjust emphasis among the French, British, and North American elements in Canadian possibilism, McInnis overindulges in what should be an outworn convention of Canadian historical writing by giving almost 40 per cent of his space to the period before 1815. Once that admittedly difficult task is out of the way, however, he moves ahead with an easy mastery of existing knowledge and with the sense of proportion which might well have pervaded the whole book. Errors are almost non-existent. There is little or no novelty but, instead, consistently admirable consideration of the elements involved and, consequently, an enlightening introduction to the Canada of today. The prose is close-packed but lucid and fluent. There are almost a hundred excellently chosen illustrations of appropriately generous size." J. B. Erebner

+ Nation 165:706 D 27 '47 470w

MCINNIS, EDGAR WARDWELL. War; sixth year. 344p maps $3 Oxford

940.53 World war, 1939-1945 (40-35128)

"This final volume in a series gives a balanced summary of all campaigns from October 1914 through the end of the war. Originally published in four parts as The Oxford periodical history of the war." (Booklist) Chronology. Index.

Booklist 43:307 Je 1 '47

"Professor McInnis's six volumes form a convenient compendium of the war in large outline: what is more, they contribute measurably to the growing stature of Canadian scholarship." A. R. M. Lower

+ Canadian Forum 27:165 O '47 550w

Foreign Affairs 26:223 O '47 10w

Kirkus 15:256 My 1 '47 50w

"The sixth volume, like its predecessors, is primarily a military chronicle. . . . Professor McInnis's history is generously illustrated with clear war maps. He has a documentary appendix including such papers as the Franco-Soviet Alliance, the Yalta and Potsdam declarations, the Japanese surrender; and a seven-page day-by-day war chronology." Marcus Duffield

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p25
My 25 '47 550w

Social Studies 38:288 O '47 20w

Springf'd Union p4 S 26 '47 120w

MACIVER, ROBERT MORRISON, ed. Unity and difference in American life; a series of addresses and discussions. (Inst. for religious and social studies. Religion and civilization ser) 168p $2 Harper

323.173 U.S.—Civilization. Groups (sociology) 47-2731

"Addresses and discussions for the Institute for Religious and Social Studies. The contributions deal with three aspects of the general question implied in the title: the common ground; the dividing issues (racial, ethnic, economic, religious); and what can be done about them by schools, press, business, the courts, and everybody." (Christian Century) Index.

Reviewed by R. H. Turner

Am J Soc 53:313 Ja '48 390w

"On the whole, the book is highly satisfactory, with virtues and faults of more than ordinary degree; it provides an illuminating prelude to any study of the most important group conflicts agitating our contemporary life." J. S. Roucek

+ Ann Am Acad 253:240 S '47 260w

Christian Century 64:594 My 7 '47 70w

Churchman 161:17 O 15 '47 60w

Reviewed by C. M. Bond

Crozer Q 24:282 Jl '47 450w

"The writers are reasonably hopeful that desirable social change in human relationships can be achieved. Series recommended." G. O. Kelley

+ Library J 72:459 Mr 15 '47 140w

School & Society 65:351 My 10 '47 20w

MACIVER, ROBERT MORRISON. The web of government. 498p $4.50 Macmillan

320 Political science 47-739

"Columbia Professor of Sociology, drawing on a tremendous fund of knowledge, traces sources and development of government. Shows relation of government and state to the community and society. He discusses the myth and basis of authority and the form and transformation of government. A deep and searching work, written in untechnical language; it should, apart from the specialist, have general appeal to the educated reader interested in one of the fundamental problems of our and of all times." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by E. A. Hoebel

Am Anthropol 50:132 Ja '48 260w

"Except in the discussion of the international community, Professor MacIver's attitude is usually conventional. It seems to stem, that is to say, from traditional British liberalism. . . . I, for one, have no difficulty in agreeing to the superiority of democratic, constitutional methods, but I was disappointed to find that the grand conclusion is little more than a plea to resist movements which seek to vest in governments power over the cultural life of the community. The argument is, I think, valid, but it does not go very far toward helping us to work out a philosophy for the world of fiercely competitive technologies and ideologies in which we live. I should be giving an entirely erroneous picture of the book, however, if I did not point out that Professor MacIver recognizes both the seriousness of the issue and the reasons for the growth of governmental intervention. . . . The contrast between this impatience with the slow pace of development in the international sphere and his traditional and cautious approach to domestic problems is striking. The book will be read, widely I hope, not for an exposition of a new social or political philosophy, but because of the learning and the mature perspective which are to be found in its pages." B. F. Wright

Am Pol Sci R 41:771 Ag '47 900w

Reviewed by C. H. Grattan

Ann Am Acad 251:188 My '47 400w

Booklist 43:341 Jl 1 '47

"Although one misses the acceptance of the divine in the humanism of MacIver in contrast with that of Maritain, there cannot but be a feeling of joy in the reading of this book. A serious perusal accompanied by reference to the excellent volumes cited in the appended Commentary, will be an education in political thinking for expert and layman alike. The book is a veritable Summa of political thought. Its philosophy of government is discerning, to say the least; its acceptance should lead to that intelligent understanding of government which is sorely needed today." W. T. Gouch

+ Cath World 166:39 O '47 650w

"[This book] is a profound and critical analysis of the nature of the community and the state, of the forms and functions of government, of war and revolutions, of law and the bases of authority, and of the social transformations resulting from science and technology. Included throughout are scintillating comments on past and contemporary political philosophies. In the judgment of the present reviewer it is one of the most valuable books of our time." E. McN. Burns

+ Christian Century 64:302 Mr 5 '47 900w

"The work provides that realistic approach to politics which makes for intelligent understanding of the political process." J. G. Kerwin

+ Commonweal 46:41 Ap 25 '47 350w

Current Hist 12:241 Mr '47 90w

Foreign Affairs 26:220 O '47 30w

"The Web of Government at times resembles more an epitaph of dying dreams than a herald of realities to come. But for all of that it is a pleasant and stimulating work, well worth reading by all who still have faith in the efficacy of rigorous thinking about the destinies of men." F. L. Schuman

+ J Pol Econ 55:469 O '47 800w
Kirkus 14:614 D 1 '46 120w

"Recommended for educational and all larger public libraries." H. H. A. Bernt
+ Library J 72:159 Ja 15 '47 110w
New Statesman & Nation 34:76 J1 26 '47 250w

Reviewed by A. N. Holcombe
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6
Ap 20 '47 1500w

"A wise and provocative book. It is also an ambitious book." T. K. Finletter
+ N Y Times p4 F 2 '47 950w

"Mr. MacIver has, as usual, written a competent book: solid in content, straightforward in style, fecund of perspective." T. V. Smith
+ Sat R of Lit 30:11 F 1 '47 900w

"Extraordinarily stimulating study." W. E. Binkley
+ Social Educ 11:232 My '47 700w
Social Studies 38:144 Mr '47 10w

"The Web of Government' may be heartily recommended as important reading made attractive by clear thinking and simple writing."
+ Springf'd Union p19 Ag 1 '47 340w

Reviewed by J. P. C. Carey
Survey G 36:311 My '47 800w
U S Quarterly Bk1 3:175 Je '47 280w

MACK, EFFIE MONA. Mark Twain in Nevada. 398p il $5 Scribner

B or 92 Clemens, Samuel Langhorne (Mark Twain, pseud) 47-4414

"The three years which Mark Twain spent in Nevada, from 1861 to 1864, were crucial in his life. When he went there, he had written nothing except a few volunteer contributions to newspapers; when he left, he had a reputation as a humorist which covered the Pacific coast and was beginning to be known in the East. Yet these are the years least adequately covered in the biographies and critical studies, mainly because no file exists of the Virginia City 'Enterprise,' on which Mark Twain did his apprentice work and in which he first used his famous pen-name." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

Reviewed by E. S. Watson
Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Je 8 '47 400w

Christian Science Monitor p18 Je 19 '47 390w

"It is with high hope that the reader opens this latest study, heralded by its publisher as 'a full account of the great writer's brief but adventurous stay in Nevada,' and as setting that adventure 'into its proper frame of fact and fiction.' Unfortunately, so far as Mark Twain himself is concerned, too much fiction is mingled with the fact. Miss Mack gives a more detailed picture of the early days of Nevada than is to be found elsewhere. No one reading the historical portions of her narrative can cavil at her assertion that 'Roughing It' is far more factual than most Eastern readers suppose. . . . But the treatment of the humorist himself is disappointing and misleading." DeLancey Ferguson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Je 1 '47 800w

"Dr. Mack makes no attempt to analyze [Clemens'] Washoe activities in the light of his future accomplishments. Standing aside from the critical controversies, she contents herself with a lively, impressionistic account of the silver rush and of Sam Clemens' participation therein." John Lydenberg

N Y Times p5 My 25 '47 700w

Reviewed by Edmund Wilson
New Yorker 23:118 Je 7 '47 480w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p16 My 23 '47 550w

"The general reader will draw pleasure from this book; the captious one will find it rambling and repetitious, and sometimes lacking in clear realization of the central character himself." Dixon Wecter

Sat R of Lit 30:26 J1 12 '47 850w

"Dr. Mack's book offers a most enjoyable account of Mark's life in the West, gives a fine picture of the Comstock mining spectacle, one of the most colorful eras ever recorded in the United States, and has the happy privilege of telling about a great American in the days before he was someone to be looked up to. There are a number of unusually interesting photographs and reproductions of old prints."

+ Springf'd Union p5 Ag 12 '47 360w

"Mark Twain in Nevada is a significant contribution to recent Mark Twain scholarship. Utilizing unpublished documents, records, and other material not readily accessible, it fills in the biographical details of a hitherto little-known and neglected period in the life of the humorist."

+ U S Quarterly Bk1 3:260 S '47 280w
Wis Lib Bul 43:117 J1 '47

MACKAY, KENNETH CAMPBELL. Progressive movement of 1924. 298p $3.75 Columbia univ. press

329.8 Progressive party. U.S.—Politics and government—20th century 47-3855

"This study traces in a careful yet lively manner the development and decline of the Progressive movement of 1924, assays its role in American history, and indicates the difficult problems facing third-party action in the United States." (Ann Am Acad) Bibliography. Index.

"Dr. MacKay writes with sympathy and with understanding not only of the progressives, but also of the American party system. He is keenly critical of both major parties, but fully aware of the obstacles confronting any minor party constructed upon the basis of genuine belief and a clearly stated program of action. Included in the extensive bibliography are heretofore unavailable manuscript collections and revealing personal interviews with many of the leaders of the 1924 movement." T. S. Barclay

+ Am Pol Sci R 41:1222 D '47 850w

Reviewed by R. E. Noble
Ann Am Acad 254:190 N '47 360w

MACKAY, ROBERT ALEXANDER, ed. Newfoundland: economic, diplomatic and strategic studies; with a foreword by Sir Campbell Stuart [issued under the auspices of the Royal institute of international affairs]. 577p maps $8.50 Oxford

971.8 Newfoundland—Economic conditions. Newfoundland—Politics and government

46-5095

"The first half of the volume is devoted to the economy of the country. . . . The second part of the volume consists mainly of studies of diplomatic history, the major portion being devoted to the French and American shores and the Labrador boundary dispute. Most pertinent for the present time are the two chapters (XI and XII) that deal with the Canadian Confederation issue when first mooted (1864-70) and at the later crisis (1886-95)." Ann Am Acad

Reviewed by H. McD. Clokie
Ann Am Acad 254:194 N '47 600w

"This scholarly work fills a long felt need for an authoritative treatment of the domestic and international problems of the former Dominion."

+ Foreign Affairs 26:230 O '47 30w

Reviewed by John Parker
Spec 178:18 Ja 3 '47 550w

MACKAY, R. A.—Continued

"Solid authoritative work, which may well become the standard work of reference for all who wish to study the clouded history and prospects of the old loyal colony."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p531 N 2 '46
1000w

MACKAYE, DAVID LORING, and MACKAYE, JULIA JOSEPHINE (GUNTHER) (JULIAN DAVID, LORING MACKAYE, pseud.). John of America; il. by Henry C. Pitz. 245p $2.50 Longmans

47-1206

"Beginning in a village of old England, near the Welsh border, the action of this historical story carries us to Virginia in the pioneer days three hundred years ago. But before reaching these shores John Barebody tastes the terrors of the witchcraft madness and sees his foster-mother senselessly accused of traffic with the devil. This grim page of history is not wholly forgotten when John comes to Virginia as a redemptioner. But here he has a chance to earn his freedom. In his progress toward this goal the boy is given dramatic help by one John Washington who came to Jamestown in 1657—as mate on the ship John Barebody was on—to become the great-grandfather of George Washington." Horn Bk

Booklist 43:209 Mr 1 '47

Reviewed by Martha King
Chicago Sun Book Week p8 Je 1 '47
50w

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold
Christian Science Monitor p7 Ja 15
'48 180w

"Here is a vividly written bit of real history." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 22:470 N '46 120w

"A grand story withal. The added facet of an original Washington coming to America and fighting his own battle for independence and protecting the oppressed is a new angle, along with romance, mystery, plenty of adventure."

+ Kirkus 15:3 Ja 1 '47 150w

Reviewed by F. W. Butler
Library J 72:393 Mr 1 '47 80w

"It is a distinct addition to fiction of this period for young folk." M. L. Becker
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8
Mr 2 '47 350w

"Swift-paced, colorful, threaded with humor and mystery, this story makes vigorous reading for boys and girls of 12 and up." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p35 F 23 '47 320w

"A story told with skill, dramatic in action, and filled with colorful and realistic characters."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:37 Ap 19 '47 70w
School & Society 65:112 F 8 '47 30w
Social Studies 38:190 Ap '47 230w
Wis Lib Bul 43:58 Mr '47

MCKEE, PHILIP. Warriors with wings. 266p $2.50 Crowell

940.544 World war, 1939-1945—Aerial operations 47-2115

Twenty true stories of air combats chosen by the author from a large collection of stories available to him. The stories are related in whole or in part in the fighters' own words.

Booklist 43:295 My 15 '47

Kirkus 15:166 Mr 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by R. O. Bostwick
Library J 72:819 My 15 '47 50w

"The compilation is offered as a tribute to the AAF ground and air units. It is hot-out-of-the-typewriter copy with more than a little of the gee-whiz approach." Austin Stevens
N Y Times p35 My 25 '47 140w

MCKELVEY, MRS. GERTRUDE DELLA. Stories to grow on; five everyday parables for boys and girls; il. by Jean Busby. 63p 75c Winston

47-22232

Five of the Biblical parables retold in more modern terms for boys and girls. They are: The good Samaritan; The house upon a rock; The lost sheep; Ted's talent; The sowers.

Kirkus 15:283 Je 1 '47 90w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11
Je 15 '47 130w

"The book is easy enough for small children who will especially like the illustrations by Jean Busby." N. V. Morgan
+ San Francisco Chronicle p5 N 16 '47
50w

MCKENNEY, RUTH (MRS RICHARD BRANSTEN). Loud Red Patrick. 161p $2.50 Harcourt

B or 92 Flannigan, Patrick Thomas 47-11467

The author of My Sister Eileen (Book Review Digest 1938) has written a hilarious biographical sketch of her maternal grandfather. The Loud Red Patrick, the epitome of Irishness, lived in Cleveland with his English wife, his six beautiful daughters, and assorted relatives. He was a Democrat in a Republican neighborhood and a man of violent likes and dislikes. His granddaughter has painted his portrait with humor and no soft pedals.

Booklist 44:106 N 15 '47

Reviewed by Keith Wheeler
Chicago Sun Book Week p6 N 23 '47
320w

Kirkus 15:565 O 1 '47 140w

"Whether it is the genius of The Loud Red Patrick or a matter of male taste is uncertain, but to this reviewer Ruth McKenney has never been as funny as she is in these hilarious tales of her grandfather. She is truly a comic shanachie, a story-teller with an eye for the pretty white crest of the wave of a generation, the foam of manners and style which blows away into spindrift and leaves not even a mark on the beach." Thomas Sugrue
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2
N 9 '47 750w

"An item of cherished entertainment. . . By holding her typewriter down to a dead-pan pace, Miss McKenney has turned what might often be the ridiculous into the sublime and thereby turned out a very amusing book." Nancy Ladd

N Y Times p36 N 9 '47 360w

"Often funny but sometimes strained."

New Yorker 23:136 N 22 '47 90w

"To enumerate and thus hint at the various episodes included in 'The Loud Red Patrick' would be to spoil a great deal of its fun, for one of Grandfather Flannigan's distinguishing characteristics was his unexpectedness. In a world sparsely furnished with laughter, like ours today, you really can't afford to miss him." Pamela Taylor

Sat R of Lit 30:17 N 22 '47 450w

Wis Lib Bul 43:171 D '47

MCKENZIE, JOHN GRANT. Nervous disorders and character; a study in pastoral psychology and psychotherapy; with an introd. by Roy A. Burkhardt. 126p $1.50 Harper

258 Psychology, Pastoral, Personality, Disorders of Med47-67

"This small volume contains a series of lectures on pastoral psychology delivered before the students and faculty of Manchester College, Oxford, by a professor of social science and psychology. They are essentially a restatement of Freudian psychology from the point of view of a student of religion and a psychotherapist of some thirty years' experience." (Crozer Q) Index.

"One lays down this book with the feeling that, despite its many merits, the concepts Dr. McKenzie works with are not adequate to explain the phenomena under consideration." A. T. Boisen

Crozer Q 25:86 Ja '48 600w

"The theoretical parts of the book are on the whole superficial, but the general conception of the art of mental healing is evidently based on wide and long experience."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p227 My 10 '47 360w

MCKIM, JUDSON JACKSON. The formal wedding; introd. [by] Mrs Charles P. Taft. 96p $1.50 Revell

395 Etiquet. Weddings 47-3910

Brief manual on the planning of a formal wedding, from the announcement of the engagement to wedding anniversaries. Bibliography.

"Ministers, who are often called upon to direct rehearsals and teach the bride how to walk down the aisle, will find the book helpful; so will prospective brides and (perhaps especially) mothers of prospective brides." + Christian Century 64:853 Jl 9 '47 90w

"The book is a 'lest you forget' outline rather than a complete discussion of social etiquette, and if read with that point in mind, should prove very useful for the bride-to-be." Eugene MacHamus

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ag 3 '47 70w

MACKINDER, DOROTHY. Silver fountains. 196p $2.50 McMullen

47-21951

Novel depicting life in a small French village. M. le Curé tries to fight his people's intense interest in gossip, especially when they begin talking about the past life of the beautiful governess engaged by M. Corday. Anonymous letters appear in the village and the Curé preaches a vigorous sermon. The governess is saved by marriage to M. Corday, but the Curé is sent to labor in a larger city under an older pastor.

"A delicately and artfully planned story characteristically French, in which the governess comes to spiritual maturity through the honest devoted Curé whose integrity causes him the loss of his parish. Miss Mackinder's style is restrained and distinguished, her characterization perfect."

+ Cath World 165:380 Jl '47 200w

Reviewed by E. D. Branch

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Jl 6 '47 380w

"This story of a French village doesn't sound very unusual, but it is—in the excellence of its workmanship. Although written by an Englishwoman, the French background is natural and Corday's old manor house of Recolet has a fragrance to its garden and a pleasing sense of repose in its ancient house with its rare china and books that is reminiscent of a skill in creating atmosphere that Galsworthy developed so successfully. 'Silver Fountains' is just the book to take as a week-end gift—readable, agreeable and sound." E. V. R. Wyatt

+ Commonweal 46:291 Jl 4 '47 330w

Reviewed by Harold Brighouse

Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 21 '46 60w

"Miss Mackinder knows the world of which she writes, and she presents it unaffectedly and with good sense." Kate O'Brien

+ Spec 177:272 S 13 '46 60w

MCKINNEY, ROBERT. Hymn to wreckage. 45p $2.50 Holt

811 47-31147

A collection of poems written by an American on China. He has chosen Chinese forms and subjects, and each poem, no matter what its subject, ends with a few bitter references to the war.

"This poetry has a real love of beauty, a real understanding for the Chinese sense of art, and a real feeling for the tragedy of China. All China lovers will enjoy it. In fact it deserves wide notice for it has a certain loveliness that is a rare quality these days."

+ Kirkus 15:424 Ag 1 '47 150w

Reviewed by Gerald MacDonald

Library J 72:1638 D 1 '47 100w

Reviewed by Harry Roskolenko

N Y Times p32 O 12 '47 500w

"Here is a decidedly unusual book of poems, significant not in terms of technique, but because it says something universal by way of the particular—the particular in this case being China during the Japanese invasion." G. P. Meyers

+ Sat R of Lit 30:56 D 6 '47 850w

MACKINNON, ALLAN. House of darkness. 252p $2 Doubleday

47-1197

Mystery story.

Booklist 43:273 My 1 '47

Bookmark 8:16 My '47

"If the plan and its geography are familiar, their treatment is gratifyingly fresh; the tale moves with a jaunty manner and has a rare capacity to make one chortle with delight; its pace is astonishing, its improvisations deft and its strategies ingenious. The author does interpose an American deus ex machina at the three-quarter point, but by that time he has the reader so bound up with the slippery fortune of Colin Ogilvie that said reader may, not unreasonably, be more grateful than annoyed." James Sandoe

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ja 19 '47 150w

Kirkus 14:583 N 15 '46 40w

"Smooth yarn, breaking no rules of the spy writers' sodality and marching club." Will Cuppy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 F 9 '47 270w

"The story has everything: action, mystery, suspense and even a thoroughly satisfactory romance which has a legitimate place in the narrative. Don't miss it." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p34 Ja 26 '47 150w

"Chased over England and Scotland by resourceful traitors, Colin Ogilvie must save his country by next Saturday. He's strong on romance and Commando tactics but only medium on brains; still, there are no slow moments in this blend of Buchan and Coles, with its not unpleasant flavor of naivete." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ja 26 '47 60w

"Almost the '40th Step.'"

+ Sat R of Lit 30:42 F 15 '47 50w

MCKOWN, HARRY CHARLES. Home room guidance. 2d ed 521p $3.75 McGraw 371.3322 Personnel service in education. Extra-curricular activities. Home rooms 46-6745

"The second edition of a book evolving from a course on the home room that the author first organized and taught eighteen years ago. Indexed." (School & Society) For earlier edition see Book Review Digest 1934.

School & Society 64:192 S 11 '46 30w

Reviewed by M. A. Rayburn

Social Educ 11:94 F '47 420w

"The author has developed a valuable guidance resource, useful not only in the home room but in nearly every aspect of school activity. The administrator, the classroom teacher, and the guidance counsellor, as well as the home room 'sponsor,' will find here not only a philosophy of educational guidance but also numerous suggestions for putting this philosophy into practice. . . . There is hardly a person in school work who will not find in this book many new ideas for dealing with and helping young people." Leo Litzky

+ Social Studies 38:41 Ja '47 300w

MCLAUGHLIN, ROBERT. Side of the angels.
369p $3 Knopf

47-1794

This story of World war II relates the experiences of two brothers, the elder an advertising man who holds a commission in OSS, the other a GI private who gets his Purple Heart at Anzio. The theme of the novel is conflict between Good and Evil, the tolerant and intolerant, Fascist and liberal, Jew and Jew-hater.

Reviewed by E. L. Jones
Atlantic 180:125 J1 '47 500w
Booklist 43:330 Je 15 '47

Reviewed by J. T. Flanagan
Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Je 1 '47 350w
Cleveland Open Shelf p16 J1 '47

"Wide in its scope, but penetrating in its detail, this is marked by its warm compassion and its sensitive feeling for shades of thinking and expression."

+ Kirkus 15:170 Mr 15 '47 230w

"Written with sincerity and optimism, this is a novel worthy of the thoughtful reader." E. P. Nichols

+ Library J 72:809 My 15 '47 50w

"In themselves convincing, Clark and Tom are not up to carrying the load entrusted to them. Though Mr. McLaughlin's politico-social themes are reduced to a rather naive simplification, the characters stagger under the burden and relieve themselves by talking endlessly. . . One is grateful, however, for the scope of Mr. McLaughlin's undertaking, the plain, unflattering decency of his outlook and the excellence of much of the writing." Hiram Haydn

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10
Je 8 '47 1000w

"Some of the talk is good talk; most of it reads like a warmed over editorial translated into the vulgate, with time out for brandy and badinage; all of it is presented on such a variety of levels, and with such a deadly mixture of first, second and third hand viewpoints, that the reader is left gasping for orientation. Mr. McLaughlin's brass is pure Abercrombie; his battle scenes, for all their crafty underplaying, are strict newsreel montage; his New York bars-and-blues are first-rate bits that get his novel nowhere. His novel, to be blunt about it, can be opened almost at random, read in snatches with a certain nostalgic pleasure and closed just as quickly." C. V. Terry

+ N Y Times p16 My 25 '47 470w

"If 'The Side of the Angels' seems rather dull and shallow stuff, the blame, I think, belongs to Mr. McLaughlin's mistaken attempt to make his characters into ideological archetypes and to the consequent necessity of constantly emphasizing them in this light at the expense of both analysis and action. Besides, characterization is obviously not Mr. McLaughlin's forte." J. M. Lalley

+ New Yorker 23:74 My 31 '47 1100w
San Francisco Chronicle p20 J1 13 '47 170w

Reviewed by John Woodburn
Sat R of Lit 30:11 My 24 '47 950w

MCLAVERTY, MICHAEL. Game cock, and other stories; with il. by Sister Irena Uptegrove. 192p $2.75 Devin-Adair

47-30803

Contents: The game cock; The white mare; The road to the shore; The wild duck's nest; Aunt Suzanne; The poteen maker; Look at the boats; The prophet; The schooner; The mother; Pigeons; Father Christmas.

"Among the twelve stories, 'The Mother' is the longest and possibly the one with most universal appeal. Throughout the collection the atmosphere is similar, the plotting slight. A memorable distinctiveness marks each tale, however, and whether Mr. McLaverty writes of adolescence, middle years or old age he writes with sensitivity and understanding of each generation." M. R. Corcoran

+ Cath World 165:566 S '47 300w

"Mr. McLaverty is good with simple people, with men and women of epic patience and endurance. His 'bad' people are scarcely more complex than the virtuous ones; they either finally face up to the right decisions or they are allowed to limp away quietly, encumbered by their goodness. But he is even better with nature." Riley Hughes

+ Commonweal 46:386 Ag 1 '47 490w

"Although these twelve stories have Ireland for their setting, they could be of any land and any people for they have the ring of universal truth. Written in beautiful and arresting prose, with feeling yet reticence that stops short of pathos. Author's descriptive qualities are unsurpassed. The illustrations by Sister Irena Uptegrove, O.S.B., the paper, printing and excellent format all go to make this a lovely volume. Recommended." M. H. Zipprich

+ Library J 72:1034 J1 '47 70w

"Michael McLaverty is a writer who has increased his talent for hearing beyond even the Biblical injunction; he catches not only the sounds of the Irish as they move and talk; he traps the beat of their thought and the flow of their longing. His short stories have a disarming air of superficiality; their depth and power strike as an aftertaste." Thomas Sugrue

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2
Ag 3 '47 450w

"Michael McLaverty is an Ulster schoolmaster who has written three good novels of Irish life. Clear and honest and beautiful as these novels are, his short stories are better. His novels lack momentum; the snowball of the narrative doesn't gather size and weight as it rolls along. The beautifully realized moment which McLaverty offers stands out more clearly in the short stories; the smaller form gives it a wider margin." Horace Reynolds

+ N Y Times p5 J1 20 '47 500w

"[The author is] a writer with a good eye and a good ear for the singing Irish speech. Most of them are interesting; the title story and the one called 'The White Mare' are altogether delightful."

+ New Yorker 23:70 J1 19 '47 60w

Reviewed by Edith James
San Francisco Chronicle p11 Ag 31 '47 110w

Reviewed by A. F. Wolfe
Sat R of Lit 30:12 Ag 2 '47 700w

"With delicacy and perception, with a beautiful but gravely austere style, with compassion and a seeing eye for the revealing bit of realistic detail, he has told of the very young and the very old, of nuns and fishermen, of loneliness and poverty, and the eternal round of life and death. There are few elements of popular appeal in Mr. McLaverty's stories; but those who are interested in Irish literature, or, indeed, those who are interested in the art of the short story, should not neglect them. Michael McLaverty is a creative artist of a high order." Orville Prescott

+ Yale R n s 37:191 autumn '47 230w

MCLAVERTY, MICHAEL. In this thy day.
213p $2.50 Macmillan

47-1621

Tale of life in a tiny Irish coast village. The theme is that of the poor man's daughter in love with the son of a well-to-do widow, who stands in her son's way. At the end of the year, worn out with his frustration, the boy runs away to sea.

Booklist 43:255 Ap 15 '47

"There is poverty here, but not the degradation so often depicted as its necessary concomitant by our un-Christian writers. Nor is Mr. McLaverty's the proverbial happy ending, for he is a realist in the true sense of that abused word. He writes with much penetration; his characters, minor and major, live, and the novel as a whole is imbued with the spiritual perspective to which the Irish are heir."

+ Cath World 165:93 Ap '47 170w

Reviewed by Olive Carruthers
Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Mr 16 '47 190w

Commonweal 46:70 My 2 '47 20w

"It's a quietly told story. Its movement is unhurried, and there is in it no violence and no vulgarity; and so, as you may have read, there isn't any 'action.' It's true there isn't any wild running about; being Irish peasants, these fine people know how to bear patiently with life. But, what compensates for this—though it takes a certain sensitive intelligence to perceive it—there is here a swift gathering of forces, a quick rise and gradual easing of tensions, an instant, gripping response to ideas, a constant change in color and atmosphere. This is the essence of McLaverty's art; and it belongs, of course, to a very high order of literary art. Of its kind, this book is more than splendid; it's marvelous." David Marshall

+ Commonweal 46:122 My 16 '47 350w

+ Kirkus 14:549 N 1 '46 100w

"Enthusiastically recommended for lovers of the simple Irish tale." M. H. Ziprich

+ Library J 71:1626 N 15 '46 80w

"Mr. McLaverty, in love and sympathy, knows exactly how his countrymen talk and think, and he writes of them with a great pungency of language, using fine commanding verbs and lilting phrases. His brogue is one that nobody could object to at all. He does have a way of lingering overlong on some details, doubtless in the interests of realism, which add little to story or description, but this is a small fault." Mary McGrory

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 Mr 23 '47 700w

"Reading this book is like examining a fine piece of needlework: the more closely you study it the greater the beauty, the finer the detail of it emerges. For Mr. McLaverty is a master of simple, telling prose and of the pungent, chaste phrase. There is a lyric quality in his descriptions of the sea and shore, of field and farm, but with no romanticizing of his material. He observes with a thousand eyes, sharp to the awareness of beauty and ugliness, as few are able to do." Andrea Parke

+ N Y Times p16 Mr 16 '47 600w

MCLEAN, MRS KATHRYN (ANDERSON) (KATHRYN FORBES, pseud.). Transfer point. 195p $2.75 Harcourt

47-11415

Story of a little girl's growing up in San Francisco twenty-five to thirty years ago. Allie Barton lives with her mother who runs a respectable boardinghouse, but occasionally Allie visits her father living in a tiny apartment in a disreputable part of the city and there she learns things she cannot learn at home.

Booklist 44:108 N 15 '47

Reviewed by Dorothy Sparks

Chicago Sun Book Week p4a D 3 '47 230w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '47

"There is implicit tragedy here, flashes of humor, emotional undercurrents; there's less tug at the heartstrings than in Mama's Bank Account—but still that human touch."

+ Kirkus 15:585 O 15 '47 260w

Reviewed by Mary Ross

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p17 Ja 25 '48 220w

"Despite the efforts of author Kathryn Forbes to make Alice appear a wholesome, mischief-loving youngster, most of the characters in 'Transfer Point' persist in regarding her as a noxious brat—an attitude generously shared by this reviewer." Arthur Foff

— N Y Times p34 N 9 '47 500w

"This is a slim story in a way, if what you're looking for is tight plot or constant action. Kathryn Forbes, however, has made of her material a very appealing little book." J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 O 28 '47 600w

"Hilariously funny at times, the story has its heart-breaking moments. Kathryn Forbes handles Allie without sentimentality, understanding the mercurial changes from tragedy to comedy, from stubborn guiltiness to dramatic excitement, which grown-ups find so hard to comprehend. She understands, too, that mothers can love and at the same time woefully neglect their children." Pamela Taylor

+ Sat R of Lit 31:38 Ja 24 '48 400w

Springf'd Republican p9B N 9 '47 120w

Wis Lib Bul 43:175 D '47

MACLIESH, ARCHIBALD FLEMING, and DE SAN MARZANO, ROBERT. Infernal machine; decorations by Steinberg. 204p $2.50 Houghton

47-5469

A satire on Washington bureaucracy during the years 1941 to 1945.

Booklist 44:69 O 15 '47

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy

Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Ag 10 '47 370w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '47

Kirkus 15:318 Je 15 '47 160w

Reviewed by John Farrelly

New Repub 117:29 S 8 '47 360w

"If you're in the proper mood for it, which is to say if your risibilities can be tickled by memories of war-time projects and war-time regulations, of wartime paper work and war-time bungling, you'll probably find the literary antics of these two lads highly diverting." Rose Feld

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Ag 24 '47 380w

"'Infernal Machine' is fast, funny, deftly constructed, and neatly edited. What is more, it is a bang-up performance of the best sort of collaboration and very much all of a hilarious piece." B. V. Winebaum

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 31 '47 800w

"The authors have obviously had themselves so much fun composing this satire that one would like to find something really hearty to say about it. Regrettably, though, the humor is not very original slapstick, and the slight narrative, for all the bright sophistication of Messrs. MacLiesh and San Marzano, occasionally grows sadly maudlin. The decorations by Steinberg, on the other hand, are fine."

New Yorker 23:78 Ag 23 '47 90w

"'Infernal Machine' is a slender fluffy concoction: its ingredients are nine parts collegiate burlesque which is funny, to one part story-stiffening, of which nothing complimentary can be said." Herman Wouk

Sat R of Lit 30:11 Ag 16 '47 550w

MACMANUS, FRANCIS. Boccaccio. (Great writers of the world ser) 306p il $3.50 Sheed

B or 92 Boccaccio, Giovanni 47-30939

A biography of Boccaccio which shows him as a writer who combined the medieval and the renaissance in his writing and in his own character. Bibliography. Index.

"Written with scrupulous fidelity to the known relevant facts but with no ostentatious marshaling of them (is not this the best kind of scholarship?); and 'popular' precisely in that reading it is a significant emotional experience and not just a process of receiving information." Paul Dinkins

+ Cath World 166:184 N '47 475w

"If Mr. MacManus were not himself spoiling for a fight, there would be no temptation to quarrel with him; his book is lively, sensible in spite of appearances, a good all-round introduction to Boccaccio. . . However, without excusing such archaisms as 'what boots it' and 'harsh to usward,' one may point out that if he were alive to-day he would not write the Decameron. While the author's own, and most gratuitous, attempt on a little poem by Franco Sacchetti shows what crimes may be committed in the name of vitality." K. John

+ New Statesman & Nation 34:153 Ag 23 '47 900w

"It is a kind of nostalgia that is evoked—comparable to the feelings I once had when I revisited a villa near Florence after ten years to find nothing changed, not even the lizards on the wall—by re-examining, in the company of Francis MacManus, one of the greatest of all Western writers. It is a pleasant nostalgia because his book is so utterly charming. It is a useful nostalgia, for his book is informative and instructive too. . . . It is a measured book—although the author has his bias and his prejudices. It is a complete book. . . . But above all it is a human book, a comprehending book." T. C. Chubb

MACMANUS, FRANCIS—Continued

+ N Y Times p4 O 5 '47 700w

School & Society 66:351 N 1 '47 30w

Times [London] Lit Sup p428 Ag 23 '47 750w

MCMICHAEL, STANLEY L. How to operate a real estate business. 455p $5 Prentice-Hall 333.33 Real estate business 47-2515

Information on real estate practices and procedures for various types of transactions. "Represents the experience of a lifetime spent in studying, selling, appraising, improving, and managing real property. It is intended to explain, in simple and concise language, exactly what its title implies, and should prove of immediate interest to the man or woman who is just entering the real estate field." (Foreword) Index.

Booklist 44:28 S 15 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:815 My 15 '47 40w

MCMILLEN, WHEELER. New riches from the soil; the progress of chemurgy. 397p $3 Van Nostrand

660 Chemurgy Agr47-67

"The editor of Farm Journal tells how waste materials are utilized. A story of chemurgy, industrial use of raw materials, protein fibre from wasted whey, cotton used for tires and shoes, use of waste fibres and woods for building materials, clothing from milk and chicken feathers. Author believes that modern science, correctly applied can bring agriculture, industry and science into many profitable relationships." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 43:200 Mr 1 '47

Bookmark 8:6 My '47

Reviewed by W. H. Shearon
Chem & Eng N 25:1830 Je 23 '47 300w

Reviewed by Rufus Oldenburger
Chicago Sun Book Week p44 D 1 '46 700w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:79 Ja 1 '47 80w

"This is an interesting book. Applied chemistry is fascinating. . . . I am glad to see him urging quietly upon his chemical friends that Ford doors made of beans are not, at base, as wonderful as even the beans themselves, and not nearly so mysterious and vital and fragile as soil." Russell Lord

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 Ja 26 '47 1000w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:58 O '46

Springf'd Union p3 Mr 18 '47 180w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:91 Mr '47 180w

MCMURRY, DOROTHY. Herbartian contributions to history instruction in American elementary schools. 172p $2.35 Teachers college

372.89 History—Study and teaching. Herbart, Johann Friedrich [A47-3103]

"It is the purpose of the present study to describe the character of the Herbartian theory and practice as they dealt with history, the manner in which they differed from the theories and practices already existing in American schools, and the way in which they were introduced into the American environment." (p 1) As a background for this study the author has given a picture of the practices of American elementary schools in the late nineteenth century. Bibliography. No index.

"Despite [a] lack of conclusiveness in certain areas, this is a useful book for persons interested either in the history of education in general or in the development of history instruction. It is a careful study of one phase of a significant era in American educational development." G. W. Brown

+ — El School J 48:169 N '47 550w

School & Society 38:335 N '47 10w

MCMURRY, RUTH EMILY, and LEE, MUNA.

Cultural approach; another way in international relations. 280p $3.50 Univ. of N.C. press 327 International relations. Propaganda 47-30532

"Deals with some of the problems of international cultural relations. . . . It is a heavily documented, purely factual survey of the cultural (euphemism for 'propagandist') activities of France, Greece, Japan, the U.S.S.R., Great Britain, Latin America and the United States, with a brief chapter on the background and history of UNESCO." (N Y Times) Index.

Reviewed by R. H. Heindel

Ann Am Acad 254:178 N '47 400w

Booklist 44:29 S 15 '47

Current Hist 13:227 O '47 70w

Reviewed by Ruth Benedict

Nation 165:260 S 13 '47 650w

"This is an admirable and a painstaking presentation of governmental activities in the field of international information and cultural relations. . . . In a blurb Raymond Swing says this book should be required reading for every Congressman voting on State Department appropriations. A comparison of our expenditures with those of other countries demonstrates that he is correct." James Marshall

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 S 14 '47 700w

"It should be valuable as a reference work; and because of its massing of the facts concerning the activities of other countries in this field, it should be read by anyone concerned in the current controversy over the State Department's international cultural activities and the Voice of America." Frank Meyer

+ N Y Times p32 S 7 '47 130w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 D 14 '47 320w

Reviewed by W. S. Lynch

Sat R of Lit 30:28 N 8 '47 500w

School & Society 66:254 S 27 '47 20w

MACNAIR, HARLEY FARNSWORTH, ed. China [contributors: Han Yü-shan, and others]. (United nations ser) 573p il $6.50 Univ. of Calif.

951 China A47-14

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

Reviewed by G. N. Steiger

Am Pol Sci R 41:583 Je '47 700w

"This important volume is at once a fine tribute to its editor and a legitimate ground for complaint by laymen who want what scholarship can now contribute to an understanding of the Chinese people and their problems. So far as it goes, on its level, it is an unexcelled symposium. . . . Aside from the authoritative nature of most of the book, the most significant fact about it is its limited scope and the weighting of the topics treated." M. T. Price

+ — Am Soc R 12:735 D '47 900w

Reviewed by A. B. Cole

Ann Am Acad 252:126 J1 '47 500w

Reviewed by Hallett Abend

Chicago Sun Book Week p10 Mr 23 '47 700w

"An excellently conceived volume."

+ Current Hist 12:153 F '47 50w

Foreign Affairs 25:531 Ap '47 40w

"A comprehensive survey. . . . Many of the chapters, written as they are by scholars who have already made notable contributions in Chinese studies, are valuable and well done." Kenneth Ch'en

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22
Ap 13 '47 600w

Reviewed by Bruno Lasker
Survey G 36:405 J1 '47 550w

Theatre Arts 31:80 My '47 50w

"No praise can be too high for this book, which contains in compact and readable form a summary of all that the ordinary man needs to know for the purpose of appreciating the unique importance of China in the modern as well as in the ancient world."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p167 Ap 12 '47 420w

"Among many papers, all of them informative, it is invidious to single out any for special mention. But persons who are interested in the history of Chinese philosophy will value a paper by Derk Bodde on Dominant Ideas, another by Hu Shih on Chinese Thought, and still another by Homer H. Dubs on Taoism. . . The internal political turmoil of the past thirty-five years is excellently outlined by the editor himself and by Paul M. A. Linebarger. Some forty pages of notes, documenting the various articles, and an excellent index will make this a very useful work of reference for both teachers and students."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:62 Mr '47 240w

MCNALLY, E. EVALYN (GRUMBINE), and MCNALLY, ANDREW. This is Mexico; maps by Valdemar Paulsen. 216p il $4 Dodd

917.2 Mexico—Description and travel
47-12203

Mexico described and pictured for teen-aged readers, but of use with adults also. Contents: Mexico's many peoples; What the country looks like; How Mexican families live; Stately cathedrals and happy fiestas; Where the people work; Why arts and crafts are important; Mexican markets; Children of Mexico; When boys and girls are at school; Animals and plants; Ancient civilizations; Modern Mexico; A history of Mexico from 1521. The many photographs were all taken by the author and her husband on their trips to Mexico.

"Surely no other book for young people gives them so much information about Mexico, along so many different lines, as this sumptuous volume. . . The photographs, well chosen to show the beauties and meanings of Mexico, are so beautiful in themselves that they reward the care with which they have been reproduced. . . Its section on 'The Reconstruction Era, 1920-1947,' is the quickest guide I have seen to the maze of what has been going on there, from Obregon to Camacho." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8
N 30 '47 270w

"'This Is Mexico' seems to be aimed at the intelligent teen-ager but this does not mean that it may not be read with pleasure and profit by adults. It is the result of considerable study on the part of its authors and of an extensive automobile trip. But its real appeal in a highly competitive field lies in the excellence of its photographs, which are certainly some of the best yet taken of the picturesque places and people which Mexico offers in such abundance. . . The text . . . is weakest when the authors . . . undertake to impart information by way of dialogue." Herschel Brickell

+ — N Y Times p9 D 21 '47 800w

MCNAMARA, JOHN EDWARD. How to get the most house for your money. 181p il pa $2.50 Am. tech. soc.

728.6 Architecture, Domestic—Designs and plans 47-1925

"Selection of 100 designs of small houses illustrating type of homes which can be economically and artistically built for comfort and livability. Plans of various sizes and styles by leading architects with suggestions for choice of lots, financing the home, efficient kitchens, picture windows and other interior details." Library J

Booklist 43:305 Je 1 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:815 My 15 '47 60w

"Despite the title, the book does not include comparative data on the costs and qualities of various building methods and materials. Some very expensive ideas are illustrated with only an occasional hint that they are costly. The prospective homeowner who wants advice on selecting a heating system will find only radiant heating discussed. The book does include a large number of excellent plans for small homes, blueprints for which may be purchased through the Certified Homes Bureau of Chicago. This feature will be useful to anyone planning to build a home on a limited budget; but persons who want full information on getting the most house for the money they can spend will need additional reading matter."

N Y New Tech Bks 32:3 Ja '47

Wis Lib Bul 43:79 My '47

MCNEAL, VIOLET. Four white horses and a brass band. 267p $2.75 Doubleday

791.1 Medicine shows
47-11094

"True confessional from the world of medicine shows, pitchmen, chumps, suckers, fixers and shills, as the author writes of her life with Will who taught her to smoke opium, become a mind reader, and finally to have a pitch of her own. She learned of a world which reversed and perverted the lessons of her childhood, she believed the diamonds and the glamor worth the fear she had for Will, and the insecurities of the profession. She made many tries to break her drug habits, she tried too to break away from Will, and with Fred, was at last successful; she kept up with the changing fashions in routines, and finally made a happy marriage with Mac." Kirkus

"A story that explores a little known world, and reveals its secrets, that depends somewhat on shock material for interest."

Kirkus 15:419 Ag 1 '47 140w

"To at least one reader it is not clear just why Vi elected to air her memories. The episodes . . . grow increasingly repetitive. When you've heard the sorry annals of one pitchman you've heard them all. As a picture of a shady fraction of our turn-of-the-century crooks the book has its minor points—as a narrative it's flavorless. Her writing style could do with a shot in the arm." Richard Maney

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14
O 12 '47 800w

Reviewed by Ruth Teiser

San Francisco Chronicle p17 N 2 '47
350w

MCNEER, MAY YONGE (MRS LYND KENDALL WARD). Golden Flash; il, by Lynd Ward. 227p $3 Viking

47-11163

"The Golden Flash was a fire engine that was presented to the city of New York in 1858. It has a part in these six adventure stories that take the reader across the continent. The small drawings are in black-and-white, the full-page ones in color." Sat R of Lit

Booklist 44:117 N 15 '47

+ Horn Bk 23:436 N '47 110w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 24:40 Ja '48 120w

Kirkus 15:469 S 1 '47 170w

+ Library J 72:1694 D 1 '47 100w

"This is a rollicking, fast-moving story which every youngster will enjoy." H. B. L.
+ N Y Times p5 N 16 '47 130w

Sat R of Lit 30:61 N 15 '47 60w

Wis Lib Bul 43:178 D '47

MACNEIL, ALAN, and MACNEIL, ESTHER.
Garden lilies. 226p il $3.50 Oxford
635.93432 Lilies Agr47-73

Handbook on garden lilies, giving practical information on the selecting and growing of lilies, with a descriptive list of those suitable for growing in the average garden. Includes some history of lilies, a bibliography and index. Illustrated with photographs. Flowering chart on end-papers.

Booklist 43:182 F 15 '47

Bookmark 8:8 My '47

"'Garden Lilies' seems to me distinctly the most complete and useful book for the average gardener in the whole range of lily literature. It is written pleasantly, with a discriminating enthusiasm coupled with common sense. I like it without reservation, and know that my copy is destined to frequent use for many years." J. T. Frederick

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Mr 2 '47
360w

"The Macneils have their feet on the ground and a pair of well balanced heads on their shoulders. From a discriminating gardener's standpoint their ranks as the best lily book that has appeared." R. S. Lemmon

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20
Mr 2 '47 140w

MCNEILL, WILLIAM HARDY. Greek dilemma; war and aftermath. 291p $3.50 Lippincott 949.507 Greece, Modern—Politics and government. Reconstruction (1939-)—Greece 47-3220

A history of Greece during the six years of war, liberation and civil strife, from 1940 to 1946. The book is based on the observations and experiences of the author during twenty months' residence and travel in Greece between November 1944 and June 1946.

Reviewed by L. S. Stavrianos

Am Hist R 53:143 O '47 240w

"The work discusses, very briefly, Greek history; since it is so brief certain interpretations of the author could be seriously questioned. . . He seriously thinks that 'the simplest and most effective way' for Americans to help Greece would be by allowing more immigration. This variation of the exploded 'Lebensraum' theory is certainly the simplest link in McNeill's theory and treatment. Another suggested solution appears more reasonable: a vast development of industry and foreign loans. But, in this respect, the author does not go far enough, for the reorganization of the whole system of Greece's bureaucracy is involved. He should, for instance, check up on the tragic inefficiency of the whole system of Greece's public administration. . . Another fault is the lack of references and a bibliography. In spite of these weaknesses, McNeill's book is the best and most up-to-date treatment of the burning problem of Greece available to the English-reading public today." J. S. Roucek

Ann Am Acad 252:123 J1 '47 320w

Booklist 43:307 Je 1 '47

Reviewed by L. S. Stavrianos

Chicago Sun Book Week p9 My 25 '47
470w

"Mr. McNeill dispassionately treats a subject which is seething with passion. He objectively makes his way through a labyrinth, where prejudices seemed to block every passage. He brings visibility to a situation obscured by thick, lightning-bearing clouds. The book fills the reader with sadness, relieved only by the pleasure caused by good workmanship." R. H. M.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 My 8 '47
750w

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 J1 '47

Foreign Affairs 26:229 O '47 100w

Kirkus 15:249 My 1 '47 210w

"The best history of Greece so far published from the Italian invasion of 1940 until King George II's return." Lyall Wilkes

+ New Statesman & Nation 34:255 S 27
'47 950w

"A good, thoughtful, sober, middle-of-the-road book. It can teach Americans much." W. L. Shirer

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 My
18 '47 1600w

"Though it was completed before the President's February speech, McNeill's book is a valuable text for all Americans who wish to keep abreast of the Truman Doctrine as it is likely to be applied in Greece. While he skims over many events which might have been better discussed at length, he manages nevertheless to consider every important event of the past decade in Greece in the space of a comparatively slender volume. All things considered, his book is the most useful study of the Greek tragedy that this reviewer has read." Leigh White

+ N Y Times p6 My 11 '47 800w

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 10 '47
230w

Reviewed by George Weller

Sat R of Lit 30:13 Je 14 '47 1150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p347 J1 12
'47 650w

MCNEILLY, MRS MILDRED MASTERSON.
Praise at morning. 409p $3 Morrow

47-3746

Historical novel of the American Civil war era. The central figure of the book is a young sea captain who, it turns out, has had something to do with the coming of the Russian fleet to American waters at a time when Russia's friendly gesture meant much to the Northern cause.

Booklist 43:347 J1 1 '47

"'Praise at Morning' is one of the most arresting historical novels of the year. Its themes of love, of the romance of the sea, of the hot breath of war and of international intrigue give it practically everything one could desire." Charles Leavell

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p4 S 14 '47
270w

Kirkus 15:200 Ap 1 '47 160w

"Admirers of Captain Hornblower will enjoy. Recommended." H. A. Wooster

+ Library J 72:888 Je 1 '47 70w

"'Praise at Morning' has its faults. The explanation of the timely visits of the Russian fleets is no more convincing than usually happens when fictional characters are called upon to play major roles in historical events. . . On the other hand, the story exhibits freshness in its manner of approach, in that it treats the Civil War from the angle of naval rather than land warfare, though there is a vivid picture of the first battle of Bull Run. And, finally, the characters, while conventional, are presented with honesty and considerable feeling." Jennings Rice

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6
Ag 10 '47 650w

"On a rugged and colorful canvas of nineteenth-century world events Mrs. McNeilly has superimposed a romance that seems a mere valentine by comparison, even though it carries with it her secondary theme of Matthew's transformation from money-mad trader to staunch Union patriot. Unfortunately, her style and characterization are not always worthy of her sense of history, and Matthew's long courtship of aristocratic Loyalty Blake is an unwelcome, sentimentalized interruption in his exciting career as an amateur naval diplomat." Mary McGrory

+ N Y Times p19 Je 29 '47 550w

MCPARTLAND, JOHN. Sex in our changing world. 280p $2.75 Rinehart

392.6 Sexual ethics 47-2528

A survey of the change in the American moral code which the author believes occurred during the years from 1915 to the present.

Reviewed by Wendell Johnson

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 J1 6 '47

500w

"A commentary which is social summary, not a moral critique. Entertaining and challenging."

Kirkus 15:121 F 15 '47 180w

"Racily-written. . . Emphasis is mainly on the sensational." A. I. Bryan

Library J 72:637 Ap 15 '47 130w

"McPartland belongs to an old tradition in American popular culture: the amateur with a vast store of first-hand information and an equal amount of not-quite-digested book learning. In addition, like his predecessors in a long line from Mather to Mencken, he is a moralist. One could wish, however, that he had been as long on style as he is on morals. It is shocking to discover sentiments at times as noble as those of Freud or Havelock Ellis clothed in a noisy and vulgar prose. And, disgracefully, the book has no index, which, of course, considerably reduced its possible value as a work of reference." George Mayberry

New Repub 116:34 Ap 28 '47 470w

Reviewed by Margaret Mead

N Y Times p21 Jl 20 '47 700w

Reviewed by Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p22 Je 8 '47 950w

MACPHERSON, MARGARET L. (MRS W. T. ALBERT). Australia calling; il. by Kurt Wiese. 199p $2.50 Dodd

47-365

Travel book in story form. Two American children are sent to Australia for a three month's visit. Altho they resented the trip at first, they came back gleeful over all they had heard, seen, and done. Grades five to eight.

Booklist 43:209 Mr 1 '47

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold

Christian Science Monitor p12 Ap 10 '47 120w

"There is authentic, interesting information in the book, but it is presented in a condescending tone. The use of modern slang is not the lever the author intended it to be. Duplicate copies are not necessary." B. W. Bell

Library J 72:324 F 15 '47 70w

"Seldom is so large a subject treated so well in so small a book for children." M. L. Becker
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 F 23 '47 270w

"The morals that are impressed upon Janie and Jed during their Australian adventure are completely obvious; but the whole book is so lighthearted, the country is presented with such enthusiasm and shown in such variety that there is never a dull moment. The book is informing and amusing."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:34 Jl 12 '47 230w

MACRAE, DONALD. Dwight Craig. 398p $2.75 Houghton

47-3828

Character study of Dwight Craig, whose early life was so full of frustration that he determined to gain his own ends by victimizing others. Eventually he became the stately Doctor Craig, president of a western university, but he never lived down those early years.

"As psychological portraiture and as social history and commentary is impressive. . . This is a first novel, but it has the depth, assurance and finish of a completely matured talent." Robert Halsband

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p11 My 25 '47 400w

"The chief trouble with Dwight Craig is that the central figure never comes alive, even as a human flop, nor is he sufficiently unreal to be a mere cardboard mouthpiece of his creator. One of the problems of a young writer is mastering the technique of omission. In 'Dwight Craig' it is difficult for the author to find the forest. He has too many trees, or perhaps too many cornfields." Elizabeth Johnson

— Commonweal 46:313 Jl 11 '47 500w

Kirkus 15:137 Mr 1 '47 250w

"This is a frank story with unpleasant personalities and episodes. Its values do not seem to sufficiently reward the travail of the reader to justify recommendation." H. A. Wooster

Library J 72:320 F 15 '47 70w

"A lucid, convincing portrait of an ambitious man whose success seems pitiful in the perspective of his past." Stephen Stepanchev

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p29 My 11 '47 550w

"In the final quarter of this novel there is much sound, quiet, corrosive writing about the place of the aggressive, self-centered careerist in higher education. The author's satire here is bitter but eminently just." Richard Sullivan

+ N Y Times p16 My 11 '47 550w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Je 24 '47 600w

"Author MacRae, who teaches literature at Oregon's Reed College, spends about 400 pages trailing his quarry but never really nails the hide to the door. Nor does Author MacRae ever quite make up his mind whether he wants to write like Swift, Sinclair Lewis, James T. Farrell or Fanny Fern."

Time 49:116 My 12 '47 150w

MCSPADDEN, JOSEPH WALKER. Operas and musical comedies. 607p $3.50 Crowell 782.08 Opera—Stories, plots, etc. Operettas—Stories, plots, etc. Musical comedies

46-8326

A reprint in one volume of the author's Opera Synopses and his Light Opera and Musical Comedy, with some exclusions to make room for a few recent productions, including Oklahoma, and Song of Norway. "The two texts have been completely revised; much additional material has been added; many musical notations have been inserted." (Pref) Index.

Kirkus 14:410 Ag 5 '46 120w

"Beware of the confusion of the Hindemith article that concerns not so much his opera Matthias the Painter as the 'Symphony' from it." Leonard Burkat

Library J 71:1624 N 15 '46 130w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p23 Mr 9 '47 230w

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 5 '47 80w

Theatre Arts 31:80 Ap '47 30w

Wis Lib Bul 43:51 Mr '47

MCSPADDEN, JOSEPH WALKER. Storm center; a novel about Andy Johnson. 393p $3 Dodd

Johnson, Andrew—Fiction 47-1775

Novel based on the life of Andrew Johnson.

"The book is really a simplified and condensed biography of Johnson. It should be interesting to all those who have pondered that great and tragic career. It should be stimulating to young minds to whom history and biography are as yet unknown." L. P. Stryker

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Mr 30 '47 600w

"Throughout the entire book, the author tries to dispel the popular misunderstandings about this American President. From out of the mist of the past, Andy Johnson emerges as a loyal and likable American who did his best in the face of mountainous obstacles." H. E. C.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 My 12 '47 550w

"Mr. McSpadden has attempted to write a historical novel by superimposing fiction on history. . . . Andy Johnson is interesting enough in a political sense to deserve a better novel—a little historical economy and a more subtle amalgamation of fact and fancy might easily have produced one." W. M. Kunster

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p27 Mr 30 '47 800w

MCSPADDEN, J. W.—Continued

"Mr. McSpadden has written a fictional life of Johnson which realizes none of its opportunities. He has quarried out (principally from a fascinating and satisfying life of Johnson by the late Robert W. Winston) a humdrum summary of Johnson's career and buried it in a style and a story which are a sort of combination of 'Joe, the Book Farmer,' and Frank Merriwell in Washington. Could it be that the author is pulling our leg?" W. B. Hamilton
— N Y Times p32 Mr 9 '47 270w

"Mr. McSpadden has painted a convincing portrait of Johnson, able, earnest, and likeable, while he has made the Tennessee background seem real." Alvin Norton
+ Sat R of Lit 30:11 My 3 '47 360w

MCSWIGAN, MARIE. Juan of Manila; il. by Margaret Ayer. 152p $2.50 Dutton 47-4723

Exciting story of the resistance movement in Manila during the war. It is based on a true incident of a real Filipino boy who found a way to broadcast helpful messages in defiance of the Japanese. When he was found out and had to run away his work was carried on by others.

Booklist 44:94 N 1 '47

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold
Christian Science Monitor p13 O 9 '47
240w

"Humble details of daily life make this of value aside from the phases connected with the war. Boy scouts and radio fans will like it, especially."

+ Kirkus 15:339 J1 1 '47 120w

"Recommended for ages 11 and up." F. W. Butler

+ Library J 72:1279 S 15 '47 70w
Wis Lib Bul 43:178 D '47

MADARIAGA, SALVADOR DE. Rise of the Spanish American empire. 408p il $5 Macmillan

980 Latin America—History. Spain—Colonies
47-12400

"This, the first of two volumes of the rise and fall of the Spanish Empire in America challenges the orthodox interpretation of Spanish rule as brutal and tyrannical; champions the view that in the main, the empire was 'solid and sound.' . . . Social, economic, intellectual, religious and military affairs are each weighted." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

"'The Rise of the Spanish American Empire' is continuously interesting, it is ably argued, and it is frequently brilliant; but one cannot escape the feeling that the author's patriotism has got the better of his reason." Harold Hobson

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 S 19 '47
420w

"Recommended for college and university libraries." Joseph Borome

+ Library J 72:1537 N 1 '47 130w

Reviewed by George Pendle
New Statesman & Nation 34:14 J1 5
'47 1250w

Reviewed by B. D. Wolfe
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4
Ja 18 '48 1100w

Reviewed by Hubert Herring
N Y Times p7 D 28 '47 1350w

"Dr. Madariaga . . . has never written a dull book, this Spanish internationalist with the unfailingly interesting mind, and this one is no exception. It is written with both restraint and vigor, and it ought to help remove its subject from the controversial class, where it has much too long remained." Herschel Brickell
+ Sat R of Lit 31:14 Ja 24 '48 900w

Reviewed by J. B. Trend
Spec 178:660 Je 6 '47 650w

"Provided that this book is recognized as an ex parte statement, and the author's conclusions judged accordingly, it must be said that it is distinguished throughout by the scholarship which experience has taught us to expect from Don Salvador and that it is the best statement of the case for Spain in the New World which has yet appeared. It is, moreover, a pleasure to handle, in these days of lowered standards, a book with model notes, index and bibliography, printed in excellent type and free from even a single misprint."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p291 Je 14
'47 2650w

MADMOISELLE (periodical). Mademoiselle handbook for the girl with a job. See Hamman, M.

MADISON, CHARLES ALLAN. Critics and crusaders; a century of American protest. 572p $3.50 Holt

920 U.S.—Biography. Reformers 47-30082

"A somewhat informal history of a hundred years of American radicalism told in biographical terms, this book gives us the life and work of eighteen 'frontiersmen of freedom' from the abolitionists of the early 19th century to the socialists and Marxists of the early 20th. Included are familiar figures such as W. L. Garrison, Thoreau, Henry George, Altgeld, Bourne and Emma Goldman. Writing in a spirit so sympathetic as to become at times partisan the author has made no attempt at original research, but has assembled a great deal of scattered material and has appended a useful bibliography." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by Townsend Scudder

Am Hist R 53:119 O '47 550w

"Mr. Madison's treatment of these lopsided people is eminently fair and highly serviceable, since he has brought together a wealth of material to be found only by long and painstaking research. . . . It is history in the best manner." R. W. Kelso

+ Ann Am Acad 252:134 J1 '47 360w

Booklist 43:184 F 15 '47

Reviewed by Bergen Evans

Chicago Sun Book Week p1 Ja 19 '47
900w

Current Hist 12:152 F '47 120w

"A human coverage of the country's march towards liberalism, for reference chiefly."

Kirkus 14:480 S 15 '46 170w

"Widespread reading of this book should prove a helpful antidote to modern political witch-hunting." C. C. Mish

+ Library J 72:74 Ja 1 '47 130w

Reviewed by Albert Guérard

Nation 164:428 Ap 12 '47 550w

Reviewed by George Mayberry

New Repub 116:38 F 3 '47 1050w

"Madison does well by Adams and Veblen, as he does well by all the others. It is no detraction from his book, but a tribute to it, that it will send readers, one hopes by the thousands, back to the work of those of whom he writes. Surely he will like nothing better than that he should have sent others on the journey from which he has returned with so rich a cargo." J. R. Walsh

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5
Ja 19 '47 750w

"We need writers who, with accuracy, good temper, and objective readiness to face the facts, will set forth impartially the faults and virtues of all groups and schools. They will not pronounce Brooks Adams a great economist, or ascribe the Thirteenth Amendment by implication to Garrison, or suggest that Henry George's single tax idea has been fruitful of practical reforms. . . . Until such writers appear, such books as this (if taken with plenty of reservations and ample corrections) may possess a temporary usefulness; for we need the radical impulse and we need its literary adherents. But we hope that younger readers will not take too seriously Mr. Madison's statement that the doctrine of 'free enterprise' has gone the way of human slavery. A good deal of free enterprise is still observable. Nor should such readers accept too readily the author's vision of our immediate national future." Allan Nevins

N Y Times p4 F 2 '47 1950w

Reviewed by R. A. Brown

Pol Sci Q 62:619 D '47 900w

"Charles A. Madison has hit upon a brilliant conception in this book. Basically, it is to show, through the lives of more than a dozen Americans, how men of good will in our land have often sacrificed position, health, standing, and even life, to promulgate what they held to be the greatest good to the greatest number. He has carried off his plan excellently in a volume that is at once highly entertaining and well documented. It is a book that ought to be read by a great many people."

George Snell

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Mr 23 '47 850w

Reviewed by R. N. Baldwin

Sat R of Lit 30:18 Mr 15 '47 600w

"The men and women who are celebrated here were part of the rich diversity of American life, and the tribute paid them in Madison's pages comes from a quick and warm intelligence." Michael Kraus

+ Social Educ 11:238 My '47 420w

Theatre Arts 31:81 N '47 160w

Wis Lib Bul 43:37 F '47

MAETERLINCK, MAURICE, comte. The great beyond [tr. by Marta K. Neufeld and Renee Spodhem]. 226p $3 Philosophical lib.

848 Death 47-3518

"The contents of this volume are fragments, detached sentences or paragraphs, and a few brief sketches in dramatic form, all with that filmy and imaginative quality that always marked Maeterlinck's writings (except about bees). Death is the theme—death and birth and life, all conceived as being of one mysterious stuff." Christian Century

Christian Century 64:560 Ap 30 '47 130w

Reviewed by B. B. Libaire

Library J 72:385 Mr 1 '47 90w

Reviewed by Marguerite Young

N Y Times p10 Je 29 '47 500w

San Francisco Chronicle p13 Jl 27 '47 100w

"There is hardly another example in all lay literature of an octogenarian whose thoughts of death, melancholy as they may be at times, show so little bitterness, are so serene, as those of the Belgian master. The wisdom of L'Oiseau Bleu—is it really almost forty years since that play enchanted two continents?—is still with him. 'The Old Man Who Does Not Want to Die,' the twenty-page drama which fills the closing pages of this book, has the quality of a tune dissolving in the wind, nearly inaudible, and yet keeping its melody to the end. It is a beautiful piece." Robert Pick

+ Sat R of Lit 30:19 My 17 '47 320w

MAGINLEY, C. J. Historic models of early America and how to make them; il. with numerous diagrams by James MacDonald. 156p $2.50 Harcourt

621 Mechanical models 47-11432

A book for boys who like to make models. It contains authentic reproductions of historic means of transportation, machines and gadgets, with specifications for each part of the model and diagrams. Partial contents: A Viking ship; An ox cart; An early sleigh; The Conestoga wagon; The Concord coach; The Clermont; The Merrimac; An early bicycle—the Ordinary; An early plow; A water wheel and grist mill; A hornbook; A foot stove; A log cabin; The pillory.

Reviewed by Jane Cobb

Atlantic 180:150 D '47 40w

"Here is a book to get a mechanical-minded boy right into the skin of his colonial ancestors."

+ Commonweal 47:157 N 21 '47 60w

"Clear directions and illustrations make the forty-odd projects a very worthwhile idea for school use."

+ Kirkus 15:602 N 1 '47 90w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Burr

Library J 72:1694 D 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by R. S. Robbins

N Y Times p38 D 7 '47 180w

"One of the smartest ideas in years. . . For boys just dipping into American history via picture books, the chance of making models of the Monitor and the Merrimac is irresistible."

R. F. H.

+ Springfield Republican p14B N 2 '47 150w

Wis Lib Bul 43:179 D '47

MAGRIEL, PAUL DAVID, ed. Isadora Duncan [by John Martin, and others]. 85p il $3.50 Holt B or 92 Duncan, Isadora 47-3097

Five articles on Isadora Duncan with a chronology, bibliography and a collection of photographs and drawings. Contents: Isadora Duncan and basic dance, by John Martin; Duncan concerts in New York, by Carl Van Vechten; The new Isadora, by Carl Van Vechten; Isadora Duncan and the artists, by A. R. Macdougall; Isadora Duncan: studies for six dance movements, by Gordon Craig.

Booklist 43:346 Jl 1 '47

Kirkus 15:151 Mr 1 '47 120w

"Highly recommended for dance and theatre collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 72:640 Ap 15 '47 40w

Reviewed by Minna Lederman

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 My 11 '47 750w

"Mr. Martin's essay reveals Isadora as the exponent of what he calls 'basic dance,' a far-reaching conception arising from her insistence that dancing must be animated by 'the motor of the soul.' . . . The other two authors' contributions to the Isadora Duncan volume are rather slight. I should rather read Mr. Van Vechten on almost any other subject, for he failed to catch the glimpse of Isadora's essential aim which might have carried him beyond bright reportage. Allan Ross Macdougall's essay on 'Isadora Duncan and the Artists' merely serves to prove, in documentary fashion, his assertion that she was portrayed by a larger number of artists than any other woman of her time. The many superb drawings and portraits reproduced along with the article, however, are of enduring value." Cecil Smith

N Y Times p7 Jl 13 '47 750w

MAGRIEL, PAUL DAVID, ed. Nijinsky; an illustrated monograph. 81p $3.50 Holt

B or 92 Nijinsky, Waslaw 47-317

"This book is the first of a series of illustrated monographs on the great dancers of our time." It is a group of photographs of Nijinsky in many of his famous dances, plus a group of essays by different writers. Partial contents: The Russian ballet and Nijinsky, by Carl Van Vechten; Notes on Nijinsky photographs, by Edwin Denby; Nijinsky and Til Eulenspiegel, by R. E. Jones; Note on Nijinsky and Robert Edmond Jones, by Stark Young; The drawings of Nijinsky, by Marsden Hartley; Vaslav Nijinsky bibliography 1910-1945; Nijinsky ballets.

Booklist 43:169 F 1 '47

Reviewed by Margaret Lloyd

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 18 '47 900w

"For ballet fans this will prove a rich source of delight. While no films exist to give those who would like to see Nijinsky in action, these photographs have caught almost his every move and gesture with singular fidelity. The text amplifies the fact and legend, through critical appraisal from the viewpoint of professional criticism. Three special essays, and additional briefer comments supply a rounded picture of the man and his art. Preeminent is the brilliant essay by Robert Edmond Jones."

+ Kirkus 14:566 N 1 '46 90w

Reviewed by Arthur Todd

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 My 18 '47 500w

Reviewed by E. J. R. Isaacs

N Y Times p7 Ja 19 '47 650w

MAGRIEL, PAUL D.—Continued
New Yorker 22:66 D 28 '46 80w

"The greatest dancer of modern times is approached, analyzed and honestly eulogized by six competent jurors. The whole effects a stimulating impact of considered judgment and appraisal."

+ Spring'd Union p11 J1 11 '47 120w

"Carl Van Vechten's essay, written at the time of Nijinsky's last American tour, gives a touch of contemporaneity to the subject, and also indicates that complaints about the quality of Russian ballet seasons were already being made loudly thirty years ago! From Robert Edmond Jones, one of whose first commissions as a young stage designer was the decor for Nijinsky's Tyl Eulenspiegel, comes a diverting picture of the temperamental difficulty of working with the unstable genius. Other and shorter essays by Stark Young, H. T. Parker and Marsden Hartley, together with a bibliography and a chronological table, round out this precious volume."

+ Theatre Arts 31:69 F '47 200w

MAGRIEL, PAUL DAVID, ed. Pavlova; an ill. monograph. 78p $3.50 Holt

B or 92 Pavlova, Anna 47-30355

Monograph on the life and art of Pavlova. The contributors include Carl Van Vechten, Marianne Moore, Harriet Monroe, Muriel Stuard, and Pavlova herself. Illustrated with many photographs. Chronology. Bibliography.

Booklist 43:358 J1 15 '47

Kirkus 15:267 My 15 '47 130w

"Highly recommended for all dance and theatre collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 72:1110 Ag '47 40w

Reviewed by B. H. Haggin
Nation 165:265 S 13 '47 140w

Reviewed by Minna Lederman
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p36
N 23 '47 450w

"Since Pavlova's art involved little, if anything, that was novel, the volume dedicated to her career seeks primarily to recapture the intangible personal qualities which made her seem lovelier than any other ballerina of her time. A brief autobiographical sketch, 'Pages of My Life,' indicates the serious purpose with which Pavlova always kept an exacting goal in sight. More revealing, however, are the excerpts from Mr. Van Vechten's criticism, which in this case are evocative, appreciative and quite adequate to the purpose of the book. Moreover, they provide an interesting, if unconscious, reflection of the niveau of New York taste at the time." Cecil Smith

+ N Y Times p27 J1 13 '47 360w

Theatre Arts 37:82 O '47 50w

Wis Lib Bul 43:114 J1 '47

MAHONY, BERTHA E. (MRS W. D. MILLER), and others, comps. Illustrators of children's books, 1744-1945. 527p il $15 Horn bk.

741.642 Illustrators. Illustration of books. Children's literature—History and criticism 47-31264

"Follows somewhat the same plan as Contemporary illustrators of children's books. Part one contains 10 chapters, each dealing with the history of children's book illustration, or with some phase of its development. Part two is composed of brief biographies of living illustrators; part three contains 132 pages of bibliographies. A handsome book, with many black-and-white illustrations; in several instances the use of color would have been desirable in order to bring out the artist's distinctive qualities. Price may limit its use to reference and larger libraries." Booklist

Booklist 44:64 O 15 '47

Reviewed by Martha King
Chicago Sun Book Week p1a N 19 '47
180w

"Once in a span of years, a book appears that flashes a searchlight on hitherto nebulous territory and shows us what bold, tireless and gifted pioneers in some field of creative endeavor have won and bequeathed to enrich permanently the social heritage. . . . Signaling the best that now exists in art for children, the book is itself an example of the book-maker's high skill in format, typography and arrangement. Exquisitely designed by Beulah Folmsbee, the book includes carefully-compiled and comprehensive indexes, biographies and bibliographies, which make it a most satisfying reference book and record of the choicest work of two centuries of illustrators." E. C. Ince

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 O 11 '47
950w

"A source book of information, and a glamorous history book of techniques in the printing trades and styles in drawing and painting of many nationalities." Ernestine Evans

+ Commonweal 47:147 N 21 '47 800w

"Illustrators of Children's Books" is not 'precious' in its selection of pictures or its biographical sketches. It does contain reliable standards of excellence, linking the treasures of great libraries with book illustrators and printing of today in a fresh and informal way. I look upon it as a powerful incentive to the production of beautiful books for future generations." A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk 23:433 N '47 400w

"The appearance of this volume is nothing short of an event in the book world. . . . the book belongs not only in the children's room of any library but in the reference room as well. Only the reference librarian is in a position to know the importance of this volume which will give him in concise form precisely the information he is looking for. . . . this most important work. . . . is one of the handsomest examples of bookmaking of the year." Theodore Bolton

Library J 72:1534 N 1 '47 550w

Reviewed by J. J. Sweeney
N Y Times p3 N 16 '47 1850w

"This huge volume will be invaluable to librarians, teachers, parents, and anyone else interested in the graphic arts."

+ New Yorker 23:64 Ja 3 '48 240w

Reviewed by Milton Monroe
San Francisco Chronicle p6 N 16 '47
800w

"In the year of sky rocketing prices it is a pleasure to find a book which gives twice its value. We feel a bit like shouting, 'Come one, come all!' I can imagine no finer gift for a family than this large and beautiful book, which is a pleasure to read, to reread, pour over, and consult. Parents who use 'Illustrators of Children's Books' as a guide in the selection of books for the home library, will insure their children of the opportunity for the enjoyment of fine illustrations, a heritage which will enrich their lives and the memories of childhood." Helen Masten

+ Sat R of Lit 30:36 N 15 '47 1150w

MAINE, HAROLD, pseud. See Winslow, W.

MALCOLMSON, MRS ANNE (BURNETT), ed. Song of Robin Hood; music arranged by Grace Castagnetta; designed and il. by Virginia Lee Burton. 123p $5 Houghton
398.2 Robin Hood

Selection of the old Robin Hood ballads, with music. Most of the music is from the original English versions. There are illustrations for each ballad, and for each verse as well. For each ballad the illustrator has selected a native English flower for part of her design.

Booklist 44:117 N 15 '47

Reviewed by Martha King
Chicago Sun Book Week p1a N 19 '47
150w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton
Christian Science Monitor p6 D 11 '47
350w

Commonweal 47:154 N 21 '47 110w

"The appearance of this beautiful book is a memorable event. Every page is distinguished in decoration, breathing a detailed and intricate design which suggests the delicacy of a Persian manuscript. . . The work is all so sensitive and exquisite that it repays careful study. The publishers are to be congratulated upon such a notable achievement." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:441 N '47 200w

"Reading the Ballads . . . one feels how completely the artist has absorbed them. One marvels at the technical skill and the infinite pains she has taken with every drawing—the smallest figures are instinct with life and character and the full-page pictures are at once dramatic and very beautiful." A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk 24:24 Ja '48 240w

"This is a valuable addition to legend and folklore—an item for collectors and students, a definitive version of the Song of Robin Hood."

+ Kirkus 15:580 O 15 '47 200w

"A generally fine example of bookmaking, and a worthy addition to both folklore and music collections." Clara Adams

+ Library J 72:1694 D 1 '47 120w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 D 7 '47 360w

Reviewed by B. A. Botkin

N Y Times p13 D 21 '47 550w

"Certainly one of the best-looking productions of the year."

+ New Yorker 23:136 D 6 '47 80w

"Three gifted people have contributed to this distinctive and meticulously produced modern version of the Song of Robin Hood. . . This slim volume, which will be more treasured by adults than children, will find its rightful place in homes and libraries beside Howard Pyle's 'Merry Adventures of Robin Hood.'" Natalie Mayo

+ San Francisco Chronicle p2 N 16 '47 750w

"Three persons, each distinguished in her own field, have worked together to make this unusual and beautiful book. . . The design and decoration of each page are worth much study—and great admiration. Mrs. Burton gives a full-page drawing for each ballad, and a tiny, perfectly balanced drawing for each verse of the song. The effect is of a very old, handmade manuscript. . . This book has a triple value. It gives the early versions of a much loved tale. It brings to everyone the songs that were sung of Robin Hood and his men, and that can now be sung once more. Its greatest distinction is in its design and its illustrations."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:56 N 15 '47 250w

Springf'd Republican p12B O 19 '47 90w

MALKUS, MRS ALIDA SIMS. Constanca Lona; il. by the author. 311p $2.50 Doubleday 47-11497

Story of a young Spanish girl from Quito, Ecuador, who won an exchange scholarship for college in the United States. For older girls.

Booklist 44:155 D 15 '47

Kirkus 15:433 Ag 15 '47 170w

"Most welcome for its informative bits about university life, student activities, Ecuadorean history, government and aims, the story will seem slow to many girls because of the details and the emphasis upon work rather than fun." M. C. Scoggin

+ N Y Times p54 N 23 '47 170w

"It is a good picture of the contrasting life in the two countries—and a good story."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:52 N 15 '47 50w

MALLERY, OTTO TOD. More than conquerors; building peace on fair trade. 204p $3 Harper

380 Commerce. International cooperation 47-11541

"A discussion of the task of building peace on fair trade. Mr. Mallery sees the United Nations as an organization of 'more than conquerors.' Conquerors have combined in the past to maintain peace and world security. The Holy Alliance is a notable example. The Security Council of the United Nations has much the same function. The Economic Council offers more real hope for peace. The Council and the United Nations, Mr. Mallery hopes, will profit from the economic experience of the United States where a progressively expanding area of free trade has coincided with a progressively improving standard of living." (Current Hist) Index.

"The author's argument is persuasive and is embodied in language which carries the reader along. The book provides a clear-cut program and one well worth investigating."

+ Current Hist 13:356 D '47 120w

Kirkus 15:418 Ag 1 '47 100w

Reviewed by Hans Heymann

N Y Times p43 N 30 '47 900w

MALLERY, RICHARD DAVIS, ed. Masterworks of autobiography; digests of 10 great classics. (Masterworks ser) 755p $4 Doubleday

920 Autobiographies

47-106

Digests of ten classic autobiographies. Contents: The Confessions of Saint Augustine; The Autobiography of Benvenuto Cellini; The Diary of Samuel Pepys; The Autobiography of Benjamin Franklin; The Confessions of Jean Jacques Rousseau; Truth and poetry, by Johann Wolfgang von Goethe; The True story of my life, by Hans Christian Andersen; Apologia pro vita sua, by John Henry Newman; Childhood, boyhood, and youth, by Leo Tolstoy; The Education of Henry Adams, by Henry Adams.

Booklist 43:271 My 1 '47

Bookmark 8:13 Mr '47

"A volume of guaranteed interest and of large importance. These are digests, it is true, which is, understood, deplorable; but the digesting is suavely accomplished."

+ Commonweal 45:454 F 14 '47 70w

Kirkus 14:409 Ag 15 '46 150w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 F 16 '47 100w

MALLESON, LUCY BEATRICE (ANTHONY GILBERT, pseud). By hook or by crook. (Smith & Durrell bk) 186p $2 Barnes, A.S. 47-4139

Detective story.

"Sentimental (or perhaps humanitarian) readers will find special grounds for objection to this novel for a plot which allows a meticulous and warming introduction to the gentle old lady and then murders her as coolly as if she weren't by that time a friend. But the author's real trouble here is the simplicity of the first murder, a fact morally ascertainable but not subject to the test of proof in a courtroom. The second murder, presented as a preventive against discovery, is actually an improbably dangerous step manufactured with other hanky-panky for the villains for their own apprehension. This is lazy melodramatics not sound plotting and even the presence of Mr. Crook cannot conceal it, wonderful fellow that he is." James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p10 Mr 9 '47 320w

"One is pained to report that Mr. Gilbert, after reducing the reader to a blubbering mess, goes and murders certain of his tear-jerking personae to make a holiday for Arthur Crook, a detective billed as 'certainly no gentleman,' and on the comic side, Arthur hops to his task in fine fettle, dealing satisfactorily with all sorts of complications and cornering a dastardly fiend with his usual address." Will Cuppy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p25 Mr 23 '47 180w

"This is without doubt, the best of Mr. Gilbert's Arthur Crook stories." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p32 Ap 13 '47 180w

MALLESON, LUCY B.—Continued

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher
 San Francisco Chronicle p13 Mr 16 '47
 50w
 "Satisfying."
 + Sat R of Lit 30:34 Mr 29 '47 40w

MALLESON, LUCY BEATRICE (ANTHONY GILBERT, pseud). Death in the wrong room.
 218p $2 Barnes, A.S.

47-12229

Detective story.

Booklist 44:185 Ja 15 '48

"Easy and characteristically merry and it has been more tidily planned and capped than a good many of the others for all that its course appears to be rambling." James Sandoe
 + Chicago Sun Book Week D 12 '47 80w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
 N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8
 Ja 4 '48 140w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
 N Y Times p14 D 14 '47 100w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
 San Francisco Chronicle p19 D 21 '47
 90w

"Best British brand."
 + Sat R of Lit 30:28 D 20 '47 50w

MALLESON, LUCY BEATRICE (ANNE MEREDITH, pseud). The rich woman. 309p
 $3 Random house

47-4069

This novel is based in part on an actual case which shocked England in the Victorian nineties. Elizabeth "Smith" spent almost a year of her childhood in a gruesome orphanage for unwanted babies, and escaped only just in time to save her life. A wealthy squire adopted Elizabeth and brought her up as his own daughter, but the horror of her early experience stayed with her always. When she married it was to an early labor leader, who made her life difficult, but Elizabeth's own quiet strength made her "a rich woman."

Booklist 44:134 D 1 '47

Kirkus 15:481 S 1 '47 120w

"Both men and women will read this romance with a social background, and it is recommended for general purchase." Katherine Tappert

Library J 72:1375 O 1 '47 70w

"The background is the English labor movement, but the stilted prose strangles the story." Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20 N
 2 '47 100w

"Miss Meredith has taken on more than she can handle—granting the vitamin prose—but vitality is not the cheapest thing in the marketplace. And Miss Meredith has enough of that to get a glimpse of the moon under her own steam." S. K.

N Y Times p30 N 9 '47 400w

"Miss Meredith does not judge or preach. Her dissection is subtle, her vision unblurred, and her presentation authentic. What is more, and this should be enough, 'The Rich Woman' is something to enjoy." C. M. Brown
 + Sat R of Lit 30:17 D 27 '47 450w

"A writer who centers her tale upon a single character as Miss Meredith does must see that the outward narrative is in adequate correspondence with that character's hidden, inner history, and this itself must be related directly and constantly to the theme of the novel. The Rich Woman suffers because of the author's inability to make up her mind what her theme is, and which of the manifold events of a long life are, consequently, significant in relation to it. The resulting disproportion is most marked." D. S. Savage

Spec 178:376 Ap 4 '47 480w

"It is a story at all times interesting, and in its earlier sections grim and affecting. . . . There are evidences here of substantial narrative power, of a gift for feminine scenes, and of a pleasing sensibility. But the novel is not all of a piece; the incursions into politics (as opposed to Miss Meredith's strong sense of social justice) are always a little forced; either they occupy too much space or not space enough. The last twenty or thirty years are treated too cursorily, and except for the drawing of a moral the whole of Elizabeth's tale is told when she has made her decision about Alan."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p101 Mr 8 '47
 320w

MALLETTE, GERTRUDE ETHEL. Once is forever. 250p $2 Doubleday

46-11956

Story of a brave girl's attempts to rehabilitate her fiancé, who had been crippled and blinded in the war. Her aunt at first objected to Adrien's plan, but was won over and helped others to readjust themselves to civilian life.

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold
 Christian Science Monitor p14 My 29
 '47 240w

"The author creates real people that are good without being stuffy. Mystery in Blue by the same author showed a good sense of plot and responsible values. This book has those qualities too, though the plot is more complex, the characterization more ambitious."
 + Kirkus 14:425 S 1 '46 90w

"Will be helpful to girls meeting disabled war veterans and enjoyable as a story to later teen-age girls." E. E. Frank
 + Library J 71:1811 D 15 '46 70w

"An interesting novel on a timely theme." R. A. H.

+ Sat R of Lit 29:58 N 9 '46 30w
 Wis Lib Bul 43:41 F '47

MALLETTE, GERTRUDE ETHEL. Priceless moment. 214p $2 Doubleday

47-31100

A combination of career story and mystery for older girls. Colley bought a movie camera and decided to earn money by taking home movies on a subscription basis. She succeeded very well, helped save a friend in trouble, and solved a mystery besides.

Booklist 44:37 S 15 '47

Reviewed by M. B. King
 + Chicago Sun Book Week O 18 '47 110w

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold
 Christian Science Monitor p7 Ja 15 '48
 250w

Kirkus 15:367 Jl 15 '47 85w

"Recommended." S. J. Johnson
 Library J 72:1382 O 1 '47 40w
 Wis Lib Bul 43:158 N '47

MALM, DOROTHEA. Journal of the Lady Pamela Foxe. 278p $2.75 Prentice-Hall

47-3372

Novel in diary form, presenting the life and love of a spirited young woman, Lady Pamela Foxe, who loved and lost and loved again in the London and Boston, Massachusetts, of the 1700's.

"'Pamela Foxe' exemplifies that mediocre type of fiction which escapes out of present complexities into a phony past for a sentimentally costumed love-story free-wheeling on inherited wealth and snobbishly outfitted with titles of nobility and antique airs. However, 'Pamela Foxe' is much more than just another escapist historical romance, and it presents Dorothea Malm as a highly promising writer." Warren Beck

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Ag 31 '47
 550w

Kirkus 15:263 My 15 '47 120w

"Untidily phrased, with author torn between the 18th and 20th century styles in writing; stupid and vapid—but not as bad as Kitty and not as good, though less sexy, as Forever Amber." M. H. McElfresh

— Library J 72:1108 Ag '47 60w

Reviewed by Margaret Evans

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14
N 9 '47 375w

"Technicolor, take it away." E. S. Holsaert
— N Y Times p36 S 7 '47 270w

"'Pamela Foxe' is a simple and well constructed novel, without the banalities of style of 'Forever Amber' or its tedious repetitions. Its small quota of coarseness is intrinsic, inevitable in the age and story, never merely gratuitous. It is the right sort of yarn for the reader whose tastes include the well-written cynical romance." R. A. Cordell

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:16 S 6 '47 700w
Springf'd Republican p9B N 9 '47 90w

MALONE, TED, pseud. See Russell, F. A.

MALVERN, GLADYS. According to Thomas.
272p $2.75 McBride

Thomas, Saint, apostle—Fiction 47-3261

A novel which tells the story of Thomas of Antioch, that disciple of Christ who is known as 'The Doubter, because tho he wanted to believe yet he had to be convinced of Jesus' resurrection.

"[This] expansion of the Biblical story justifies itself. After the overwriting and the dubious taste which have marred so many ventures of this sort, its merits are refreshing."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p39
My 11 '47 100w

"Most readers will find 'According to Thomas' an illuminating, though not profound, treatment of an ageless story." N. K. Burger
N Y Times p16 Mr 23 '47 380w

MALVERN, GLADYS. Ann Lawrence of old New York; il. by Corinne Malvern. 203p $2.25 Messner

47-2263

This historical novel for girls tells a story of New York city in 1811. Young Ann Lawrence and her brothers had a farm far out in the country—or so they thought—but when the city planners decided to expand, the farm had to go. At first it seemed a tragedy but finally all worked out for the best.

Booklist 43:275 My 1 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p8 My 25 '47
110w

"As a picture of a stage in the growth of the great city the story holds interest, especially for those who know something of the geography of New York City. And older girls will enjoy the love element." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:218 My '47 90w

"A first rate story for girls in the teens."

+ Kirkus 15:100 F 15 '47 170w

"Seventeen-year-old Ann's superhuman capability in running the Lawrence farm and keeping a family of seven orphans together place her out of this world. Picture of the times is more convincing. Suitable for supplementary reading about this period but not a first purchase. For older girls." E. F. Clift

Library J 72:739 My 1 '47 60w

MANDER, ALFRED ERNEST. Logic for the millions. 206p $3 Philosophical lib.

160 Logic 47-3509

In this book, by an English psychologist, an attempt is made to teach the ordinary person how to think. Practical examples are used to show how muddled and feeble thinking may be avoided and clear thinking achieved. Brief index.

"Parts of this book would perhaps be hard reading for the average high school student, for the author is not as careful as he might be to simplify his vocabulary. But most high school students or persons of equivalent education and mental maturity, could read most of it, and they make up the majority of the 'millions' who should. . . . There is a little formal logic in it, near the end, and this is useful; but most of it will strike the intelligent reader as plain common sense. Perhaps something still simpler is needed for the less intelligent."

+ Christian Century 64:594 My 7 '47 140w

"Clearly organized with the fundamental rules of thumb textually and typographically emphasized. Not a text but in its practical approach may well precede 'Thouless for many readers since it is cast in simpler language and more generally experienced situation. Recommended." R. E. Kingery

+ Library J 72:459 Mr 15 '47 80w

"The author writes clearly and very wisely uses an abundance of example." A. F.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 My 25 '47 60w

School & Society 65:447 Je 14 '47 10w

Springf'd Union p11 My 30 '47 150w

"If you want to know what 'belief' is and 'what you may believe' what 'evidence' is and 'generalization,' 'explanation,' 'theories,' and 'deductive reasoning' (these are chapter titles), here is a good, sound, simple handling of these themes. It is a valuable book." Ordway Tead

+ Survey 83:325 N '47 350w

MANLY, GARDENER BURNELL. Drake's automobile engine repair manual. 377p il $3 Drake, F.J.

629.25 Automobile engines 47-697

"A practical instruction and reference work on modern automobile engines and allied subjects." (Subtitle) Index.

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '47

"Practical manual on automobile engine repairing. . . . For the repair man and those making their own repairs." L. A. Eales

+ Library J 72:80 Ja 1 '47 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:56 O '46

MANN, THOMAS. Essays of three decades; tr. from the German by H. T. Lowe-Porter. 472p $4 Knopf

834 Literature 47-4148

Sixteen non-political essays, dealing chiefly with literature, and also with music and psychoanalysis, written from 1910 to 1939. Some of the subjects are: Goethe, Tolstoy, Wagner, and Freud.

Booklist 44:30 S 15 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p11 My 25 '47 70w

Kirkus 15:232 Ap 15 '47 180w

"Few essayists of our times compare with Mann, rarely have more pertinent reflections on Cervantes, Lessing, Goethe, Schopenhauer, and Tolstoy been printed. The searching analysis of Goethe's Faust, which opens the volume, is especially noteworthy." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 72:886 Je 1 '47 130w

Reviewed by Ronald Peacock

Manchester Guardian p3 N 18 '47 420w

Reviewed by Vincent Sheean

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 Je 15 '47 1350w

"I cannot think of any other living novelist who is as conscious as Mann of his historic place or of his cultural antecedents. And his intellectual range is both unique and refreshing, in a time when the literary man is in danger of succumbing to the cult of creative feeling and critical ignorance. Unfortunately, Mann's Teutonic accent (as well as his grandiloquent effect) is somewhat alien to contemporary sensibility. For all its poise and subtlety, one sometimes feels that his style is not so much the style of a man as the style of an epoch. Whatever we may think of Mann's shortcomings, the fact remains that he is one of the last survivors of the great European tradition. And if he is not, as he said of Goethe, one of its darlings, he is certainly one of its creative sons." William Phillips

+ — N Y Times p1 Je 15 '47 1600w

"An excellent critique of a great deal of Dr. Mann's cosmic thinking is, it seems to me, contained in something he says about

MANN, THOMAS -Continued

Tolstoy in the essay on 'Anna Karenina.' 'The immensity of his writings,' he remarks, 'sometimes resulted in a gigantic clumsiness which forces a respectful smile.'" Hamilton Basso
New Yorker 23:92 Je 14 '47 600w

"The new volume, unfortunately, does not contain all Mann's non-political essays. Nothing he has written since 1939 is in it, nor are some of the best essays earlier printed in 'Past Masters' (1933). . . Nevertheless, it is a doubly rich book: rich as treatment of the topics discussed, rich as the revelation of Mann's interests and opinions. Where else is there anything quite like Mann's essays? Neither entirely informal nor entirely systematic, neither merely personal nor severely objective, they are in range and depth among the most remarkable things in all criticism." Eric Bentley

+ Sat R of Lit 30:9 Je 14 '47 1400w

Reviewed by John Midgley

Spec 179:720 D 5 '47 900w

Time 49:99 Je 16 '47 1150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p663 D 20 '47 1700w

"Novelist and essayist are in Thomas Mann so nearly identical that they can hardly be judged separately. But if his more recent fiction has sometimes seemed blurred by an extravagantly discursive manner, his essays have undoubtedly gained steadily in that richly entertaining 'plasticity' which he has himself so often praised in the great artists of the nineteenth century. The special charm of these essays lies, at any rate, in the fact that they are the work of a story-teller who has been particularly successful where he could fuse autobiographical elements with an extraordinary talent for anecdotal and conversational elegance." Victor Lange

+ Yale R n s 37:166 autumn '47 900w

MANNERS, DAVID X. Dead to the world.
212p $2 McKay

47-30796

Detective story.

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p36 S 7 '47 200w

"Laudably novel concept, handled with a disappointing minimum of ingenuity, consistency or wit." Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ag 31 '47 70w

Sat R of Lit 30:34 S 13 '47 40w

MANNERS, WILLIAM. Father and the angels.
224p $2.75 Dutton

818 Jews—Social life and customs 47-30446

Father in this particular case was the rabbi of the Jewish community in Zanesville, Ohio. This wise, unworldly man is pictured lovingly by his son.

Booklist 44:30 S 15 '47

Reviewed by J. J. Weinstein

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Ag 31 '47 750w

"As a catalyst, as a mere man, as holy man and prophet, the Rabbi is a figure of good deeds and kind thoughts, even when Mother disapproves, when his sons go their own ways, seeking strange escapes, when his congregation failed to understand, A fresh approach." + Kirkus 15:301 Je 1 '47 170w

"Sometimes Mr. Manners lays it on thick. His old man couldn't have been that comical, except that life really is funnier than fiction. Father lived by trust, trusted even second-hand automobile salesmen. Salesmen have a hard time, he would say. Father, devoted alike to William James and Benny Leonard, was—is—an American citizen long to remember." Ernestine Evans

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ag 17 '47 650w

"One critic called James Street's novel, 'The Gauntlet,' the Protestant 'Going My Way.' Perhaps this warm-hearted, true story of father's Zanesville ministry should be described as a Jewish 'Going My Way.' It deserves that title as much as any book this reviewer has read." R. M.

+ N Y Times p32 S 21 '47 550w

Reviewed by Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p22 S 28 '47 70w

Wis Lib Bul 43:151 N '47

MANNHEIM, HERMANN. Criminal justice and social reconstruction. (Int. lib. of sociology and social reconstruction) 290p $4 Oxford 343 Criminal law. Crime and criminals.

Justice, Administration of [46-7493]

"An attempt to indicate how social reconstruction might effect a change for the better in the field of criminal justice. The author, who is a lecturer in criminology in the University of London, begins with a broad critique of the excessively retrospective nature of criminal justice, then proceeds to a detailed analysis of the multiple aspects of criminal law today." (San Francisco Chronicle) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Nathaniel Cantor

Am J Soc 53:235 N '47 1050w

"This volume presents a compactly organized survey of recent trends of thought in the field of criminal justice and a twenty-five-point working program for the future. While many of the suggestions advanced will undoubtedly prove highly controversial and may not be realizable at any early date, the volume should be useful and stimulating not only to the practical worker in the field, but to the discriminating general reader as well. As an integral part of a series of volumes on social reconstruction, it has accomplished its purpose very well indeed." F. R. Aumann

+ Am Pol Sci R 41:790 Ag '47 800w

Reviewed by J. B. Waite

Ann Am Acad 25:170 Jl '47 400w

"This is a useful book, written by a specialist in language which the layman may comprehend." R. A. Eastwood

+ Manchester Guardian p3 S 18 '46 300w

Reviewed by C. M. Craven

New Statesman & Nation 32:305 O 26 '46 900w

San Francisco Chronicle p23 My 11 '47 80w

Reviewed by E. H. Sutherland

Social Forces 26:115 O '47 350w

"Dr. Hermann Mannheim's reputation is assured. 'Criminal Justice' will enhance it. This is a more mature book than 'The Dilemma of Penal Reform.' . . Unfortunately, perhaps, this latest work may also win for Dr. Mannheim the reputation of writing only for the erudite; his display of source material is rarely equalled except in volumes written by academic persons for other academic persons to read. . . His constructive approach to the fundamental problems of law and punishment should be presented in such a way that it is palatable to the Member of Parliament, the hard-worked progressive lawyer, the higher Civil servant; none of these is likely to be influenced by the multitude of footnotes, references to which impede the reader. Dr. Mannheim's own knowledge of his subject is so impressive that he has no need to call a cloud of witnesses."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p536 N 2 '46 1150w

MANNING, CLARENCE AUGUSTUS. Story of the Ukraine, 326p il $3.75 Philosophical lib.

947.7 Ukraine—History 47-3132

"Story of that much disputed area, the Ukraine, its people throughout the ages that it has been on the historical scene. Author traces the glories and failures of the Ukrainians and shows the efforts they have made to secure their own independence. Despite their oppression, the people have kept their own language and traditions." (Library J) Index. Bibliography

Reviewed by D. F. White

Am Hist R 53:172 O '47 320w

Reviewed by A. N. Dragnich

Am Pol Sci R 41:816 Ag '47 300w

"In a subsequent edition, a few errors should be corrected and the bibliography possibly enlarged but, as it is, this newest story of the Ukraine will certainly contribute to a sympathetic understanding of one of the most difficult problems of eastern Europe." O. Halecki

+ Ann Am Acad 253:221 S '47 360w

Christian Science Monitor p11 J1 5 '47 240w

"Rise and fall of the Cossacks is interestingly related and their interrelation with Ukrainian history is fully told for the general reader. This book points out once again that a definitive history of the Ukraine with notes and sources is still lacking for the English reader. Recommended." W. A. Kalenich

+ Library J 72:459 Mr 15 '47 130w

"Professor Manning, teacher of Eastern European languages at Columbia University, has written as complete and full-bodied a history of the Ukraine as there is in the English language. The book bears evidence of indefatigable research and of overwhelming though often partisan sympathy for the Ukraine. The writing is lucid and brisk, which makes the book highly readable." Maurice Hindus

+ Sat R of Lit 30:15 My 17 '47 700w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:166 Je '47 250w

MANNING, OLIVIA (MRS R. D. SMITH). Reluctant rescue; the story of Stanley's rescue of Emin Pasha from Equatorial Africa [Eng title: Remarkable expedition]. 304p $3.50 Doubleday

967.5 Schnitzer, Eduard, known as Emin Pasha. Stanley, Sir Henry Morton. Africa. Central—History 47-11067

An account of the relief expedition into Africa, which left Zanzibar in February, 1887, led by Henry H. Stanley, who earlier had rescued Dr Livingstone. This expedition was to rescue Edouard Schnitzer, better known as Emin Pasha, who had been appointed Governor of Equatoria Province and had been cut off from the world for years. The expedition was successful in finding Emin, but hardly successful in anything else. Bibliography. Index.

"A by no means inconsiderable piece of research and reconstruction, one questions, however, how widely it will attract interest."

Kirkus 15:384 J1 15 '47 140w

"Is it throughout a scholarly, complete, well written account of this famous story, well worth reading." M. C. Hubbard

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p28 O 26 '47 700w

Time 50:106 O 20 '47 800w

MANNING, WILLIAM THOMAS, bp. Be strong in the Lord; sermons and addresses on various occasions. 196p $2.50 Morehouse

252 Sermons 47-20026

"This volume is a collection of twenty-five sermons and addresses delivered on various occasions, from the Bishop's address on the day of his consecration, May 11, 1921, to his final sermon as Bishop of New York, Dec. 29, 1946. They deal with a variety of subjects, rather more ecclesiastical than religious, which have arisen in the last twenty-five years, and are representative works of Manning from his fifty-fifth year to his eightieth." N Y Times

Christian Century 64:169 Je 18 '47 20w

"The book will be of most interest to the author's friends and associates, to readers of the Episcopal communion and residents of the Diocese of New York." Paul Ramsey

+ N Y Times p26 My 18 '47 700w

MANTELL, CHARLES LETNAM. Water-soluble gums. 279p il $6 Reinhold

668.4 Gums and resins 47-5371

"The group of commercial products considered in this volume includes tree gums such as arabic and tragacanth; seaweed colloids such as agar and Irish moss; extracts of seeds such as quince, locust and guar; manufactured dextrins; and gelatine, both plant and animal. Altogether there is material on several hundred substances that have the common characteristic of not dissolving but dispersing in water or absorbing it to form commercially useful colloids. Sources, harvesting and marketing are described, but the greatest emphasis is placed on chemistry and applications. For the latter aspects of the subject, the author has made a thorough survey of the literature which is cited in numerous footnote references." N Y New Tech Bks

"The author of this volume renders a service to science and industry in coordinating current information and revealing the gaps in our knowledge of an important group of commercial substances." H. C. Parmelee

+ Chem Eng 54:264 N '47 250w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '47

"Very well written history and discussion." L. A. Eales

+ Library J 72:1275 S 15 '47 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:50 J1 '47

MANTLE, BURNS, ed. Best plays of 1946-47; and the Year book of the drama in America. 555p il $4 Dodd

808.82 Dramas—Collections

The "ten best" chosen are: All my sons, by Arthur Miller; The iceman cometh, by Eugene O'Neill; Joan of Lorraine, by Maxwell Anderson; Another part of the forest, by Lillian Hellman; Years ago, by Ruth Gordon; John loves Mary, by Norman Krasna; The fatal weakness, by George Kelly; The story of Mary Surratt, by John Patrick; Christopher Blake, by Moss Hart; Brigadoon, by A. J. Lerner and Frederick Loewe. Contains also reviews of the season in New York, Chicago, San Francisco, and southern California, and a statistical summary. A new feature is a chapter on Dance drama. Indexes.

Booklist 44:148 D 15 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 N 15 '47 140w

"Highly recommended." George Freedley

+ Library J 72:1780 D 15 '47 60w

"Invaluable annual." C. V. Terry

+ N Y Times p45 N 30 '47 360w

Reviewed by Paul Speegle

San Francisco Chronicle p9 N 30 '47 150w

MANUS, MAX. 9 lives before thirty [written in collaboration with Dorothy Giles]. 328p il $3 Doubleday

940.5481481 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, Norwegian 47-30083

An account of the author's experiences as one of the leaders of the Norwegian underground, especially his exploits as chief of the famous Oslo Gang which harried the Gestapo in Norway for five years.

Booklist 43:183 F 15 '47

Reviewed by William Brown

Canadian Forum 27:23 Ap '47 160w

"The story would make an admirable motion-picture, for almost any scenario writer would know how to re-evaluate the elements and make the thrills thrilling. The present account should be read by all who want to know what went on behind the German iron curtain. Still it is a pity that it has not been shaped up into a more exciting memoir. Manus deserves better for he is truly one of the heroes of our time." Louis Zara

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p8 F 9 '47 370w

Kirkus 14:587 N 15 '46 170w

"Recommended for absorbing interest and atmosphere." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 72:159 Ja 15 '47 140w

"If his writing is schoolboyish, his exploits certainly were not; in a sense, he personified the unknown but daring men who did so much to maintain his nation's reputation in the eyes of the world. If he had been a better reporter his factual account of the Norwegian underground would have been at least a valuable commentary on that movement's activities under the German boot. Instead he gives an honest but awkward and jerky resume of a series of incidents, many of them totally unrelated to the main thread of his book—Norwegian resistance—and all of them suffering from the staleness of prolonged resuscitation."

MANUS, MAX—Continued
W. M. Kunstler

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12
Ja 26 '47 450w

Reviewed by Austin Stevens

N Y Times p30 Je 8 '47 650w

"Mr. Manus's book is modest, considering that he was the man who not only devised the schemes for destroying many important factories and ships but also carried them out, and it is exciting in a way that fiction rarely is."
+ New Yorker 22:87 Ja 25 '47 120w

MARBERRY, M. MARION. Golden voice; a biography of Isaac Kallloch. 376p $4 Farrar, Straus

B or 92 Kallloch, Isaac Smith 47-4568

Biography of a mid-nineteenth century American preacher, lecturer, college president, lawyer, mayor of San Francisco—a man both famous and notorious in his own day and practically unheard of since then. The author's interest in his subject was first aroused by seeing a reference to the fact that Richard H. Dana (author of Two Years Before the Mast) was chief counsel for the defense in Kallloch's trial for adultery in Boston in 1857.

Reviewed by Charles Leavelle

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 S 7 '47
400w

Kirkus 15:154 Mr 1 '47 160w

"Author's painstaking and excellent research job is rendered completely unobtrusive by his colorful treatment of his subject. Recommended for large public libraries." Clarence Gorchels
+ Library J 72:731 My 1 '47 80w

"Isaac Kallloch's life contained everything a biographer could wish for, and Mr. Marberry has done a capital job. Here is easily one of the most interesting biographies of the season. The incredible Kallloch becomes believable, if not admirable, nor is the book a once-over-lightly job. It is probably the definitive work on Kallloch, a man who needed doing, and this reviewer enjoyed it from first to last. There is a tremendous bibliography, indicating something of the author's wide search, and an imposing index." Stewart Holbrook
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2
Je 1 '47 950w

"The Golden Voice' is written with vigor and deals with consistently melodramatic incidents, so that the reader's interest does not lag. Whether or not Mr. Kallloch is of sufficient importance in American history to rate a long biography, beyond doubt he deserves some recognition as an ambiguous, enigmatical, and altogether amazing specimen of Homo sapiens." G. R. Stewart

+ N Y Times p6 Je 15 '47 600w

Springf'd Republican p5B S 14 '47 320w

MARBLE, MARGARET SHARP. Die by night. 182p $2 Rinehart

47-17696

Detective story.

Booklist 43:360 Jl 15 '47

"Nice going, with plenty of all right lingo and interest sustained."
+ Kirkus 15:81 F 1 '47 90w

"Lively and literate." E. H.

+ New Repub 116:35 Ap 14 '47 30w

"Miss Marble is good at handling a slight case of love between the detective-narrator and a mystery girl named Steve. Add any amount of harmless chatter, some pretty fair stabs at the wacky style, a surprise, and you have a light, readable puzzle. The author deserves a medal for omitting those synthetic fright sequences." Will Cuppy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p19
Ap 6 '47 170w

"The chief interest of the story lies in the descriptions of the various eccentrics who make up its cast of characters." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p25 Ap 6 '47 180w

"The solution . . . is logical enough, if you don't mind wading through a lot of whimsy to reach it."

New Yorker 23:116 Ap 19 '47 90w

"Some of the season's more agreeable writing wasted on one of the season's most incoherent plots." Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ap 13
'47 90w

Sat R of Lit 30:30 Je 14 '47 40w

MARBLE, MARGARET SHARP. The lady forgot. 241p $2.50 Harper

47-661

Mystery story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ja 12 '47
260w

"Attractive accessories of montage (California), dialogue, make this elegant if a little excessive entertainment."

+ Kirkus 14:626 D 15 '46 120w

"An absorbing adventure into the mind as well as a clever detective story." E. H.

+ New Repub 116:40 F 10 '47 90w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16
Ja 26 '47 250w

"It is a novel and most effective way of presenting a mystery story about a neurotic woman, harassed by uncertainty as to what sort of person she really is." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p34 Ja 26 '47 180w

"The psychiatry involved is probably authentic enough, but it doesn't shape up particularly well as a mystery."

New Yorker 22:96 Ja 13 '47 110w

"It's all a little self-consciously psychiatric and you may resent the precise psychological diagramming of every motion and motive; but it makes an unusual and solid novel." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ja 12 '47
100w

"Nervous, highly-colored writing capably conveys state of mind of amnesiac Andrea—but one doesn't care much who liquidated Louis! Candid case history."

Sat R of Lit 30:28 Ja 18 '47 50w

MARCHIONNA, FREDERICK. Butalastic polymers, their preparation and applications; a treatise on synthetic rubbers. 642p $8.50 Reinhold

678 Rubber, Artificial 46-7618

"The term 'butalastics' was suggested by Professor Ernst A. Hauser as a generic name for elastic and plastic polymers of butadiene compounds. Such polymers are the subject of this book, whether they are of interest as rubber substitutes or in some other way. The work is essentially an organized summary of the immense literature pertaining to the subject. The history, chemistry, processing and applications of the butalastics are covered. Statements made in the text are keyed to numbered references in the extensive bibliographies appended to each chapter. Three indexes are provided: an index to authors, an index to catalysts of polymerization, and an index to subjects." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:80 Ja 1 '47 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:68 O '46

"The book brings together in one volume much detailed information not otherwise readily accessible."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:11 Mr '47 250w

MARCUSE, LUDWIG. Plato and Dionysius; a double biography; tr. by Joel Ames from the German. 243p $3.50 Knopf

184.1 Plato. Dionysius the Elder, tyrant of Syracuse. Dionysius the Younger, tyrant of Syracuse 47-30610

"Author is exiled German literary critic. . . Philologists of early days found little trustworthy information about Plato's life, yet Marcuse's essay throws light both on the author of the Republic, who symbolizes the Athenian democracy, and on his adversary Dionysius, dictator of Syracuse. Indirectly this becomes a tract for our times, although the author stresses his conviction that in this parallel 'is no falsification, no invention, no theatricalizing.'" Library J

"Students of government and history—and many other readers with an interest in books off the beaten track, will find this lively discussion . . . a fascinating study."

+ Kirkus 15:330 Je 15 '47 170w

"In spite of occasional wordiness, book makes excellent reading, especially chapter on trial and death of Socrates. Heartily recommended for college and larger public libraries." F. E. Hirsch

+ — Library J 72:1104 Ag '47 130w

"The readers of the book will get a double stimulus, one from a dramatic story dramatically told and the other from a glimpse of how a philosophically minded idealist who resembles Mazzini more than Plato might have reacted in Plato's time. To have read the book is a worth-while experience." Max Radin

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p28 D 7 '47 1250w

MARGOLIN, LEO J. Paper bullets; a brief story of psychological warfare in World war II. 149p il $2.50 Froben press, inc, 4 St Luke's pl, N.Y. 14

940.5488 World war, 1939-1945—Propaganda 46-5070

"In 'Paper Bullets,' Leo Margolin, who was news editor of the Psychological Warfare Branch in the Mediterranean and European Theaters, gives the first complete detailed account of both Allied and enemy propaganda in this war." San Francisco Chronicle

"Fourteen short chapters written in glib journalese. Most of the information which the book contains will be familiar to anyone who has studied the magazines in his favorite barber shop. The book contains fifty well-selected illustrations of leaflets used by the Allies, the Germans, and the Japanese. Adults will be well advised just to look at the pictures." P. R. Sweet

+ — Am Hist R 52:355 Ja '47 160w

Reviewed by William Hogan

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ja 19 '47 200w

"This book is much more than a history of war propaganda on both sides; it is a declaration of the importance of ideas in a modern world where easy transmission of these ideas makes them potent weapons of man and his governments. Margolin tells much that is already known by every GI who has been overseas and heard or seen enemy propaganda, and he tells much that should be known by both GIs and civilians when he points out so clearly what fools most Americans have been in furthering the hatreds and prejudices sown on our soil by the enemy." J. E. Klein

+ Sat R of Lit 29:8 JI 13 '46 1150w

MARIN-MARIE, pseud. See Durand-Couppel de Saint-Front, M. M. P.

MARJARUM, EDWARD WAYNE. How to use a book. 111p $1.50 Rutgers univ. press

028 Study. Books and reading. 47-30241

"[Describes] how to retain what you read, how to develop habits of rapid reading. It explains the parts of books from title pages through indexes, and the functions they serve.

A chapter is included on how to find books in libraries and what to do with them once found. There is a thorough-going list of the more general basic reference works, and a glossary of more than one hundred abbreviated and complete terms common in books." (Publisher's note) Index.

Booklist 43:267 My 1 '47

"A helpful, literate, and totally unassuming (in spite of its title) guide. . . This little treatise is designed mainly for those who read for profit and information, but can be recommended also to those who read for pleasure."

+ New Yorker 23:114 Ap 19 '47 170w

"An excellent little handbook." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 Mr 22 '47 650w

"This is a well-written book and a highly useful one, but only for the person to whom a library is as strange as the Louvre." W. W. Brickman

School & Society 65:233 Mr 29 '47 140w

Wis Lib Bul 43:93 Je '47

MARKHAM, REUBEN HENRY. Tito's imperial communism. 292p $4 Univ. of N.C. press

949.7 Yugoslavia. Tito (Josip Brozovich). Communism—Yugoslavia 47-30579

A history of Tito's rise to power in Yugoslavia and an indictment of his use of that power in his own country and in his relations with other Balkan states. The author does not hesitate to criticize England and the United States for their part in the story he tells.

Reviewed by J. S. Roucek

Ann Am Acad 254:198 N '47 320w

Booklist 44:65 O 15 '47

Christian Century 64:1178 O 1 '47 280w

"This book will stir a lot of people. Mr. Markham writes in vigorous black and white; his burning conviction does not go in for gray shadings. He provides an insight into the tides and complexities of a region whose new rulers today are directly threatening, in the mountains of Greece, the last 'bastion of the West' in southeastern Europe." W. H. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 S 6 '47 700w

Current Hist 13:227 O '47 60w

Kirkus 15:448 Ag 15 '47 120w

Reviewed by Constantine Poulos

Nation 166:49 Ja 10 '48 1000w

"R. H. Markham's lively and authoritative report on the Yugoslavian tragedy makes especially timely reading in view of the recent left-wing Protestant declaration that 'there is today in Yugoslavia complete freedom of worship and respect for religious beliefs and institutions.' Mr. Markham, himself a former Congregationalist missionary and until recently the Balkan correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor, is a wise veteran of more than thirty years' experience in Eastern Europe." Leigh White

+ N Y Times p5 S 7 '47 850w

"If Mr. Markham's book is the best yet written on a bitterly controversial subject, it is because he has the best background. Here is no hurried traveler with a lunch basket in one hand and a round-trip ticket in the other, but a trained observer who has spent the larger part of his adult life in the Balkans, learning the life and the languages by intimate contact." George Creel

+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 S 21 '47 850w

"White-hot wrath, even when combined with long experience, is perhaps not the best formula for historical commentary. By the use of emotional rhetoric, by false emphasis, and by giving disproportionately full treatment to some aspects of his subject while neglecting others, Mr. Markham frequently misleads the reader, who should not be disarmed by apparent efforts at impartiality." R. L. Wolff

Sat R of Lit 30:12 S 13 '47 1400w

MARKLEY, KLARE STEPHEN. Fatty acids, their chemistry and physical properties. (Fats and oils ser) 668p il $10 Interscience.

547.7 Acids, Fatty 47-5746

"First technical monograph in the series Fats and Oils which will treat the whole field of fat and oil products and their general physical and chemical behavior. This volume presents facts and data pertaining to the reactions and properties of the fatty acids and, especially, of the long-chain fatty acids which comprise the building stones of all natural fats, oils and waxes." Library J

Reviewed by G. W. McBride
+ Chem Eng 54:263 O '47 500w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:1275 S 15 '47 70w
N Y New Tech Bks 32:43 J1 '47

MARLIO, LOUIS. Aluminum cartel. 130p $1.50 Brookings

338.88 Aluminum industry and trade.
Trusts, Industrial 47-4535

Study of the operation of the aluminum cartel from the foundation of the Aluminum association in 1901 to the outbreak of World war II.

Reviewed by Henry Reiff
Am Pol Sci R 41:1037 O '47 250w

Reviewed by G. W. McBride
Chem Eng 54:273 Ag '47 450w

"An excellent introduction to the whole cartel problem."

+ Christian Century 64:798 Ja 25 '47 30w

"The small volume is easy and worth while reading." S. J. O'Mahoney

+ Sat R of Lit 30:13 J1 12 '47 950w

MARLOWE, GEORGE FRANCIS. Churches of old New England; their architecture and their architects, their pastors and their people; il. with photographs by Samuel Chamberlain. 222p $3.75 Macmillan

277.4 Churches—New England 47-4823

"Mr. Marlowe, judiciously selecting from each New England state churches of both architectural merit and historical interest, provides a popular guidebook for trippers and a fascinating fireside volume for the general reader. His descriptions of the old meeting-houses are fully supplemented by information about the colonial architects, pastors, and congregations. From diaries and church records he reconstructs the lives of the people intimately connected with these beautiful old buildings. He has so skillfully interspersed trenchant sayings and anecdotes that he brings many crusty characters vividly before the reader. . . Samuel Chamberlain provides fifty-four excellent pictures." (Sat R of Lit) Bibliography.

Booklist 44:3 S 1 '47

"The charm of the book is marred only by the author's mild and rather condescending amusement at the frailties and foibles of the Puritans, and by the tendency, which he shares with many, to criticize their intolerance from the modern American point of view instead of seeing it as the local manifestation of an intolerance universal in Christendom in their time."

+ Christian Century 64:951 Ag 6 '47 280w

"Here, without dispute, is one of the most delightful books in recent days to reach the crowded desk of a harried reviewer. No sordid details of degraded persons, no controversial discussions of those bewildered world events which demand so much attention from a responsible public. Nothing, in this case, except a pleasant text, filled with mellow information and well-spiced anecdote, plus photographs by that master of the medium, Samuel Chamberlain."

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 2 '47 650w

Commonweal 46:339 J1 18 '47 280w

"This should be a fascinating book for architects and churchmen and for all others who treasure the cultural values of our early history. There should be plus sales in travel book departments, and among regional books."

+ Kirkus 15:62 F 1 '47 210w

"His discerning eye catches, in the present study of New England churches as in his previous books, all of the nobility of line and all of the simple beauty of Puritan architecture which seem to elude so many other artisans of the camera. . . The running text of Mr. Marlowe, undeniably rich though it is, fails somehow to match the elegant photography in capturing the spirit of old New England's strong spiritual persuasions." James Lyons

+ N Y Times p24 Ag 3 '47 230w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles
San Francisco Chronicle p11 J1 27 '47 650w

Reviewed by Thomas Foster
+ Sat R of Lit 30:27 Ag 16 '47 220w
Springf'd Union p3 J1 25 '47 180w

MARMUR, JACLAND. Andromeda. 279p $2.75 Holt

47-576

An allegorical novel. The Andromeda, an American tramp steamer, is the last ship to leave Singapore before its fall. On board, besides its crew, many of them trained in the old school of seafaring ways, are two passengers. They are Nancy Paget, a fine American girl, and Mr Bane, an ominous creature who turns out to be an enemy agent. The ship and its occupants serve as a microcosm of the world struggle.

Booklist 43:185 F 15 '47

Reviewed by Ricker Van Metre
Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ag 10 '47 500w

Kirkus 14:602 D 1 '46 170w

"Characterizations are fair, descriptions of ship and crew are real, and dialogue occasionally comes to life as the men talk of war. Total effect is good but not breath-taking. Recommended." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 71:1330 O 1 '46 110w

"It should be understood here that when Mr. Marmur writes of ships and men of the sea he knows what he is talking about; of all men I know who are writing about the sea today he is the first in his knowledge of what is right and proper, in his sense of how men think and act and feel, in his nautical feeling and integrity. There is absolutely no amateurishness in his seafaring; he speaks always as an experienced seaman, and what he says always has meaning in these terms. . . Some of the psychology in 'Andromeda,' to be sure, is a bit exaggerated. Flemming is almost too good to be true; his wisdom is uncanny, although he is a simple person. Nancy is a bit dumb when it comes to grips, although she is a universal sort of person. Bane, perhaps, is a bit too cynical. The conversation that goes on between these people is at times out of the wardroom and in the best intellectual circles. There is a touch of over-drawing all the way along. But this is beside the point. 'Andromeda' is a fine novel. It needs to be read in terms of the people who are thinking and doing things about the world." Lincoln Colcord

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Ja 19 '47 1300w

"[Some of the] characters are well outlined. The memories of the last World War and the resentment and foreboding with which they face the new one are well brought out. When it comes to the routine of the ship and the men in their relation to the ship and the sea, Mr. Marmur is clear, eloquent and thoughtful as usual. But he has the allegory on his mind, with the result that every now and then the interesting and about-to-be exciting business of bringing the Andromeda safe home hangs fire for the carpenter to rail against diplomacy and the big-wigs who have 'loused things up again.'" Catharine Brody

+ N Y Times p16 Ja 19 '47 450w

"If you haven't made the author's acquaintance this is an admirable opportunity to do so and to discover his talent. A novel of the sea and a ship, this is also a novel written to put forward a belief—in general the belief in the tragic futility of war and the equally tragic futility of man's inability to get himself out of the traditional ways of thinking which result only in each generation's preparing its sons for battle. . . . If I have made this book sound like a tract that was not my intention. Mr. Marmur is far too good a workman to be guilty of over-preaching. This is a novel filled with well realized people, individuals, men with the problems and the personal tragedies of their lives to think about." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ja 28 '47
700w

Reviewed by Sloan Wilson

Sat R of Lit 30:20 Mr 8 '47 600w

Wis Lib Bul 43:55 Mr '47

MARRIOTT, ALICE L., comp. Winter-telling stories; il. by Roland Whitehorse. 84p $2.50
Sloane

398.2 Indians of North America—Legends
47-30704

Collection of folk tales about the Kiowa Indian hero, Saynday. The pictures, in three colors, are by a Kiowa Indian; the stories are retold by an American writer who lives near Santa Fe, and heard these stories while she was gathering material for her history of the Kiowa Indians: The Ten Grandmothers (Book Review Digest 1945).

Booklist 44:75 O 15 '47

Churchman 161:17 N 15 '47 30w

"Familiar to the Kiowa Indians of the Plains as a part of their mythology, this unusual group of stories will be fresh and entertaining to most children." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:357 S '47 120w

"The stories are full of humor and should be of equal interest to storytellers and children from eight to twelve. . . . Attractive addition to folklore collections. Recommended." Clara Adams

+ Library J 72:1278 S 15 '47 60w

"The 8-to-12-year-old reader and his elders who like Pecos Bill and Paul Bunyan will find in these stories, collected by an authority on Indian lore, a new and amusing American hero, a sharp contrast to Hiawatha. The legends are told in a light, modern manner which makes them very easy to enjoy." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p35 S 7 '47 270w

Reviewed by M. J. Koblentz

San Francisco Chronicle p10 N 16 '47
170w

Springf'd Republican p10B N 16 '47
90w

MARSH, ELLEN. Dull the sharp edge. 248p
$3 Dutton

47-4136

Stephanie Jameson, heroine of this new novel by the author of Drink to the Hunted, is another child of an unhappy alliance between an American man and a German woman. After living for several years with her mother and step-father in Germany, Stephanie returns to America and to her own father, growing into maturity during the difficult years of World war II.

Reviewed by E. B. Knight

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Jl 27 '47
460w

Kirkus 15:288 Je 1 '47 170w

Reviewed by Margaret Owen

Library J 72:1034 Jl '47 70w

"'Dull the Sharp Edge' is from the first line to the last a fine, convincing account of the maturity of a girl of talent. Miss Marsh writes well, though she is occasionally, in the early chapters, a bit difficult to read, so fastidiously determined is she to say precisely what she means." F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5
Jl 13 '47 600w

"Miss Marsh has talent—she can Write, in the best sense of that glittering word. When she learns to build her story and her people from the ground up, when she learns that it takes more than rhetoric to make a book, she will be read as well as reckoned with." C. V. Terry

N Y Times p20 Jl 13 '47 500w

"The story is saved from tediousness by the grace and intelligence of the author and by her nearly disconcerting depth of perception. You may not care much about Miss Marsh's untidy young people, but you cannot dismiss her very considerable talent."

+ — New Yorker 23:66 Jl 12 '47 160w

"Miss Marsh has an interesting subject; but the book fails to articulate it or to give it meaning. Stephanie's is the most clearly perceived character in the book, yet she fails to come alive, to become a personality instead of an idea of one. Similarly, the characters of her father, of the three men with whom she falls in love, and the girls with whom she lives, are all less persons than bundles of perceptions about persons." Rudolph Von Abele

— + Sat R of Lit 30:34 Jl 19 '47 410w

MARSH, IRVING T., and EHRE, EDWARD, eds. Best sports stories. 1947 ed. 352p il $3 Dutton

796 Sports

(45-35124)

"[This is] third in an annual series of anthologies assembled and curried and pruned by Irving T. Marsh, of The Herald Tribune sports staff, and Edward Ehre, an instructor in history at a Port Washington, Long Island, high school. . . . The editors of this year's almanac devote a good half of their work to baseball and football phenomena, but manage to crowd in random tributes to racing, boxing, golf, tennis, skiing, hockey and hunting. They have solicited and received the aid of Franklin P. Adams, Quentin Reynolds and John Chamberlain, in picking the three prizewinning sports stories of the year." N Y Times

Booklist 43:343 Jl 1 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Je 29 '47
160w

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 S '47

Kirkus 15:230 Ap 15 '47 90w

"Best compilation of its kind. Mostly baseball, football, and professional sports, which is natural since these are covered by the 'big' writers, most of whom are included. Hunting and fishing section is the best in the book. Strong appeal to teen-agers, but we would like to see a volume like this on amateur sports only." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 72:1116 Ag '47 80w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13
Ag 17 '47 150w

Reviewed by Richard Maney

N Y Times p14 Je 29 '47 600w

MARSH, NGAIO. Final curtain. 314p $2.50
Little

47-17766

Detective story.

Booklist 43:273 My 1 '47

Bookmark 8:16 My '47

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ap 27 '47
500w

+ Kirkus 15:142 Mr 1 '47 90w

"A good puzzle, but overloaded with trimmings."

+ — New Repub 116:35 My 5 '47 160w

"Well, Miss Ngaio Marsh, the New Zealand sorceress, has done it again if not more so. Here's another positively dazzling puzzle from her box of tricks, a story so engaging at all points that you'll hardly find its equal knocking around in the shops." Will Cuppy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20
Ap 20 '47 320w

MARSH, NGAIO—Continued

"Ngaio Marsh has written her most skilful murder story yet—and anyone but an addict will want to read it a second time." Isabelle Mallet

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 27 '47 500w

"The Alleyns are slowed up a little by their high-minded and rather talkative love affair, but on the whole they handle the case very satisfactorily. Good, standard item."

+ — New Yorker 23:115 Ap 19 '47 130w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ap 20 '47 150w

"Purty ngai perfect."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:31 My 17 '47 50w

Reviewed by John Garrett

Spec 179:56 J1 11 '47 300w

MARSHALL, BRUCE. Vespers in Vienna. 280p $2.75 Houghton

47-30669

The scene is Vienna in August, 1945. The central character, a British colonel sent to Vienna to combat subversive activities, is a bluff but intelligent man, who not only feels, but thinks. He is billeted in an Austrian convent and becomes a favorite with the nuns, and talks with them on religion. In his well-meant efforts to help humanity the colonel mixes things up completely, and ironically is rewarded for so doing.

Booklist 44:17 S 1 '47

"The book is not one to be easily summarized. It will annoy some readers. Yet much sound teaching is interwoven among its various incidents and it will diffuse a knowledge of lessons which our generation has great need to learn. To thousands of readers Mother Auxilia's five-page apologia for the Church will carry more weight than a learned theological treatise." Joseph McSorley

+ Cath World 166:90 O '47 700w

Reviewed by Jex Martin

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Ag 17 '47 470w

Reviewed by E. S. Skillin

Commonweal 46:530 S 12 '47 550w

Kirkus 15:293 Je 1 '47 220w

"Unfortunately, Mr. Marshall, as in 'The World, the Flesh and Father Smith,' has felt it necessary once again to accompany his serious thinking, which could stand up by itself, with an uncontrolled indulgence in caricature, comedy and sentimentality. . . . Bruce Marshall's talent is strong enough to sustain a serious novel without the quaintness and the jokes." C. G. Paulding

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Ag 17 '47 750w

"In its message it is entirely a good book, sometimes a beautiful book, often a wise one. Mr. Marshall clearly thinks we are a generation of vipers, but he also thinks we carry redemption on our persons along with lipsticks, cigarettes and flasks. He lashes us out of love. He beats us with the truth and he bugles to the spirit within. His book is a prayer for mankind. The story is slim, yet strong enough to sustain interest." Charles Lee

+ N Y Times p5 Ag 17 '47 850w

"Mr. Marshall has no trouble in combining wit with moral sincerity, and his presentation of the absurdities of British brass, along with the differing philosophies of the Austrian nun and the British officer, is full of a civilized but gentle irony. You don't have to swallow the author's soothing thesis that patience and understanding are all that are needed to stop the disintegration of the world to enjoy this gentle, pleasing book."

+ New Yorker 23:77 Ag 23 '47 150w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ag 24 '47 750w

"Underneath its fluent comedy this story deals with tragic stuff. . . . This is one of the first novels reflecting the fantastic problem of rehabilitation. It might have been called (remembering one of Marshall's previous divine comedies) 'The World, the Flesh, and the Brass Hat.' . . . Bruce Marshall is full of mockery; he succumbs sometimes to merely carnal or spiritual comedy, but he is never morbid or mean. He is one of my favorite lay priests because he relishes the farce and terror of man." Christopher Morley

+ Sat R of Lit 30:9 Ag 16 '47 950w

MARSHALL, DAVID. Grand Central. (Whittlesey house publication) 280p il $3.50 McGraw

625.18 New York (city). Grand Central terminal 47-17

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

"Well-written, exciting book."

+ Cath World 165:94 Ap '47 200w

Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 12 '47 120w

"This book is not an engineering text, but that fact adds rather than detracts from its interest as an account of a great railroad terminal in which so much engineering was involved."

+ Eng N 138:96 F 6 '47 160w

Discussion by W. J. Wilgus

Eng N 138:94 Ap 3 '47 320w

"All told, 'Grand Central' is a readable volume not only for railroad enthusiasts, but for the average New Yorker who wonders about the history of his city." Murray Schumach

+ N Y Times p32 My 30 '47 650w

"Written for enthusiasts by an enthusiast, the jumbled genial hodge-podge that here grows into a book succeeds in capturing the spirit of Grand Central Terminal, and even gets the restless ghost of the old Commodore Vanderbilt himself into the picture."

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:166 Je '47 240w

MARSHALL, DEAN. The silver robin; il. by Frank Dobias and Malcolm McGuckin, jr. 246p $2.50 Dutton

Birds—Legends and stories 47-18370

An inquisitive young robin with little fear of human friendship, after meeting a mysterious silver thrush, acquired a silver band of his own. A good deal of bird lore is combined with the story in this book for ages nine to eleven.

"It is unexpected, interesting, and is unlike most books of its kind in that the blending of fact and fantasy has a quality so natural that one scarcely notices which is which." Jane Cobb

+ Atlantic 179:130 Je '47 60w

Booklist 43:297 My 15 '47

"A rambling but very pleasant story to read aloud to the 6 to 9-year-olds."

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p5 My 25 '47 70w

"The author writes with keen observation of bird ways, and with plenty of humor. The idea is unusual, and all that happens seems very probable. It is a good introduction to bird-watching for the young." L. S. Bechtel

+ Commonweal 47:152 N 21 '47 130w

"A good story combined with lots of interesting bird lore."

+ Kirkus 15:216 Ap 15 '47 110w

"Author has been fairly successful in introducing a wealth of authentic bird lore into a fairly interesting and unusual story. Writing good; black-and-white illustrations disappointing." Claire Nolte

+ — Library J 72:644 Ap 15 '47 70w

"The author apologizes to the children for putting so much ornithology in her story and to the ornithologists for putting so much story in her ornithology. It is a difficult combination and not so successfully worked out as in the author's earlier stories in which nature plays a big but not the whole part." Phyllis Fenner

N Y Times p27 Ap 6 '47 180w

Wis Lib Bul 43:71 Ap '47

MARSHALL, EDISON. Shikar and safari; reminiscences of jungle hunting. 263p $3.50 Farrar, Straus

799.2 Hunting 47-30094

"Stories of the author's big game hunting adventures in Africa, India, Asia, and Alaska, with tabulations of big game as to desirability, ferocity and availability. Much technical data on firearms, haunts and habits of big game, methods of hunting and fine tributes to hunting guides." Library J

Booklist 43:208 Mr 1 '47

"The 'profiles' of animals are first rate, and there are some original comments on the psychology of hunting. Marshall's fascination with dangerous beasts is an interesting study in itself." George Dillon

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ja 19 '47 289w

Kirkus 14:449 S 1 '46 100w

"These stories have appeared previously in magazines. Fine for men and boys." L. R. Etzkorn

+ Library J 71:1540 N 1 '46 120w

"'Shikar and Safari' is full of good yarn-spinning. It brings the chair-bound reader a fine flavor of the moonlit terror of jungles at night, of ant-infested thorn bomas besides a hidden watering hole, of split-second shooting during the charge of a wounded tiger or raging bull elephant. Mr. Marshall has done a lot of big-game hunting and loved every minute of it. And perhaps best of all is his objective attitude toward the adventures contained in his book." Gwen Jones

+ N Y Times p27 F 16 '47 850w

MARSHALL, EDISON. Yankee pasha; the adventures of Jason Starbuck. 439p $3 Farrar, Straus

47-11116

"This is the story of the long hunt of Jason Starbuck, who rode east from the frontiers of the Adirondacks to seek the Golden Fleece and followed the proud, bold, beautiful Roxana from the harbors of Salem to the harems of Tartary." Publisher's note

Booklist 44:134 D 1 '47

"There's grand entertainment in this bizarre tale. Nothing earthshaking as literature, it nevertheless tops all the recent crop of historical novels in readability. None offers more romantic interest and derring-do and moves at anything like its speed." Ralph Habas

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p7 O 26 '47 400w

"A well orchestrated tale of high intrigue, high color, for a fairly well-established market."

+ Kirkus 15:443 Ag 15 '47 150w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p27 N 9 '47 230w

"Mr. Marshall can turn out as brisk and fast-stepping a costume romance as any writer now playing the trade. . . All in all [this is] an adventure tale to make red corpuscles race." Richard Match

+ N Y Times p16 N 9 '47 500w

"The odd part about this incredible farrago, which would be looked upon askance by a self-respecting pulp, is that it is interesting. There is not much characterization, but what there is, hangs together. . . That all these things happened to a single person or in a single lifetime, no one will admit; but any given incident is plausible within itself." Fletcher Pratt

Sat R of Lit 30:44 D 6 '47 550w

MARSHALL, LAURENCE HENRY. Challenge of New Testament ethics. 363p $4.50 Macmillan

225.817 Bible. New Testament—Ethics. Christian ethics

"[Prof. Marshall's] main purpose has been to make clear—especially to the layman—what the ethics of the New Testament really are.

First, he deals with the ethical teaching of Jesus—concluded by a chapter on its validity; and this is followed by a study of the ethics of St. Paul, in which the differences between the apostle and the master are noted and examined. In all this, Mr. Marshall takes full account of what belongs strictly to the first century, and of what is timeless in value and applicability. He is equally careful to establish the connection between the ethics of the New Testament and the religion of the New Testament; there is no Christian ethic apart from Christian faith." Churchman

"The author has drawn upon a wide background of reading and extensive teaching experience. He is not content to be the detached scholar but is in earnest to persuade men of the validity of the ethics of Jesus and Paul. The spirit of the book is revealed in these words from the final chapter: 'What is needed is more of Christ Himself, His convictions, His ideals, His character, His atmosphere.' That is the challenge which the author would present to the modern world." C. T. Craig

+ Christian Century 64:1486 D 3 '47 700w

"Not only can laymen read it with understanding; the clergy will find it very suggestive for sermons on the subject." F. J. Moore

+ Churchman 161:17 N 15 '47 180w

Reviewed by C. J. Cadoux

Hibbert J 45:284 Ap '47 1000w

"His application of New Testament ethical principles to present-day moral problems is marked by a robust common sense and a determination that the real issues shall be honestly faced. It is a book from which Christians and non-Christians alike can learn much about what is involved in accepting the Christian faith and in drawing the logical inferences which follow from the premises."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p54 Ja 25 '47 600w

MARSHALL, WILLIAM ROBERT, and PIGFORD, ROBERT LAMAR. Application of differential equations to chemical engineering problems; based on a graduate chemical engineering course given by the authors at the University of Delaware. 170p $3.50 Univ. of Del, Newark, Del.

517.33 Differential equations. Chemical engineering 47-5557

"As its title suggests, this is a book on the application of ordinary and partial differential equations to various practical problems encountered in applied chemistry and in unit operations of chemical engineering. It includes chapters on Bessel functions, Fourier series, equations of finite differences, and operational calculus. An excellent series of problems is presented as part of the text, the majority being solved in detail. It does not treat graphical or numerical methods, precision of measurements, or partial differentiation." Chem Eng

"The treatment of the methods and their practical application should make this book of value to the research engineer and to the graduate student. The research engineer should find in this book methods which might be profitably applied to his problems. . . On the whole the subject matter is presented logically, clearly, and concisely. The general format of the book is good except for poor arrangement of complex equations, and obscure illustrations. Many of these imperfections are undoubtedly due to the typewritten setting from which the book is lithographed." Leonard Seglin

+ Chem & Eng N 25:1831 Je 23 '47 320w

"The book is unquestionably an important and valuable contribution to the literature of chemical engineering from both the mathematical and chemical engineering viewpoint. It is somewhat more advanced than other books in the field. . . It is probably not suitable as an undergraduate text even in those schools where a course in differential equations is required, but it will serve as a valuable text in graduate courses and as a reference for graduate students." T. K. Sherwood

+ Chem Eng 54:277 Je '47 450w

MARTIN, ARTHUR DAVIS. Plain man's life of Christ; with a prefatory note by Sydney Cave. 217p $2 Macmillan

232.9 Jesus Christ—Biography 47-2048

A re-interpretation of the life of Christ which attempts to show Him as he must have appeared to his first disciples. The author was an English Congregational minister. Index.

"This reviewer holds that this book by the late Dr. A. D. Martin is neither simple nor objective enough to qualify as 'A Plain Man's Life of Christ.' Much can be said for it; it is throughout animated by a spirit of reverence and piety; it pays due regard to the latest results of New Testament scholarship in the matter of the gospel-record concerning the life of the Nazarene; and it speaks with warmth and literary felicity; all qualities that should commend and endear it to many readers. But its faults are also obvious. It is entirely too subjective. It becomes at times too obviously concerned with making the person of Jesus appear so utterly superior that his radiant humanity tends to disappear." K. M. Chworowsky

+ — Churchman 161:17 Mr 15 '47 190w

"The book has an air of scholarship but this is overlaid with a charming literary style and a reverence that take the sting out of any hints at historical criticism." S. J. Case

+ Crozer Q 25:88 Ja '48 300w

Kirkus 15:62 F 1 '47 120w

MARTIN, BERNARD HERMAN. Red treasure. 188p $2 Viking

47-30912

An adventure story for older boys. The setting is a group of islands off the coast of Burma, and the story is told by one of three boys who are in search of a chest of rubies, supposed to have been hidden there by a pirate 250 years before.

"Take my advice and read 'Red Treasure' before the rest of your family find out what a whopping good tale it is. So real has all this activity been that one wishes that the book had a map of this jungle island region." H. F. Griswold

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 S 25 '47 230w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 23:445 N '47 80w

Kirkus 15:469 S 1 '47 85w

"Well written, tense action yarn. . . Smacks of Stevenson and Sperry. Excellent background with characters that seem true to type. Plot well sustained. Recommended." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 72:1476 O 15 '47 40w

Reviewed by Ruth Brogger

San Francisco Chronicle p11 N 16 '47 170w

Sat R of Lit 30:52 N 15 '47 50w

MARTIN, MRS FRANCES GARDINER (MC-ENTEE). Sea room; pictures by Dorothy McEntee. 229p $2 Harper

47-11014

Story for boys of ten and over about how Joe Skinner built his own boat and won a race in it during the Labor day regatta.

Kirkus 15:430 Ag 15 '47 85w

"Good family relationships, character development, in a lively story about boys for those who have a real interest in sailing and want to read about it in detail." J. E. Lynch

+ Library J 72:1694 D 1 '47 60w

"A good story." Frances Smith

+ N Y Times p54 N 23 '47 140w

"A lively story with plenty of action and characters that are true to real life and exceptionally interesting."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:52 N 15 '47 40w

Wis Lib Bul 43:179 D '47

MARTIN, GEORGE VICTOR. Mark it with a stone. 202p $2.75 Fell

47-11498

A frankly written novel. The hero is an ex-GI who establishes himself on his Montana ranch and marries. All goes well until his wife's younger sister arrives. The sister is an empty-headed young thing with only one idea—to get her brother-in-law for herself. The novel ends in tragedy.

Reviewed by Willard Motley

Chicago Sun Book Week D 18 '47 500w

"Make no mistake about this latest novel by George Victor Martin. Once you've read it, whether you like it or not, whether you approve of it or not you won't easily forget it. Unlike the author's first book, 'Our Vines Have Tender Grapes,' this is not a pretty tale. . . Mr. Martin is a spare writer, with a sure hand in the use of understatement as well as in the kind of artless art that gives his dialogue the jagged, clipped quality of reality. Told in the first person, the narrative has vigor and freshness." Anne Richards

N Y Times p20 N 9 '47 400w

"If you are moved by the tough guy approach, you'll probably be delighted with this extreme experiment. If not, the activities of Joe Starck, the primeval or bronze age type hero, may cause you to faint." W. H.

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ja 11 '48 270w

"Many readers will be shocked by the sensational nature of this novel which is far different from his For Our Vines Have Tender Grapes. Read before buying."

Wis Lib Bul 43:154 N '47

MARTIN, JOHN BARTLOW. Indiana; an interpretation. 300p il $4.50 Knopf

977.2 Indiana—History

47-11581

